Notice to Creditors.

In the Matter of the Estate of Heber Williams Cronk, late of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Liveryman, deceased.

Notice is hereby given to "The Revised Statutes of Ontario," 1897, chapter 129, that all creditors and others having claims against the Estate of the said Heber Williams Cronk, who died on or about the Nineteenth day of November, 1905, are required, on or before the Twenty-fifth day of April, 1906, to send by post prepaid or deliver to Messrs. Clute & Morden, of the City of Belleville, solicitors for the Administratrix, their Christian and surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full particulars of their claims, the statement of their accounts and the nature of the securities, if any, held by them.

And further take notice, that after such last mentioned date, the said Administratrix will proceed to distribute the assets of the deceased among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which they shall then have notice, and that she will not be liable for the said assets or any part thereof to any person or persons of whose claims notice has not been received, as required.

Dated this 24th day of March, A. D. 1906. CLUTE & MORDEN,
Solicitors for the Administratrix.

The only nourishment that bread affords is that which the flour contains.

Bread baking is merely putting flour in appetising form.

Flour making is merely putting the nutritious part of wheat in shape for bread making.

Good milling is the kind that takes from the wheat all that is nutritious, nothing else.

Royal Household Flour

The distinction of being the only European country without a railroad, which is at present enjoyed by Iceland, is soon to be taken from her, according to a contributor to the Railway Age, who writes: "The first track, it is stated, will probably soon be begun by an English company recently formed for the purpose of working the sulphur mines at Theisstarkir, in the north of Iceland. The mines are about seventeen miles from Husavik, the nearest harbor, to which the proposed railway will run.

Water is the coal of Canada. England became a great manufacturing country because she had both coal and iron. These two substances blended again to make Pittsburg. Canada will become rich by uniting its mills and its factories with its water powers. Water will "burn" in the electric light; water will not only draw a street car, but it will heat and light it as well. A great water power is an exhaustless coal mine; and, if there ever was a reason to establish popular ownership of coal mines, there is an equal reason to insist upon popular ownership of water powers.

A doctor was pointing out medical fallacies—the wrong ideas about things medical that many people hold. "One fallacy," he said, "is that beef tea is nourishing. It is nothing but water in which certain pleasant and exhilarating meat salts are dissolved. You would starve to death on beef tea, the same as on whiskey or on coffee. "Another fallacy is that alcohol—whiskey—warms the body. Alcohol lowers the temperature. It chills instead of warming. Hence it is of no use whatever as a guard against cold. A third fallacy is that one egg contains as much nourishment as a pound of meat. Sick people without appetite think complacently that if they take an egg or two a day they are doing well. As a matter of fact, they are doing anything but well. They must remember, if they are substituting eggs for meat, that eight eggs, not one, are required to equal one meat pound. Then, there's the liver fallacy. Many as soon as their stomachs get out of order begin to treat their liver. But the liver is a dangerous thing to treat unless one understands it, for there are over ninety distinct liver troubles, and what is good for one of them may be bad for all the rest."

THE POINT OF VIEW.

The commanding officer of a regiment was much troubled about the persistent untidiness of one of his men. Reprimand and punishment were unavailing. The man was incorrible and remained as dirty as ever. A brilliant idea struck the colonel. Why not march him up and down the whole of the regiment and shame him into decency? It was done. The untidy warrior, who hailed from the Emerald Isle, was ordered to exhibit himself and march up and down the entire regiment, and the men were told to have a good look at him. The unabashed Pat halted, saluted the colonel, and said, in the hearing of the whole corps, with the utmost "sang-froid": "Dhirtiest regiment I iver inspected, sorr!"

A RESPONSIBLE BOARD

Accountant Cross' Suggestion in Report to Government.

Outcome of His Investigation of the Books of the York Loan Co.—How York Loan Employes Played Double Game—Negotiations in Progress to Hand Over All the Assets—Investigation Adjourned Till Tuesday.

Toronto, April 14.—Permission having been granted by the Attorney-General for the crown attorney to interview Miss McCann, in New York, and Miss Sauter, in Buffalo, both of whom are shareholders of the Toronto Life, the Phillips' investigation was adjourned until Tuesday next. But Mr. Curry may not find it necessary to thus procure the evidence of the Misses Robb, McCann and Sauter, as it is stated, on apparently good authority, that negotiations are in progress which would result in Phillips, the Toronto Life Insurance Co., and the other concerns turning over all assets to the York Loan liquidators. If these negotiations succeed the Phillips' case, as far as the police court is concerned, will end early in the week.

Mr. Cross Reported.

W. H. Cross, the commissioner appointed by the Ontario Government to examine the affairs of the York Loan Co., has made his second report to the Attorney-General. Mr. Cross says:

"In view of the large number of persons interested in this company, and of the confusion in the public mind existing from widely different statements in the press and by speakers at public meetings; in view also of the varied proposals and suggestions made by local committees of shareholders in different parts of the Dominion, and in view of the possibility that speculators might take advantage of this situation to induce shareholders to sell their shares for less than value, I deemed it my first duty to obtain and make public at the earliest possible moment, reliable information regarding the actual situation of this company's affairs and the causes of its failure.

First Report Verified.

"The course of the public investigation then held by me and the conclusions arrived at, including a statement of the causes of the company's failure, are set forth in my interim report already made to you, dated the third day of January last. The results found in that report have been tested and verified by various investigations subsequently made, and I now confirm the conclusions therein given.

"At the time when the commission issued, and subsequently, there prevailed a general public belief that the failure was due largely, if not altogether, to gross irregularities, and improprieties committed by directors and servants of the company for their own personal benefit, and that the existing position of the company had arisen from this cause. Evidence supporting this belief did not transpire during the public investigation, and I had no information that warranted any such conclusion at the time of making my first interim report. In view, however, of the specific and direct charges made from various quarters, I deemed it desirable that this question should be further investigated through such avenues as remained open to me after the criminal proceedings had been instituted against Phillips

Examination of Books.

"To this end an examination of the books of the company was made, more thorough than had been possible in the limited time preceding the issuance of the interim report, and other lines of enquiry outside the books and records of the company were pursued, including particularly the charge that had been made that much more was paid out of the York Loan funds for the land acquired by the company than the vendors actually received, and that there had been added to the outlays of the company in connection with their building and improvement operations, large sums which had been retained by officials of the company. The result of this examination and these enquiries have failed to disclose any evidence substantiating these charges.

"It is obvious from the extent and nature of this company's operations that my enquiries should not possibly be exhaustive, but so far as I have been able to ascertain the facts, the position is as above stated.

Withdrew Own Funds.

"I beg to report, as a fact additional to what is stated in my interim report, that in the later stages of the company's existence, and during the months immediately preceding the winding-up order, directors, officers, agents and employes of the company, while withdrawing their own funds, which were invested in the company, were at the same time collecting the monthly instalments due from shareholders, and also obtaining new subscriptions for stock. I also draw attention to the fact that improper entries were made from time to time in the books of the company, which had the effect of swelling the annual financial statements, the apparent profits and assets of the company.

Must Verify Returns.

"I beg to again draw attention to the fact stated in my interim report, with regard to the incorrect and misleading returns filled by this company with the Government, and sworn to by the officers of the company. The public are dependent upon these returns for reliable information, and they are, in my opinion, of the greatest public importance. They should be explicit and readily understood, both by those who make them, and by those who rely on them. It is superfluous to say that they must be true, frank and accurate, but I suggest that, in order to emphasize the responsibility not only of the officers who swear to these returns, but also the responsibility of the whole board of directors, it should be required by law that these returns be sanctioned and approved by the resolution of the board of directors, and that such resolution be verified and filed along with the return.

"I am not making this as a final report, because facts and lines of enquiry other than those I have reported may present themselves to you as demanding further investigation. If any such further examination is desired, I shall be pleased to have your instructions in regard thereto."

OPERATORS UNWILLING.

To Take Up Latest Offer Made by the Mine Workers

New York, April 14.—At the meeting of the sub-committees of the anthracite mine workers and operators here President Mitchell offered a re-submission of the miners' original demands, with two amendments, and in case they are not accepted he proposed that the controversy be placed before the strike commission.

Operators' Reply.

President Baer, as the chairman of the operators' committee, made this reply:

"We regret that you have not accepted our propositions. We do not feel that we can modify them. We will hereafter answer your communication of this date by letter, or if your desire a further meeting the time can be arranged or be hereafter fixed by the respective chairmen."

President Mitchel believes Mr. Baer's offer was written on the spur of the moment and that there will yet be a peaceful end to the controversy.

1,200 Men Ordered Out.

Pittsburg, April 14.—Twelve hundred miners employed at the Great Lakes Coal Co. at Kaylor, Pa., quit work yesterday by order of the district officials, because of the refusal of the company to agree to certain concessions asked for by the mine workers, and included in the 1903 scale.

Laid Off on Account of Coal Strike.

Chicago, April 14.—Many employes of various railroads entering Chicago were laid off Thursday on account of the decrease in business resulting from the coal strike.

The Chicago & North Western laid off 500 employes. It was announced that the Chicago & Alton had dropped nearly 200 employes from the pay-roll. Four hundred mechanics of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois are now idle.

Curtailments in the yard and train service are going on on all roads, owing to the cessation of the demand of fuel hauling.

Building Strike at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., April 14.—Two officers of the Bricklayers and Stone Masons International Union drove around St. Louis yesterday, calling off bricklayers from every building job on which the stonemasons employed were not affiliated with the International Union. Work was reported stopped on 160 buildings. It is estimated that 2,000 men stopped work.

Defy Labor Officer.

Hamilton, April 14.—A majority of the striking bricklayers and masons defy the international executive. The international officer, Thomas Izzard, ordered them to work at 45 cents an hour, pending a settlement of the trouble, but they hold out for 50 cents. It is intimated that if the men refuse to obey him he will take away the charter of the local union.

Why the Horse Heeds the Bugler.

An interesting report regarding the development of the musical sense in horses was made by a committee of German zoologists and botanists. The report says: "The investigations as to the musical sense of horses have shown that that sense is very poorly developed in these animals. It has been proved beyond doubt that horses have no notion whatever of keeping time to music, and that at circuses they do not dance according to the tune, but that the musicians have to keep time according to the steps of the animals.

"Other investigations show that horses do not understand military trumpet signals. It is only the rider or the animal's instinct of imitation which induces horses to make the moves required by the signal, but no horse without a rider, however carefully trained, takes the slightest notice of a trumpet signal, and the same observation has been made on a large number of cavalry horses without riders."

The Bull of Perilius.

Perilius of Athens is said to have invented for Phalaris, tyrant of Agrigentum, 570 B. C., a brazen bull which opened on the side to admit victims who were to be roasted by the fire which was built underneath. The dying groans of the sufferers resembled closely the roaring of a mad bull. Phalaris greatly admired the invention and by way of test roasted the inventor first. Later the populace rose in rebellion and burned Phalaris.

Must Have Been.

"Ah, Lady B., I had the pleasure of meeting you last year. And how is your dear little girl?"

"My little boy is quite well, thank you."

"Little boy? Ah, yes, of course! I knew it was one of the two."

Another Reason.

Aunt Emeline is the best loved woman in Saymouth, for her charity is alike of hand and heart. Like many other excellent persons, Aunt Emeline is not a church member, but she is a regular attendant at the village church, which is so near her cottage as to seem under the same roof. When, at the close of a recent sermon, the minister requested all those present who had never united with the church to retire at the end of service, everybody was surprised to see Aunt Emeline rise and start down the aisle.

"Aunt Emeline," the minister called softly, "that does not apply to you!"

"That isn't why I'm going," Aunt Emeline responded serenely. "I smell my dinner burning up."

Constantinople.

Constantinople, called by the Turks Stamboul or Istamboul, was originally the ancient city of Byzantium. In 330 B. C. the Emperor Constantine made it the capital of the Roman empire and called it after his own name. The city lies on an arm of the sea called the Golden Horn and is protected by a great wall built by the Byzantine emperors.

THE SNAKESKIN BELT

By LILIAN C. PASCHAL

Copyright, 1905, by J. W. Muller

"Fine lot of western souvenirs you've got here," I commented through my teeth, which held in loving grip a particularly fragrant after dinner cigar. I had been nosing around the curio corner of Dane's hunting lodge.

"The real thing—no machine made curios in this bunch."

I suddenly pounced upon a queer object of beautifully mottled grayish leather, evidently intended for a lady's girdle.

"What's this reptilian treasure?" I asked curiously, holding it up gingerly by its handsome gold buckle wrought into the semblance of a tiny revolver, perfect as to butt, muzzle and full complement of blue diamond bullets.

Dangling from the trigger by a single link of spun gold was the "burglar alarm" of a mountain rattlesnake. The number of rattles and the button tacked to the edge showed that its one time wearer was in the ninth year of his age when he came to his end.

"I STEPPED OUT IN THE ROAD, BOWED LOW AND PULLED MY GUN."

"Another trophy of the chase?" I glanced interrogatively at Dane.

"Yes, a trophy of the chase—the chase after the rainbow and the heart of gold at the end of it. Come along for a walk up the canyon a little way, where there's a fine moonrise now in course of preparation for our special benefit, and I'll tell you about that belt. You see, it belonged to my first sweetheart—I had it made for her—so it's just as well my wife doesn't hear me talk of it."

"Et tu, Brute," I scoffed, but rose and followed him as he led the way up the great gorge at the back of the lodge.

"It was when I first came to Montana," began Dane, taking no notice of my comment. "She lived on the next ranch. She was as willful a piece of skirts as ever climbed crags where nothing but goats and squaws ever before had rolled pebbles downhill. We'd quarreled about that Carolina chap I wrote you about once—name of Bailey.

"The fellow was a cad, and I'd told Nan so in language more distinguished for force than for frills. She called me jealous, turned up her little nose at me and flirted her quirt in my direction. She'd just ridden out o' the corral on her cayuse when I galloped up and our little tiff began. But it ended in a big one. She gave me a go-by for good and all, and when I'd see her after that riding the cattle range she'd be so absorbed in that long legged Carolina sandhill crane of a Bailey that she didn't know I was on earth at all apparently. He did tag her for fair, though he looked like Ichabod Crane astride of his Pinto. He couldn't ride any more than a jack rabbit.

"But I felt pretty blue, I tell you, those days. Big aches from little quarrels grow, as the poet says, and when a fellow's up against that kind of gnawing feeling at the pit of his stomach night and day like that Spartan kid with the foxes in his apron, why, he gets as sore headed as a grizzly in the springtime. I used to haul out my gun from my belt when I tramped over these hills looking for the yellow—that was before I'd found it—and think I'd let the old spitfire in my face just once and end the whole business."

No wonder his wife doesn't like to hear the story if he had it that bad. And again my bachelor cynicism smiled that he had so easily found consolation. But aloud I only grunted, "Well?" and smoked on.

"One morning when I was desperate from mooning over that minx of a girl I was going round this very ledge. You see how narrow it is even now, though I've had the road blasted out of the rock above us since then. You take notice there's a bit of a precipice just below?"

"I should say I did!" I exclaimed, drawing back from the brim with a tenderfoot shudder. "Your 'bit of a precipice' must go down a sheer 500 feet if it's an inch to that hustling western torrent down there."

Dane nodded. "Not a very good place for a girl to step aside to avoid a snake, for instance?"

I shuddered again.

"Well, this is just where I met Nan that day. I can see her now, bless her heart, dancing along in the little short skirts and baby cowboy boots she loved to wear and dangling her big sombrero by its cord. She hadn't seen me, and I turned to hike back the way I came, for Lee Bailey was on her trail and I'd seen them together as often as I could possibly stand it.

"Just as she came to that turn where the bowlder juts out she gave a little scream and turned so suddenly that her foot slipped and down she went right on the edge. She held on to that rock for dear life and shrieked: 'Lee! Oh, Lee!'

"That 'Lee' settled me, and I stood still, like a stubborn mule, and let her yell. I knew he could pick her up easily enough, and I wouldn't butt in. But when I reconnoitered around the bowlder I was behind I was the cause of the disturbance—this Mr. Rattler, ruffling himself up like the coil of an electrocutioner and disputing the right of way with my girl.

"And there was Miss Nan, white with fear, staggering right on the edge of the precipice, too paralyzed to move back up the trail."

"Where was Bailey, the noble rescuer?" I asked as Dane paused and gazed reflectively into the lighted end of his cigar.

"Yes; that was what I wanted to know. He'd made for camp on a lope—that's where he was, the coward—to get a fishing rod to kill the snake with, he explained afterward, but it didn't go down with Nan. When I saw her natural protector deserting her I stepped out in the road, bowed low, pulled my gun and blew the gentleman's head off—the rattler's, not Bailey's, though that would have been a job to my liking too. He wasn't as much of a gentleman as Mr. Snake, for he was polite enough to tell right out what sort of poison critter he was, while the human serpent wasn't."

"And Nan?" I even forgot to puff smoke in my interest.

"Acted just right, like the heroine in a melodrama—fainted promptly on to the shoulder of her faithful knight, and when he'd waked her up again by means of kisses and other shocks she promised to love and obey him ever after, and nothing would do but that snakeskin must be fixed up with the trimmings you saw as one of our Lares and Penates, but whether a Lar or a Penate I don't know, being rather misty on mythology since I left college. Ah, there's the moon at last! Isn't this country great at night?"

"Yes, yes!" I exclaimed impatiently, without a glance at the wonderful panorama of rolling, pine clad, snow capped summits now being transfigured by the rising glory. "But what became of Nan? Why didn't you marry"—

"Oh, there you are, dear!" called out a silvery voice ahead of us farther up the slope. "I've been waiting for you a long time. You have been two hours climbing the gulch. I came up the short cut. It takes more breath, but less time."

"Well, little girl, you've got plenty of both," answered her husband, sprawling himself over the thick pine needles at pretty Mrs. Dane's feet and laying his head shamelessly on her lap. Her small fingers buried themselves in his hair. He pulled them down to his lips. "We took the time because I was using up all my breath telling Jack about the snakeskin belt, Nan, dear."

Another light than that of the moon broke in on my darkened senses. "Oh, then you did marry her? I thought you said"—

"My first sweetheart? Sure, so I did—and Nan's it!"

Mr. Gilder's Judicious Reply.

The woman journalist was entertaining half a dozen Wellesley undergraduates at tea. It was an expensive tea, served in an expensive apartment. Plainly the young woman journalist was doing well.

"Yes; I am doing well," she admitted. "I write fashions now. But when I was a high class journalist, interviewing celebrities on my own hook, I couldn't afford to give teas. These celebrities—if they would only talk! You visit them expecting to extract a twenty-five dollar story. You come away with a quarter one—or nothing. Once I sought out Richard Watson Gilder in order to get from him five or six columns on 'Young Women In Literature.' A fetching subject, eh? But, alas, Mr. Gilder wasn't in a talkative mood! When I suggested this glorious topic to him, when I opened fire with the first question, 'What is the chief requisite for a young woman entering the literary field?' he replied, 'Postage stamps.'"—Buffalo News.

Frost Makes Fat Turkeys.

"Cold weather makes fat turkeys," said the poulterer.

"Why?"

"Because in a warm fall the ground keeps soft, the vegetation lingers on and the fields are full of worms and bugs. What's the result? The result is that the turkeys from sunrise till dark tramp the tempting fields on long forages, eating the worms and bugs, which thin them, and walking all their soft and fine flesh into tough, stringy muscle. A cold fall, with early frosts and snows, freezes the ground and kills the bugs. Then the turkeys are not tempted to wander. They loaf in the farmyard, gorge an abundance of grain and put on flesh like a middle aged woman at a seashore hotel. But in a warm fall, hunting the irresistible bug, the turkeys do their fifteen to twenty miles regularly and become athletes. For athletic turkeys there is no public demand."—Minneapolis Journal.

THE AMERICAN THEATER.

It Should Not Be a Toy—It Should Be Made an Educator.

To claim that the stage, no matter how improved, could work an immediate revolution in the manners and taste of our people would be manifestly absurd, but it is entirely safe to say that the theater could, in the matters which are apparently so unimportant in life, yet which mean so much, be an important factor in molding at least the externals of our national character. This means, however, that, busy as we are, we should give the theater a more important place in our thoughts and in our scheme of popular education than that at present allotted to it. Nor is the claim that the theater might be made a teacher of improvement in the minor things of life the only one that can be made for it. It might be made the medium for the elevation of the popular taste in all the arts and in literature and even for the inculcation of the principles of lofty thought and right living. It may seem strange that a people so clever as we are have neglected this potent influence for good and have regarded it only as a toy for our amusement, to be shaped and fashioned by the toy merchant solely with a view to making it catch the fancy and therefore become a salable and profitable article of merchandise. But, as we are a busy and, on the whole, a self satisfied people, beyond our pursuits and ambitions we look only for the amusements which shall be the least burden to us.—J. S. Metcalfe in Atlantic.

"PELE'S HAIR."

Mauna Loa, the gigantic Hawaiian volcano, has two craters or openings, one of which, Kilauea, is the largest active volcanic crater in the world. The mountain is 14,100 feet high and Kilauea is situated on the eastern side about 4,000 feet above the level of the sea. This marvelous crater is really a vast lake of boiling lava which rises and falls continually by the action of subterranean fires. In tossing to and fro like a troubled sea of molten metal the lava is dashed against the cliffs and hardens there in the form of long glassy filaments, gigantic knobs, miniature trees and in imitation of grass, leaves, etc.

Another form of glassy filament to be found along the shores of this fiery lake is in the shape of queer bunches and tufts of lava made up of an aggregation of vitreous threads which the natives call "Pele's hair," Pele being the goddess to whom the mountain is dedicated. These glassy threads appear to be caused by the passage of steam through the molten lava. In so doing small particles in the shape of bubble-like balloons are thrown into the air, leaving a tail behind like a comet. When the scene of these miniature steam eruptions is near a rock or shore all solid and cool surfaces are found covered with bunches of "Pele's hair." This "hair" was formerly used in mystic native ceremonies.

Canal Locks In China.

The contrivances for locks along the Grand canal in China are very simple—stout boards, with ropes at each end of them, being let down edgewise over each other through grooves in the stone piers. Boats are dragged through and up the sluices by means of ropes communicating with large windlasses worked on the bank, which haul them safely, but very slowly. Artificial basins were hollowed out in the banks of the canal at these locks, where boats might anchor securely. The sluices which keep the necessary level are of very rude construction. Soldiers and workmen are constantly in attendance at these sluices, and the danger to boats is diminished by coils of rope hung down at the sides to break the force of possible blows.

A Phenomenon.

A handy word much misused is "phenomenon." The London Globe once heard a man explaining its meaning to a friend. He did it as follows: "Now, if you see a cow in a medder," he said didactically, "that's not a phinomeena. It's a pretty animal and what not, but it ain't a phinomeena. And if you see a thistle in a medder that ain't a phinomeena. Nor if you see a lark in the medder that ain't a phinomeena. It's a pretty bird and what not, but it ain't a phinomeena. But if you was to see that cow sitting on that thistle and singing like that lark that would be a phinomeena." His friend said, yes, he saw now.

Safeguard the Children.

There is no telling when a medicine may be needed in homes where there are little ones. Therefore, the prudent mother will always keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets on hand. These Tablets promptly cure indigestion, colic, sour stomach, constipation, diarrhoea and teething troubles. They break up colds, prevent croup, expel worms, and give the child sound natural sleep. Mothers have the guarantee of a Government analyst that these Tablets contain no opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. Mrs. J. C. Gildart, Prosser Brook, N.B., says: "Baby's Own Tablets act like magic when a little one is ill, and I would not feel safe without a box in the house." You can get Baby's Own Tablets from your medicine dealer or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

JESUS' POWER OVER DISEASE AND DEATH—GOLDEN TEXT IS "I AM THE RESURRECTION AND THE LIFE."

Luke 7: 1-17; memory verses, 14, 15; Golden text, "I am the Resurrection and the Life."

Historical Setting.

Time—Summer of A.D. 28.

Place—(1) Capernaum, on the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee. Scholars divided between two sites—"Tell Tum, three miles southwest of the issue of Jordan, and Khan Minyeh, on the northern edge of Gennesaret; but the evidence is greatly in favor of the latter site."—Smith's Historical Geog. of the Holy Land. So also Hastings' Dict. of the Bible. The remains of the traditional synagogue of the centurion are at Tell Hum. (2) Nain, a town southwest of Capernaum, seven miles from Nazareth.

In both Matthew and Mark the Sermon on the Mount is followed by an account of many miracles, related in this place doubtless to prove Christ's authority and right to proclaim such laws and set up such a kingdom, and to illustrate Christ's teachings and character.

1. When He had ended all His sayings. Those of the Sermon on the Mount. He entered into Capernaum. The large and important city, by the Sea of Galilee on the northwest, which Christ made His headquarters after His rejection at Nazareth.

2. And a certain centurion's servant. This centurion was a heathen by birth and was probably in the service of Antipas.

Who was dear unto him. The adjective does not necessarily imply an affectionate relation between the master and the servant, though such may well have existed. It may mean only that he was a valuable servant. He was a personal, confidential servant, like Joseph in the house of Potiphar, and Eliezer, the chief servant of Abraham.

Was sick and ready to die. Matthew says he had the palsy, and was "grievously tormented." "St. Luke, as a physician, may have omitted this specification because the description applied rather to tetanus than to the strict use of paralysis."

3. And when he heard of Jesus. Christ had already worked many wonderful miracles and spoken many wise sayings in Capernaum, so that the centurion had the best foundation for his faith. Until the medical missionaries were sent by several English societies, there was not a physician in the land, and even now there are very few. In such a country as this, with sick and crippled in every village, picture the eager excitement when the news spread that a good physician had arrived in town.

He sent unto him the elders of the Jews. Leading representative men. Beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant. A peculiar verb meaning "save through" the disease.

4. Besought him instantly. For he loveth our nation. This Gentile soldier found in the Jews "a purity, reverence, simplicity and nobleness of life which he had not found elsewhere. And he hath built us a synagogue, to testify his interest in them and their religion.

A character sketch. (1) The centurion was a Gentile, as we gather from Matt. 8: 10, and from his position in the army. (2) He was religiously minded. (3) He was wealthy. (4) He was generous. (5) He was broad-minded, able to see good wherever it existed. (6) He was kindly as we see in his affection for his servant. (7) He was brave, daring to express his regard for the manner, though his brother officers would be sure to ridicule him. (8) Jewish religion in the most public Best of all, he was a man of faith, as the narrative goes on to show.

6. Then Jesus went with them, saying, I will come and heal him. Some of the delegation seem to have hastened in advance to the centurion's house, in order to relieve his anxiety before Jesus could arrive. As they drew near to the house, the centurion sent friends to him, with another message. He probably had heard of the healing of the nobleman's son in Capernaum while Jesus was at Cana. (John 4: 46-53), so that he knew the presence of Jesus was not necessary: and he also felt, I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter under my roof. This feeling of unworthiness was due partly (1) to his own consciousness of sin, and partly (2) to his knowledge of the Jewish feeling that "as the houses of Gentiles were 'unclean,' entrance into them, and still more, familiar fellowship would 'defile'."

7. Say in a word. "Literally, 'Say with a word and let my servant be healed.'"

8. For I also am a man set under authority, etc. The centurion thinks Jesus can order about disease, as he orders his soldiers—say to fever, palsy, leprosy, go, and it will go."

9. He marvelled at him. Only twice do we read in the Gospel that the Saviour marvelled; once at the unbelief of his fellow-citizens at Nazareth (Mark 6: 6), once at the faith of this heathen. Said unto the people, who needed the lesson on faith. I have not found so great faith. "The Saviour knew well the difficulties that must have lain in the way of this man's faith. They were the facts that he was a Gentile, that he was consciously unworthy, that he was asking for an especially wonderful miracle, a cure at a distance. No, not in Israel, where it would naturally be expected, for they expected their Messiah, they knew the true God, and that He had wrought miracles for his people in the past.

10. And they that were sent. Christ's message through them to the centurion was: "As thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee" (Matt. 8: 13). Found the servant whole. In sound health. For this meaning it is the regular word in medical writings."

11. The day after. He went into a city called Nain. A small town 25 miles to the southwest. A hamlet of the same name still exists there.

12. When he came nigh to the gate of the city. Nearly all towns and villages were surrounded by walls as a defence against marauders. "Nain" means "Fair," and it was "probably so called from its striking situation on a steep hill. Behold, there was a dead man carried out The bier on which the body was borne was a simple board supported on two poles. There was no coffin; the corpse was simply covered with a large cloth. The only son of his mother The Greek implies that he was the only son she ever had — a fact intensifying her grief.

And she was a widow. The second grief had followed the first. She was alone in the world. The condition of widows in the East, especially childless ones, was so sad and dependent as to give added poignancy to this widow's sorrow. And much people of the city was with her.

13. The Lord. A title first used by Luke in this place, perhaps because in this miracle Christ showed Himself supremely the Lord of life and death. Saw her. He picked her out readily because she led the sad procession. He had compassion on her. "Jesus, who was always touched by the sight of human agony. And said unto her. Weep not. "A hint of what was coming."

14. And he came and touched the bier. The body lay with its face turned up, uncovered, and its hands folded on the breast. They that bare him. Friends and neighbors. Stood still. Taking the touch of Jesus as a sign that he wished this. And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise. Observe the ease with which this miracle was wrought. Elijah had to agonize with God. He had to stretch himself three times upon the child, and every time to plead with God again. But with Jesus Christ there was a calm authority. A touch or a word—and the miracle was done. Elijah begged as a trusty servant might. But Jesus Christ commanded like a king.

15. And he that was dead. "The spectators were sure that he was dead, for they were carrying him out to bury him. No deception was possible, for his own mother believed him dead, and you may be sure that if there had been a spark of life in him she would not have given him up to the jaws of the grave. Sat up, and began to speak. Incoherent, perhaps, were those words, like the last words of a dream with which a man awakes; but they were words, and they made known that the dead was alive.

And he delivered him to his mother.

16. And there came a fear on all. It is natural that this should be the first feeling on seeing a corpse reanimated. But a writer of fiction would rather have given us the frantic joy of the mother and of those who sympathized with her. A great prophet is risen up among us. They might have thought of Elijah and the widow of Sarepta, of Elisha and the lady of the not far distant Shunem God hath visited his people. Compare the words of Zacharias (Luke 1, 68), and of Nicodemus (John 3, 2.)

17. And this rumor of him went forth. It would spread like wildfire far and wide. Throughout all Judea. Not implying that Nain was in Judea; but the story spread from Galilee all over Judea. And throughout all the region round about. That is, Perea, where John the Baptist was in prison. Luke goes on to tell how John came to hear of it.

OLD LEAP YEAR LAWS.

When Women Proposed Six Centuries Ago the Man Had to Accept.

In two countries, at least, and more than 600 years ago laws were passed which gave women the right of proposing marriage. These enactments went even farther than this. They also stipulated that if the man whose hand they had sought should refuse he should incur a heavy fine.

A searcher among the ancient records of Scotland discovered an act of the Scottish parliament, which was passed in the year 1288, which runs as follows:

"It is statut and ordaint that during the rein of his maist blissit Megeste, ilk for the years knowne as Lepe Yeare, ilk mayden ladye of baithe highe and lowe estaet shall hae liberte to bespeke ye man she likes, albeit gif he refuses ta talk hir to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulcted in ye sum of ane dundis or less, as his estait may be, except and awis gif he can make it appeare that he is betrothit ane ither woman, he then shall be free."

A year or two later a law almost similar to the Scottish enactment was passed in France and received the approval of the king. It is also said that before Columbus sailed on his famous voyage to the westward a similar privilege was granted to the maidens of Genoa and Florence.

There is no record extant of any fines imposed under the conditions of this Scotch law and no trace of statistics regarding the number of spinsters who took advantage of it or of the similar regulations in France, but the custom seems to have taken firm hold upon the popular mind about that time. The next mention of it is dated nearly 400 years later, and it is a curious little treatise called "Love, Courtship and Matrimony," which was published in London in 1606. In this quaint work the "privilege" is thus alluded to:

"Albeit it now becomes a part of the common law in regard to social relations of life that, as often as every leap yeare doth return, the ladyes have the sole privilege during the time it continueth of making love either by wordes or lookes, no man will be entitled to benefit of clergy who doth in any wise treat her proposal with slight or contumely."

Up to within about a century ago it was one of the unwritten laws of leap year that if a man should decline a proposal he should soften the disappointment which his answer would bring about by the presentation of a silk dress to the unsuccessful suitor for his hand.

A curious leap year superstition is still to be met with in some parts of New England, and that is that during leap year the "beans grow on the wrong side of the pod."

An Incautious Critic.

Almost the last work that Sir Edwin Landseer was engaged on was a life sized picture of Nell Gwynn passing through an archway on a white palfrey. This picture in which the horse alone was finished, was bought by one of the Rothschild family and given to Sir John Millais to complete. One morning a celebrated art critic called and was much impressed with this work. "Ah, to be sure!" he said, going up close and examining a deerhound, which almost breathed, in the foreground of the picture. "How easily one can recognize Landseer's dogs! Wonderful, isn't it?" "Yes, it is wonderful," remarked Sir John, lighting another pipe. "I finished painting that dog yesterday and have done the whole of it myself." That critic was sorry he spoke.

Another Reason.

Aunt Emeline is the best loved woman in Saymouth, for her charity is alike of hand and heart. Like many other excellent persons, Aunt Emeline is not a church member, but she is a regular attendant at the village church, which is so near her cottage as to seem under the same roof. When, at the close of a recent sermon, the minister requested all those present who had never united with the church to retire at the end of service, everybody was surprised to see Aunt Emeline rise and start down the aisle.

"Aunt Emeline," the minister called softly, "that does not apply to you!"

"That isn't why I'm going," Aunt Emeline responded serenely. "I smell my dinner burning up."

The Oily Menhaden.

The oily character of the menhaden is familiar. It is caught for its oil, which is tried out in factories. Menhaden fishermen use purse nets, which are tarred to preserve them. To keep their hands from sticking to the tarred nets they rub on them a freshly caught menhaden, handling it somewhat as they would a cake of soap. So oily is the menhaden that the simple pressure thus applied is enough to bring through the scales oil sufficient for the purpose.

Pleasant Job.

"Oh, George, I'm so glad you've come," exclaimed the sweet girl. "Father is so excited and disturbed. Do go in and calm him."

"Very well," replied Mr. Lovett, "what's the matter with him?"

"Why—er—I just told him you wanted to marry me."

A Mean Trick.

"What do you do to make talk when you call on a new girl?"

"I usually start by telling a joke."

"But the rest of the evening?"

"That can be filled up in explaining the joke."

Foresee misfortunes that thou mayest strive to prevent them, but whenever they happen bear them with magnanimity.—Zoroaster.

CLOSING PEKING'S GATES.

Noisy Ceremony Performed Daily at the Chinese Capital.

The closing of the gates in Peking just because it goes on daily and may apparently go on daily for centuries to come is probably one of the "sights" least witnessed and talked of save by those foreigners who may have chanced to "run for it" near closing time. The daily performance is marked with a due ceremony which is quaint and full of interest to the intelligent onlooker, as the closing by no means signifies the mere bringing together of the heavy wooden doors and barring the emperor's highway against all comers.

At the appointed hour a preliminary signal is given by a large gong or iron shield being struck with a big iron bar fifty times in such quick succession as almost to defy calculation. This is followed by a signal of 100 blows repeated in precisely the same fashion three times. When the third and last cycle of gong strokes is entered on a number of old and at this season very much bewadded and muffled up old "Charlies" start a series of discordant yells to all and sundry to "hasten" or they will be shut out. This combination of signals is followed by a jostling stream of people in both directions.

Presently the rush slackens until only a solitary pedestrian or possibly a man on a donkey, full tilt, a belated rickshaw or a heavily laden cart struggles through. Then a movement is made with the gates, yelling bursts out afresh and another rush ensues, the gates being meanwhile half closed and occasionally opened a little way again until, the outgoers having meanwhile ceased, there is a final scrimmage to get into the city, and the process of closing, which has taken some half hour in all, is concluded.

The huge iron plated doors having clanged to, a monster iron pole is dragged up and placed across them on iron supports, being retained in position by a padlock of enormous proportions and of the well known Chinese type. There are in all nineteen gates, and the same ceremony is observed at each, but at such thoroughfares as the Hatamen there is naturally more traffic, and the process is probably proportionately longer.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Some men don't care how dull business is if it is equally bad with their rivals.

About the third time some people show you a kindness you find they want to sell you something.

Patience is that which you have to have with others, but which no one is called upon to have with you.

Society is a good deal like our rich kin—we are mighty nice to its face, but make fun of it behind its back.

Some people are like a worthless team of horses—always have to be helped when it comes to pulling a load uphill.

There is one way of starting on the pathway to get rich which is seldom traveled these days—running a store and living over it.

It sometimes happens that deference is shown a man not in recognition of his greatness, but because he will be cranky of it isn't.

They Had No Dinner.

The absentmindedness of a certain well known Scotch professor is notorious. Not long ago he invited a few select friends to dine with him, and upon their arrival, some short time before the hour set apart for dinner, the professor suggested a walk through the conservatory and grounds until the gong should sound the dinner hour. After spending a short time inspecting flowers, plants, etc., host and guests came suddenly to a small gate at the end of the lawn. "Ah," said the professor to his astonished guests, "assuredly this will be a much nearer way home for you than going back to the front." And, all unconscious of his invitation to dinner, he opened the gate and bowed his guests out.—London Answers.

Superstition of the Turks.

The superstition of the Turks is nowhere so apparent as in their fear of the "evil eye." Jugs placed around the edge of the roof or an old shoe filled with garlic and blue beets (blue glass balls or rings) is a sure guard against the illusion. Whenever a pretty child is playing upon the street the passersby will say, "Oh, what an ugly child!" for fear of inciting the evil spirit against its beauty. The peasant classes in Turkey are of course the most superstitious because they are the most ignorant. They have no education whatever and can neither read nor write.

Dead as a Doornail.

"As dead as a doornail" at first seems utterly senseless, but becomes lively and picturesque when we remember that knockers were once universally used. Beneath the knocker, in order to prevent disfiguring the door, a large nail or bolt was driven. An impatient caller, waiting for the door to be opened, would frequently use the knocker with great force, and the irresponsiveness of the nail gave rise to this expression.

The Play In Paris.

By a fortnight all Paris is supposed to have seen a new play. It is not considered smart to be seen at a play after it has been running for more than that time.—London Bystander.

A Difference.

He—Don't you think that some of her sayings are smart? She—They aren't, but they do.—Brooklyn Life.

Educational Contest Lists Destroyed By Fire

CONTEST EXTENDED TO July 31st, 1906

Messrs. Armour Limited, Toronto, regret to advise all who have so kindly forwarded lists of names as per the conditions of their Educational Contest, that their building, with its entire contents, was destroyed by fire on the evening of March 19th, and all records of lists they have received, as well as all lists, were destroyed, and we ask that all who had sent in lists previous to this time, mail us duplicate lists. To make up for time lost by the fire, and to give all competitors a fair and equal chance, we have consented to extend the Educational Contest until July 31st, 1906.

We offer $200.00 in gold to those sending in the largest lists of correct words made from the twelve different letters used in spelling the four words

Armour's Extract of Beef

$100.00 in gold will be given as the first prize.

$25.00 in gold will be given as the second prize.

$10.00 in gold will be given as the third prize.

$5.00 in gold will be given to each of the next five.

$2.00 will be given to each of the next twenty.

CONDITIONS

Use only the following 12 letters:—A-R-M-O-U-S E-X-T-C F-B. No letter to appear in the same word more than once.

Only such words may be used as are found in Webster's International Dictionary.

No proper names, foreign words or names of persons, towns or places are to be used.

Words spelled the same, but having different meanings, may be used but once.

All contestants must attach to their lists a metal cap taken from a jar of "Armour's Extract of Beef." Failure to do this puts the list out of competition.

The names of the winners of these prizes will be determined by judges whom we shall appoint.

Write only on one side of the paper. After making your list, state the number of words it contains, with your full name and address on the top of each piece of paper and mark on the outside of the envelope "Educational Contest Department," and mail to our address as below.

Armour's Extract of Beef is sold by all druggists and grocers. If yours cannot or will not supply you, a small jar will be mailed you, post paid, on receipt of 25 cents in stamps or coin.

Free to You, My Sister

Free to You and Every Sister Woman Suffering from Woman's Ailments

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand woman's sufferings. What we women know from experience we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhœa or Whitish Discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial, and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment, for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book "WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER," with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young.

To mothers or daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhœa, Green Sickness and painful or irregular menstruation in young ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality, who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address

The Rolling Mills Have Been Sold.

Disposed of, Before the Banks Closed To-day, to An Ottawa Gentleman Who is Acting for a Syndicate, Which Will, It is Said, At Once Bring the Plant Up-To-Date and Operate It.

It begins to look as though the city may yet have to "loosen up" on that $30,000 rolling mills money now reposing so snugly in the vaults of the Bank of Montreal.

The rolling mills were sold to-day. No false alarm this time. Straight goods, sure enough.

Mr. J. F. Wills this afternoon informed The Intelligencer that the rolling mills property had been today sold to Mr. J. W. Wardrope, of Ottawa, who is acting for a syndicate of manufacturers, and that the deal was closed and the money paid over shortly before the banks closed at one o'clock to-day.

It is, we are told, the intention of the present owners to instal up-to-date machinery, place the plant in first-class condition and operate it as soon as possible. It was, Mr. Wills says, in consideration of this that the sale price was placed at a low figure.

"However," said Mr. Wills, with a smile, "remember I am guaranteeing nothing about the operation of the mills, but I can tell you positively that they have been sold, and the money has been paid over. The new owners say they will operate them."

"They would hardly," ventured the newspaper man, "buy the mills to look at."

CROSSED OVER THE DARK RIVER.

W. J. PATERSON.

Mr. W. J. Paterson, for twenty-seven years a popular resident of the city, passed away at 2 a.m. on Good Friday, the cause of death being kidney disease. The late Mr. Paterson was a well-known figure on our streets, and his death will be sincerely regretted Deceased was 54 years of age, having been born in Toronto. He leaves a widow, but no children. In religion deceased was a Roman Catholic. He was proud of the fact that his father was a Paterson of Inverness, Scotland, and his mother from the County Meath, Ireland. The surviving relatives, in addition to the widow, are his mother and three sisters, in Toronto, and one brother, Ald. Paterson, of this city.

WM. BUNNETT.

Mr. Wm. Bunnett, a well-known yeoman of Thurlow township, died yesterday, after three weeks' illness, from an attack of rheumatism. Deceased, who was 70 years of age, was born at Suffolk, Eng. For the past 45 years he had resided in the township of Thurlow, where he was favorably known. Mr. Bunnett was a member of the Anglican church. An aged widow and a family consisting of six sons and three daughters survive. The sons are; George and James, of Thurlow; Edward, of Cobourg; William, of Allerton, Iowa; David, of Saskatchewan, and Ernest, of this city. The daughters are Mrs. Wm. Howe, of Thurlow, and Misses Laura and Sarah, at home.

MRS. W. J. LESLIE.

At an early hour on Good Friday morning Mrs. Isabella Leslie, wife of Mr W. E. Leslie, passed away at the family residence, Roslin. Deceased, who was 61 years of age, was a daughter of the late Mr. Robt. Duncan, and was born in Thurlow township, where she resided all her life. She was an estimable Christian lady, having been for many years a member of the Presbyterian church. The cause of death was cancer of the throat The husband, two sons, Wm. R. and D. P. Leslie, and two daughters, Mrs. Robert Gordon and Mrs. Robt. Sills, all of Thurlow, survive.

DENNIS CARR.

A well-known yeoman of the township of Sidney passed away yesterday in the person of Mr. Dennis Carr. Heart trouble was the cause of death. Deceased, who was 73 years of age, was born at Norfolk, England. At the age of 22 he came to this country and for 51 years had been a resident of Sidney township. Deceased was a member of the Methodist church. An aged widow and two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Drewery, of this city, and Miss Carr at home, survive.

MRS. MARY E. SOLMES.

This morning a little after eight o'clock, at the residence of her son-in-law, Dr. Clinton, there entered into rest Mrs. Mary E. Solmes, relict of the late David Barker Solmes. Mrs. Solmes had been in failing health for some months past, and the end was therefore not unexpected. The deceased was born in Prince Edward County, and was descended from U. E. Loyalists on both paternal and maternal sides. Her maiden name was Mary E. Stinson, and her maternal grandfather, Col. Henry Young, was one of the first of the U E. Loyalists to land at Kingston and occupy Fort Henry. The deceased was of a very gentle and amiable disposition, sincerely loved by her many friends, who will deeply mourn her taking from their midst. Her children surviving her are: Frank S., of Solmesville, Prince Edward County; Russell R., of Montreal, and Mrs. (Dr.) Clinton, of this city, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. Donald Fraser, of Montreal. The funeral will take place on Tuesday next, at 9.30 a.m., to St. Thomas' Church, and thence to the family vault at Picton, whence interment will be made.

FINAL NOTICE.

THE AMERICAN TOBACCO COMPANY OF CANADA.

THE B. HOUDE COMPANY.

BELLEVILLE FRUIT AND VINEGAR CO.

WAS ORGANIZED LAST NIGHT—A CONCERN WHICH SHOULD HAVE A BRIGHT FUTURE.

A meeting of those interested in the formation of the Belleville Fruit and Vinegar Company, Limited, was held in Mr R. J. Graham's office last night, there being a good attendance. The company, as above described, was organized, the following directors being elected: Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Messrs. R. J. Graham, W. J. Magrath, S. Burrows and W. C. Springer. The directors afterwards elected the following officers:

President—R. J. Graham.
Vice President—W. J. Magrath.
Secretary-treasurer — E. P. Frederick.

The company's factory will be in the premises in West Belleville known as the Severn brewery, which will be fitted up at once. A large number of men will be employed, and the gentlemen interested are enthusiastic about the possibilities of the business, which at first will start with the manufacture of sweet cider, cider vinegar, pickles, jams and jellies. The company is capitalized at $40,000.

CARLOW TOWNSHIP STABBING CASE

O. K. CAMERON, THE VICTIM, APPARENTLY NOT ANXIOUS TO PROSECUTE HIS SON.

Bancroft Times: George Cameron, of Carlow, charged with using a knife with intent to do bodily harm, appeared before Magistrate Jarman on Thursday night last and was remanded for one week. His two brothers gave bail to the amount of $1000 for his appearance.

Mr. O. K. Cameron, the victim of the stabbing affray, was brought to town on Friday, but refused to appear in court on the plea that he was not able to leave his room. The Magistrate called upon him at the house where he was stopping, but he did not appear to be anxious to say anything that would incriminate the son. He is still in Bancroft. The wounds are healing nicely, and he expects to return to his home in a few days.

Belleville Boy Will Be Sunshine Delegate.

The Montreal Herald says: "The annual Sunshine convention is to be held this year in Brooklyn, N.Y. Mr. Macaulay Pope has been appointed delegate from the Boys' Sunshine Club." The delegate mentioned, Mr. W. W. Macaulay Pope, is the son of Major and Mrs. W. W. Pope, who were, until a short time ago, exceedingly popular residents of this city. Mr. Macaulay Pope is now vice-president of the Montreal Boys' Sunshine Club.

Lloyd Case is Ended Says Detective Murray

Toronto, April 12.— In spite of the Belleville assertion that other arrests in the Lloyd murder case are likely, the investigation will not continue. Inspector Murray has his own opinion as to the story that some one else knew more about the murder of Mrs. Lloyd than did her husband.

Belleville Boy Married In the Queen City.

On Thursday, the 12th, a pretty home wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents, Walton St., Toronto, the contracting parties being Mr. Albert E. Davis, of this city, to Miss Emma Smith, daughter of Mr. J. G. Smith. The bride was attired in creme voile, trimmed with lace and satin to match, and was attended by her sister, Miss Maude. Mr. Wm. Gidlow assisted the groom. The bride was the recipient of a number of most beautiful and useful presents. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. Thomas, M.A.

Brothers Graduated At Queen's University.

Belleville had a personal interest in the Convocation of Queen's College on Thursday last, for two of her sons, Mr. Eric McLeod Sutherland, B.S.C., and Mr. Bruce Cunningham Sutherland, graduated in Medicine, taking high honors. The course of these two brothers through college has been watched with pardonable pride by many relatives and friends in this city. Two brothers passing their medical course at the same time is unique in the annals of our city. To the Drs. Sutherland, to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sutherland, the father and mother, to Mrs. (Rev.) J. T. Thompson, sister, and the other relatives we extend congratulations.

At Sign of the Scales.

VAGRANCY.

John Murphy, of this city, was arrested for this offence. He was given a suspended sentence of six months in the Central Prison.

FALSE PRETENCES.

A man who gave his name as Chas. Smith, and Sault Ste. Marie as his home, was charged with and found guilty of obtaining some goods by false pretences. It appears that he secured a hammer and some other articles on the pretence that he was going to work for a contractor in this city. He sold the articles and with the proceeds became intoxicated. He was sent to the Central Prison for four months.

GOING TO THE HORSE SHOW.

A NUMBER FROM THIS VICINITY WILL VISIT THE GREAT EVENT AT TORONTO NEXT WEEK.

Quite a large number of people will be going from this vicinity to the Canadian Horse Show, which takes place in Toronto on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday next, April 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th. There promises to be a finer quality of horses at this exhibition than has been seen during the whole course of its history. The presence of H. R. H. Prince Arthur of Connaught, on the first two days of the show, adds another element of interest. The reduced railways rates which are in force will attract a very large number from this locality. Those desiring reserved seats can secure them by writing the Manager, Stewart Houston, Massey Hall, Toronto.

Fruit Cures Constipation

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Constipation because they are made of fruit.

Constipation comes from just one cause—lack of bile. It is the bile—flowing into the intestines—that causes the bowels to move. More bile is the only thing that can cure Chronic Constipation.

Fruit acts directly on the liver. It stimulates and strengthens the millions of tiny liver cells—causes more bile to be made—and makes the liver give up more bile to the bowels.

MRS. KATE KURTZ, Dunnville, Ont., writes stating that for years constipation was her trouble, and says:—"I have used "Fruit-a-tives" with great benefit, and they are a grand medicine for constipation and other stomach trouble. I would not care to be without them in the house, they are so good."

Cathartics, pills, salts, aperient waters don't reach the liver. They merely irritate the bowels and make the bowels move by irritating the lining membrane. Constipation is made worst by such drugs.

Fruit-a-tives

or Fruit Liver Tablets.

contain no calomel, cascara, senna or other bowel irritants. They are concentrated fruit juices, combined and made more active medicinally by our process of uniting them. "Fruit-a-tives" are a liver tonic. They tone up and stimulate the liver—and cause the liver to secrete more bile. This means a healthy bowel action and a permanent cure for Constipation, Biliousness and kindred troubles.

All druggists should have them. Sent prepaid on receipt of price—50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50—by

Cured of Drunkenness

How a Montreal lady cured her husband of drunkenness with a secret home remedy.

"I want to tell you that tasteless Samaria Prescription has entirely cured my husband of drunkenness so quickly and simply that I am astonished. How glad I am that I confided in you and wrote for your free sample package. The sample tablets I got from you checked his drinking, and before I had used the full treatment he was permanently cured. I gave him the remedy in his tea, and as it had no taste or smell, he never knew he was taking it. I want others to know; so you can use this letter, but please not my name yet. I may say that my husband's health is better in every way than for years."

COCHRANE MINES BILL

Framer Gives Out to the Press Summary of New Measure.

Bill Provides For a Uniform Law For the Whole Province—The Decentralization of Administration—Protection to Prospector—Security of Titles, Thus Affording Protection to the Investor.

Toronto, April 14.—Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands and Mines, has given to the press a summary of his new mines bill, which he formally presented a couple of weeks ago in the Legislature, but which was not then in complete shape.

The bill makes a complete revision of the existing legislation. The mining industry of Ontario is growing rapidly in importance. The aggregate output of minerals and mineral products, which for several years has been about $11,000,000 or $12,000,000, rose in 1905 to about $19,000,000, or if the refined values of nickel and copper are used as a basis of computation, instead of the value in the matte, the total would amount to $22,000,000 or $23,000,000. This large advance is due to the increased output of nickel, silver, copper and pig iron.

Anomalies of Old Act.

Many anomalies and weak places have been brought to light in the present mining laws. For instance, there are at least four methods of taking up mining lands from the Crown—(1) by purchase; (2) by lease; (3) by staking out in a mining division; (4) by staking out outside of a mining division. The amount of work to be done on purchased or leased lands is different from the amount require to be done on lands in mining divisions, and different again from the amount required to be done on lands outside mining divisions. The purchase price of land varies according to distance from a railway, and whether in surveyed or unsurveyed territory. So much variety is confusing, and prospectors are often at a loss to know how to proceed.

A second defect is the encouragement which the law holds out to the taking up of lands for speculation as against actual mining purposes. This is shown by the fact that from first to last about 1,300,000 acres of mining lands have been disposed of by the Crown in Ontario, while anyone acquainted with the mineral industry knows that a very small proportion indeed of this large area is being actually worked. Another proof is the fact that some thousands of mining leases are at present being canceled by the Department of Lands and Mines, covering some 300,000 acres, chiefly because of non-payment of rental. These lands were taken up during the time of boom for gold, silver, nickel, copper or iron, and the holders, instead of working them, have simply sat down and waited for someone to buy them out at a high price. They did not even pay the small annual rent due the Crown.

A third defect is the provision for issuing a title subject to working conditions. That is requiring the work to be done after the patent or lease has been granted. True, the Crown may resume the land if the work is not done, but there are many difficulties in the way of canceling titles once they are issued.

Aim of Framers.

A number of other disadvantages in the present law could be pointed out, and there has for some time past been a general demand that a simpler and more suitable act should be substituted. In framing the bill introduced by Mr. Cochrane, the following ends have been aimed at:

A uniform law for the whole province.

The decentralization of administration.

Protection to the prospector.

Security of titles, thus affording protection to the investor.

To some extent the bill has followed many of the provisions of the British Columbia mining laws, adapted to conditions in Ontario.

One Way Only.

It is proposed to have only one way of taking up mining lands. Every prospector and everyone who wishes to hold mining lands must procure a miner's license, which will be good throughout the whole of Ontario, and will cost $10 per annum.

The province will be divided into mining divisions, in each of which, where there is sufficient business to warrant it, a mining recorder's office will be opened. On making a discovery of mineral, the prospector will stake out his claim by planting post at the corners and erect a discovery post on the outcrop. A claim will be a square of twenty chains to a side, with boundary north and south and east and west.

On staking out his claim, the prospector will record it in the office of the mining division, and his discovery will be subject to inspection. If the inspector finds a discovery of valuable mineral, the prospector will then be required to do thirty days' work within ninety days of recording the claim; sixty days' work in each of the next two years, and ninety days' work during the third year, or he can complete the work in a less time. He may then buy the land at $3 per acre, if in surveyed territory, or $2.50 if in unsurveyed territory. His patent is indefeasible, and not subject to any further working conditions.

Discovery Necessary.

Under the bill, actual discovery of valuable mineral is necessary in order to obtain title to mining lands, and valuable mineral is defined in these words: "A vein, lode or other deposit of mineral or minerals in place, containing such quantities of mineral or minerals other than limestone, marble, clay, marl, peat, or any building stone, as to make it probable that the said vein, lode or other deposit is capable of being developed into a working mine."

It thus affords a guarantee that lands will not be staked and recorded simply because of their proximity to known mines or deposits of value. The price required by the Crown to be paid is a mere bagatelle if the deposit is a valuable one. The chief consideration which the public receives for the small price of Crown lands is the actual discovery of a workable deposit, and in insisting upon this the law is requiring some return to be made for parting with the ownership of the deposit.

Special Conditions.

In the main, mineral deposits of value in Ontario outcrop at the surface, and on this theory the law proceeds in requiring actual discovery. There are, however, cases where, owing to the depth of soil or upper covering of barren rock the minerals do not actually outcrop, and consequently it is difficult, or impossible, to make a discovery in this way. In such cases it is necessary to dig trenches, sink a shaft, or use a diamond drill. The new act provides for such cases by permitting application to be made for what is called a working permit, to be issued by the mining recorder within sixty days after such application, provided in the meantime no bona fide discovery of valuable mineral is made on the land. A working permit gives the holder exclusive possession of the claim for six months on condition of his working on it five days per week during that time. If at the end of six months he has not made a discovery the permit may be renewed for another term, and when discovery is made the land may be bought and patented in the ordinary way. This provision will go a long way towards meeting the views of those mining men who hold that the Crown ought not to insist upon discovery, but that first come should be first served.

Prospecting Permits.

"Prospecting permits" are also provided for. In the regions north of the height of land there is reason to believe that such valuable substances as petroleum, natural gas and salt may be found, as well as lignite, and other minerals which do not come to the surface in the ordinary way.

A prospecting permit covering 640 acres may be granted on payment of a fee of $100. The holder must spend in actual work a sum equal to $2 per acre during the term of the permit, which is to be for a year. Upon discovering minerals the lands may be leased subject to a rental of $1 per acre and the expenditure of $2 per acre per annum in raising the substances found.

Mining Partnerships.

The bill also regulates mining partnerships. It is common for two or more prospectors to work as partners, or one may may "grub-stake" another. The bill requires the particulars of all partnerships to be filed in the recorder's office, and an agent must be named by the partnership, who will have authority to deal with the claim. This will abolish the nuisance of "silent partners" who have already proved a troublesome feature in the Cobalt field.

It has long been felt a hardship by miners that they cannot enforce collection of their wages in the same way as mechanics, under the Lien Act. The bill places miners and laborers in a mine on the same level as mechanics in this respect.

Improved regulations are provided for securing the health and safety of working miners, and detailed rules as to the handling of explosives, ventilation, ladder ways, shafts, scaling, etc., are set out in the bill.

Finally, the bill repeals all previous legislation, except such as is expresly saved in the act, but any rights acquired, or liabilities or penalties incurred under previous legislation are not to be affected.

The bill concludes with a number of forms required to carry out its provisions, so that every prospector may draw up his own papers if he desires to do so.

The question of taxation and bounties to encourage the refining of certain metals is not dealt with in the bill, but is to form the subject of a separate measure.

KILLED ON RAILWAY TRACK.

Cobalt Man While Asleep Meets With Fearful Death.

Cobalt, April 14.—The lifeless body of Archie McDonald, formerly manager of the King Edward Hotel here, was found at 7 o'clock yesterday morning by Section Foreman Hughes between the rails on the T. & N. O. Railway track.

Police Chief Caldbeck was notified, and had the body removed to the fire hall at Haileybury. Coroner Codd was notified. The body was badly mutilated, one arm was cut off, one leg broken in several places, and only one side of the face gave any possibility of identification.

A prospector, named O'Donnell, who had been looking all morning for his mate claimed, when making his enquiries, that he and McDonald had started Thursday night to walk to Cobalt, but that he decided to return, as it was too late and too dark. He tried to induce the deceased to return, but without avail.

It is supposed the dead man, who was tired after tramping in the bush for two days, sat down to rest and fell asleep. He was killed at mile-post 104, between Argentine and Cobalt.

McDonald came from Cornwall, where his wife and family are living. He was a kindly man, and he had many friends in Cobalt.

CHAINED FOR 10 YEARS.

Man Held Captive In His Home For Lunacy Taken to Hospital.

Halifax, April 14.—John Sonier, of Meteghan, Digby County, was released Thursday by G. P. Henry of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty, after having been chained to his room for ten years.

The shackle was tied about his ankle, and the chain to which it was attached was only three feet long, the other end being fastened by a staple driven in the floor alongside his bed.

About ten years ago Sonier, who is now 52 years of age, became demented and his people, who were French, believed they were doing the best they could for him by securing the man in this way. He had been well cared for.

The S. P. C. will have him placed in the Nova Scotia hospital to-day.

Liberal Wins.

Lethbridge, Alta., April 14.—The Liberals have carried the provincial bye-election here, Simmons being 87 in the lead over Sherman (Labor) and 155 over Kiffer (Conservative), with only three small polls to hear from, which will not alter the result.

Child Murder.

Ottawa, April 14.—The body of a male child apparently recently born was fished out of the canal basin last evening. An inquest will be held.

AWARD G. T. P. CONTRACTS.

Lowest Tenderers Win Out—To Use Canadian Materials.

Ottawa, April 14.—When Parliament reassembles next Tuesday, Sir Wilfrid Laurier will announce that the contracts for the two sections of the transcontinental railway have been awarded, and that in each case the work has been given to the firm which submitted the lowest offer. The western section, which has been let to J. D. MacArthur, begins at Winnipeg and ends at Peninsula, crossing near the junction point of the Fort William branch of the Grand Trunk Pacific, 245 miles. MacArthur's tender is $13,010,000, a quarter of a million dollars below the estimate of the Government engineers.

The eastern section runs from the north end of the Quebec bridge, Quebec, to a point near La Tuque, on the St. Maurice River, 150 miles. The contract goes to Hogan and McDonald, at $5,297,000, the lowest of half a dozen bids, and about $800,000 below the cost estimated by the engineers.

The third contract, for a steel viaduct about 3,000 feet long across Cap Rouge Valley, near Quebec, has been awarded to the Dominion Bridge Co., for $318,000.

A deposit of $400,000 was made with each tender for the Winnipeg section; a deposit of $225,000 for the Quebec section, and a deposit of $35,000 for the steel viaduct.

A clause provides that "the contractor shall in connection with the whole of the work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada; provided the same can be obtained as cheaply and upon as good terms in Canada as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price." The work is to be completed on or before September 1. 1907.

GAYNOR AND GREENE.

Each Sentenced to Four Years and to Pay a Big Fine.

Savannah, Ga., April 14.—Judge Speer in the United States Court yesterday sentenced Greene and Gaynor each to a term of four years in the penitentiary, and to a fine of $575,749.90, the amount each is charged with having fraudulently obtained from the United States Government.

Richard Garnett, LL.D., Dead.

London, April 14.—Richard Garnett, the author, died yesterday of internal hemorrhage, at his residence in this city. He was 71 years old. Richard Garnett, C. B., LL.D., was born at Lichfield in 1835 and in 1851 was appointed assistant librarian in the British Museum; in 1875, superintendent of the reading-room, from 1870-9 was keeper of the printed books there and for many years edited the museum catalogue. His writings included autobiographies of poets and authors' verse and history of literature. He was a contributor to the Encyclopaedia Brittanica and was editor of the international library of famous literature.

Tornado in Texas.

Dallas, Texas, April 14.—It was reported yesterday that six persons were killed and several injured in the tornado which swept over Briggs, Texas, Thursday afternoon. A number of buildings in the district were destroyed. At Cleburne, Texas, the storm blew down the grand stand in the ball park during the progress of a game. Several persons were injured.

Foul Play Is Feared.

Winnipeg, April 14.—Lawrence Kennedy, who came here several days ago from Graceville, Minn., with several associates on a land purchasing expedition, has mysteriously disappeared and foul play is suspected. He had considerable money on him when last seen.

RAN DOWN ROYAL PARTY.

Peasants' Cart Strikes King Edward's Carriage in Corfu Street.

Corfu, April 16.—A cart filled with drunken peasants collided with the royal equipage in which King Edward and Queen Alexandra were driving here Saturday.

One of the rowdies fell from the seat, and the rearing horses backed the cart over him. His leg was broken, but he was sobered to a realization of what had happened.

He begged for mercy, and would have kissed His Majesty's feet, but the King backed away. The peasant then crawled toward the Queen, but she also evaded him.

Before leaving the scene King Edward ordered a doctor from the British flagship in the harbor to attend the man.

Hamilton Gets Orders.

Hamilton, April 16.—Saturday Mayor Biggar received the following letter from Hon. Frank Cochrane: "I hereby notify you not to make any further contracts with radial or steam railways or transmission lines without the consent of the Government until further notice." Though the Minister's letter does not say so, it is supposed that he refers only to the Beach, and it is taken as an indication that the Government has decided to end all disputes about the Beach by taking it over.

Probably Drowned.

Brockville, April 16.—Fears are felt for the safety of Wm. Stevens, a popular young resident of Alexandria Bay. He left home in a rowboat with a camping outfit to spend a few days down the River St. Lawrence. Before daylight next morning cries for help were heard along the shore, and subsequently his boat was found drifted ashore. No trace of him has been found, and the river is being dragged for the body.

Ice Is Moving.

Quebec, April 16.—The signal service of the Quebec agency of the Marine and Fisheries Department received a despatch Saturday reporting that the Lake St. Peter ice was commencing to break up. The whole body can be expected to move down by Monday or Tuesday next.

Revolt In Morocco.

London, April 16.—According to The Daily Mail's correspondent at Elaraish, Morocco, a young relative of the Sultan's will shortly be proclaimed ruler in the south, and a formidable revolt against the Fez Government is maturing in the City of Morocco.

200 Express Agents Strike.

St. John, N.B., April 16.—Nearly 200 express agents along the line of the Intercolonial and Prince Edward Island Railways went out on strike at 12 o'clock Saturday night, having been refused the increase in wages they asked for handling parcels.

Little Hope For Peace.

Miners and Business Men In Anthracite Field Agree.

Preparations Being Made For Expected Suspension of Coal Mining—Eleven Thousand Miners Go Out in Virginia—Refuse to Accept the Winder Plan of Arbitration—Five Operators Break Ranks and Sign 1903 Scale.

Philadelphia, April 16.—Miners and business men generally throughout the anthracite field express little hope of a peaceful settlement of the differences between operators and miners. Officials of many coal companies recently have been making obvious preparations for an extended suspension of mining operations. Imported laborers are said to have been placed in the collieries of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., the Pennsylvania Co. and the Deleware & Hudson Co. about Wilkes-Barre.

Eleven Thousand Miners Go Out.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 16.—The United Mine Workers' convention of sub-district No 6 met here Saturday to receive the answer of the operators to the demand for the 1903 scale made upon them Friday. The answer was a flat refusal to grant the demands, and instead an offer to arbitrate on the lines proposed by John H. Winder was presented. This the miners would not accede to. The operators then withdrew, and a strike was declared. Eleven thousand are affected.

Strike's Over.

Greensville, April 16.—The miners and operators of the Mercer and Butler County fields of the Pittsburg district reached an argreement on the wage scale which will be effective for two years. The miners were granted an advance, but it is a compromise on the scale demanded. About 1,500 miners who have been on strike will return to work immediately.

Operators Break Ranks.

Massillon, Ohio, April 16.—The first break in the ranks of the operators in the Massillon district came Saturday night, when five operators signed the 1903 scale. The three largest operators in the district are still holding out against the demands of the miners. The five operators who signed employ about 4,000 miners.

CHARTER OF LIBERTY.

Law Guaranteeing Russians Personal Freedom and Property Right.

St. Petersburg, April 16.—The draft of a charter of personal liberty has been drafted by a commission of which Count Ignatieff is president. It provides that a person arrested shall be given a hearing within 24 hours, and that no domiciliary arrests shall be made without a warrant. The law provides for the inviolability of property, especially of personal correspondence and prohibits the use of force in the dispersal of unarmed street mobs before warnings have been given. The use of troops is forbidden except at the request of the civil authorities. All secret societies are forbidden. A famine and a typhus fever epidemic have broken out in the provinces adjacent to Kharkoff.

3,000 In Good Friday Battle.

London, April 16.—The correspondent at Warsaw of the Chronicle reports that the conflict between the Mariavite sect and the orthodox Catholics is increasing in intensity. A pitched battle, in which three thousand persons participated, occurred on Friday in the environs of Warsaw, resulting in two Catholics being killed and thirty wounded.

Quiet Easter at St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, April 16.—At midnight Saturday night the usual imposing Easter services were held in all the churches in St. Petersburg. Emperor Nicholas, who ordinarily gives the signal, "Christ Is Risen," at the winter palace, remained at Tsarskoe-Selo, to which place special trains were run to accommodate Cabinet Ministers and other high dignitaries who went to the palace to be present at the service.

The Easter festival, the anniversary of the Jewish massacres at Kishineff and other places, happily was not stained this year by anti-Jewish excesses, so far as was reported up to midnight.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Port Dalhousie, April 16.—The Welland Canal will be opened to-day for traffic. There were no boats in waiting yesterday.

Paris, April 16.—There is a posibility that King Edward will pay a visit to the Czar in June, after the meeting of the National Assembly

At Springfield, Mo., Saturday night a mob roasted two negroes to death for assaulting a white woman, but there was no evidence against them.

Amherstburg, April 16.—The grain warehouse of Barron, Bailey & Bailey was totally destroyed by fire at noon Saturday. Loss about $5,000. The office stove is blamed.

Windsor, April 16.—The swift Canadian fisheries cruiser Vigilant, rapid-fire battery and all, slipped her lines at Walkerville Saturday noon and sped down the river at top speed.

Chicago, April 16.—Deputy Sheriff Wilson served a summons on Dowie personally for $500 in a civil suit at the point of a revolver. Dowie listened to its reading without reply.

Detective Mackie returned Sunday morning with his prisoner, Christopher Holland, who was arrested in Bristol, England, on the charge of stealing $13,800 from the Ideal Bedding Co. of Toronto.

New York, April 16.—Nicodemia Lellis dived a distance of 135 feet Saturday from Washington Bridge into the Harlem River, and died in a hospital an hour later with out explaining the motive for his act.

Guelph, April 16.—Norfolk street Methodist Church celebrated Sunday the golden jubilee of the dedication of the present church building, and the seventieth anniversary of the organization of the congregation.

St. Louis, April 16.—George R. Young was formerly cashier and chief clerk of the Postal Telegraph Co. here. He was wanted to stand trial on a charge of embezzlement of $500, but committed suicide at Mount Holly, N. J., on Saturday. He was 55 years of age.

Aeroplane Injures Inventor.

Atlantic Beach, Fla., April 16.—Israel Ludlow of New York, inventor of the Aeroplane, was so badly injured by a fall here Saturday that he will probably die. Mr. Ludlow in tow of two automobiles ascended to a height of 150 or 200 feet, when his aeroplane encountered a strong south wind, which was blowing with such force that it broke the bamboo supports and the wings of the aeroplane shut in, pinning him to his seat. With its occupant pinned in, the aeroplane fell to the beach. Two of Mr. Ludlow's vertabrae were knocked out of line, paralyzing his lower limbs.

Daily Intelligencer.

Life Insurance in the United States.

The investigation into the affairs of the New York principal insurance companies, is having its effect upon business, particularly upon that transacted by the New York Life, The Equitable Life, and the Mutual Life of New York. The Post, one of the most reliable papers in that great city, tells its readers that the new business written during 1905 by the three companies, named above, decreased no less a sum than $162,000,000.

This, however, does not indicate a want of confidence in the principle of life assurance, for the same journal points out, that "the total gains "by other companies over the business for 1904 more than offset this "enormous decrease in the Big "Three, and left a net increase of "about $62,000,000." It does show, however, that the business of life assurance has been transferred from the companies which have had their affairs sifted to other companies which have not had the inquisitors at work.

A contemporary points out that other companies have lost "besides the Big Three, and the result is significant. Of seventy companies operating in the United States (not industrial), forty-six show a gain of about $94,000,000, and twenty-four show losses of $194,080,000. Of this tremendous decrease all but $32,000,000 occurred in the Big Three. So the proportion of losses stands:

"Big Three, $162,000,000.

"Other companies, $32,000,000."

These latter figures do not seem to justify those given by the Post, but they are significant enough to show that, to an alarming extent, these United States life companies are suffering in the magnitude of their business. It would be interesting to know whether this serious falling off has been in their foreign or domestic business.

Canadians may well make a note of it.

The rain may have rather spoiled the millinery display yesterday, but it couldn't spoil the music. The Intelligencer heartily congratulates all the ladies and gentlemen in the various choirs who yesterday uplifted their voices in the Easter anthems. Diligent enquiry reveals the fact that, in every church in the city, the music was bright and quite up to—if not higher than—the standard set in former years. And that's saying something, mind you, in this city of good taste and good singers.

On Friday last a milkman, passing from Dundas to Bridge streets, on Albert street, got so badly mired that before he could extricate his horse and wagon twenty-three quarts of milk were lost.

The Liverpool Chief of Police is of the opinion that education does not so much decrease crime as it refines the criminal. He says: "The burglar avoids violence whenever possible, and chooses when occasions offer more subtle forms of roguery. Their profits are enhanced and their risks diminished, and I have no doubt that this is one of the fruits of modern education." Interpreted, this may mean that the Yankee life insurance and bank managers who have been recently exposed for their frenzied finance would have been burglars and highwaymen had they been uneducated.

Funeral of the Late William J. Paterson

Many citizens were yesterday afternoon in attendance at the funeral of the late Mr. Wm. J. Paterson, which took place from the family residence, Church street. The C.M.B.A. of which the deceased was a member, turned out in large numbers. Services were held at St. Michael's church, being conducted by the Rev. Father Twomey. The choir chanted the Libera. Many beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket. The bearers were Messrs. C. J. Peppin, W. A. G. Hardy, H. L. Ingram, Wm. Williamson, F. Dolan, sr., and J. Downey.

Sunday Morning Blaze At Sheriff Hope's.

CRACKLING SOUND HEARD BY INVALID CHILD, PROBABLY PREVENTED A TRAGEDY—LOSS HEAVY — FIRE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN CAUSED BY DEFECTIVE WIRES.

At an early hour on Sunday morning, Sheriff Hope and his family, who resided on the corner of Bridge street and Bleecker avenue, had a rather exciting experience.

This was owing to the fact that a fire broke out in the premises, and before it was subdued the building, with all of its contents, was about destroyed.

At 1.30 the Sheriff's daughter, Miss Marjorie, who is ill, was awakened by a crackling noise in the garret. She, as best she could, raised an alarm, and soon other members of the family were awakened.

By this time the fire (for such it proved to be), had gained considerable headway and the inmates were compelled to flee for their lives, with nothing about them but their night clothes.

The young sufferer who raised the alarm was tenderly carried out of the burning building to a nearby residence and latterly was conveyed to the hospital.

The flames spread with such rapidity that no wearing apparel was saved by the Sheriff's family or servants.

The fire brigade was summoned, but owing to the fact that the place was a considerable distance from the fire halls it was some little time before they were able to get to work.

Whilst the firemen were able to subdue the flames before the house was completely destroyed, the salvage will be little, if any.

It is thought that an electric wire, which entered the residence where the fire was first seen, caused the trouble.

The building was a large two-storey brick structure, the property of Col. A. A. Farley, who resides at Quebec. It was insured in the Royal, and the amount will probably cover the loss.

Sheriff Hope's loss will be heavy, as the house was elaborately furnished. His insurance is $3,500 in the Hartford. On the 13th of December last the same place was visited by fire and the loss was considerable.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Slosson, the veteran billiardist, defeated Willie Hoppe, the "boy wonder," by 500 to 245. Schafer and Slosson lead in the tournament so far.

It is said that Sir Thomas Lipton is having plans for a Shamrock fourth prepared. They can't lose Sir Thomas.

A meeting of lacrosse players in this city is booked for the near future, we are told. There are said to be former stars here in the persons of Cornwall and Brantford boys—in which towns, as everybody knows, they grow sure-enough lacrosse experts—as well as a lot of good players from other places. It is to be hoped that all interested in the game will help the thing along, and give us a little sport this summer.

The National Baseball league teams have hardly got squared away yet, but Boston is leading with 4 wins and 0 losses. New York is fourth with 2 wins and 1 loss.

The Midland Baseball league this summer is composed of Cobourg, Port Hope, Peterboro and Oshawa. The schedule opens on May 24. If it had been a croquet league, now, Belleville might have entered.

Booth Remanded in Napanee Case.

Napanee Beaver: G. A. Booth, of Trenton, was arrested at Montreal about two months ago on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences. He was given four months or a fine of $50.00, which he paid. A warrant of a similar character was issued by Mr. B. Derbyshire, Odessa, in January, and as soon as Booth paid his fine he was held by orders from Chief of Police Graham, of Napanee. Mr. Graham went to Montreal on Tuesday after the prisoner and brought him to Napanee on Wednesday. On his arrival here Booth was given a hearing before Police Magistrate Rankin and remanded for one week.

Death of a Child.

Wilber Ellis three-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ellis, of Marmora, died last evening from an attack of pneumonia. The little one was on a visit to relatives in Thurlow, when it was taken ill, and the illness proved to be fatal. The remains will be sent to Marmora for interment.

In Great Demand.

Referring to the description of the Canada Corundum Company's mine at Craigmont, which appeared in the last issue of the Intelligencer it is interesting to add that within a short time the company has applied for and obtained from the Ontario Business College of this city—two of its graduates—one as bookkeeper and the other as stenographer. Principal Johnson informs us that the demand for O.B.C. graduates from all parts of Canada is unprecedented.

CAUSE OF THEIR DEFEAT.

Slater Ladies' Shoe Forces Confession From Boston Shoe Makers.

The commercial war between countries dates back to the establishment of the first customs house. Business war between Canada and the United States looked like a victory for our neighbors twenty-five years ago. The first men on the other side to openly confess defeat at the hands of Canada were the shoe manufacturers. They admit that they cannot compete with the Slater shoe in Canada, and when anyone compares a $3.50 ladies' shoe made by the Slater Shoe Company with a $4.00 imported shoe the cause of the American confession of weakness is apparent. The sterling make of the Slater women's shoe is emphasized by its finish, fashion and style.

An Antiquarian Gets Into Legal Trouble.

Miss Josephine Smith who spent a few days in Belleville a couple of years ago gathering relics of years ago, at the Cornwall assizes last week was acquitted of a charge of retaining and diverting to her own use a Roman Catholic prayer book printed in Paris, France, in 1500, and believed to have been at one time the property of Mary Queen of Scots. Miss Smith is a well-known antiquarian. She conducted her own case and addressed the jury. She testified that she believed the book to be among some goods sent to a friend in Philadelphia, which are still in possession of the express company. She denied any intention of retaining the book, and the jury evidently believed her.

SUNLIGHT SOAP
is better than other Soaps but is best when used in the Sunlight way. Follow directions.

SUNLIGHT
WAY OF WASHING

FIRST.—Dip the article to be washed in a tub of lukewarm water, draw it out on a washboard and rub the soap lightly over it. Be particular not to miss soaping all over. THEN roll it in a tight roll, lay in the tub under the water, and go on the same way until all the pieces have the soap rubbed on, and are rolled up.

Then go away for thirty minutes to one hour and let the "Sunlight" Soap do its work.

NEXT.—After soaking the full time rub the clothes lightly out on a wash board, and the dirt will drop out; turn the garment inside out to get at the seams, but don't use any more soap; don't scald or boil a single piece, and don't wash through two suds. If the water gets too dirty, pour a little out and add fresh. If a streak is hard to wash, rub some more soap on it, and throw the piece back into the suds for a few minutes.

LASTLY COMES THE RINSING, which is to be done in lukewarm water, taking special care to get all the dirty suds away, then wring out and hang up to dry.

For Woolens and Flannels proceed as follows:—Shake the articles free from dust. Cut a tablet of SUNLIGHT SOAP into shavings, pour into a gallon of boiling water and whisk into a lather. When just lukewarm, work articles in the lather without rubbing. Squeeze out dirty water without twisting and rinse thoroughly in two relays of lukewarm water. Squeeze out water without twisting and hang in the open air.

SECRET IS OUT.

FORMULA OF MI-O-NA MADE PUBLIC.—A CURE FOR STOMACH TROUBLES.

Our leading druggists are very anxious to have Mi-o-na, a remedy which they sell as a cure for stomach troubles, tested rigidly in every case of heart-burn, acute dyspepsia, wind on the stomach, loss of appetite, annoying dreams, sleeplessness, general weakness and debility, or where the digestive organs do not act as they should.

Mi-o-na is composed of bismuth subgallate, by all odds the very best medicine known for intestinal diseases.

With this is combined cerium oxalate, a standard remedy in the treatment of all irritations of the stomach and digestive organs.

Sodium bicarbonate is then added to overcome the excessive acidity usually present in stomach troubles, and nux vomica for its general tonic and nerve-strengthening powers.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

Correspondent Argues For Civic Improvement.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—Would it not be a good idea for Belleville to organize a Civic Improvement Association, with the object of making our city more beautiful, healthful and attractive generally?

These Improvement Associations are a power in many of the cities, towns and villages "across the line," and Hamilton and Galt have long since fallen in line. Kingston is at present conducting an enthusiastic campaign of civic improvement. Why should not Belleville take up the good work? To quote from the report of one society, "This association work is the most contagious thing in the world. Like a freshly painted house in a neighborhood, it starts nearly everybody in sight to planning improvements on their own property. There is no doubt our city is entering on a period of growth and material prosperity. Let us see that it is at the same time growing in beauty, healthfulness and cleanliness. Here are some of the things for which a Civic Improvement Association stands:

1st.—To associate persons, particularly women, who are interested in restoring America to its naturally beautiful condition.

2nd.—To bring about such action on the part of its members and others whom they can influence, as will result in cleanliness and sightliness about their own home grounds and surroundings, however humble.

3rd.—To promote by every possible action and influence, the establishment of sanitary and beautiful conditions in and about the community, and along the highways approaching it.

4th.—To encourage the establishment and maintenance of public parks, reservations, park drives, open squares, play grounds and baths, by which the people may have proper facilities for recreation and pleasure, amid conditions as nearly resembling those of nature as possible.

5th.—To create and foster an interest in the planting and preservation of native American hardy trees, vines, and shrubs for the beautifying of the home, the highways and the parks of our community, and to advocate such laws and regulations as will prevent the mutilation or improper removal and will guard the trimming of trees that are on or near the public highways, or in view from any park or other place of recreation.

6th.—To work for the intelligent improvement of conditions in and about the public school houses of our community and neighborhood, to the end that our children may be educated amid such surroundings as will advance the rising generation in respect to the appreciation and use of the beautiful and cleanly surroundings of the home and community to which they are by right entitled.

7th.—To endeavor by every honorable means to cause the permanent removal of unsightly advertising signs and bill-boards, especially about public parks or play grounds.

Is there not room in Belleville for some of these ideas to be carried out, and the public spirit and municipal pride to take up the subject?

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT.

Fish and Game Protection.

The Intelligencer has been asked to publish the following letter;

To the Members of the Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association;

Dear Sir,—A small pamphlet is to be prepared by the Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association, for the Farmer, Sportsman, and Guide.

It is proposed to ask the assistance of each member of the Association who would like to help in this work. If, therefore, you have any information, which you consider might be useful to have placed in such pamphlet, you are cordially invited to send the same to the Secretary of your Branch, to be forwarded by him to this office.

The general scheme of this pamphlet is: First, to show the farmer in what manner his interests are best served by the protection of fish and game: second, To give useful information for the guide.

Doubtless a large fund of information, suggestions and articles will be received from the members through this appeal, and it is proposed to hand the whole of this information to Mr. Arnold Haultain, who has consented, gratuitously, to reduce such information to pamphlet form.

Changes in the School Books — When next the school books are changed, which may occur within a year or so, we have reason to believe that the Minister of Public Works will give us a few pages to be devoted to such questions as the harm done by the killing of insectivorous birds the injury caused by catching fish out of season, robbing bird's nests, and other kindred subjects.

If you have any suggestions, items of interest, or articles, for matter along these lines, you are requested to send the same to the Secretary of your Branch, to be forwarded here. We hope to obtain a great deal of information in this manner, and the same will be handed to Henry W. Auden, M. A. (Cantab.,) Principal of Upper Canada College, who has kindly consented gratuitously, to edit the reading matter for the pages which may be given us by the educational Department.

Yours truly,
A. KELLY EVANS,
Secretary at Toronto.

IS YOUR COAT DUSTY?

You Probably Have the White Scab of Dandruff on It.

If your coat or shoulders have a white dust upon it, the chances are that it is from dandruff. The only way to permanently cure dandruff is to remove the cause, which is a germ. Newbro's Herpicide kills the germ. Every toilet table should have such a hair-dressing that contains also the destroyer of the dandruff and hair falling germ. It stops all irritation, keeps the scalp sweet, pure and wholesome. Remember that something claimed to be "just as good," will not do the work of genuine Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Presented With Address and Purse of Gold.

A pleasing event took place at the Tabernacle Sunday School yesterday afternoon, namely, the reading of an address and presentation of a purse of gold to Mr. I. Gordon. The recipient, who has for some time been leader of the orchestra in connection with the Tabernacle Sunday School is about to leave the city for the purpose of taking a course in the Conservatory of Music at Toronto. The purse was subscribed by members of the orchestra, officers and officials of the school. Mr. Gordon replied in an appropriate manner to the presentation.

CHEWING THE CUD.

I'll have to learn to chew the cud;
I haven't time to eat;

Then rush into the street;
With apple pie in either hand
I back to business scud;
I don't know what I'll do unless
I learn to chew the cud.

So fast the times are getting now,

I don't know what we'll do unless
We learn to chew the cud.

Ah! 'tis indeed a rapid age;
Its way I hardly like,
For by the time you've captured wealth
Your stomach's on a strike.
Your indigestion turneth down
Your beefsteak and your spud;
I've got a remedy, 'tis this;
Let's learn to chew the cud.

My breakfast takes three minutes,
My dinner "hour" takes ten;
And, bolting pie, I reappear
Among my fellow men,
This splendid form my horse sense says
Will soon in graveyards bud,
Unless I change my business ways,
And learn to chew the cud.

CANNOT ACCEPT LEGACY.

Canadian Nurses Who Are Heirs of Late Senator Fulford.

Mabel E. Lenman, Ella B. Jordan, Miss Sarkey and Miss Taylor, four Canadian nurses who attended the late Senator Fulford of Brockville prior to his death in Newton Hospital, Newton, Mass., on Oct. 15 last, from injuries received while he was motoring down a hill leading into Boston, are heirs to $100 each by a bequest of the late Senator. They are prohibited from accepting the legacy, however, by regulations governing Newton Hospital and the money remains in the hands of the Toronto General Trust Corporation, who act as executors of Senator Fulford's will.

The late Senator received his fatal injuries on October 8 last, while making an automobile tour through the Eastern States. As he and Mr. W. T. Hanson of Schenectady, N. Y., were descendig a hill on their way to Boston, their car collided with an electric railway car, resulting in injuries to both occupants, and also to the chauffeur. Senator Fulford was removed to Newton Hospital, where he was attended. His nurses were four young ladies of Canadian birth, who are in training in Newton Hospital. Their constant and kind attention so won the heart of Senator Fulford that he expressed to Mr. Hanson the desire that provision be made for the payment of $100 to each of the nurses as a recognition of their care and attention. The Toronto General Trusts Corporation, as executors of the Senator's will, was notified of the bequest, and recently a cheque was made out by the corporation for $400, payable to the nurses through Mr. Hanson. When Mr. Hanson turned the money over to them, the Board of Management of the hospital would not allow the nurses to accept it, claiming they would be violating the regulations of the institution in taking any such gifts.

Hon. Adam Beck.

Will the information gleaned by Hon. Adam Beck concerning the cost of generation and transmission of power at Niagara crystallize into a great agency for the public good? asks The Globe. It is something to have ascertained such important facts as were enunciated the other day; it is quite another thing to follow up such facts with the constructive statesmanship that causes future generations to build monuments to their public men and call them blessed. Thousands who knew Hon. Adam Beck personally believe that he is large enough to see this great work to its conclusion. He is a practical business man, with sufficient diplomacy in public and commercial matters to inspire confidence among his political supporters and associates. Since 1902 he has been a member of the Legislature He was born at Baden, Ont., June 20, 1857, and in 1898 was married to Lillian Ottaway. He was educated at Galt, and in 1902 and 1903 was mayor of London. In religion he is an Episcopalian and in business a manufacturer. He is fond of speedy horses and is a familiar figure at the Jackey Club meetings.

Canadian to the Rescue.

Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Canadian High Commissioner, has come to the assistance of the Bodleian Library of Oxford University with a donation of $2,500 to complete the total sum which was necessary to secure the first folio of the works of Shakespeare. The folio was presented to the Bodleian Library in 1624, but was sold in 1664, and since that time has been in a private collection. An American collector recently offered $15,000 to the present owner of the folio, who, however, gave the Bodleian Library the opportunity to recover it for the same amount. His offer held good until March 30. The Bodleian Library, which was originally established in 1445, takes its name from Sir Thomas Bodley, who collected an enormous library during his later years, re-established the library in 1597-1602, and presented it to the University of Oxford. It contains over 500,000 printed volumes, and 20,000 volumes of manuscripts.

The Government Up There Has Hired a Rainmaker—Gets $10,000.

Charles M. Hatfield, the famous rainmaker of Los Angeles, California, has been engaged by contract with the Yukon Territorial Government to make rain in the Klondike during all the coming mining season, and will be there within eight weeks. According to the contract Hatfield must be on the ground by May 1 with an assistant and the rain-making apparatus.

Last summer the Klondike hydraulic plants suffered the loss of thousands of dollars that they would have harvested had there been big rains. The rainmaking plan was suggested and fostered by J. T. Lithgow, Territorial Comptroller, now acting Commissioner of the Territory. He had come in touch with Hatfield's work while in California on a visit.

In the terms of the contract, which is on file in the Government offices at the Administration building in Dawson, Hatfield is to receive $10,000 provided he makes rain to the satisfaction of a board of seven men, three of whom shall be chosen by the Governor of the Yukon, three by Hatfield and one by the first six. The contract is made on the terms of no cure no pay. Should Hatfield fail to produce rain to the satisfaction of the board, or the majority of the board, he will receive only his cost of transportation to and from the Klondike and maintenance for himself and assistant and cost of shipping the apparatus. From what is understood of the method Hatfield should have very little apparatus to ship.

Of the $10,000 half is to be paid by ten of the largest mining operators in the Yukon. The other half is to be paid by the Yukon Government.

Hatfield agrees to produce rain to the satisfaction of the board. No stipulated quantity of rain by inches is required, but it is specifically stated in the contract that he "shall increase the rainfall and renew it from time to time for four months, as may be named by the board, and sufficient to insure, so far as ample rain will, a successful and prosperous summer for placer mining industry of the Dawson district." Five days will be allowed after each seance for the rain to come. Ten days after Hatfield comes the money subscribed by the big companies is to be paid into the Government Comptroller's hands.

PLAY MARBLES HONESTLY.

Rev. Dr. Crummy Says Youth Determines Manhood.

Teach a boy to be honest when playing marbles, carefully mould a boy's mind and habits, impress a boy with the fact that it is noble and manly to courageously avow the good teachings of mother and father, and little fear need be entertained for the character of the man. Rev. Dr. Crummy expressed this sentiment in a recent sermon in the university series delivered at Wycliffe College, Toronto.

Dr. Crummy was speaking before young men and women, and he endeavored to outline for them the philosophy of life as it presents itself in practical form. Youth was the time, he maintained, for the fashioning of men and women, and youth had much of this fashioning to do themselves. Invariably if the gambler was traced back to his boyhood days it would be found that he had cheated his playmate in a game of marbles. Often parents ignored these evil tendencies of their children, thinking them too trivial for observance and admonishment, but the bad habits and wrong ways once rooted grew and grew until the man gambled for large stakes.

"I like to look behind the banker, the broker, the leader in mercantile pursuits, and see how his mind was directed in boyhood. I also look behind the gambler, of whom we speak so ill, and see what paths he wandered into, for the man is the boy grown to full stature."

A vivid verbal description of Tom Brown and Little Arthur, as they appear in "Tom Brown's School Days," was given by the speaker to point out the discouragements boys meet when they find themselves away from the tender counsel of father and mother and face to face with a heartless world, or rather, with a world of persons who seem heartless until the finer sentiments of their dispositions are touched. Here Dr. Crummy showed how a young man, by taking a fearless stand for the right, could gain the good will, for himself, and often the souls for God, of those who know true principles but are afraid to acknowledge them.

Director Geological Survey.

Mr. A. P. Low, the well-known Canadian traveler and geologist, has been appointed director of the Geological Survey of Canada. Mr. Albert Peter Low, B. A. Sc., joined the service on June 1, 1881, when twenty years of age, and was appointed Geologist Feb. 16, 1891. His career in the department has been one of steady advancement, and he has had a large experience in the difficult and important work of exploration. For more than six years he was engaged in exploring the resources of Labrador, of which country he probably has a more thorough knowledge than any other man in Canada. In 1887 he accompanied the Diana in a scientific expedition sent to Hudson's Bay. Recently he was in charge of the Neptune in exploration work in Hudson's Bay.

Constantinople.

Constantinople, called by the Turks Stamboul or Istamboul, was originally the ancient city of Byzantium. In 330 B. C. the Emperor Constantine made it the capital of the Roman empire and called it after his own name. The city lies on an arm of the sea called the Golden Horn and is protected by a great wall built by the Byzantine emperors.

The Adventurers

CHAPTER I.

IT was in August of the year 188— that I turned the corner, as it were, into the strange history I am now to relate. The Welsh marches had been entirely unknown to me until at a point in an idle tour of the west of England I fell upon the little town of Raymond and brought up at 7 in the evening at the Swan hostelry that occupies a corner of the irregular triangle constituting the market place. The country in that part is full of swelling hills and valleys, soft and exhilarating of air and clothed with a great vesture of wood. The great Gwent, as the forest across the little river Ray is called in the countryside, rolls westward across the county, broken by tracts of fertile fields lying under grain and pasture, and descends upon the black hills of the mining district beyond. At Raymond, which stands upon the hither side of the river, we are yet in England proper and upon the margin of a more open country. The town itself is small and neat and wears its air of respectable antiquity very haughtily.

The inn, which was itself among the most venerable buildings in the small town, was comfortably served by a very brisk landlord of middle age. It had kept, so to speak, a precarious continuity with antiquity and in the main scheme had changed but little during the 200 years which had passed since its erection.

The hostelry was much too large for its present uses, but for all that wore no air of neglect in the inhabited chambers. My own rooms were marked by homely comfort, and I was waited upon like a prince of the blood. After a rude and wholesome country dinner I sought distraction in the taproom with my pipe and a heterogeneous company of townsfolk. The landlord was in some kind a president at this symposium, which consisted for the main part of a few of the smaller shopkeepers. There was Mr. Jones, for example, whose name I had noticed upon a shop front as I rode through the High street. This man fixed upon me early in the evening, and poured his confidences into my ear. He was a hay merchant, and he had no dearer ambition than to establish his business in Bristol. He found Raymond too mean for his aspiring temper, and the Mecca of his prayers was Bristol. I confess that I found him something of a bore, and was glad to exchange commonplaces with my other neighbor. The landlord himself kept his seat before the long table, smoking his long pipe with the peace of a man whose business is ended for the day, and now and then discharging a glance in my direction. He was, I discovered, a traveled man for those parts, and had the reputation of a smart fellow. Indeed, he compared well with the duller rustics who surrounded him. The placid air of the taproom was in some ways little more diverting than the solitude of my chamber, but that was soon to pass. Presently there came a great noise, followed by a heavy tramp of feet approaching from the outer bar, and in strutted a tall young fellow, with his hat upon one side, and a jaunty air of one who knows his own worth and despises his neighbors.

"Come in," says the innkeeper, very friendly, but with a certain air of constraint. "Plenty of room, Mr. Montgomery, sir, and a good evening to you."

"Oh, hang your ceremonies," says the newcomer, but with no touch of ill humor, "and give your best attention to my order, Wendover!" And, clapping his hat more firmly on his head, he rapped loudly upon the table.

He drank the glass of whisky which the barman served and then fell into a seat and stared without any truculence, but rather with a savage air of curiosity, at myself. He was of a ruddy color and quite young, and something in his bearing rather than in his dress marked him out from the rest of the company. But above all his great size and muscular appearance were noticeable.

"Come in," says the innkeeper.

"Who is that?" I asked as soon as Montgomery's eyes had wandered from me.

"He's no better than he should be," my neighbor answered. "For all his grand airs, he's but little better than a pauper. And that's where your blood comes to in the end."

The landlord, who was close by me, noting my interrogation with a busy eye, leaned forward and supplemented this disparaging information in a whisper.

"One of the best families in the Gwent, sir," he murmured, "though his estate is no more than a yeoman's nowadays. Times are against property on the border." And, having delivered this statement, he drew himself back and addressed a question to Montgomery, with the object, as I conceived, of exhibiting a local celebrity to his guest.

"Anything doing out your way, sir?" he inquired.

The youth turned his eyes upon him in a lackluster gaze and then, emptying his glass, hammered on the table noisily.

"Why the deuce don't that man of yours come?" he exclaimed. "Here have I ridden b. ten miles for the sight of a human face and the taste of good Scotch, and— That's right." He gave his order and, observing Wendover again, gave vent to a heavy laugh. "What do you expect to happen in the Gwent?" he asked. "It's as dull as ditch water."

"I don't know so much about that," put in suddenly a man on the other side of the room whom, from his general air, I took to be a miller. "There's something as I heard of lately that was pretty exciting."

The spokesman drew all eyes upon him. The surface of our deep composure stirred and ruffled.

"What's that, Mr. Llewellyn?" asked the innkeeper.

Montgomery looked incredulous. "Pooh!" he said disdainfully.

The miller enjoyed the importance and seemed inclined to prolong it. He leisurely refilled his pipe.

"I heard something queer happened at the castle last week," he said at last, seeing that his news must out.

"What's that?" asked Montgomery.

"A girl that was in service there told my missus," went on the miller. "We have taken her in. She's left the castle."

"What did she say?" asked Wendover.

"I don't exactly recall the right of it," the miller confessed, with a hasty sense of shame. Montgomery looked at me and, seeing a smile in my eye, burst out laughing. "But I know it was about a burglary," said the miller promptly and with courage.

"I'd like to hear about the burglary," said some one.

"The man that keeps the inn there—the—what's that inn?" went on the miller.

"The Woodman," answered Montgomery.

"Aye, that's it. He was servant to the castle—the girl said—and he caught them."

"Caught whom?" said Montgomery impatiently.

"Well, he didn't catch them," admitted the miller, "but he frightened them off. They were after the plate that the old gentleman keeps, so the man told my girl."

"He's a queer old customer," interposed one of the company, seeing, as we all saw, that we should get no further interest out of the miller. Our attention broke up.

"You're right," nodded his vis-a-vis and replaced his pipe in his mouth.

"May I ask what castle you are speaking of?" I ventured to say, addressing the miller.

"Ivor castle, sir," said he civilly.

"It lays in the Gwent, sir, back of the hills," explained the landlord.

"As you talk of this burglary," said Montgomery, breaking in rather rudely. "I'd like first to know what they were going to find in the castle. Every one knows there's nothing to be got there."

Confronted with this uncivil infidel, the miller came to bay. "I don't know anything about it," he declared. "All I know is that this young woman—she says she was woke up by a noise going on, and then she went to sleep again, putting her head under the blankets, and that the manservant—I can't bring back his name—he told her next day that the thieves had tried to get in."

"Humph!" sneered Montgomery, who had plainly drunk too much to be an easy companion. "I don't call that much of a tale."

"If it's true, it's true," said the mild looking man.

"Who the devil asked your opinion?" retorted the lad brusquely. The mild man shifted in his chair, but mustered courage to ask if a man might not express his sentiments upon a point of general interest.

"That's true, anyway," assented Montgomery, with a foolish laugh.

It was clear that he had taken enough to be quarrelsome if the opportunity should rise, and unfortunately he chose to turn his bantering gaze upon my sour and peevish neighbor.

"Well, Mr. Jones," said he, "and how's hay?"

"How's crops, my young gentleman?" says Jones in his surly fashion.

"Crops," said Montgomery in a bawl, "crops is as they should be—seasonable. Here's to crops, gentleman, and also to hay," and he fell into his chair laughing abominably.

I could not say if this was part of an elaborate jest, conceived by a maudlin brain, or whether he had really been taken with an unreasonable fit of anger; but, whether of accident or of purpose, he filled up his glass forward between his fingers, and the dregs flew out and spattered the hay merchant's face.

"Gentlemen!" cried the landlord, in some alarm.

Montgomery stood, his red face somewhat vacant and grinning broadly, while his sallow faced victim, who had got upon his feet, gesticulated and stuttered under his nose with a show of passion that was not quite English, and at this moment, when it seemed as if some retaliation was to be expected and a fracas precipitated, an impulse took me, and I myself intervened.

"I think, sir," said I, addressing Montgomery, "you will admit that you have used this worthy gentleman very ill, and if I were you, sir, with your youth and spirit at my back, I would ask his pardon at once."

On that he stared at me for some seconds, and then, plumping the empty glass on the table, he broke into a sheepish laugh.

"All right," he said; "very sorry. I beg his pardon," and muttering some indistinct apologies he resumed his seat, sitting somewhat silent for a good time afterward.

But that was my introduction to the lad, an introduction none too favorable, of which he began at once to make use, for he crept close to me, moving from chair to chair, when a chance served him, and, being emboldened by the liquor he had drunk, struck up a lively conversation with me. In the end he was exceedingly merry, and was shaking me heartily by the hand, and invited me to drive out to his farm in the Gwent with a good deal of unusual warmth and vehemence, but I managed at last to make my escape, and that without giving him offense.

It was yet early, but the taproom had lost its humors for me, and I was for bed. In my room I spent an agreeable hour, idly considering my guidebooks and determining a date for my return to town. Upon the map I made out the site of Iver castle, of which there had been talk, also of Montgomery's farm, which he had described to me. They both lay in the Gwent, as that great reach of forest in the marches is called.

CHAPTER II.

RAIN had fallen in the night, and a sweet savor of earth commingled with the summer air when I opened my door and looked forth upon the courtyard. The landlord gently deprecated the events of the previous evening, offering, as it might be to a fastidious guest, an apology for a headstrong young scapegrace.

"They're not like us of the eastern counties, sir," says he. "They're a bit Welsh hereabout. It's a contamination, to my way of thinking. But, there, all sorts of blood go to make a nation, and that's the truth."

But he volunteered a few additional particulars about Montgomery.

"Not a bad sort, sir, at heart, but he's running to seed here. He's taken a main fancy to you. That I could spy at a look. But it's a poor prospect for him, with land dwindling away to nothing, and Llanthony is a shabby house for a young gentleman as he should be."

Llanthony, it appears, was the name of Montgomery's paternal estate in the Gwent. And, in fact, it was for this Gwent that I was bound this morning. The prospect of those rolling hills attracted me with some force. I had an appetite for the wilderness of that back country, unscarred, as I learned, by the track of any railway. It was in a way virgin, at the least a property private from the world. As I struck across the Ray and directed my horse toward the long red slope of the ascent I looked back upon the little town and discovered it wrapped in mountain humors.

Llanthony, according to my host, lay at the back of the first hill, some four miles from Raymond, but as the estate was not my particular aim, and, if it had been, I had no one to guide me, I roamed indefinitely through byways over a circuit of the upper Gwent and finally drew up in the village of Llanellan about the hour of lunch. This village lay a mile or so from the more open districts of the Gwent and within the privy borders of the great forest itself. It would have been easy to throw the reins upon the horse's neck and to wander, lost in the abysms of that wilderness, for the villages were scattered at a great distance and the habitations of the settlers were at long intervals. It was somewhere about 5 in the afternoon, and as I rode down into a spacious valley a few miles from Llanellan, that the monotony of this desultory journey was broken by an event of some moment.

A pretty brook rippled through the wood and was crossed upon a rude bridge. As it chanced, my horse fell suddenly lame, and I had dismounted on the farther edge of the stream to examine his hoof when I heard sounds as of a struggle in the close brake to my left, and upon that a shrill shout as of one crying for assistance. Leaving the bay without further ado, for he was of mild mettle, I jumped into the copse and ran toward the noises, shouting as I went to encourage the wayfarer who was calling for aid.

The cries had already ceased, but a crackling and brushing in the undergrowth still directed me, and, bursting through the furze and brier, I came out very suddenly upon the verge of the little brook and almost fell over the form of a man who lay doubled upon the earth. As I stumbled and shifted to regain my balance I had a glimpse of a lithe, lean bodied fellow vanishing precipitately into the copse. But obviously it was to the victim that I must first turn my mind rather than to any fugitive assailant. He was a man, as I guessed, of some sixty years or more, very bald of the head and under the middle stature. Across his white and shining forehead was a streak of blood, which drew from me an exclamation as I helped him to his feet.

"It is not mine," said he, with a complacent smile. "I go better prepared than my years would suggest."

"No bones broken?" I inquired.

He shook his head, leaning upon my arm and breathing painfully.

"A bruise or two, and no wind in my belly—no more. I was a fool to have forgotten my pistol."

The words recalled me to the thought of the runaway, to whom I attributed this scurvy trick upon an old gentleman.

"What was the cause?" I asked. "Some highway thief?"

"Hardly that," he remarked thoughtfully, and pulling forth an ancient snuffbox with deliberation. "No, I could scarcely describe him as that."

I made a motion to withdraw, recollecting hastily that it was my duty to ascertain some tidings of the ruffian, but the old gentleman, observing my intention, put his hand upon my shoulder.

"I would not worry," said he suavely. "It is of small consequence as it happens. Now, had you come up a moment later," he continued, regarding me with a faint smile, "I could hardly have put a limit on this business, but as it is"—

I had a glimpse of a lithe, lean bodied fellow.

"Surely," I broke in shortly, "you will have the brute arrested if you can recognize him again?"

"Recognize him?" murmured the old gentleman, snuffing gently and with an air of consideration from his fingers. "Yes, I dare say I should know him, but I am sure you will allow me to manage this affair my own way. I have stood the racket, you know, though I heartily acknowledge you have acquired a certain claim to attention. It is very good of you," he said politely, and then, "Yes, I think I should know him again—if we met—which is of course extremely improbable," he concluded, with a twinkle in his eyes.

Now, the self possession of this old fellow, with his air of imperturbable courage, puzzled me hugely and in a manner was very disconcerting. He had taken the outrage, which had evidently been committed upon his person, with such mildness, even with amiability. I could scarce credit my senses to see him discoursing there, with his snuff between his fingers, so pleasantly and broadly, of the event. He seemed quite unruffled, though his body still panted with the efforts of his struggle.

"Is your watch safe? I suppose it was robbery?" I said, feeling somehow rather mean and cast down by the unexpected situation.

"Thank you, quite safe," he replied, without troubling to ascertain. "Yes, quite safe. Certainly I must suppose it to have been robbery—yes, robbery, no doubt."

His air was so abstracted that I took leave to doubt his sanity; but, after all, it was no business of mine if he was foolishly disposed to mercy, and one needs but little imagination to conceive of a dozen deep reasons for an assault save the plain motive of theft. He turned to me presently as I was upon the point of withdrawing.

"I am at a loss to know," said he, laboring over his words and speaking very deliberately, "what devil of folly pursues men that they will hazard all on a piece of carelessness, a wanton whim or just mere indifference or idleness, I cannot say"— He paused as we emerged upon the road. "This must be your horse, then, a good, serviceable animal, that would have warmed my heart thirty years since. I cannot say," he resumed, clutching gently at my arm, "that my adventure today was due to any other cause than that of mere carelessness." He paused again, surveying my horse with apparent interest. "In the first place, I should not have been so far from home; secondly, I should not have been without my revolver; thirdly, I should have used my stick harder when I got home, a concurrence of negligences which made my fate almost a certainty but for your arrival," he added as a polite afterthought, squeezing my arm.

I confess that I was utterly at a loss what to make of him and was inclined to interpret him for a mild lunatic, but we proceeded along the roadway, I with the bridle of my horse over my arm. He still clung to me, discoursing quietly in a melodious voice upon his views of life and the philosophy we should derive from it, while I listened, for the most part, in silence. But after walking for a quarter of an hour, the latter part of which time was spent in a somewhat laborious ascent, we came out upon the summit of a little hill clad in the splendid livery of summer and surmounted by what seemed in the distance to be the ruins of a castle. Here the old gentleman came to a halt, ceasing simultaneously of his chatter, and looked toward the building.

"I am fully conscious, Mr. —; I don't think I caught your name, Mr."—

CANADA'S MELLOW EAST.

The Old Chateau and Its Memories—A Bi-Centennial Celebration—A Valuable Society.

That country which has no history may be happy, as the phrasemaker says, but it can never inspire the patriotism that has its roots in the glories of the past not less than in the promise of the future. Canada is a young country, but her history is venerable, and strikes back hundreds of years into the traditions of two races. The West may be new and raw, but the East is mellow with memories of a lustrous but vanished regime. Some of its landmarks remain, lustrous no longer, even mean by comparison with modern luxuriousness in architecture, but dear alike to the antiquarian and to the Canadian who thrills at the mention of some of the historic personages and epoch-making events with which they are associated. Such a landmark is the Chateau de Ramezay, a famous old house in Montreal, once the very heart of life in Canada, now shabby in old age, and cold with the chill of a museum—a shell emptied of its kernel a hundred years ago, standing as a monitor of the transience of man and the permanence of his works.

A Bi-Centennial Celebration.

The chateau has passed its two hundredth year, and recently the people of Montreal fittingly commemorated the anniversary by permitting their minds to be turned back over the lapse of years to review some of the events connected with the venerable building. The guide-books of modern days baldly describe the chateau as a "long, low, cottage-built building of shabby mien, standing behind an old stone fence." It stands opposite the City Hall, and the two present a contrast stimulating to the imagination. It was built in 1705 by Claude de Ramezay, a Governor, whose name has been chiefly remembered by his son, who surrendered Quebec when further defence of the citadel was impossible. Later on the chateau fell into the hands of the Compagnie des Indies Occidentales, and became the headquarters of the French fur trade for many years. After the conquest it was used by the English Governors. A tablet in the wall of the chateau proclaims these facts, that are repeated by the guide-books.

Franklin's Canadian Office.

Another tablet refers to the events of 1775, when the Americans held the city, and established themselves in the official residence. Here came Franklin, Samuel Chase and Charles Carroll to confer with Benedict Arnold and discuss means whereby the Canadians could be induced to join with the other colonists in revolt against British connection. In the council chamber where now the tourist loiters the American commissioners sat in secret conclave and considered weighty matters. Hither Ben Franklin brought a printing press and set it up, the weapon he deemed mightier than the guns and bayonets of his soldier colleagues. The first newspaper in Montreal was printed in the cellar of the Chateau de Ramezay, and at Franklin's instigation, for he fetched from Philadelphia one Fleury Mesplet, a printer, who issued a little weekly pamphlet, printed in French. Its avowed purpose was to make the French-Canadians discontented with English rule and persuade them to enter the Union as a separate State. After a while both the English and French languages were used in the paper, and then English only. The paper thus begun has grown to be one of the greatest journals of Canada, and for 130 years it has not changed its name—The Gazette, of Montreal.

Two Hundred Years Ago.

The Gazette, therefore, might reasonably claim to be the supreme authority on all matters pertaining to the old Chateau de Ramezay, and it was only natural that at the present time it should be rich in the lore of its first home. We cannot do better than quote from an article in The Gazette: "Those who may be privileged by being present will see in the museum, galleries and library of the chateau hundreds of connecting links between the Montreal of two centuries ago and the Montreal of to-day. There is, in the Jugements et deliberations du Conseil Superieur du Quebec the record of an altercation that took place, in the very year of the chateau's foundation (1705), between the Sieur Rocbert de la Morandiere, garde des magazins de Montreal, and a soldier servant of M. de Ramezay, named La Marine, in the course of which the latter (who was the assailant) lost his life. In due time the case was submitted to His Majesty Louis XIV., and the unhappy slayer of La Marine was released from prison. The reader will find all the particulars in the fifth volume of the Jugements, etc. (pages 464-471 inclusive). M. Pierre Georges Roy has reproduced the account of the quarrel and the King's pardon in his history of La Famille Rocbert de la Morandiere.

A Valuable Society.

Originally the residence of a Governor, who built it because he could find in Montreal no fitting place to house himself, the chateau, as has been intimated, saw many strange scenes, acknowledged in turn French, American and English conquerors. It has been court house, publishing office, college, Normal school and court house again, the home of French and Scotch private gentlemen, but Government property since 1774, when its owner, William Grant, after ten years' residence, leased it. Now, it is a show place, and the haunt of the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society, that is well qualified to be its custodian, and under whose auspices, on Wednesday evening, Earl Grey and many distinguished citizens of Montreal met to commemmorate the record of the old grey walls and the stout oak beams. The Gazette pays a tribute in passing to the labors of the society, and recalls other celebrations that it has inaugurated. It led the way among our learned bodies in honoring the memory of William Caxton, and the introduction of printing in England, and held a magnificent exhibition of books, manuscript and printed. More than once it has held loan portrait exhibitions of unusual interest. It is chiefly through the exertions of this society that the old chateau has been preserved to Canadians as a memento of a time that is past, and of a chivalry that left a deep mark upon the pages of our history.

NATURE'S POISONS.

The Part They Have Performed in Civilizing the World.

"Poison," as a single word of the English language, carries with it more instinctive warning and repugnance than invest any other word in the glossary of English speech. Whether spoken or written the word at once challenges the attention and the imagination to horror of evil. There are only three poisonous serpents in the geography of North America, yet because of these three varieties alone the whole reptilian family is condemned to death at sight.

And yet, strangely anomalous as it may appear, the existence of active poisons in the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms of nature has done more for the development of modern civilized man than have all the other innocuous elemental things which aboriginal man found to his hand. These active poisons were man's first stimulus to thought. Even in the figurative Eden there was one fruit of which man might not eat. "Why not?" was his first question, and the only rational answer was for him to eat and see.

Waving aside this literal Eden as apochryphal and metaphorical, the aboriginal man was confronted by the same literal condition as to the things which he should not eat or touch or smell. His environment was that of the torrid zone. Nakedness was his condition. Exposure to the venoms and animal, plant and mineral life was a consequence against which only a quickened intelligence could insure immunity. The fruit of one plant he discovered to be life; the touch of another was death. He could avoid the giant carnivora of the jungle which would have searched him out with tooth and claw, but he had little resource against the creeping, crawling things whose fangs and stings meant convulsive suffering, horrors and death to his kind. He knew the sweet waters of the hills, but must learn to guard against the brackish, excoriating waters of the deserts. "Why?" because in this manner his first voiceless question and the stimulus of the interrogation were the making of the civilized man.

COINCIDENCES.

Some of the Queerest Recorded in the History of the World.

The late well known archaeologist, Albert Way, crossing Pall Mall, cannoned against an old gentleman. After mutual apologies cards were exchanged. On each card was printed, "Mr. Albert Way." The older gentleman, dying, left his fortune to the other Albert Way.

The planet Neptune, which had for countless ages revolved in the heavens unseen by any one on earth, was discovered simultaneously and independently in 1846 by Professor Adams and M. Leverrier, the two most brilliant astronomers of the day.

Some years ago a shepherd boy placed a sleeper on the railway line between Brighton and Falmer, with the result that a train was thrown off the rails. One year later to a day, almost to a minute, that same youth was struck by lightning and instantaneously killed within a couple of miles of the spot at which the accident occurred.

The four King Georges of England all died on the same day of the week.

In 1890, a few weeks before the census taker began the enumeration of the people of Elm Grove, Va., the town authorities counted their own population preparatory to filing articles of incorporation. The following was the remarkable result: Number of males over twenty-one years of age, 148; number of males under twenty-one years of age, 148; number of females over sixteen years of age, 148; number of females under sixteen years of age, 148.

Some years ago in Teheran an English sailor was caught in the act of carrying off some precious stones from the shah's palace. The thief was brought before the "king of kings," who swore that the next time the sailor crossed his path he would at once be put to death. It is a curious fact that this very sailor was crossing the street when the shah was driving in Berlin some time after and was knocked down and instantaneously killed.

Tennyson's "Brook."

It is not generally known that Tennyson's beautiful poem, "The Brook," once came very near perishing. One day the Rev. Edward Rawnsley was sitting with the poet in his lodgings in London, when Tennyson began burning papers and manuscripts and was about to destroy "The Brook," says Home Notes.

"Stop, stop! You mustn't burn that!" said Mr. Rawnsley. "It is one of the best things you have written."

"Is it?" said the poet, and put it back.

Stupid Jeweler.

Miss Inez Entz—Yes, Mr. Fickel proposed last night, and we're engaged now. I'm so happy! And I'm the first girl George ever loved too!

Miss Wise—Yes? I don't notice your ring. Didn't he give you one?

Miss Inez Entz—Yes; but, you see, he had to take it back to have it fixed. The stupid jeweler made the inscription read, "George to Genevieve" instead of "George to Inez."—London Sketch.

Not a Falsifier Either.

"Patching and darning, as usual, are you?" said the caller.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Lapsling. "I tell Samuel I save him a good deal of money by being so mendacious."

One Ingredient of

Zutoo

Is soda—just old-fashioned soda, that our grandmothers took to settle the stomach.

The principal ingredient—the one that stops the headache, is a vegetable ingredient, imported for us from Japan. It wont hurt you any more than will the soda.

The other ingredients of Zutoo are just as harmless.

If you knew what the drug cures contain, and their ultimate effect on the system, you would discard them at once and take Zutoo, which is harmless as Soda.

WANT MATERIAL PROOF

FORGETTING SPIRITUAL THINGS ARE SPIRITUALLY DISCERNED.

FOR DOUBTING THOMASES

Amplification of Our Conceptions of God Will Lead Us Away From Human Error and Misconceptions of the Almighty and Into Simple Faith and Obedience Wherein Are Found Peace and Joy.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 15.—In this sermon the preacher shows how our human misconceptions of God and his promises lead us into error and that the remedy is simple faith and obedience. The text is John iv, 48, "Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe."

We are always demanding gospel proof. Like Gideon of old, we want our faith bolstered up by the wet fleece. Like doubting Thomas, we want to see Christ in the flesh and to thrust our fingers into the torn palms of the hands and into the wounded side before we will believe that he is risen from the dead. When any fact about God or the prophecies of the Bible is told us we at once say, "Give us the evidence or we will not believe." Now, I want to show you not only that "faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen," but that we should believe and trust God and accept his words and promises, even when there are no signs and wonders visible to confirm our faith.

Signs and wonders theological have come to us. God and his attributes pass all the realms of human explanation. The story is told that one day Michael Angelo entered the studio of Raphael. You know that the Florentine master was nearly a decade older than the painter of the Sistine Madonna. As an artist who had won his spurs, he had a right to give advice to the younger man. Michael Angelo stood for some time before one of Raphael's easels. The young man at this time was absent from his studio. Angelo lifted a pencil and drew the curves of the figure upon the canvas along broader lines. Then under the picture he wrote this one word three times: "Amplify! Amplify! Amplify!" You who have stood before the wonderful creations of the architect of St. Peter's of Rome know what he meant by that word. He meant "Increase the conception of your subjects." Oh, Raphael, knot the muscles of your model's arms and make swarthier necks and broader shoulders and more leonine countenances. The taunting Philistine is not a dwarf, but a giant. The master builders of history are not pygmies, but Titans. Neptune's trident does not rule a mill pond, but has for its realm the mighty deep. Amplify! Amplify! Amplify! Good advice that for Raphael, in an artistic sense. Good advice for us in a theological sense. We have received certain revelations given in reference to God's personality, but we must not stop with these revelations. We must be continually enlarging our ideas of God. We must try to gain a conception of him greater than our eyes can see and greater than our human intellects can explain.

We must amplify our belief of God's personality in reference to his eternal existence. The first verse of the first chapter of Genesis says, 'In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." But that "beginning" simply alludes to the creation of the world and the planetary system. Friend, did not God exist before what? "Oh, yes," you answer: "God has always existed." But what do you mean by "always?" I follow Hugh Miller, the Scottish geologist, in his "Testimony of the Rocks" and in his "Footprints of the Creator," and he tells me that the six days of creation were not six days of twenty-four hours each, but that each day represented ages upon ages of time. This conception of the time of the creation was well expressed by the Psalmist when he said, "A thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night." In the creation of the world the seconds of time are centuries, and the minutes are millenniums, the hours are eras, and the days are ages upon ages. If you go and stand by the falls of Niagara, the scientists will tell you that the falling waters wear away about six feet of rock every year. Then they will take you for miles down the rapids, toward Lake Ontario, and show you where those rocks have gradually been worn away by the falling waters of thousands of years. Next these geologists will open the leaves of the rocks and tell you that those rocks which have been worn away took ages upon ages to form. Then, after we go back thousands upon thousands of years to the creation of the world, you are not yet at the beginning of God's eternal existence, for God existed before the world was. Backward to the birth cradle of this world you must go; backward, still backward and backward, until time loses itself you must go, and there you will still find God's eternal existence. Am I not right in saying that the eternal life of God passes all human conception and explanation?

What the eternal existence of God means cannot be better illustrated than by the following words of M. Camille Flammarion, the celebrated astronomer. What this French writer says about the heavens we can easily apply to the duration of time: "Let us imagine that we sail a million years with the velocity of light, 186,000 miles a second. Are we at the confines of the visible universe? See the black immensities we must cross! But yonder new stars are lit up in the depth of the heavens. We push on toward them; we reach them—again a million years, new revelations, new starry splendors, new systems, new worlds, new earths. What, never an end? We are at the vestibule of the infinite. We have advanced but a single step. We are always at the same point—the centre everywhere, the circumference nowhere. We see before us the infinite, of which the study is not yet begun. We have seen nothing. We recoil in terror. We might fall in a straight line during a whole eternity, nor ever reach the bottom. It is infinite in all directions." So wherever we go into the past let us always think of God as still farther back. Backward we can go ages upon ages, trillions and quadrillions of years, and there we still find God's eternal existence. Am I wrong in saying amplify? Amplify! Amplify your conceptions of the life of God in the past and amplify your conceptions of the life of God in the future.

Not only must we amplify our ideas in reference to God's eternal existence, but we must also amplify them in reference to God's personal presence. The Bible tells us that we are made after God's image. "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them." Does this imply that God is like unto us physically—that he has two eyes, two hands, two feet and a beating heart? Just as I find Queen Victoria's face stamped upon the English shilling, so some people think God's face, in a physical sense, is stamped upon us. But is this true? Nay. Amplify! Amplify your idea of God's personality. In the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Psalm I read these words: "Whither shall I go from thy spirit or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there; if I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there thy right hand shall hold me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee, but the night shineth as the day. The darkness and the light are both alike to thee." In other words, God is here, God is there, God is everywhere at once. How can all this be and yet God be like ourselves in a physical sense? Men incapable of conceiving pure spirit have supposed that God has a human form, as did the ancient anthropomorphites, or an animal form, as did the ancient idolaters, but the Bible doctrine as expounded by Jesus is, God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit.

Not only does the omnipresence of God pass all human conception and explanation, but his personality, called the Trinity, also passes human explanation. Here we have God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit. How can you interpret it? A dear friend of mine told me how an old Spanish artist once tried to explain it. Above one of the altars of a Mexican cathedral was a picture amid clouds. Out of these clouds appeared the faces of three men. These three faces were all the same. Under the picture, in Latin, were the words, "The Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost." These three faces were all alike; they were like three photographs of one face taken from the same negative. But had that artist caught a true conception of the Trinity? No. He no more pictured the true God than did the artist who tried to picture the face of the Trinity as that of one man. The full conception of God's eternal existence and of God's personality passes all human grasp.

But, though I have dwelt long upon my first point, I believe it is the least important of any I shall present, for it is almost an impossibility for any one of us to get away from our belief in an overruling God who was the creater of the universe after we have studied the wonderful harmonies of the natural world. We are like the student of skeptical tendencies who was seated at the feet of that master of anatomy, Dr. Marshall. The great professor was explaining to his class the marvels of the points of the knee or of the hand. After he had finished his talk this student exclaimed, "A man must be a fool indeed who, after duly studying his own body, can remain an atheist." So we say, "A man must be a fool who can study the harmonies of nature and not believe that a master mind, called the Creator and the Ruler, is molding and influencing all." But, after we have studied the signs and the wonders of the heaven and the earth and have accepted a belief in a God, the next question which naturally confronts us is this: "How do we know that this God the Creator is the God who is the author of the book we call the Bible, in which the coming of Christ is foretold and the promises of forgiveness of sin in Christ's blood are made to a dying human race?" How do we know that God is the author of the Bible? Why, by the testimony of the Bible itself. The internal evidences of a manuscript carry their own proof of genuineness. For centuries upon centuries the Bible has had the test of internal criticism applied to it.

Let the first chapter of Genesis come forth and speak. That is to me one of the most wonderful of all passages of the Bible. Have you ever carefully studied it? Suppose that Luther Burbank, California's wizard of flowers and fruits, should bring to us a new kind of fruit. This fruit may be different from any other fruit ever grown. Then suppose he told us how he got that fruit. Perhaps it was developed by grafting an Italian grape upon a certain kind of American grapevine. If he told us all this, and we knew that no other such grape had ever been grown, we would believe that he had developed that grape. Well, in the same way thousands of years ago God told Moses how he had created the world. First came the water, then the land, then the grass, then the living creatures in the water, then the animals, then man. "Oh," you say, "that is a simple story." Yes, it is so simple that for thousands of years the scientists were trying to discover the order of creation, and now, much to their surprise, the biologists have found out that the order as written by Moses thousands of years ago is the scientifically accepted order of creation of today. Does not the first book of the Bible bear upon it the stamp of God's authorship? Was not its story of creation told before science was born?

Then the miracles of Jesus and the recorded biographies of Christ. How are you going to get around them? Are you going to regard Christ as a fraud and an impostor and yet call him the best of men, as nearly all infidels and agnostics do? I can understand how Voltaire could despise and blaspheme Christ, but I do not understand how Rousseau and Jean Paul Richter could be so illogical as to represent Christ at the same time as a model for humanity and yet as a self-deceived fanatic.

Are you going to take the ridiculous and illogical stand which a noted editor of a city newspaper did when he wrote to a lawyer friend of mine a letter that went thus: "A man who drinks can preach a better temperance lecture than all the fanatics on earth. But you cannot make men good by law. I am not a believer in religion, so called, but I was convinced long ago that the ultimate redemption of the children of men must come through the inculcation in their hearts of the religion of Jesus Christ. If men make Christ the model, even though it be a superstition, as I believe, virtue will dominate the world of vice and sin will be minimized. But it must come through moral suasion and not through force and compulsion." Now, my friend, is that your illogical stand? Are you prepared to assert with your one breath that Jesus Christ is the best of all human beings and then to assert with your next breath that Christ is a deceiver. Nay, nay, not that. As an intelligent man you should be ready to say here and now: "No man could have uttered such words as did Jesus Christ unless he was true. And therefore, if Christ is true, Christ is the Son of God." By the law of logic and common sense we cannot get away from this conclusion. The Bible biographies of Christ, by their internal evidence, prove that Christ's life was divine.

Now, having seen enough of the signs and wonders of the Bible to prove that it is of divine authorship, I am ready to make a confession. I am ready to confess that this holy book is filled with mysteries. Like a blind man, I bump up against them everywhere. But because I cannot understand why God should so love the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life, is that any reason why I should reject that divine offer of pardon and eternal life? "Nay, nay," again I say. Why all the promises of God are given to us I cannot conceive. But those promises are there. And because they are there I will accept them and live by them and leave the explanations for eternity. I have had given to me enough proof to know that the Bible is true. Therefore I shall accept upon the faith of those promises the things I cannot understand.

But now, believing that God is a loving Father and that the Bible is given to us by divine inspiration, the next difficult question which confronts us is this: "Why does a loving Father, who is preparing such felicity for us on the other side of the grave, allow so much misery and suffering and injustice to his dear ones on this side of the grave?" for we all can say with the Psalmist, "I have seen the wicked in great power and spreading himself like a green bay tree." Yes, we have seen wicked Dives in a palace and good Lazarus as a beggar dying in the gutter. But that is not the universal rule. Religion has in it the promise of the life that now is. A proof of the fact we may see around us in prosperous, happy men, who are leading good Christian lives.

Let me prove this statement by the testimony of one of the greatest of English statesmen of the past century, Hon. William E. Gladstone, who once said: "Christianity is the religion in the command of whose professors is lodged a proportion of power far exceeding its superiority of numbers, and this power is both moral and material. In the realm of controversy it can hardly be said to have a serious antagonist. Force, secular or physical, is accumulated in the hands of Christians in a proportion absolutely overwhelming, and the accumulation of influence is not less remarkable than that of force. This is not surprising, for all the elements of influence have their home within the Christian precinct. The art, the literature, the systematized industry, invention and commerce—in one word, the power of the world—are almost wholly Christian. The nations of Christendom are everywhere arbiters of the fate of non-Christian nations." When people as a nation have honored God there God has always honored and blessed those people. The signs of these blessings everywhere prove that God is looking after and caring for his own. Now, having seen how God blesses his own in great numbers, I am ready to believe that he is blessing his own even when he permits the heavy hand of trouble to fall upon them. I cannot understand always why this trouble comes, but I am ready by faith to accept it as a blessing. And why should not we accept as a blessing the troubles which come to God's dear ones, although we cannot understand why these troubles come? Do we not, as parents, often have to do that which may seem cruel or hard to our children, and yet we thus afflict for our children's good?

In closing I would bid you set your gospel compass. I want you to be like the traveler going through the western country guided by the beacon light of the rising and setting sun. I want you to be like a voyager setting sail across the Atlantic. He does not go in a haphazard way to a fisherman of Nantucket and say, "Will you with your sailboat take me to Europe?" But he goes down to the office of a great transatlantic line. There he selects his steamer. He knows that this steamer is managed by a competent crew and commanded by an able captain. When the storms come and the winds blow and the billows heave, he does not rush upon the deck and say, "Let me take that wheel." Nay. He says, "The captain knows best, and he will see us through." So may it be with us in life's voyage. May we step into the gospel ship and say to Jesus: "Master, Commander, wherever thou takest me I know it is best for me to go. Tell me what to do, and I will do it! But thou, O Divine Captain, stand upon the quarter deck and command, and all will be well."

Some time ago a little girl was out driving with her father. Suddenly the horse shied, and in great fright the daughter grabbed the reins from her father's hand, and the leaping horse nearly caused an accident. With that the father said: "Daughter, never do that again. You should learn to trust me. I will not let any harm come to you when I have hold of the lines." We must walk by faith and not by sight. We must let our God take us where he will. Friend, child, are you ready to let God drive? Knowing that he loves us, will you trust him even when you cannot always understand him? Drive on, thou King of kings, drive on!

you owe it to yourself to obtain the best service your travel money will buy. Personal comfort, speed, safety, punctuality, freedom from delays and absence of dust, dirt and annoyance, these are the points that count and these points have reached their highest development on The Lake Shore Railway. ANOTHER MARRIAGE QUESTION.

Ontario Law Forbids a Man Marrying His Brother's Widow.

The Provincial Secretary's Department has recently received several letters from issuers of marriage licenses, who ask whether licenses should be issued for a man to marry his "brother's wife," for so the statute defining marriages which are prohibited on the grounds of consanguinity reads. The department's answer in every case is the same, and it is to the effect that under the statutes of Ontario a man cannot lawfully marry his brother's widow or his brother's divorced wife. Most of the inquiries ask the question apparently in behalf of parties who want to marry brothers' widows. It is said that several such marriages have lately taken place in the province.

Col. English Will Stay.

It has been learned that Lieut.-Col English, R. E., commandant of the Esquimalt garrison in British Columbia, will not return to [illegible] main two years longer, assisting in the organization of the Canadian troops. He is regarded as one of the smartest officers in the force, and his efficiency has made him very popular at that station. He will not likely remain at Victoria, but will be attached either to headquarters staff or Kingston Citadel. A large number of men will be taken on at Victoria with the Canadian force. This is important, because a great deal of technical ordinance work must be done at once. The mounting of 9.2 guns on Signal Hill, involving the drawing to the summit of the crag and the placing in position of two hundred tons or more of guns, has been suspended for some time. The Imperial forces were doing this work, and receiving a halfpenny per hour for the extra work it involved, over and above their pay. It will cost Canada much more, and she will, moreover, have few men of sufficient experience for the work. Each of the guns require about twenty men to keep in proper shape, and this, it is felt, will compel Canada to keep up about four hundred men, although it is announced that the start will be made with a skeleton force of 150.

It is stated authoritively that an arrangement has been made between the Home and Canadian Governments whereby such Imperial soldiers and officers as remain in Canada will be allowed to count the years of Canadian service as Imperial service for pension purposes, and that Canada will contribute to the Imperial coffers her proportion of this pension allowance corresponding to the time put in this country.

Let us read with method and propose to ourselves an end to which our studies may point. The use of reading is to aid us in thinking.—Edward Gibson.

FOR METRIC'S USE.

Alexander Graham Bell, Inventor of the Telephone, Calls Present Conditions Very Chaotic—New Standard.

In the March Number of the National Geographical Magazine Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, contributes an article, entitled "Our Heterogeneous System of Weights and Measures," which is an explanation of the reasons why we should abandon its obsolete system in inches, tons and gallons. He discusses the Littauer bill, which provides that after July 1, 1908, the metric system of weights and measures shall be used in the Government departments. Dr. Bell says, in part:

"It is obvious that our present system of weights and measures is in a very chaotic condition. It certainly is not right that a coal company should be able to pay miners by a ton of 2,240 pounds and then sell the coal by another ton of 2,000 pounds. But even the pound itself varies in weight according to circumstances. Some of our people employ a pound of sixteen ounces, others a pound of twelve ounces, so that it is necessary in business transactions to have a definite understanding as to the kind of pound we employ—whether avoirdupois or troy weight. The ounce, too, varies.

Much Unnecessary Labor.

"Few people have any adequate conception of the amount of unnecessary labor involved in the use of our present weights and measures. Scientific men and merchants may have the necessary skill with figures to enable them to use the metric system, but how about the common people of the country? It is just here that the metric system possesses special advantages—reducing to a minimum the amount of labor and skill required in the solution of the everyday problems of life involving the use of figures.

"The people of Great Britain, having no practical experience, by actual use, of the advantages of a decimal system of measurement, may have difficulty in realizing the amount of unnecessary drudgery through which they are obliged to go in order to obtain a solution of the simplest arithmetical problems, and they therefore have some excuse for remaining in the rear of progress, but the United States has no such excuse to offer for her hesitation in joining the majority of the civilized nations of the world in the adoption of the metric system.

"We already have a decimal system of money, and our people are therefore prepared to appreciate the great saving of labor involved in pushing the decimal principle into all our methods of measurement. We would not, if we could, go back to the old pounds, shillings and pence of our ancestors, for we can realize through our everyday experience with dollars and cents the drudgery we are saved in all financial calculations, and are, therefore, prepared to appreciate by analogy that corresponding benefits would arise from our adoption of a decimal system in our weights and measures.

An Illuminating Contrast.

"Let us compare for a moment the arithmetical processes involved in calculating by the old method of pounds, shillings and pence with the simpler process employed when we deal with dollars and cents and then apply the results to the metric system of weights and measures. Take any problem that may occur to your mind.

"Let us take, for example, the figures 1906, which represent the present year. Now if we had 1906 pennies and wanted to find how many pounds, shillings and pence this amounted to we must divide 1906 by twelve to find the number of shillings, and then divide this product by twenty to find the number of pounds. But the moment you adopt a decimal system of money like our own this kind of drudgery becomes entirely unnecessary. No calculation whatever is required in order to reduce the figures from one denomination to another—we simply shift the decimal point. We know at once, without calculation, that 1906 cents amount to 19.06 dollars.

"Now compare this simple process with the laborious processes involved in the use of the ordinary measures of length and weight. Take 1906 inches—how many feet and yards? We must divide 1906 by twelve to find out the number of feet, and then divide the product by three to ascertain the number yards. Or take 1906 ounces—how many pounds?

Simplicity of Metric System.

"And what kind of pound—avoirdupois weight, troy weight or apothecary's weight? In one case we may have to divide 1906 by 16, in another by 12, but the point I wish to make is this—that a calculation of some sort is involved in the mere process of translation from one denomination to another in the same kind of measure, while by the metrical system all this kind of labor is saved; we merely shift the decimal point.

"The amount of labor saved in calculating square measure and cubical measure is still more remarkable. Try square measure first. Take the figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6; 123,456 square inches. How many square feet. I will not try to work it out, but you must divide this number by 144 to get the number of square feet. You will probably require paper and pencil to perform the computation, but on the metrical plan the solution is so easy that any intelligent person can arrive at the result mentally without any calculation whatever; 123,456 square centimetres is equivalent to 12.3456 square metres.

"Even should we forget that there are 10,000 square centimetres in a square metre a moment's thought will enable us to recover the knowledge. The merest tyro knows that a metre consists of 100 centimetres (the name centimetre itself means one-hundredth of a metre), so that a square metre is a surface measuring 100 centimetres one way by 100 centimetres the other; 100 times 100 is 10,000, the figure '1,' followed by four ciphers, which means that we [illegible] shift the decimal point four places to the left to ascertain the number of square metres.

"At the present time the metric system is the only system known that has the ghost of a chance of being adopted by the world. As a matter of fact it is now international in character, for practically all the civilized nations of the world have already adopted it with the exception of the English-speaking peoples, who employ an admittedly inferior system."

GEOLOGIST DR. R. BELL

GETS ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY'S GOLD MEDAL.

Interesting Account of the Origin of the Decoration Which Confers New Distinction Upon the Acting Director of the Canadian Geological Survey—Illustrious Men Who Have Previously Received the Medal—Sketch of Dr. Bell's Great Services.

To the many honors he has received from universities and institutions of science in recognition of his work as a geologist Dr. Robert Bell, acting director of the Canadian Geological Survey, now adds the prize most coveted by men eminent as explorers and geographers. The Royal Geographical Society has conferred upon him, with the sanction of the Sovereign, its patron's gold medal. To have his name added to the list of distinguished men who have been selected year after year for this mark of the society's appreciation must be very gratifying to Dr. Bell. In 1897 the medal was awarded to his predecessor in office, Dr. George M. Dawson, for geographical explorations carried on in the Northwest Territories, in the Yukon and in other parts of Canada.

The Royal Geographical Society was established in 1830, and it at once found favor in high quarters. King William IV. took an interest in it from the first. At his request its name was changed from "The Geographical Society, of London," to the present form, "The Royal Geographical Society." He consented to become its patron, and while he lived it received from him an annual donation of fifty guineas, to be used as a premium for the encouragement and promotion of geographical science and discovery. The society was careful to see that none but the worthiest obtained its recommendation for this royal award. In William's reign the recipients of the premium were the following: Endersley, for despatching vessels to the Antarctic regions; Ross, for his expedition in the far north; Back, for his errand for the rescue of Ross; Burns, for his journey to Bokhara; Chesney, for surveying the Euphrates; Fitzroy, for his survey of the South American coast. In some cases these men received the royal award in cash; in others they obtained a medal of fifty guineas' value. Ross and Beck were great extenders of the geography of Canada's Arctic regions, the former being the discoverer of Boothia Felix and King William Land, the latter being the discoverer of the Great Fish River.

Queen Victoria's Medals.

Upon her accession to the throne Queen Victoria announced her intention to continue the royal patronage and bounty, and she regularly contributed the fify guineas per annum, as King Edward has done since her death. At that time the society decided that henceforth the money should be expended upon two gold medals of equal value and honor, one always since known as the Founder's medal, the other as the Patron's. On the Founder's medal the effigy of King William IV. is stamped, and the Patron's medal bears that of the reigning monarch. They cost 25 guineas apiece, and, as has already been said, one is as great a distinction as the other. Not every year, however, were medals struck. There were times when the highest services to geography were not deemed important enough to warrant the issue of the medals. In such years the fifty guineas were distributed as money among the men who were foremost in the geographical research that called for notice. Throughout its history, indeed, the society has supplemented the royal awards by cash donations, by gifts of watches, instruments, etc.

Former Holders.

It is impossible to mention all the illustrious men who have received the medals, but some of those who explored our northern seas and coasts may be referred to. One of the medals went to Thomas Simpson. After the return of Sir George Back, Simpson and Deane started in 1837 for the Great Slave Lake on a mission for the Hudson's Bay Co. They succeeded in connecting the work of Franklin and Beechey, thereby completing our knowledge from the Coppermine to Behring Strait. In 1839 Simpson went eastward from Coppermine River as far as Castor and Pollux River, thus connecting the work of Back and Franklin. He discovered the south coast of King William Land, and built at Cape Herschel the cairn that the perishing heroes of Franklin's last expedition came upon in 1848. In 1852 Dr. John Rae received the Founder's medal. In 1846 and 1847 he connected the work of Parry with that of Ross, and proved Bothia to be part of the mainland. In 1848 he accompanied Sir John Richardson down the Mackenzie River, and examined the Arctic coast east of the Coppermine in search of Sir John Franklin. In 1849 he continued the search via the Coppermine. In 1850 he examined the southern shores of Wollaston and Victoria Lands, and reached a higher latitude than the position in which Franklin's ship were abandoned. In 1854 he connected the work of Simpson and Ross, and brought home the first information of the fate of Franklin's expedition.

Dr. Bell's Services.

It is to men like those and like Capt. John Palliser, Carl Ritter, Dr. Livingstone, Capt. Burton, Capt. Speke, Capt. Grant, Sir Samuel Baker, Sir Henry M. Stanley, Sir Robert McClure, Sir Leopold McClintock and Sir George Nares that the royal awards of the society have gone. The medals have never been bestowed except for service of the very highest value to geographical science. It is true Lady Franklin obtained the Founder's medal in 1860. It was given to her as for her heroic husband, and also for the great financial sacrifices she made to maintain the search for his expedition, sacrifices that were fruitful of very great additions to our knowledge of Arctic geography. Speaking of the medals, Sir Clements Markham, the president of the Royal Geographical Society, has said this of them: "The royal awards became the goals which aroused the ambition of young explorers and urged them on to renewed efforts. The greatest honors that the society can confer, they have always been very highly prized, and have been strong incentives to brave and even desperate enterprises in the cause of discovery." No other living man has done so much to add to the geographical knowledge of Canada as Dr. Robert Bell. He has been engaged in topographical surveys in every part of the country. In the Great Slave Lake district, in the interior of Baffin Land, in northern Quebec—where the great Bell River perpetuates his name—on both shores of Hudson Bay, on nearly all the chief rivers and lakes of the West, he has done important work as a discoverer.

THE PLANET MERCURY.

Like Venus and For Like Cause, It Is Now a Dead World.

Mercury is a body devoid, practically if not absolutely, of air, of water and of vegetation. Consequently it is incapable of supporting any of those higher organisms which we know as living beings. Its surface is a vast desert. It is rough rather than smooth. Whether this roughness be due to mountains proper or to craters we are too far away from it to be able yet to say. The latter is the more probable. Over the greater part of its surface change either diurnal or seasonal is unknown. Three-eighths of its surface is steeped in perpetual glare, three-eighths shrouded in perpetual gloom, while the remaining quarter slowly turns between the two. The planet itself, as a world, is dead.

Interesting as Mercury thus proves to be, the interest as regards the planet itself is of a rather corpselike character. Less deterrent perhaps is the interest it possesses as a part of the life history of the solar system, for tidal friction, the closing act in the cosmic drama, has brought it where it is. The machine has run down. Whether it ever supported life upon its surface or not, the power to do so has now forever passed away. Like Venus and for like cause, it is now a dead world. And it was the first thus to reach the end of its evolutionary career, earlier to do so than Venus, inasmuch as tidal action was very much greater upon it than on Venus and consequently produced its effect more quickly. Mercury has long been dead. How long, measured by centuries, we cannot say, but practically for a very long time. Venus must have become so comparatively recently. Both, however, now have finished their course and have in a most literal sense entered into their rest.

SEEING SICILY.

Not to Know This Island Is Not to Know Greece.

There are some lands which have always laid a spell upon the mind, upon the imagination, upon the heart. Greece, above all other countries, has entranced the mind. The imagination has ever loved the east—Egypt, the Indies, forgotten Asia, the almost as mysterious Asia of today. For most of us the home land is the country of the heart; for many, it may be [illegible] where was lighted the fire at which the hearts of incalculable millions are still warmed. Others are content to say with Emerson in the fine essay on "Heroism," "That country is the fairest which is inhabited by the noblest minds." But, above all other lands, there is one which has at once impressed the mind, the imagination and the heart of western peoples. When a famous poet declared that on his heart would be found engraved the word Italy the words voiced the emotion of a multitude in every country of Europe and in the great northern continent oversea.

To see Sicily, the old "Garden of the Sun," as the poets have loved to call it, is not to see Italy, though there may be a measure of truth in Goethe's remark that not to know Sicily is not to know Italy. In a sense one might more truly say of Sicily that not to know it is not to know Greece. In another sense, however, we have in this most beautiful of islands the intensification of Italy. Whatever is most Italian is in evidence here, though it is Italian of the south and not of the north. What a gulf divides them is known only to those familiar with the whole peninsula.—William Sharp in Century.

"Bulls" Not Irish.

Those who are not Irishmen sometimes trespass on Irish property. A French cure, preaching about sudden death, said, "Thus it is with us—we go to bed well and get up stone dead!"

An old French lawyer writing of an estate he had just bought added, "There is a chapel upon it in which my wife and I wish to be buried, if God spares our lives."

A merchant who died suddenly left in his bureau a letter to one of his correspondents which he had not sealed. His clerk, seeing it necessary to send the letter, wrote at the bottom, "Since writing the above I have died."

A Sentiment and an Autograph.

A certain young lady, so the story runs, wrote to F. Marion Crawford, the novelist, requesting that he send her a bit of sentiment and his autograph. The reply was:

> Dear Miss A.—When you request a favor that is of interest only to yourself, please inclose a two cent stamp. There's your sentiment, and here's your autograph. F. MARION CRAWFORD.

A Simple Precaution.

Landlady (of country inn on the eve of a popular holiday to her daughter, who is kneading the dough for a cake)—Resel, you'd better put a couple of eggs and a bit of butter into the cake. It looks as if we were going to have a storm, and if the townsfolk don't stir out tomorrow we shall have to eat it ourselves.—From the German.

Easter Sunday In the Churches.

QUEEN OF FESTIVALS FITTINGLY CELEBRATED YESTERDAY — FLORAL DECORATIONS AND SPLENDID MUSIC WERE THE RULE.

St. Thomas'.

The Parish Church of St. Thomas celebrated the "Queen of Festivals," Easter day, with great gladness and devotion. From the early hour of seven o'clock the church was thronged with worshippers. The beautiful edifice was adorned most tastefully with Easter lilies and other plants, and the musical services were most inspiring under the able direction of Mr. W. H. Spooner. Celebrations of the Holy Communion were held at 7, 8, and 11 o'clock, at which there were 254 who received the Holy Sacrament, being the largest in the history of the parish.

The eleven o'clock service was fully choral and was very devotionally rendered to the setting of Roland Smart in E Flat. The Anthem at this service was "O Give Thanks unto the Lord," by Michael Watson.

The children's service at 3.30 was very bright and interesting and largely attended, though it was raining.

At seven o'clock there was festal evensong with Tallis' responses and Bunnett's setting of the Canticles. The Easter anthems, "Christ our Passover," and "Now is Christ Risen from the Dead," were very admirably rendered.

During the offertory Miss Edna Bird sang Dudley Buck's "Fear ye Not, O Israel!" in excellent voice and with good expression. The rector gave Easter discourses both morning and evening.

The offerings for the day amounted to upwards of $260.

Bridge Street.

Easter day services at Bridge Street were largely musical in their character, and, as usual on special occasions, the large and well balanced choir of the church were very much in evidence. Prof. Hunt, the musical director, is to be heartily congratulated on his choir. They sing everything well; but some things, of course, better than others. The morning service yesterday consisted of anthems by the choir, carols by the Boys' choir, etc., the subject of the pastor's sermon being "The Christian's Easter Song." At the evening service there was a large congregation present, and the musical features were quite up to the mark set by many a metropolitan church. The choir rendered an anthem, "As it Began to Dawn," in very good style, Miss Mabel Vermilyea taking the solo sweetly. The choir, however, was at its best in the chorus, "Worthy is the Lamb," from "The Messiah." The grand and uplifting music of Handel was splendidly interpreted, the bass voices, in particular, covering themselves with glory. Bridge St. Church has excellent reason to be proud of its choir. A highly tuneful number was a sextette for ladies' voices, "Hail to the Risen Lord," charmingly rendered by Mesdames Ray and Hunt, Misses Wilson, G. Price, Vermilyea and Fish. It carried with it all the evidences of refined vocalism. The Boys' choir sang a carol, "The World Itself Keeps Easter Day," their fresh young voices being very pleasant to listen to. Miss Mabel Vermilyea, in fine voice, sang Handel's time-honored masterpiece, "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth," and has seldom been heard to better advantage, though one was inclined to think that something more lyric in its character would have served better to show Miss Vermilyea's liquid, flexible voice and remarkable range. Miss Gertrude Price's rich contralto voice was heard to advantage in Neidlinger's "Easter Song," a lyric richly freighted with the traditions of Easter. Mr. Vanderwater, a visiting Toronto vocalist, sang a solo, "Hosanna, Praise be Thine," showing himself to be the possessor of a fine voice and a cultured and withal sensible method. His upper notes are especially pleasing, and his singing should make him a favorite wherever he is heard. The sermon by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., was a clear-cut gem in its way, breathing the benedictions of Easter. His subject was "The Transfigured Valley," text Psalm 23; 4:

> "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

The preacher drew a vivid picture of the burial of Jesus after the crucifixion. As He walked through the valley of the shadow, so must all of us. A solemn thought it was, that we—now full of life and health—must soon walk through the dark valley! In this world only one thing was certain—death. The great work of the men of all ages had been to lighten that valley, but only Christians had succeeded—to them the valley of the shadow was lightened by the light of the resurrection morn. Death did not end all — we were simply beginning to live when we die: He giveth His beloved sleep. The preacher drew a graphic picture of a tired child who was called in by its mother to rest for the morrow. So it was with God — He called us to sleep to rest for the life to come. Death is the voice of love. When we see an old man or an old woman pass away we say "They are resting now." When a child dies, we say, "Ah! well, God saw the path was too rough for them. Loving them, He gave them early the gift of death!" We know that, being Christians, they will wake up in the blessed land. So the way of the dark valley is transfigured for us: when we die we go where our loved ones are. Beautiful thought! Every path is smooth when we are going home! Thus Easter interprets death for us, and Easter transfigures the dark valley of the shadow.

Among the most enjoyable features of the services were the organ voluntaries of Prof. Hunt, who played with all the taste and skill for which he has become noted. The opening voluntary at the evening service, Wagner's "Prelude to Lohengrin," was given a masterly rendition.

St. Michael's.

Very bright and beautiful were the services in stately St. Michael's yesterday, they being attended by large congregations. At High Mass the choir, in splendid form, sang Edouardo Marzo's First Mass in A, doing much credit to themselves and their talented directress, Mrs. James Grant. Mr. Ingram was at the organ, his work leaving nothing to be desired. The solos in the mass were excellently sung by Mrs. Grant, Misses Katie Bawden, Mae Duboe, Agnes St. Charles and Madge Blute, and Messrs. H. McInnich, Peppin and "Jack" Hayes. The hymn "Regina Coeli" was splendidly rendered by the choir during the offertory. Rev. Father Traynor preached a very able sermon on that perennial subject, "The Resurrection." Easter Sunday, 1906, will go down in the history of St. Michael's as one of the brightest and most inspiring ever known.

Tabernacle.

At the morning service the members of the Sabbath School took an active part in the services and special and appropriate instrumental selections were rendered by the orchestra of the school. The service consisted of Easter carols, hymns, responsive readings and a sermon by the pastor, Rev. G. Brown. His subject was "The power of His Resurrection," and the text was from Philippians, 3rd chapter and 10th verse:

> "That I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death."

All present entered heartily into the service. The pulpit was prettily decorated with Easter lilies.

At the evening service Miss M. Stork sang a solo entitled, "Angel of Easter," and Mr. I. Gordon sang "The Pilot Song." The anthem by the choir was "The Conquering King," very well rendered, indeed.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

Large congregations were the rule in the above church yesterday, in spite of the weather, and the services were very inspiring and hearty. The beautiful Easter hymns were sung with a swing and fervor quite uplifting. Holy Communion was administered at the morning service, there being over sixty communicants. The special music by the choir was excellently rendered. At the morning service they sang the anthem, "Christ the Lord is Risen," solos being creditably taken by Miss L. Hubly and Mr. A. S. Large. At the evening service the anthem was "Angels Rolled the Stone Away." The sermons by the Rector, Rev. A. M. Hubly, were in keeping with the festival of Easter. The annual parish meeting of this church will be held tonight, when it is confidently expected that the reports presented will show it to be in a better position, financially and numerically, than ever before in its history.

St. Andrew's.

Rev. R. S. Laidlaw, pastor, occupeid the pulpit at both services. In the morning he took his text from St. Matthew, 28th chapter, 6th verse:

> "He is not here; He has risen as he said; come see the place where the Lord lay."

The singing in the morning was led by a children's choir, composed of 24 voices. During the service they rendered two numbers in fine form, "Pearly Dew Drops Glisten," and "O, Glorious Easter Morn."

> "Eye has not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God has prepared for them, which love Him.

During the service the choir rendered two anthems, "The Morning Kindles all the Sky," by Mrs. Carrie B. Adams, Mr. Chris Pratt taking the baritone solos, and "Hallelujah! Christ is Risen," by E. S. Loring.

Holloway Street.

The Easter services at this place of worship yesterday were largely attended and all appeared to enter heartily into the services, which were appropriate to the day. In the morning the children took a prominent part in providing the singing, they occupying the choir's gallery. Three numbers were rendered by them, namely, "Ring, Easter Bells," "Hail the Bright and Radiant Morn," and "Lo, the Chains of Death are Broken." The children showed that they had been well trained, singing splendidly. During the service Miss E. Price sang, with pleasing effect, a solo entitled "Christ is Risen." A large number of the pupils of the Deaf and Dumb Institution were present and took part in the service. Their signing of the Lord's Prayer was especially effective. Mr. G. F. Stewart, who was in command of the children, interpreted the service to them. The pastor, Rev. R. H. Leitch, preached a sermon which was in keeping with the spirit of the day. His text was from St. John, 11th chapter and 25th verse:

> "Jesus' saith unto her, I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live."

The significance of the address was that Easter was the pivotal point of the world's history, an awakening from death unto life. It was appropriate that it should be in the spring, when all nature was awakening and coming forth in beauty.

In the evening a choral and praise service was held, in which the choir took a leading part. The pulpit and altar of the church were beautifully decorated with flowers, and in the morning the sweet songs of birds were to be heard in the auditorium.

Christ Church.

Easter services commenced at this church at 8 a.m. yesterday, with the celebration of Holy Communion, at which there were a large number of communicants. The morning service was fully choral, Smart's setting in E flat being used. During the service Mr. Maurice Vanderwater, of Toronto, rendered most acceptably, a solo entitled "Hosanna," by Granier. The Rector's subject was "Christ's Resurrection." In the evening the choir rendered an anthem entitled "A Risen Lord." The Rector's evening subject was "Our Resurrection," and the text was from 1st Corinthians, 15th chapter and 12th verse:

> "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?"

The church was tastefully and beautifully decorated with flowers.

John Street.

"Paul as a Witness of the Risen Christ," was the subject discussed last evening by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm. His text was from Acts, 26th chapter and 15th verse:

> "And I said, who art thou, Lord? And he said, I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest."

The sermons and services throughout were appropriate to Easter day. In the evening Mr. D. A. Cameron sang a solo entitled "The Palms," Miss Gowsell rendered, very sweetly, a solo, "There is a Green Hill Far Away," and the anthem by the choir was "Christ, Our Passover," given in splendid style.

Baptist.

Pastor Emerson preached at both services. Morning subject, "The Moral Significance of the Resurrection." The choir sang an anthem entitled "God is Love." The evening subject was "What is Death?" Text, Psalm 89-48, also John, 14-19. All the paths of life, said the speaker, converge in one direction; the call comes to all men. All must die. Love, genius and medical skill cannot ward off the hand of death. Why this shrinking from death? It is not because of death itself, but because of the reckoning at the judgment. What is death? The seer, the scientist, the philosopher, all have failed to answer the question. Only one place to go for an answer, and that is the Bible. Only one man has answered the question—Jesus. Death is an exodus or outgoing. Some men have accomplished more by their death than by their life, Samson, Cromwell and Christ Himself. Death is simply going home, answering the call of our Father. But what does it mean to the unsaved man or woman? The preacher appealed to the unsaved to answer this question and act accordingly. The choir sang an anthem entitled "If a man die shall he live again?" in very nice time and tune.

St. John's.

The services at this church yesterday were of a joyful nature and heartily participated in by the members of the congregation. The Rector, Rev. Canon Bogert, preached two helpful and appropriate sermons. The beautiful Easter hymns were well sung by the members of the choir and congregation. Holy Communion was celebrated at the early morning service, and many communicants participated.

Bethel Hall.

The three days' Christian conference commenced yesterday, and is largely attended by Christians from the city and surrounding country, as also Peterboro and Kingston. Several speakers addressed the meetings on vital subjects, bringing the word of God to bear on the Christian's life and walk. A gospel meeting was held in the evening and every seat was occupied. At the close the ordinance of baptism was administered and meetings were announced for morning, afternoon and evening during to-day and Tuesday.

Dangerous Mudholes on Bridge St. East.

The roadway on Bridge St. East is in a deplorable condition. In addition to accidents recorded elsewhere, the Quinte Laundry delivery wagon to-day ran into a mud-hole near Mr. J. W. Murray's residence, East Bridge St., and broke the shafts. The hole is dangerous for any rig.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SWEET CLOVER."

Elmer Thayer by his wonderfully natural and life-like creation of the part of Jerome Holcombe, in "Sweet Clover," has fully demonstrated that he is beyond question the greatest exponent of rural character comedy parts before the public. His methods are natural, quiet and easy, the same style that James A. Hearn delighted in. His initial tour in "Sweet Clover" last year so firmly established him as a star, that the reception accorded him on return dates in some of the cities played was an ovation such as is rarely given an actor, and in every city visited this season the number has been limited only by the capacity of the theatre. "Sweet Clover" will be at the Carman on Wednesday evening next.

POLICE ARE AFTER THE CRIMINALS.

WHO ATTEMPTED THE MURDER OF MYERSBURG FARMER.

The Campbellford police are at present working on the attempted murder case at Myersburg, but as yet no clue to the identification of the footpads has been received. A miller in the village, however, noticed on the day of the attempted crime, two strangers, one of whom carried a gun. Also another resident saw two strange characters that day and, according to reports, they corresponded to the men seen on that part of the road on Friday night, where the assault was committed.

Mr. Stotts, the victim of the assault, has been suffering the past week from the wounds, but more particularly from a severe nervous strain, the shock being too much for him.

Mr. William H. Wright, Christ'n Scientist, Dead

Mr. Wm. H. Wright, who had been ill for some time, passed away shortly after noon to-day at the family residence, Queen St. Deceased, who was 54 years of age, was born at Port Hope, where he resided the greater portion of his life. Some 12 years ago Mr. Wright came to this city where he has since made his home. He was the leader of the Christian Scientists in this city, and in that religious denomination took a deep interest. A widow and a family of one son, Alfred, of Toronto, and three daughters, Mrs. H. Bryant, of this city; Mrs. Fred Hicks, of Lethbridge, and Miss Louise, at home, survive. The remains will be taken to Port Hope for interment.

FIVE BOYS RAID OFFICE.

Get Away With Cash and Cheques Amounting to $1,100.

Winnipeg, April 16.—Three daring robberies, supposed to be the work of crooks known to the Dominion police, have been committed in Winnipeg during the past week.

The first robbery was when Ernest Ansley was relieved of $500 which he had drawn from the Bank of Hamilton.

The other two robberies took place in the Imperial Bank, one of the victims being Ald. Sanderson, who was touched for $50, and a lady who lost $24.

All three robberies were of the most daring character. Ald. Sanderson had his money taken out of his bank book which he laid down for a second.

Five boys, aged from 14 to 17, skipped last week, with the cash box of the law firm of Howell, Hudson & Marlatt, containing $1,100 in cheques and cash. The deed was done at noon hour, the lads apparently being in league with the office boy. One of the boys was captured Saturday and the police found about $250 hidden in a back yard. The other boys went to Minneapolis, and the police there are after them.

A Cancer Remedy.

Albany, N. Y., April 16.—As a result of experiments which are now being made in the cancer laboratory at Buffalo, the medical experts of that institution are encouraged in the belief that a specific cure for cancer will soon be discovered. In his annual report to the state commissioner of health, Dr. Harvey R. Gaylord, director of the laboratory, says the experiments indicate the existence of immune forces antagonistic to cancer.

Servian Cabinet Crisis.

Belgrade, Servia, April 16.—The Politka Saturday says the Servian Government will after Easter furnish King Peter with a list of the officers to be retired, and that in case he does not acquiesce the Ministry will resign.

Postmen Going Back.

Paris, April 16.—The postmen who have been on strike are returning to their duties. There are now only 1,400 strikers attending a total of 10,000 postmen. The postmen's strike at Lyons is ended.

Rome, April 16.—Cardinal Callegari Bishop of Padua, died Saturday night. He was the first cardinal created by his holiness Pope Pius X.

Public Warned of Counterfeit.

Toronto, April 16.—There has come into the hands of the Bank of Quebec a bogus $10 note on the Bank of Quebec, numbered C 039012, dated July 3, 1898, signed by John Brakey, president, and countersigned by V. F. Convey.

It is just the same size as a genuine bill. The colors of the numbers are bright red and blurred, much brighter than the genuine. The paper has an oily feel.

The appearance of the note would not deceive anybody who is expert in handling money, but it is a dangerous deceiver to the public.

Italian's Murderous Assault.

Port Arthur, April 16—Saturday night an Italian named Devine made a murderous assault on a fellow-countryman named Carillo, shooting him in the stomach. The man escaped. Yesterday a man could be seen running around on an icefield, which was rapidly being blown out into the lake, and it is believed that Devine, to elude the police, had gone out on the ice and has been blown into the lake.

JAPAN AGAIN SUFFERS

Heavy Loss of Life From Second Formosan Earthquake.

109 Already Known to Be Killed, But It Is Feared That the Casualties and Damage Will Be In Excess of Last Month's Earthquake When 1,014 Lost Their Lives, 695 Were Injured, and 1,200 Homes Were Demolished.

Tokio, April 16.—One hundred and nine persons are known to have been killed and twenty-nine injured in the earthquake that was experienced in the southern part of the Island of Formosa last Saturday, but further details, it is expected, will swell the death roll, as the shock was more severe than that of March 17.

The Town of Kagi again was the principal sufferer, the houses which escaped destruction in the former disturbances being now in ruins. Doko and several other towns and villages also were affected by landslides, which have completely changed the topography of the country. The officials are working feverishly to relieve the thousands of persons left homeless by the earthquake.

Later reports received from Formosa confirm the earlier rumors of the complete destruction of Kagi, where seven persons were killed and 35 injured.

At Daigo 400 buildings were destroyed and at Ajensui 1,191 buildings collapsed and 749 were damaged and three persons were killed and 15 wounded.

These later advices says that this shock was more powerful than that of March 17, but as the people had been warned they were able to escape.

As a result of the earthquake in Formosa last month 1,014 persons were killed, 695 injured and 1,200 houses demolished.

The damage done was roughly estimated at $45,000,000.

THANKSGIVING IN NAPLES.

Prof. Matteucci's Latest Bulletin Respecting Vesuvius Is Re-assuring.

Naples, April 16.—The somewhat threatening condition of Mount Vesuvius Saturday night, having subsided with the eruption of enormous clouds of sand and ashes, these elements have begun to settle slowly, again enveloping the mountain in a thick haze and cutting off a view of it from Naples, only the outline of the base being visible.

"My instruments are now most calm. The emission of sand continues in less abundant quantities and I wait serenely for a satisfactory termination of the eruption."

The sudden renewal of alarm Saturday night gave way yesterday to the celebration of Easter with unusual fervor. The festival is always picturesque in Naples, but yesterday it was doubly so.

Found Alive.

The gravest situation has now shifted to Ottajano and San Giuseppi, where the recovery of the dead from the debris goes on amid the misery of thousands of homeless refugees. A sensational development occurred during the work of salvage at Ottajano yesterday when the searchers unearthed two aged women, still alive, but speechless, after their six days' entombment. They were among the hundreds who were crushed beneath the falling walls during the rain of stones and ashes last Sunday and Monday. The women were protected by the rafters of the house in which they were and managed to exist on a few morsels of food which they had in their pockets.

Matteucci's Narrative.

In an interview on Saturday, Prof. Matteucci, director of the Royal Observatory, said: "I first observed Mount Vesuvius giving unusual sign about a month ago when the lava began to overflow, taking a southwest direction. This gradually increased as several small lava streams formed into one great current.

"The real danger began the middle of last week. Then an enormous stream of lava came from the summit, meeting the other streams which burst from the lower strata. It was this that overwhelmed Boscotrecase. Throughout the lava discharge the volcano was comparatively quiet and without electrical phenomena or explosions.

Great Rent in Cone.

"Our really terrible period came at 3 o'clock Sunday morning and lasted until 8 o'clock. The mountain, which hitherto had been silent, suddenly gave out a deafening roar and a great rent was made in its cone. Huge solid rocks were hurled skyward. Some of them fell near the observatory, threatening to crush in the roof, but most of them fell far outside the observatory zone. There was no scoria in this first discharge, but solid, bullet-like stones, which cut the roof and damaged the windows.

A Veritable Hell.

"Throughout Sunday enormous solid blocks of stone rose to a height of 2,500 feet from the crater, while ashes and sand were thrown much higher, but towards Monday the terrible shocks of earthquake gradually diminished. One of the worst feature of the eruption was the unusual extent of electrical phenomena, the darkness being broken by vivid flashes of lightning, giving the sky a blood-like color, with short heavy peals of thunder interspersed. These moments were terrible —very terrible. Yes, it was a veritable hell."

Asked if his scientific observations had yielded valuable results, Prof. Matteucci replied:

"Observation was extremely difficult under such disturbing conditions. The seismic instruments were badly effected by the electrical intensity, each explosion being announced by a violent movement of the instruments which seemed ready to burst into pieces.

One of the Greatest.

"Compared with other great eruptions this is one of the most important in the history of Vesuvius. Its effects are less terrible than those from the eruption in the year 79, when Pompeii was buried, but it equals in intensity the great eruptions of 1631 and 1872. What result this eruption will yield to science is not yet certain. Eruptions are not exact in science. You cannot count on Vesuvius, each of its eruptions has its characteristics. This one was marked by an abundance of electrical phenomena. I have already collected quantities of cinders and scoria for comparison with similar matter from other eruptions, and later I will collect large stones."

The professor pointed to the shelves in his laboratory, where there were plates containing cinders varying in size and bottles filled with ashes, and there were also in the room enormous stones, each labelled with the date of its ejection from the volcano.

King Victor Emmanuel has decorated Prof. Matteucci, director of the Royal Observatory on Mount Vesuvius, with the rank of Commander of the Order of the Crown.

SIX U. S. SAILORS KILLED.

Fatal Disaster Occurs on Battleship Kearsarge on Good Friday.

Washington, April 16.—Friday six men were killed in the forward turret of the battleship Kearsarge. Saturday Rear Admiral Evans, the commanding chief of the Atlantic fleet, cabled the followings particulars:

"Caimanera, April 14, 1906.

"Secretary Navy, Washington:

"On April 13, about 3.15 p. m., shortly after completion of target practice of Kearsarge forward turret while the powder was going below, three sections of a 13-inch charge powder were ignited. Charge of powder in other lift just below and one section inside 13-inch remained intact. Cause not yet determined, nor accountability. Matter is being investigated.

"Lieut. Joseph W. Graeme, gun umpire, has been sent to the Maryland in a very critical state about 9 a. m. The following have since died: Lieut. Hudgins, turret officer; Peter Norberg, gunner's mate; Theodore Neagely, seaman; Anton O. Thorson, ordinary seaman; Julius A. Koester, turret captain, first class; Ellis N. Athey, seaman. The following were dangerously injured by accident, recovery doubtful: W. King, ordinary seaman.

"Will bury dead at Guantanamo. Vessel uninjured."

The Kearsarge is regarded as one of the best battleships in the American fleet, is of 11,520 tons and 375 feet in length. She was launched in 1898 and commissioned in 1900.

JABEZ BALFOUR FREE.

Ex-Magnate and M. P. Who Swindled the Poor of England.

London, April 16.—Jabez Spencer Balfour, formerly a financial magnate and a member of Parliament, who was sentenced to 14 years' imprisonment in 1895 for extensive frauds in connection with the Lands Allotment Co. and the House and Land Investment Trust of the Liberator group of companies, was released Saturday from the Parkhurst Prison on the Isle of Wight.

It is said he will probably return to the Argentine Republic, from where he was extradited before his trial and where, it is said, he holds considerable interests in different trade concerns.

The case of Jabez Balfour caused a good deal of interest. He is a man of good education and pleasant manners and succeeded in swindling thousands of people, especially persons belonging to the poor middle class of England. It was estimated that these lost about $30,000,000.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

Coroner's Jury Convinced That Hackett Is Edith Ahern's Murderer.

Montreal, April 16.—James Hackett was committed Saturday for the murder of little Edith Ahern. Hackett will probably be tried at the June term of the Court of King's Bench.

The first two witnesses were a boy named Poirer, and Mrs. Taylor, both of Cote St. Paul. They were among those who saw a man and child in that vicinity on the day of the murder. When it came to identifying the man in a room full of people they totally failed to further strengthen the case for the coroner.

The boy picked out a newspaper reporter as the man he thought he saw with the girl, and Mrs. Taylor was uncertain. The identification of the two Norwegians and the Neilson boy are the only ones which so far directly implicate Hackett.

Postpones Insurance Inquiry.

Ottawa, April 16.—G. F. Shepley, K. C., counsel to the Royal Commission investigating life insurance made the following announcement last night:

"The Royal Commission on life insurance has been compelled, owing to the illness of one of its members, to postpone the public sitting fixed for Tuesday, 17th inst., at Ottawa.

"A further announcement will be made at the earliest possible moment."

Fell Twenty-Five Feet.

Winnipeg, Man., April 16.—William Beech, a young man, Saturday morning fell from a window of the first floor of the new postoffice to the ground, a distance of about 25 feet, alighting on his head in a pile of stone. He got up unassisted, but was later taken to the hospital, where it was found that one arm was broken and his head badly cut.

Franklin's Portrait Arrives.

New York, N. Y., April 16.—The steamer St. Paul, which arrived yesterday from Southampton and Cherbourg, brought the portrait of Benjamin Franklin, which was restored to America by Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada.

Gaynor-Greene Moved.

Savannah, Ga., April 16.—Judge Speer passed an order in the United States court Saturday directing that Greene and Gaynor be taken to Macon for safe keeping pending their transfer to the penitentiary at Atlanta.

FALL WHEAT ALL RIGHT

Lack of Snow Did Not Prove Injurious to the Crop.

Top of Wheat Browned But Roots Said by Correspondents of Ontario Bureau of Industries to Be Uninjured—Clover Crop Conditions Are Better Than Are Those Even of Fall Wheat—Fruit Is Unharmed.

Toronto, April 16.—Contrary to the generally accepted idea that lack of snow is injurious to fall wheat, comes the announcement that the crop appears to have wintered remarkably well, according to reports received at the Parliament buildings. While the top is for the most part well browned up, the roots are said to be uninjured and though delayed in the early growth the outlook is on the whole favorable.

Clover Is Good.

The clover crop conditions are said to be even better, particularly through the border counties of Peel, York, Ontario and Durham.

In the western counties of Huron, Grey and Bruce whole districts formerly sown to wheat are now devoted to grazing land, the revenue derived from the sale of cattle yielding more satisfactory returns than does grain growing. This has been brought about largely through the higher prices of farm labor. The result is clearly shown in the neglect which in many cases characterizes the care of the farms, in striking contrast to the thrifty appearance which formerly prevailed.

Fruit Unharmed.

Over in the Niagara Peninsula the reports concerning the fruit situation are more than ordinarily cheering. On every hand from the Niagara frontier around the head of the lake and down to Oakville little or no damage is reported from the frosts of winter. In many sections the greatest anxiety was felt by nurserymen as to the damage likely to be wrought by the exceptionally warm week in the latter part of January. Happily these fears are not likely to be realized. A. W. Peart, Burlington, discussing the situation, stated that some slight damage would in all probability result to the more tender varieties through forcing of the buds, but the prospects generally were all that could be desired. The Dawson Commission Co. were of a like opinion. Little or no damage is reported from the barking of the trees from mice.

$500 to $1,000 an Acre.

The fruit industry of the Province of Ontario has assumed enormous proportions. This is evidenced by the fact that the value of the land in the fruit-growing districts of the Niagara Peninsula ranges all the way from $500 to $1,000 an acre.

Whether it is that the inauguration of the commuted statute of labor system is working injuriously to the roadways, or that spring of 1906 is especially unfavorable, from every part of the province come reports of the almost impassable condition of the public roads.

OTTAWA WELCOMES PRINCE.

Ottawa, April 16.—King's weather" did not welcome Prince Arthur of Connaught. He arrived at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon amid a violent downpour of rain and after briefly inspecting the guard was rapidly driven along Wellington street, down Rideau to King Edward and via the Driveway to Government House, where he was welcomed by the Governor-General.

In spite of the rain, a large concourse of people filled all the approaches to the Union Station which was gaily festooned with innumerable Union Jacks.

The guard of honor, 100 strong, was furnished by the Forty-Third Regiment, with Capt. Bolland in command. At Government House the guard to receive the Prince was a detachment from the Governor-General's Foot Guards, in command of Capt. Cunningham.

When the Prince arrived at Dufferin Bridge on his way from the depot to Government House, a salute was fired by the Forty-Third Field Battery from Nepean Point.

Contract For Statue.

Hamilton, April 16.—Saturday afternoon the Queen Victoria memorial statue committee agreed to award the contract of making the statue to Philippe Hebert, C. M. G. The only other competitor was Hamilton McCarthy. The statue will cost $10,000, and will be placed in the west end of Gore Park.

S. A. Immigrants Arrive.

Halifax, N. S., April 16.—With the Salvation Army flag flying at the masthead, the Kensington, at 3 o'clock yesterday, with the second contingent of Salvation Army immigrants to arrive during the past two months. There were 1,150 persons, including many young married couples.

Mutineers Imprisoned.

Lisbon, April 16.—The mutinous spirit has spread to the crew of the Portuguese ironclad Vasco Da Gama. The authorities have taken precautions to prevent a further outbreak. A number of the crew of the cruiser Don Carlos I., who mutinied April 11, have been imprisoned.

Cure For Locomotor Ataxia.

London, April 16.—The Express Saturday morning says that Legrand Norton Denislow, an American doctor residing in London, has discovered a cure for locomotor ataxia. He already, says The Express, has effected many wonderful recoveries.

Boy Shot In Thigh.

Guelph, April 16.—The carelessness shown by young lads using rifles along the river was shown when Master Earl Matthews was shot through the thigh while sitting on the bank. The bullet came dangerously near severing the main artery.

GRAVEYARD GRAFT.

Buffalo, April 17.—Fred O. Murray, recently appointed collector of the Port of Buffalo, and former treasurer of Erie County, was yesterday indicted by the grand jury on a charge of stealing from the County of Erie sums aggregating $35,870, and receiving stolen property in a like amount. Several other secret indictments were handed in by the grand jury, which has been investigating alleged grafting in connection with the purchase by the county of the North street cemetery as a site for the 65th Regiment armory.

Postmaster Fred Greiner yesterday afternoon appeared before Justice Kenefick and entered a plea of not guilty to charges of bribery to influence a vote. The charges arose from the purchase of the cemetery as a site for the armory. The contract for the removal of the bodies was secured by R. J. Conover. He was to receive $15 for each body raised and reinterred in another cemetery. Conover has been convicted on a charge of grand larceny. In his trial evidence was given showing that the bones found in single graves were divided into several parcels which were buried as separate bodies. The county, it is alleged, was robbed of $100,000.

Since his conviction Conover has appeared before the grand jury and, it is reported, laid before it evidence which has involved several members of the board of supervisors and some prominent political leaders.

THE PRINCE AT OTTAWA.

Dined With Premier and Lady Laurier and Leader of Opposition.

Ottawa, April 17.—After receiving and replying to the civic address yesterday, H. R. H. Prince Arthur of Connaught, drove to the residence of Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier, with whom he dined. The other guests present were Lady Sybil Grey, Lord Redesdale, Admiral Seymour, Gen. Kelly-Kenny, Col. Davidson, Capt. Wyndham, Mr. Lampson, Hon. Charles and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, Lady Borden, Sir Elzear and Lady Taschereau, Col. and Mrs. Hanbury Williams, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Borden and Mrs. Williard, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of Virginia, who is on a visit to Lady Laurier.

At 2 o'clock His Royal Highness opened the "Old English Fair," a bazaar whose proceeds are to be contributed to the Japanese famine fund.

At 5.30 o'clock the Ottawa South African Veterans' Association, headed by its president, Major Charles F. Winter, waited upon Gen. Kelly-Kenny at Government House, and were given a cordial reception.

Prince's Short Stay.

Hamilton, April 17.—Prince Arthur of Connaught, who will spend three hours in Hamilton next Saturday afternoon, will be taken for an automobile spin through the parks after the presentation of a civic address at the City Hall.

Bloodshed At the Mines

State of Terror Prevails and Sheriff Has Asked Governor For Troops—Riot Began With Attempt of Striking Miners to Rescue Comrades Who Had Been Arrested—Trouble Expected When Constabulary Arrives.

Johnstown, Pa., April 17.—In a riot at the Windber mines, near here, last night three foreigners were shot dead by deputies, a boy was fatally wounded, and Eugene Delaney, a mining engineer was taken to the hospital seriously injured.

The riot was the result of an attempt on the part of striking miners to rescue some of their comrades who had been placed under arrest. A state of terror prevails. Sheriff Begley has made a demand to Governor Pennypacker for troops.

Shortly before midnight the town quieted down and the crowds began to disappear from the streets. The state constabulary was summoned from Greensburg, but a freight wreck delayed the train, and it is expected that the constabulary will not reach Windber before early morning. Trouble is anticipated, however, when the constabulary arrives at the mines, as the foreign element are very antagonistic to state officers.

The bodies were lying in the street last night where they fell, the strikers refusing to allow the undertakers to remove them.

The foreign element celebrated Easter Monday in the mining section, and much liquor has been used. The streets were thronged all day with boisterous crowds.

How It Began.

The trouble started at 5 o'clock, when Deputy Sheriff McMullen went to the mass meeting held by the striking miners in a wood at the edge of the town. Many of the miners had been drinking, and the sight of the deputy made them furious. The officer was quickly surrounded by maddened miners, who threatened to kill him. McMullen fled for his life, finding refuge in the house of Councilman Charles Davis. Practically every man who had gone to the mass meeting joined in the chase, and soon after the latter had entered the Davis house it was surrounded by a mob of 2,000 shouting, cursing miners, who challenged McMullen to come out. The mob attacked the house and literally wrecked it. The deputy sheriff was roughly handled, but again managed to escape. The members of the Davis family fled to neighbors. Other deputies, guarding coal property, had been notified of the trouble and twenty of the rioters were landed in the lock-up at Windber.

Fire Department to Protect Jail.

Strikers, with Sills at their head, prepared to storm the jail. Deputy sheriffs fixed bayonets, surrounded the jail and the fire department was called out. The foreigners refused to listen to efforts to pacify them, and, shouting to the deputies to throw away their guns and give up the prisoners, closed in on the jail.

When it became certain that the little band of deputies and firemen could not stand before the howling mob, they opened fire. Those of the foreigners who were closest to the jail had already begun using knives in the attempt to disarm the deputies, while others flourished revolvers. The deputies fired but only one volley and the foreigners broke and fled, leaving three dead in front of the jail.

At the mass meeting yesterday afternoon the men had decided to return to work on the operators' terms, when Deputy McMullen appeared. It is said that an intoxicated striker made an insulting remark to the deputy and when the latter warned the miner to keep quiet the trouble began.

400,000 Miners Out on Strike.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 17.—At this time about 400,000 men are idle and on strike. None of the men have yet drawn on the national treasurer for support.

"One would scarcely know that a great strike is on," said Mr. Mitchell. "The operators and the public have all the coal they want, the miners would not have had any work anyway since April 1, and if the public is paying more than formerly for coal, some one is taking advantage of the situation."

Police Fight With Miners.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 17.—A detail of the state constabulary was called to Wilkes-Barre Township yesterday to do police duty. In a fight among foreigners Sunday night local constables were worsted after they had shot three men and one woman.

Mines Filling With Water.

Columbus, O., April 17.—According to reports received here from Illinois and Indiana, some of the mines in those states are filling with water because pumpmen and engineers have quit work.

Operators' Last Word.

New York, April 17.—The Tribune says the coal operators' reply to the workers will declare that their last proposition to President Mitchell is final.

Strike For Union Recognition.

Atlanta, Ga., April 17.—The strike of the Southern Bell Telephone linemen became effective yesterday.

Col. W. T. Gentry, vice-president of the company, says: "It is a demand for a recognition of the union and the employment of union men." Probably 400 men are out.

Go to Work Again.

Hamilton, April 17.—The striking bricklayers and masons will resume work in the morning at 15c. an hour, pending a final settlement.

Two Bad Accidents.

Glace Bay, N. S., April 17.—Richard Rockett, a miner at Bridgeport, was instantly killed yesterday by a fall of stone. He was 62 years of age.

Mounted Police Suffer.

Prince Albert, Sask., April 17.—Yesterday morning fire destroyed the N. W. M. P. canteen and recreation room, together with contents, which included many cups, trophies and heirlooms of the force. The total loss will be about $4,000, upon which there is $600 insurance.

Buffalo Against It.

Buffalo, April 17.—Mayor Adams, in an interview yesterday, declared himself an antagonistic to the proposal in the Barton bill, which prohibits the importation of power from the Canadian side.

Editor's Son Loses Arm.

Hamilton, April 17.—Word was received last night that Alex. Cameron, a son of J. R. Cameron, editor of The Spectator, had a hand cut off in a saw-mill at Guelph. Dr. McGillivray will leave for Guelph to-day.

The Carnival of Graft at Ottawa.

Day by day the corruption which is going on in the Dominion Government is being shown up by the alert Opposition, says the Guelph Herald. It is as bad as, if not worse, than that which took place under the Ross Administration. Probably it will increase as the grafters who were the barnacles on the ship of state in Ontario have attached themselves to Ottawa, and the Hon. Mr. Aylesworth is there to give his sinister advice.

The latest revelation is the Bronson-Ray scandal. Between 1898 and 1902, one of the most promising gold concessions in the Yukon was held by these two gentlemen. The grant became void because the mining conditions had not been fulfilled. The owners then sought to obtain a withdrawal of the cancellation, but their own influence was not strong enough. Mr. Belcourt, M.P., for Ottawa, was then approached. The company was re-incorporated under another name and Mr. Belcourt's law firm was given stock to the amount of $100,000, or a one-tenth interest, for services, and the lease was renewed by the Government.

Contrast this with the fact that in the States a Senator was recently fined and sentenced to prison for pushing the claims of certain persons to land grants at Washington.

This transaction is said to be a sample of the sort of thing that prevails at the Capital under Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Be that as it may, it is certainly giving us a notable Parliament.

On the front bench sits a Minister of the Crown who has ordered the Intercolonial Railway to buy the oil of a company over which he really presides. Behind this gentleman are the two Saskatchewan Valley Land Company magnates. One is Mr. Turiff, the Land Commissioner, during whose official regime the $8 land was sold at $1 an acre to his brother-in-law Mr. Adamson, who occupies a seat nearby. In front of this gentleman is the contractor for the penitentiary flour, and not far off sits Mr. Belcourt, whose reasoning with the Interior Department was assessed as worth $100,000 in the stock of the gold mining company for which he acted.

Mr. Belcourt's defence in the House consisted solely in a denial of having done anything of which he was ashamed, and the reading of a letter from Messrs. Bronson and Ray, declaring that his work for the company has been of a strictly proper nature. The indecency of the practice of legal members of Parliament acting before committees of the House for their clients for gain was criticized in strong terms by Messrs. Stockton and Bennett, and Mr. Thompson (Yukon) declared that the Bronson and Ray concession was the most iniquitous one in the Yukon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke briefly in connection with the matter, but was able to add nothing to Mr. Belcourt's defence.

TIMELY TOPICS.

It is just possible that there may have been a spring when the streets of Belleville were in worse condition than they are at present, but few people will be able to call it to mind.

Some people think the rolling mills will be used to manufacture railroad spikes for the Grand Trunk Pacific. This was hinted years ago. An employee of the Grand Trunk offices in Montreal told The Intelligencer recently that on one division of the new road it is estimated that 20,000 tons of spikes and fishplates will be required. The rolling mills will have to go some to supply a demand like that. However, a gentleman who is in a position to know states that the talk about the mills being bought for G. T. P. purposes is not correct. The plant will, he says, be used for legitimate rolling mills purposes. So there you are.

"An Old Boy", writes: "Why this talk about discontinuing Y.M.C.A. work in Belleville? Have our boys and young men become so good that there is now no danger of their being led into temptation, or have they become so worthless that it seems advisable to let them drift? Can it be possible that, just when the city is taking on a new lease of active life, the leaders in Y. M. C. A. work have become weary in well-doing? Nay, nay. I don't believe that. The local association has been running for a good many years now, and has assuredly done much good. To be sure it has slain no giants, and it is just possible that people who wish to pose as giant slayers are not in their proper sphere in Y.M.C.A. work. Spasmodic efforts are always attended by a reaction. Perhaps the local association is suffering from one now. As the great family journal has remarked before, success to the Y. M. C. A. I believe there is a field for it in Belleville."

HOCKEY.

Harry McGuire Opened Their Eyes.

Hockey lovers and many others in this city will remember Harry McGuire, who, after some time spent in Y.M.C.A. work in Montreal, is now at the Springfield Y.M.C.A. Training School. It seems that, just about the end of the winter, there was a hockey match at Springfield, in which the genial Harry took part. What he did to the unsuspecting Yankees appears to have been a shame. A Springfield paper thus described the match.

"The Training School hockey team had everything its own way yesterday afternoon, when the Trinity College under-classmen were beaten by the score of 11 to 0 on the Watershops pond. The Y.M.C.A. men played all around their opponents and scored almost at will. McGuire, of the local team, was the star, 10 of the goals being made by him. The Trinity team was especially weak in defence near the goal and it was only due to the blocking of the forwards and the centre man that the score was not much larger.

"The Training School squad had the puck in its possession nearly all the while and kept it in its opponents' territory continually, team work being a feature. The ice was in good condition for the game and there was no wind, the day being ideal for such a contest. A large space on the Watershops had been cleared for the event and side boards were hurriedly brought from the rink on the Training School grounds, affording a chance for a good-sized crowd to see the game conveniently.

"The game started with a rush and for a few minutes it looked as if the contest was to be a close one, as neither side scored for some time. The first half was delayed about five minutes, as Morrow, the centre for the Trinity team, was badly cut over the eye by a lift from the puck, but he recovered sufficiently to enter the game again.

"As play was resumed the local players seemed to increase in speed and strength, and McGuire started the scoring with a neat goal from in front of the posts. McNicol scored one right after from the side and then McGuire pushed in another on as pretty a bit of play as was seen during the game. He received the puck at the end of the rink, and, unaided, carried it past the whole Trinity line, shooting it through for a goal. This was the last score of the half.

"In the second half Training School allowed several of the substitute men to enter the game and they played as well as the first team men Trinity, weakened in this half, allowing the local men to score eight more points before the whistle.

"McGuire opened the half with two goals in succession, the second one coming on a trick play, which was a clever bit of work. The puck had been behind his opponents' goal and he shot around it, carried it out and then quickly twisted it between the feet of the astonished goal-tender. Gray, who took Young's place in this half, was the next to score. Four more then went to the credit of McGuire. McNicol made the last goal of the game.

THE TURF.

The Passing of Tod Sloan.

Tod Sloan's probably truthful admission that he is ill in body and broke in pocket is provocative of the trite epigram anent the infernal qualities of this sporting life. Aged thirty-six, old, indigent, this once famous figure of the Parisian boulevards and American white lights is a sad and sorry spectacle.

This sporting life. This life of the foyers, the race track, the summer garden and Delmonico's at 6. It is a life for which all of us have, more or less, hungered, a life which at one time or another, long or short, most of us have lived, a life which has killed and ruined many of us, a life which those of us who have, for a time, led and survived are duly thankful.

They can have their Maxims and their Moulins Rouge, their Champs Elysee and their Folies Bergeres, their Cafes Martin and their Martin's Restaurant, their Great White Way. It is a life fit only for some modern Frankenstein made of Pittsburg wire and alligator hide to live. It is not a life for a human being. Some animated product of the laboratory and factory may find such a life fit for the living. Surely no man was meant to endure it.

Oh, lovely life of champagne and pate de fois gras, cigarets, electric lights, cafe chantant and heated hereafter. Feet always on asphalt, lungs ever in carbon, eyes eternally in glare. Thunder of iron and quiver of steel, shooting of elevators and clanging of gongs. Terror of furnaces, murder of volts. Can it be possible that the sons and daughters of Eve were meant to live the sporting life? Life of sport, life of a dog. Eat like a hog. Mind all asogg. Figure of frog. Stomach of ulcers. Die prey for the vultures.

Let your eyes follow them along that sporting life down the boulevards, through the cafes, along the Great White Way. The end spells always the same—illness, misery, poverty and dishonor.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

REMARKABLE TEST.

HYOMEI HAS BEEN KNOWN FOR YEARS AND IS GUARANTEED TO CURE CATARRH.

The remedy has made so many cures that we have urged its use in the most chronic cases of catarrh.

Breathed for a few minutes four times a day, through an inhaler that comes with every outfit, it soothes the irritated mucous membrane of the nose, throat, and lungs, kills the catarrhal germs, and restores complete health. Its healing, antiseptic fragrance penetrates to the most remote air passages, as no medicine taken into the stomach can possibly do.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs only $1, and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the pocket or purse, and will last a life-time, a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hyomei. If this is not sufficient for a complete cure, additional bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50 cents.

If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price Write to-day for consultation blank that will entitle you to services of our medical department without charge. The R. T. Booth Company, Hyomei Building, Ithaca, N. Y.

Company and Engineers Agree to Arbitrate.

James Markey, mechanical superintendent of the G. T. R. at Allendale, formerly locomotive foreman at the company's shops at Brockville, informed a representative of the Brockville Times that all arrangements had been completed for an arbitration of the grievances of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers a matter that has been hanging fire for a long time. The company and the men could not agree upon a revised schedule of wages so the question of arbitration was proposed and accepted by both sides. The G.T.R. named Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Toronto, and the engineers P. A. Morrissay, Grand Master of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. These two men could not agree on a third man for a long time, but finally the name of Mr. Wallace, a Chicago civil engineer engaged on the construction of the Panama canal, was acceptable. These three arbitrators were passengers on the same train with Mr. Markey going to Montreal to hear the evidence which will be given this week by the company and the engineers.

HOLLAND, ALLEGED THIEF, RETURNS.

IS CHARGED WITH THEFT FROM A TORONTO CONCERN.

The Toronto Globe has the following about Holland, who was at one time a resident of Picton and is well known to many in this city; Christopher Holland, the Ideal Bedding Co's bookkeeper, reached the city yesterday from England in the custody of Detective Mackie. Holland is charged with the theft of $13,802, which, it is alleged, he obtained by padding the pay sheets and using signed checks left with him by the manager. He left the city on Jan. 12th, three days after the warrant had been issued for his arrest.

Holland asserts he gave the prosecution a bill of sale for his furniture, $600 in diamonds, and that he only went to England to try and raise enough money to get him out of his difficulties. While lying very ill with typhoid fever prior to leaving the city the prisoner declares he also gave up his life insurance policies for $8,000. His wife and child are still in the city.

Holland is a South African veteran and by his father's will recently came into £500. In the final distribution of the estate he will get about $10,000. Mr. R. C. Levansconte, the firm's solicitor, is at present in England in connection with the case. Holland's wardrobe included five large, bulky steamer trunks and grips. It is said he has with him a dozen pairs of boots and as many hats. Mr. T. C. Robinette, K. C., has been retained for the defence.

Cheese Instructors For Eastern Ontario.

R. G. Murphy, secretary of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, has announced the following list of instructors for 1906;

Mr. and Mrs. Howe, of Melrose, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Geen on Sunday last.

A few of our young folks attended the sugar party given by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Vandewaters, of Moira, on Wednesday evening. A very enjoyable evening was spent in eating taffy, games, music, and refreshments.

Mr. Murney Morland is engaged in the cheese factory with our cheesemaker, Mr. John Young. Our cheese factory opened on Monday 9th, making five cheese.

Mr. Willie Longmere, of St. Ola, who has been in the company of Mr. David McCumber, met with a painful accident on Thursday. He fell from the horse on which he was riding and broke his arm.

Itching Piles

If you are acquainted with anyone who is troubled with this distressing ailment, you can do him no greater favor than to tell him to try Chamberlain's Salve. It gives instant relief. This salve also cures sore nipples, tetter and salt rheum. Price 25 cents To be had at R. Templeton's drug store

SECOND LINE THURLOW.

Messrs. Bertha and Francis Stickney are spending the Easter holidays with friends in Toronto and Guelph.

Mr. J. J. Sutton gave a sugar-off to a number of friends; altogether about 35 enjoyed themselves immensely.

Mr. and Mrs. Liddell spent the evening at Mr. James Sutton's sugar-off on Wednesday evening last.

Mr. and Mrs. Milligan, Salem, spent Sunday last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sine.

The Best Physics

When you want a physic that is mild and gentle, easy to take and pleasant in effect, take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price 25 cents. Every box warranted. Get a free sample at R. Templeton's drug store and try them.

WRIGHT.—In Belleville, on Monday, April 16, 1906, William H. Wright. The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning, April 18th, at 10.15, to the G.T.R. station. Interment at Port Hope.

FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late Teddy Fitzgerald will take place from the residence of his father, Mr. Dennis Fitzgerald, G.T.R. foreman, Moira street, on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to St. Michael's church, thence to St. James' cemetery.

Christian Conference At Bethel Hall.

The Christian Conference in Bethel Hall is being largely attended and stirring addresses were given yesterday by many speakers, bringing out the truths of the word of God. These people believe in a whole Bible for all the Lord's people and profess to take it and it only as their guide. They believe in baptism of believers only and that by immersion, and at the close of last night's meeting two more were baptised. The last meeting takes place this evening.

SAFETY.

Never in all the history of transportation has travel been safer than it is to-day. Seated in perfect comfort in any of the mile-a-minute trains of the Lake Shore Railway you are in less danger by far than was your grandfather in the lumbering six-mile-an-hour stage of a half or three-quarters of a century ago. Trains over this line are protected and guarded in a way that is but little short of marvellous. Every device that skill or money can provide is used without regard to the expense and in spite of the high speed—the fastest in the world —you are as safe here as in your own home. Combined with safety and high speed are luxurious comfort and punctuality, all combined to make a service unequaled the world over. See that your ticket reads "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway," and write for full information to J. W. Daly, Chief Ass't G. P. A., Buffalo, N.Y.; A. J. Smith, G. P. A., Cleveland, Ohio, or W. J. Lynch, Passenger Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

THE MOTHER ANTELOPE.

The manner in which the mother antelope protects her young until they are old and strong enough to join the full grown bands in their wanderings is an interesting and wonderful instance of nature's providence. These beautiful creatures live in an open country infested by all kinds of enemies and especially prowled over by the coyote, the gray wolf and the timber wolf, which subsist upon the young of all kinds of animals, yet the mother can easily protect her babies from the fiercest of these marauders. The enemy most dreaded is the soaring eagle.

There is a variety of cactus, a prickly plant which grows in great abundance all over the western plains, which furnishes her the means for this protection. Horses, cattle, buffalo and, in fact, all animals know the danger of treading on this plant. It grows in large patches some four or six inches in height above the ground and forms a thick mat varying in breadth from the size of the top of a man's hat to many feet. It is in the center of one of these patches that the female antelope prepares a place of safety for her young. The thorns of this cactus, while very poisonous and terribly painful to every other animal, for some reason are almost harmless to the antelope. The cactus may lacerate her legs, making them bleed freely, but neither the stickers nor their poison remains, while other animals seldom bleed, but retain the poisonous stickers in their wounds until they become malignant sores, causing excessive swelling of the limbs and very great and long continued suffering.

When the antelope has selected her patch of cactus, backing away a few feet, she will make a running jump, bounding high in the air and alighting in the middle of the patch, with all four feet close together, the hoofs pointing downward. Then, springing out again and repeating this operation until she has chopped the roots of the cactus plant to pieces, she loosens and clears a space large enough for standing room. She then will enlarge it by pawing and digging with her sharp hoofs. Here she gives birth to her young in undisturbed security, knowing that she can leave them in comparative safety during the day and return to them at night to give them suck. Should it be in a locality where eagles abound, however, the mother does not venture far away, as the soaring eagle often swoops down on the young, taking them away if she is not there to do battle for their lives.—H. H. Cross in Century.

Washington was a strong man and a famous wrestler. He was never thrown, which meant much, for wrestling was a favorite amusement with Virginians, many of whom were as nearly invincible as the ancient Greeks. Lincoln, too, could boast classic excellence in the same sport. "It is a curious thing," Lincoln said, when Washington's prowess was first brought to his attention—"it is a curious thing, but that is just precisely my record when I was a youth. I could outlift any man in Illinois, and I never was thrown. If George was round now, I should be pleased to have a tussle with him, and I rather believe that one of the plain people of Illinois would be able to keep up his end against the old Virginian."

Matrimony and Patience.

Matrimony and patience! It is not always a perfect combination, is it? In South Africa the savage tribes have a peculiar ceremony which they put the matrimonial candidate through previous to his entering the holy state. His hands are tied up in a bag containing five ants for two hours. If he bears unmoved the tortures of their stings he is considered qualified to cope with the nagging and daily jar and fret of married life. Such a man would make an admirable husband. He would not be upset by the thoughts of a spring bonnet or grow irritable every time the steak was overdone. The idea of having a patience trial for those about to marry is one that civilized people might adopt.

The Largest Described Snake.

Speke, in his narrative of the journey to the source of the Nile, describes the largest snake that has ever been seen by man. "I shuddered," he says, "as I looked upon the effects of his tremendous dying strength. For yards around where he lay grass, bushes and saplings—in fact, everything except full grown trees—were cut clean off as if they had been trimmed with an immense scythe. The monster when measured was 51 feet and 2½ inches in extreme length, while around the thickest portions of its body the girth was nearly three feet."

Labor.

If it were not for labor men could neither eat so much nor relish so pleasantly nor sleep so soundly nor be so healthful nor so useful, so strong nor so patient, so noble or so untempted.

Pursue the Puzzles.

He—It's impossible for any one to understand you women. You're all puzzles. She—Which proves that you men are all stubborn. He—Why? She—Simply won't give us up.

Important.

"What sort of a man is Jimson?"

"Oh, he's one of those fellows who send their washwoman a check for $2 and spell it 'cheque!'"

It takes a wise man to discover a wise man.—Diogenes.

COIN CURIOSITIES.

A Great Variety of Materials Has Been Used For Money.

Among the early Roman copper coins was one that weighed nine and one-half ounces and must have proved inconvenient small change for the Roman matron when she went shopping. China of all countries, ancient and modern, exhibits the greatest variety in the matter of coins. The earliest money on record, about 2000 B. C., consisted of shells and cowries. The cowry was used for small change, while tortoise shell and purple cypraea shells, the latter ranging in size from a few inches to a foot and a half in length, represented money of a higher value. A decrease in the supply of shells and increasing prosperity called for a more handy medium of exchange, and cash, the coin with a square hole in the center, came into existence and remains in use to this day.

Among the earlier Chinese coins was one of porcelain about three-quarters of an inch in diameter and a quarter of an inch thick, bearing the legend "Eternal Prosperity." A very curious knife money was at one time used in the state of Tsi. It was of copper shaped like a bill hook, about seven inches long and fitted at the end with a ring. During periods of metal scarcity in China iron, lead, tin, baked earth, grain, silk and shells have been used as a circulating medium.

In Japan an iron coinage, begun about 1636, has existed up to the present day. A curious coin made of a mixture of silver and copper was long in use in Japan. It varied in size from a small pea to a large bean. Lead coins were also used there for five centuries. Glass was employed as a substance for coin for many centuries in Egypt, while wooden money is mentioned in many of the Buddhistic writings.

Russian Superstitions.

In Russia much rain is considered a good omen. It is believed that the downfall washes away the evil spirits, who would otherwise be hovering in the air ready to work woe to the monarch about to place his crown on his head, the bride on the point of plighting her vows, the babe on its way to the font or whosoever might be the hero or heroine of the moment. Further, the superstitious moujik believes that each stream of water has its Rusalka, or good spirit, a lovely maiden with yellow hair floating down her back, who spreads plenty around, but should the water fail, so that her hair dries, she will die, and famine or other disaster ensue.

No Romance.

He dropped her hand with a sigh of defeat.

Mutely she looked into his eyes, as though seeking in his glance some message that would convey the word she sought.

With one slow look at her hand as it lay where he had let it fall, he shook his head slowly and said:

Universal Experience.

The distinguished citizen had returned from a trip abroad.

"Did the old world give you the glad hand?" they asked him.

"Oh, yes," he said, "or, rather, it gave me the expectant hand. It wasn't the glad hand until I had put the tip into it."

TIMELY TOPICS.

TO A SICK MAIDEN.

(The Khan.)

A snowy bed, a weary head
Upon a pillow pallid;
Now I will write for her delight
A pretty little ballad.
Cheer up, my dear, the snowy year
Is almost nearly ended;
On every hand, throughout our land,
The sunshine's growing splendid.

The birds will come, the bees will hum,
The frogs will nightly joke us,
And in the yard amid the sward
Will peep the clever crocus.
Sweet narcissus will come to kiss us,
Johnny-jump-up, too;
The tulip fair her head will rear
In every hue but blue.

The grass will grow, and to and fro,
The pendulum will swing,
Till, like a chime, in sweet spring-time,
The birds will start to sing.
The sun will greet thee, zephyrs meet
Breezes fan thy brow;
Little girlie, it's rather early;
Don't get up just now.

The buds will swell, then you'll be well;
The sun the ice will splinter,
Nor come again, and all your pain
Will flee away with winter.
And to your cheek, O maiden meek!
The flowers will say "Is this you?"
And all outside on land or tide,
Will do their best to kiss you.

The Chatham News says; There is evidence to show that the Province of Ontario is literally riddled with cases (of smallpox), yet the returns to the department convey an idea the very reverse, and outside papers and journals are accustomed to point to the lack of preventive diseases in Ontario, when, if they knew the real state of affairs, they would be astonished that such conditions are allowed to exist rather than that the country is so healthful.

Prohibition of pauper immigration.

RAILWAY NEEDS NEW RAILS.

Pere Marquette Leased Line Declared Unsafe For Traffic.

London, April 17.—At a meeting of the London & Port Stanley Railway board last night, a report was received from City Engineer Graydon, stating that the city's line, leased to the Pere Marquette, is unsafe for traffic.

The city solicitor was instructed to take immediate steps to have the road placed in proper condition under the term of the lease.

The engineer declared that new rails are necessary between London and St. Thomas, a distance of eighteen miles. Two entirely new bridges are required at once.

At present shippers are seriously handicapped in consequence of the refusal of the railway to carry the customary load over the line.

Good Investment For Canada.

London, April 17.—(C. A. P.)—Interviewed at Aberdeen, Gen. Booth told of the efforts of the army in colonizing Canada, and declared it to be a good investment for the Government to spend a few millions. He said it would not be very much for the Government to spend £10,000,000 per annum in making out of those crofters and agricultural laborers, artisans and unskilled laborers who were walking about the streets or living on the verge of starvation, a good and prosperous people who would fight for the flag if it were necessary.

Passing Fight in Philippines.

Manila, Philippines, April 17.—The headquarters of the Philippine constabulary of Maolos, Island of Luzon, were attacked several days ago by a band of Ladrones. Three native members of the constabulary and one Ladrone were killed. The affair creates no alarm here, where it is regarded as merely an incident of the effort to establish order in the island through the employment of native constabulary.

Similar conflicts between local outlaw bands are of more or less frequent occurrence.

To Clean Leather.

To clean leather mix together half a pound each of French chalk and fuller's earth, two ounces of powdered starch and one ounce of yellow ocher. Wet this with boiling water enough to make a thin paste and add one tablespoonful of sweet oil. When cold spread on the soiled leather, let it remain until dry and brush off. Wipe off every particle of the cleaning material and polish the leather with wax melted with turpentine, four ounces of wax and a gill of turpentine. If you wish to darken the leather, add a little oil to the wax preparation.

SUPERFICIAL SENTIMENT.

Superficial sentiment is without vital influence. The secret of power lies in the intensity of emotion, but especially so in poetry, art and literature. By no hocus pocus can artists and writers adequately depict what they do not feel. There should be a thermometer of temperament as well as for temperature. Feeling and emotion have their degrees. We are serene when our feelings are in the temperate zone, indignant when we pass eighty-three, furious when we reach blood heat, mad at boiling point. When feeling falls below 50 we become indifferent, and when it reaches freezing point we are heartless. An emotion that does not attain the seventy-sixth degree is hardly worth recording. At summer heat the rarest flowers begin to bloom and nature becomes poetic. While the temperate is the proper sphere for pure reason and scientific observation, it is rarely, if ever, proper for the highest achievement in any art. In the world of art imagination and feeling are not content with a serenity that touches the borders of indifference. The creative instinct is never effective unless at a certain pitch of enthusiasm. It is the sharp, clear, brilliant current of thought that electrifies the brain. But an idea is worthless unless we can find a form to hold it. In the best work idea, form and feeling appear to the beholder as one. An electric bolt seems a cold thing, yet a stroke of lightning will consume more at one flash than an ordinary fire would consume in an hour.—Francis Grierson in Critic.

GETTING THE NEWS.

In contrast to the workings of the newspaper of the day and of the rapid transmission of tidings without the aid of even a wire to guide the message is a document printed in the Berkshire Courier at the beginning of the Revolutionary war. But evidently people were as eager then as now to hear the news.

"For the Purpose of getting Speedy and Certain Intelligence from the Army at Boston. We the Subscribers hereby promise and agree to Ride from this town to Tyringham or Sheffield by Turns so as to bring Intelligence from thence each Day (the Sabbath excepted) and to Report the same at the House of Mr. Josiah Smith—And in Case no regular method is come into for bringing the News to Said Tyringham we promise to bear our proportionable part of the Expense in procuring Intelligence from Springfield twice in each Week—Witness our hands this 3rd Day of May 1775."

Following this agreement is a list of days, with the names of the citizens who were to be riders. Jacob Van Deusen, who agreed to be the first man to ride to Tyringham or Sheffield, was to go for it on Monday, May 8, and Mark Hopkins was to follow on Wednesday, the service from that time on alternating, except as to the Sabbath, which compelled a no news interval of two days in the week.

SPEED OF INSECTS.

A Common House Fly Travels a Mile In Thirty-three Seconds.

It is the popular belief that the flight of the birds is much swifter than that of the insects, but a number of naturalists who have been making a study of the matter think that such is not the case.

A common house fly, for example, is not very rapid in its flight, but its wings make 800 beats a second and send it through the air twenty-five feet, under ordinary circumstances, in that space of time. When the insect is alarmed, however, it has been found that it can increase its rate of speed by over 160 feet per second. If it could continue such rapid flight for a mile in a straight line, it would cover that distance in exactly thirty-three seconds.

It is not an uncommon thing when traveling by rail in the summer time to see a bee or wasp keeping up with the train and trying to get in at one of the windows. A swallow is considered one of the swiftest of flying birds, and it was formerly thought that no insect could escape it.

A naturalist, however, told of an exciting chase he saw between a swallow and a dragon fly, which is among the swiftest of insects. The insect flew with incredible speed and wheeled and dodged with such ease that the swallow, despite its utmost efforts, completely failed to overtake it.

[illegible]

Many cases of catarrh might be avoided and others greatly relieved if at the first sign of any trouble in the "early snuffles" period the nose and throat were thoroughly sprayed at least once a day with one part of listerine mixed with two parts of water. A throat specialist thinks this treatment as much a part of the good and cleanly toilet as brushing the teeth or hair or bathing.

CHAPTER I.

IT was in August of the year 188— that I turned the corner, as it were, into the strange history I am now to relate. The Welsh marches had been entirely unknown to me until at a point in an idle tour of the west of England I fell upon the little town of Raymond and brought up at 7 in the evening at the Swan hostelry that occupies a corner of the irregular triangle constituting the market place. The country in that part is full of swelling hills and valleys, soft and exhilarating of air and clothed with a great vesture of wood. The great Gwent, as the forest across the little river Hay is called in the countryside, rolls westward across the county, broken by tracts of fertile fields lying under grain and pasture, and descends upon the black hills of the mining district beyond. At Raymond, which stands upon the hither side of the river, we are yet in England proper and upon the margin of a more open country. The town itself is small and neat and wears its air of respectable antiquity very haughtily.

The inn, which was itself among the most venerable buildings in the small town, was comfortably served by a very brisk landlord of middle age. It had kept, so to speak, a precarious continuity with antiquity and in the main scheme had changed but little during the 300 years which had passed since its erection.

The hostelry was much too large for its present uses, but for all that wore no air of neglect in the inhabited chambers. My own rooms were marked by homely comfort, and I was waited upon like a prince of the blood. After a rude and wholesome country dinner I sought distraction in the taproom with my pipe and a heterogeneous company of townsfolk. The landlord was in some kind a president at this symposium, which consisted for the main part of a few of the smaller shopkeepers. There was Mr. Jones, for example, whose name I had noticed upon a shop front as I rode through the High street. This man fixed upon me early in the evening, and poured his confidences into my ear. He was a hay merchant, and he had no dearer ambition than to establish his business in Bristol. He found Raymond too mean for his aspiring temper, and the Mecca of his prayers was Bristol. I confess that I found him something of a bore, and was glad to exchange commonplaces with my other neighbor. The landlord himself kept his seat before the long table, smoking his long pipe with the peace of a man whose business is ended for the day, and now and then discharging a glance in my direction. He was, I discovered, a traveled man for those parts, and had the reputation of a smart fellow. Indeed, he compared well with the duller rustics who surrounded him. The placid air of the taproom was in some ways little more diverting than the solitude of my chamber, but that was soon to pass. Presently there came a great noise, followed by a heavy tramp of feet approaching from the outer bar, and in strutted a tall young fellow, with his hat upon one side, and a jaunty air of one who knows his own worth and despises his neighbors.

"Come in," says the innkeeper, very friendly, but with a certain air of constraint. "Plenty of room, Mr. Montgomery, sir, and a good evening to you."

"Oh, hang your ceremonies," says the newcomer, but with no touch of ill humor, "and give your best attention to my order, Wendover!" And, clapping his hat more firmly on his head, he rapped loudly upon the table.

He drank the glass of whisky which the barman served and then fell into a seat and stared without any truculence, but rather with a savage air of curiosity, at myself. He was of a ruddy color and quite young, and something in his bearing rather than in his dress marked him out from the rest of the company. But above all his great size and muscular appearance were noticeable.

"Come in," says the innkeeper.

"Who is that?" I asked as soon as Montgomery's eyes had wandered from me.

"He's no better than he should be," my neighbor answered. "For all his grand airs, he's but little better than a pauper. And that's where your blood comes to in the end."

The landlord, who was close by me, noting my interrogation with a busy eye, leaned forward and supplemented this disparaging information in a whisper.

"One of the best families in the Gwent, sir," he murmured, "though his estate is no more than a yeoman's nowadays. Times are against property on the border." And, having delivered this statement, he drew himself back and addressed a question to Montgomery, with the object, as I conceived, of exhibiting a local celebrity to his guest.

"Anything doing out your way, sir?" he inquired.

The youth turned his eyes upon him in a lackluster gaze and then, emptying his glass, hammered on the table noisily.

"Why the deuce don't that man of yours come?" he exclaimed. "Here have I ridden a ten miles for the sight of a human face and the taste of good Scotch, and— That's right." He gave his order and, observing Wendover again, gave vent to a heavy laugh. "What do you expect to happen in the Gwent?" he asked. "It's as dull as ditch water."

"I don't know so much about that," put in suddenly a man on the other side of the room whom, from his general air, I took to be a miller. "There's something as I heard of lately that was pretty exciting."

The spokesman drew all eyes upon him. The surface of our deep composure stirred and ruffled.

"What's that, Mr. Llewellyn?" asked the innkeeper.

Montgomery looked incredulous. "Pooh!" he said disdainfully.

The miller enjoyed the importance and seemed inclined to prolong it. He leisurely refilled his pipe.

"I heard something queer happened at the castle last week," he said at last, seeing that his news must out.

"What's that?" asked Montgomery.

"A girl that was in service there told my missus," went on the miller. "We have taken her in. She's left the castle."

"What did she say?" asked Wendover.

"I don't exactly recall the right of it," the miller confessed, with a hasty sense of shame. Montgomery looked at me and, seeing a smile in my eye, burst out laughing. "But I know it was about a burglary," said the miller promptly and with courage.

"I'd like to hear about the burglary," said some one.

"The man that keeps the inn there—the—what's that inn?" went on the miller.

"The Woodman," answered Montgomery.

"Aye, that's it. He was servant to the castle—the girl said—and he caught them."

"Caught whom?" said Montgomery impatiently.

"Well, he didn't catch them," admitted the miller, "but he frightened them off. They were after the plate that the old gentleman keeps, so the man told my girl."

"He's a queer old customer," interposed one of the company, seeing, as we all saw, that we should get no further interest out of the miller. Our attention broke up.

"You're right," nodded his vis-a-vis and replaced his pipe in his mouth.

"May I ask what castle you are speaking of?" I ventured to say, addressing the miller.

"Ivor castle, sir," said he civilly.

"It lays in the Gwent, sir, back of the hills," explained the landlord.

"As you talk of this burglary," said Montgomery, breaking in rather rudely, "I'd like first to know what they were going to find in the castle. Every one knows there's nothing to be got there."

Confronted with this uncivil infidel, the miller came to bay. "I don't know anything about it," he declared. "All I know is that this young woman—she says she was woke up by a noise going on, and then she went to sleep again, putting her head under the blankets, and that the manservant—I can't bring back his name—he told her next day that the thieves had tried to get in."

"Humph!" sneered Montgomery, who had plainly drunk too much to be an easy companion. "I don't call that much of a tale."

"If it's true, it's true," said the mild looking man.

"Who the devil asked your opinion?" retorted the lad brusquely. The mild man shifted in his chair, but mustered courage to ask if a man might not express his sentiments upon a point of general interest.

"That's true, anyway," assented Montgomery, with a foolish laugh.

It was clear that he had taken enough to be quarrelsome if the opportunity should rise, and unfortunately he chose to turn his bantering gaze upon my sour and peevish neighbor.

"Well, Mr. Jones," said he, "and how's hay?"

"How's crops, my young gentleman?" says Jones in his surly fashion.

"Crops," said Montgomery in a bawl, "crops is as they should be—seasonable. Here's to crops, gentleman, and also to hay," and he fell into his chair laughing abominably.

I could not say if this was part of an elaborate jest, conceived by a maudlin brain, or whether he had really been taken with an unreasonable fit of anger; but, whether of accident or of purpose, he filled up his glass forward between his fingers, and the dregs flew out and spattered the hay merchant's face.

"Gentlemen!" cried the landlord, in some alarm.

Montgomery stood, his red face somewhat vacant and grinning broadly, while his sallow faced victim, who had got upon his feet, gesticulated and stuttered under his nose with a show of passion that was not quite English, and at this moment, when it seemed as if some retaliation was to be expected and a fracas precipitated, an impulse took me, and I myself intervened.

"I think, sir," said I, addressing Montgomery, "you will admit that you have used this worthy gentleman very ill, and if I were you, sir, with your youth and spirit at my back, I would ask his pardon at once."

On that he stared at me for some seconds, and then, plumping the empty glass on the table, he broke into a sheepish laugh.

"All right," he said; "very sorry. I beg his pardon," and muttering some indistinct apologies he resumed his seat, sitting somewhat silent for a good time afterward.

But that was my introduction to the lad, an introduction none too favorable, of which he began at once to make use, for he crept close to me, moving from chair to chair, when a chance served him, and, being emboldened by the liquor he had drunk, struck up a lively conversation with me. In the end he was exceedingly merry, and was shaking me heartily by the hand, and invited me to drive out to his farm in the Gwent with a good deal of unusual warmth and vehemence, but I managed at last to make my escape, and that without giving him offense.

It was yet early, but the taproom had lost its humors for me, and I was for bed. In my room I spent an agreeable hour, idly considering my guidebooks and determining a date for my return to town. Upon the map I made out the site of Ivor castle, of which there had been talk, also of Montgomery's farm, which he had described to me. They both lay in the Gwent, as that great reach of forest in the marches is called.

CHAPTER II.

RAIN had fallen in the night, and a sweet savor of earth commingled with the summer air when I opened my door and looked forth upon the courtyard. The landlord gently deprecated the events of the previous evening, offering, as it might be to a fastidious guest, an apology for a headstrong young scapegrace.

"They're not like us of the eastern counties, sir," says he. "They're a bit Welsh hereabout. It's a contamination, to my way of thinking. But, there, all sorts of blood go to make a nation, and that's the truth."

But he volunteered a few additional particulars about Montgomery.

"Not a bad sort, sir, at heart, but he's running to seed here. He's taken a main fancy to you. That I could spy at a look. But it's a poor prospect for him, with land dwindling away to nothing, and Llanthony is a shabby house for a young gentleman as he should be."

Llanthony, it appears, was the name of Montgomery's paternal estate in the Gwent. And, in fact, it was for this Gwent that I was bound this morning. The prospect of those rolling hills attracted me with some force. I had an appetite for the wilderness of that back country, unscarred, as I learned, by the track of any railway. It was in a way virgin, at the least a property private from the world. As I struck across the Ray and directed my horse toward the long red slope of the ascent I looked back upon the little town and discovered it wrapped in mountain humors.

Llanthony, according to my host, lay at the back of the first hill, some four miles from Raymond, but as the estate was not my particular aim, and, if it had been, I had no one to guide me, I roamed indefinitely through byways over a circuit of the upper Gwent and finally drew up in the village of Llanellan about the hour of lunch. This village lay a mile or so from the more open districts of the Gwent and within the privy borders of the great forest itself. It would have been easy to throw the reins upon the horse's neck and to wander, lost in the abysms of that wilderness, for the villages were scattered at a great distance and the habitations of the settlers were at long intervals. It was somewhere about 5 in the afternoon, and as I rode down into a spacious valley a few miles from Llanellan, that the monotony of this desultory journey was broken by an event of some moment.

A pretty brook rippled through the wood and was crossed upon a rude bridge. As it chanced, my horse fell suddenly lame, and I had dismounted on the farther edge of the stream to examine his hoof when I heard sounds as of a struggle in the close brake to my left, and upon that a shrill shout as of one crying for assistance. Leaving the bay without further ado, for he was of mild mettle, I jumped into the copse and ran toward the noises, shouting as I went to encourage the wayfarer who was calling for aid.

The cries had already ceased, but a crackling and brushing in the undergrowth still directed me, and, bursting through the furze and brier, I came out very suddenly upon the verge of the little brook and almost fell over the form of a man who lay doubled upon the earth. As I stumbled and shifted to regain my balance I had a glimpse of a lithe, lean bodied fellow vanishing precipitately into the copse. But obviously it was to the victim that I must first turn my mind rather than to any fugitive assailant. He was a man, as I guessed, of some sixty years or more, very bald of the head and under the middle stature. Across his white and shining forehead was a streak of blood, which drew from me an exclamation as I helped him to his feet.

"It is not mine," said he, with a complacent smile. "I go better prepared than my years would suggest."

"No bones broken?" I inquired.

He shook his head, leaning upon my arm and breathing painfully.

"A bruise or two, and no wind in my belly—no more. I was a fool to have forgotten my pistol."

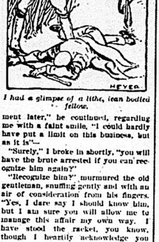
The words recalled me to the thought of the runaway, to whom I attributed this scurvy trick upon an old gentleman.

"What was the cause?" I asked. "Some highway thief?"

"Hardly that," he remarked thoughtfully, and pulling forth an ancient snuffbox with deliberation. "No, I could scarcely describe him as that."

I made a motion to withdraw, recollecting hastily that it was my duty to ascertain some tidings of the ruffian, but the old gentleman, observing my intention, put his hand upon my shoulder.

"I would not worry," said he suavely. "It is of small consequence as it happens. Now, had you come up a moment later," he continued, regarding me with a faint smile, "I could hardly have put a limit on this business, but as it is"—



I had a glimpse of a lithe, lean bodied fellow.

"Surely," I broke in shortly, "you will have the brute arrested if you can recognize him again?"

"Recognize him?" murmured the old gentleman, snuffing gently and with an air of consideration from his fingers. "Yes, I dare say I should know him, but I am sure you will allow me to manage this affair my own way. I have stood the racket, you know, though I heartily acknowledge you have acquired a certain claim to attention. It is very good of you," he said politely, and then, "Yes, I think I should know him again—if we met—which is of course extremely improbable," he concluded, with a twinkle in his eyes.

Now, the self possession of this old fellow, with his air of imperturbable courage, puzzled me hugely and in a manner was very disconcerting. He had taken the outrage, which had evidently been committed upon his person, with such mildness, even with amiability. I could scarce credit my senses to see him discoursing there, with his snuff between his fingers, so pleasantly and broadly, of the event. He seemed quite unruffled, though his body still panted with the efforts of his struggle.

"Is your watch safe? I suppose it was robbery?" I said, feeling somehow rather mean and cast down by the unexpected situation.

"Thank you, quite safe," he replied, without troubling to ascertain. "Yes, quite safe. Certainly I must suppose it to have been robbery—yes, robbery, no doubt."

His air was so abstracted that I took leave to doubt his sanity; but, after all, it was no business of mine if he was foolishly disposed to mercy, and one needs but little imagination to conceive of a dozen deep reasons for an assault save the plain motive of theft. He turned to me presently as I was upon the point of withdrawing.

"I am at a loss to know," said he, laboring over his words and speaking very deliberately, "what devil of folly pursues men that they will hazard all on a piece of carelessness, a wanton whim or just mere indifference or idleness. I cannot say"— He paused as we emerged upon the road. "This must be your horse, then, a good, serviceable animal, that would have warmed my heart thirty years since. I cannot say," he resumed, clutching gently at my arm, "that my adventure today was due to any other cause than that of mere carelessness." He paused again, surveying my horse with apparent interest. "In the first place, I should not have been so far from home; secondly, I should not have been without my revolver; thirdly, I should have used my stick harder when I got home, a concurrence of negligences which made my fate almost a certainty but for your arrival," he added as a polite afterthought, squeezing my arm.

I confess that I was utterly at a loss what to make of him and was inclined to interpret him for a mild lunatic, but we proceeded along the roadway, I with the bridle of my horse over my arm. He still clung to me, discoursing quietly in a melodious voice upon his views of life and the philosophy we should derive from it, while I listened, for the most part, in silence. But after walking for a quarter of an hour, the latter part of which time was spent in a somewhat laborious ascent, we came out upon the summit of a little hill clad in the splendid livery of summer and surmounted by what seemed in the distance to be the ruins of a castle. Here the old gentleman came to a halt, ceasing simultaneously of his chatter, and looked toward the building.

"I am fully conscious, Mr. —; I don't think I caught your name, Mr."—

"Greatorex," I told him.

"Thank you," said he. "I am fully conscious, Mr. Greatorex, that I am under a deep obligation to you for your great service this afternoon. Greatorex! There are, if I remember aright, Greatorexes in Hampshire."

I explained that we were cadets of that family. He bowed his acknowledgments of my explanation and proceeded.

"Hospitality tells me that I can do no less than offer you the opportunity of refreshment for yourself or"—his eyes dwelt abstractedly upon my horse—"for your animal. But I am reluctant to press the offer upon you, seeing that it is very probable you have ridden far"—he was observing poor Jupiter's flanks—"and are still far from your destination."

His eyes interrogated me, but with no rude curiosity, rather as if they offered a remark which I might consider a question or not, as I chose. I answered frankly:

"I am staying at the Swan, in Raymond, and to say truly"—I laughed—"I am not quite sure how far I am from the town or in what direction it lies."

"In that case," he said urbanely, but with a sense of satisfaction, as I imagined, "my reluctance vanishes. You are some seven miles from Raymond, and my house is here."

Without more ado we resumed our walk and, entering an avenue of limes, came next upon an iron gateway set in a high brick wall. It was of very ancient workmanship, but as nothing to the house itself, which came directly into full view as soon as we had passed the entrance. It lay some 300 yards back, approached through a patch of park grown with grass and interspersed with noble trees. My first impression had not been wrong. It was nothing less than the ruins of a small castle, one of those fortalices reared by the border barons against the inroads of Welsh barbarians in the Plantagenet times. As we drew near my gaze devoured the building and took in many points of interest. It was quite small, but, saving for one wing, in perfect integrity. From the huge masonry of the drum towers down to the moat and portcullis all was as it had been in the days maybe of Hugh Lupus. The wing of the quadrangle to our left was dismantled and lay strewn with huge stones in precarious ruin. A hundred yards or so upon the other side, however, gleamed the red roof and heavy thatch of farm buildings, and a round stack or two in the neighborhood proved that the fortress kept its ancient uses no longer.

"You will see that I am able to resist a siege," said my host, with a whimsical smile, as we crossed the drawbridge, adding, with what seemed to me a comical irony and looking down at the bridge, "I fear, though, we should find some trouble with the hinges."

We passed through the arch of masonry and into the courtyard within, where the old gentleman speedily summoned a man and gave him charge of my horse. And here again I noticed that further appearances testified to the use of the castle as a farm. From a scrutiny of this pleasant aspect I was aroused by my host, who, pausing as he pushed open a huge oaken door, turned to me suddenly.

"I am extremely remiss, Mr. Greatorex," he exclaimed with a gesture of apology. "You have not yet the style of your grateful host. My name is Kesteven, and this is generally known as Ivor castle."

All this was conceived in the most formal and eccentric temper, and doubtless had it not been for the strange interest of his habit and conduct I might not have consented so meekly to be his guest, for it was now time for my homeward journey. However, I must, it appeared, sit and drink with him a glass of sherry in his library, a large and ancient room with a very fine display of oaken shelves and paneling.

A little later I excused myself, and rose for departure. For a minute or two he appeared to have fallen into abstraction, and then, glancing at me quickly, he regarded me with a steadfast, inquiring gaze.

"Mr. Greatorex," said he, "you are a young man. I begin to think that we should find much in common. You will permit the question? Are you married?"

I assured him that I was not. He nodded, as if this were satisfactory news. "Nor am I," he answered, "but very probably for another reason. I cannot expect you to take part in my philosophy, but I am reminded that you have seen nothing of a house which is of some historical interest, and which I should esteem myself happy to show you. Is it necessary that you should return to your Swan this evening?"

The invitation in the query took me aback, for, eccentric as my host undoubtedly was, I had not anticipated this proffer of hospitality. Yet there was certainly no pressing reason for my return, and here, at least, I should have more congenial company than in my miscellaneous taproom. I replied something to the effect of this thought.

"Good!" said he, brightening a little. "You are kind to cheer a solitary. I can even promise you a bottle of champagne if you are young enough. If you will allow me I will call my housekeeper." He rose and went to the bell, but, pausing with his hand upon the rope, looked at me gravely.

"I should be doing you wrong, Mr. Greatorex," he said, "if I were not to let you know that by consenting to be my guest tonight you are conferring upon me a great favor. You place me under a particular obligation."

I told him, laughing, that the obligation was mine.

"No," said he. "I fear that my meaning is not plain. Let me say this—I have a particular reason for wishing your companionship tonight."

I bowed politely and offered some conventional reply, though this deep air of mystery puzzled me.

"You are a strong man, Mr. Greatorex," he continued, surveying me seriously. "I must tell you that I have no one sleeping in the house save my housekeeper and a maid. The man you saw, who took your horse, sleeps in a cottage at Llanellan." He paused. "I was unfortunate enough to lose my valet a month ago and so far have been unable to fill his place."

I began to understand. He was in some fear of his lonely condition. Possibly he dreaded an attack by his late assailant. Suddenly, too, ran into my memory the scene in the taproom on the previous night, the miller and his long pipe and his story. There was that same tale that should have been exciting about a burglary. And here I was in Ivor castle.

"If you are thinking of that scoundrel!"— I began. "Surely the police"—

He interrupted me with a smile. "The police, Mr. Greatorex, are seven miles from Ivor castle. But pray do not misunderstand me. I shall be infinitely obliged by your company. It's long since I had an intelligent conversation. But I would not detain you if you had any scruples about staying."

I laughed. "Not I!" said I. "I will stay and gladly." And in truth I meant it, for the adventure interested me not a little. Was it burglars?

It was in the dining room that we spent the evening. This was a long, low roofed chamber occupying the ground floor and opening with windows upon the cobble courtyard on the one side and the meadows of the park on the other. It was a great chamber to contain but two people, but somehow the black oak of the walls and the general air of the upholstery prohibited the thought of discomfort. These walls were not vacant, nor this space, but tenanted, if one considered duly, by a concourse of illustrious faces and high stepping ghosts. Upon this point, as it happened, I was not long left in curiosity, for Mr. Kesteven was in the mood to confide the history of the castle to me. He was a queer creature, partaking, as it seemed to me, of the most diverse and incongruous emotions. Constantly he would set me wondering upon his statements, striving to pick some order in their apparent confusion. One moment quite a sounding pride rang in his pompous annunciation of the titles of some great noble, while the next I was driven to suppose by very clear signs that he displayed nothing but a pitiful contempt toward the whole prejudice of race and family. The man struck me as wearing a mask, and that a mask of such severity and primness as to offer very few secrets to his company. And even at his moments of most spacious frankness I was never able to determine the depth of its genuineness.

He fetched me out some wines, giving me a generous choice, but himself drinking but sparingly.

"No, thank you; I have never smoked," said he in reply to my offer of a cigar. "Will you not smoke yourself, Mr. Greatorex? And pray try that port. I understand it to be of a particular year." He insisted gently upon helping me from the decanter and then dropped softly into his chair.

Suddenly he rose and going to a window threw it open and leaned forth. I heard somewhere from the deep recesses of the old house a clock striking the hour of 1. Mr. Kesteven closed the casement and turned to me.

"I fear, Mr. Greatorex," he said, with a smile, "that I have fetched you here under false pretenses, but at least you have saved an old man from his own company, which is, after all, somewhat dull fellowship."

He threw open the window and leaned forth.

"No," said I, echoing his smile. "I have been myself preserved from the hard chairs of a very crowded taproom and the quarrelsome attentions of half drunken farmers."

"Come, come," said he genially, "you must not give the Swan a villainous reputation."

"Oh, it was not I," I answered lightly, keeping up the triviality, "but a young gentleman of the Gwent."

Mr. Kesteven ceased to smile. "May I ask his name?" he asked.

"Montgomery, I believe, but I understand we are sworn friends now, so that no harm is done."

"Montgomery!" he repeated slowly. "Yes, I have heard the name—a very young and thoughtless man," and he regarded me with a certain reflectiveness.

But it was not of Montgomery I thought when I went to bed, but of the window and the silence of the night, with the moonlight striking on Kesteven's head. Why had he thrown open the casement and discharged me, so to say, from my obligation as policeman? For that was how I interpreted his words.

CHAPTER III.

BEFORE breakfast I had the opportunity to make a narrower inspection of the castle as it appeared from without. The morning was fine, the air of those hills delicate and stimulating, and the sunlight struck the woods and valleys with a golden glory. Smoking a cigarette, I strolled round the edifice, surveying with admiring eyes the details of the design. The entrance by the portcullis lay between two solid drum towers, very formidable to look on. The battlements, which were extremely plain and by no means perfect, the machicolations being worn into great chasms here and there, stood two stories away from the base of the castle, and three if the bottom of the moat be counted. Upon the one side of the irregular square which the buildings made the stonework, as I have said, had fallen into disrepair, and, indeed, no rooms were habitable here. The detritus of centuries had flowed over into the courtyard, and the stones were heaped in a solid accumulation and overgrown with masses of huge Irish ivy. The southern face of the castle was, so to speak, but a hill of rock. It was at the junction of the southern and western walls that the keep stood, itself raised some twenty feet above the level of the battlements and the termination of the habitable portion of the fortress. The moat, which was some ten feet deep, was grown upon with grass, and its sides were covered with blackberry and furze and divers wild creepers. Completing my circuit of the castle, I struck upon a stream which ran in a full body through the park and, reaching the verge of the woodland, leaped suddenly into a torrent and scattered into a waterfall down the steep face of the hill. While I was wandering upon the margin, watching the tide and swirl of the tiny eddies with lazy satisfaction, I encountered my host, who greeted me courteously.

"You are admiring my little brook," he said. "Yes, it is pretty, but prettier in the copses below, where I think you must have observed it yesterday. Here it runs very gravely; below it is a noisy vagabond. You see it has uses here."

"You draw your water here?" I asked, fascinated with the primitive idea.

"Not unusually," he replied, "but there is a well within the castle, doubtless from the same springs. Yet the brook rendered a more important service in my predecessors' times."

I looked at him inquiringly. He smiled.

"Let me see," he resumed, "if I can give you ocular proof. It should be here." He stopped and, dipping his stick into the water, poked among the pebbles of the stream. "Ah, here it is! I think I have it!" He looked toward the castle, above the battlements of which now flamed the morning sun. They rose some fifty yards away. "There is a connection with the moat by means of a conduit," explained Mr. Kesteven.

I uttered an exclamation of delight and vowed that I must explore farther. Assenting graciously, he led the way toward the house and, letting himself gently down the sloping bank, walked, peering about him, along the bottom of the moat. "You will find it overgrown, no doubt," he said. "But your eyes are better than mine. It is ten years since I looked for it."

I searched amid the trailing creepers and presently discovered the mouth of the conduit. It was of thick stone and mortar and from its appearance must have been of very ancient construction. But the opening was choked with earth and grass and probably had been so for centuries. I said as much to Mr. Kesteven.

"No," he returned, "I think not. I believe my predecessor in the tenancy of the castle had it opened some fifty years ago, and flooded the moat for his own amusement. I understand that the experiment was quite successful and entertained a party of guests, one of whom," he added dryly, "fell into the water and was only rescued with some difficulty. But you shall make better acquaintance with our neighborhood after breakfast. I assure you, Mr. Greatorex, it is worth your study, and this castle of mine is by no means singular."

I was quite at his disposal for a stroll later in the morning and upon that occasion got my first knowledge of the topography of the Gwent, a knowledge which, as you shall hear, I was glad enough to profit by at a little later period. And here I may set forth in a few words the character of that country which was destined to be so strangely connected with my fortunes. The castle stood upon a little eminence toward the higher parts of the hills and looked down toward the east upon a long, broad valley as upon its special domain. This valley, which was some three miles long and little more than a mile across, was inclosed by undulating hills and enveloped in a dense growth of forest. Two roads ran from the castle toward the east downward, one upon either side of the ravine. One of them—not that by which I had mounted on the previous afternoon—we took upon this walk together.

We had gone about a mile or rather less upon this road when we came upon the first signs of life. The country was but sparsely peopled, but here, at any rate, was some remote and faithful settler. The inn—for such it was—bore the name of the Woodman and was, as I conceived, of the sixteenth century at least. It was small, but the outbuildings attaching to it rambled away into the forest behind. The sign swung, creaking, on a green patch of grass before the door. As we drew near, a man lounging in front of the inn suddenly drew his pipe from his mouth and touched his hat.

"Good morning, Hood," said my companion quietly, pausing and leaning on his stick. "These are very pleasant days for us all."

"They are, sir," responded the man.

FARM AND FIRESIDE

Useful Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

POULTRY DEPARTMENT.

Farm Turkey Raising.

Since prices paid for turkeys were so high last fall, and the chances good that they will continue so, it is time for the farmer to look around and study the possibilities of his farm with a view to raising a few of these magnificent birds in order to provide a little income and a variety for the table. The man with an acre or two of fenced grass land is admirably fitted out.

is needed, as a cock and two or three hens will be enough to start in with, these being kept several years. Then, if failure results, learning will not be too costly, and, furthermore, as forty or more young should be raised from these, one will have all he can attend to with other duties. And let it be understood right here that while mature turkeys are the most hardy fowls, young turkey chicks are the most tender, needing protection and care. The old turkeys if left to themselves may raise a few if fortunate enough to escape foxes, crows and poor climatic conditions, but to be sure of success the grower must co-operate with his birds.

In Buying Stock

get unrelated two-year-old birds from reliable yards where disease does not exist, and also introduce new blood every year or two by buying a new cock. Of the various breeds the Bronze is the favorite, because of its large size, tameness, beauty and hardiness.

of turkey raising are plenty of range, liberty, dry soils, green food, pure water and cool, clean houses. If only a few are to be kept they may run with other fowls, be fed the same food and receive the same care. They may be allowed to roost outdoors all the year round, but it is better to shut them up in the barn nights, providing perches of 3-inch limbs for them. Twice a day in winter and once in summer is often enough to feed them, giving a warm, soft mash on winter mornings of two parts middlings, one part corn meal and vegetable matter, such as one part onion tops, two parts mashed potatoes, or two parts chopped sweet apples, with a pinch of pepper once in a while. Feed plenty of old corn, wheat or buckwheat at night. Throw them a cabbage, a few carrots or a little chopped clover now and then until grass comes. Feed regularly. Have plenty of pure water, grit, and a dust bath of loam or ashes, always accessible.

The turkeys begin laying about the first of April, and must be watched, as they steal their nests. Place barrels, boxes and other receptacles in sheltered places for them to lay in. As fast as the eggs are laid collect them, leaving a nest-egg, however. Pack in sawdust and keep in a cool place until a setting is completed. This may be hatched under a large hen and the turkey kept laying. If put under the turkey visit her but once a day, but be sure to have food and water handy at all times. Hens can only cover eight or nine eggs, but turkeys may have sixteen to twenty. The eggs hatch in 30 days. Leave them alone for 24 hours when they can have their first meal. This consists of a hard-boiled egg chopped fine. From now on feed regularly, confining the chicks diet to egg for the first week, feeding it six times a day. Give the old hen her regular food, and provide water for them all. The hen and brood must be kept in pens until the chicks are five weeks old. Then they may be allowed to roam for a few hours on sunny days.

The Second Week

add a little chopped dandelion or lettuce, and vary the egg with stale bread or cracker crumbs dipped in milk and then squeezed dry. Season twice a week with pepper.

The third week further variations may be made by feeding scalded rolled oats, oatmeal, johnny cake of boiled corn meal, sour milk, a little soda and salt, milk curd — made by placing sour milk on the stove and drawing off the whey, using the residue — and also green food, as grass, weeds or clover.

After the third week feed four times a day, the food to be a continuation of that of the preceding weeks, varied and supplemented with a little cracked wheat, and meat scraps if insects are not abundant. Young turkeys at this stage want bone and muscle producers and not fatty foods.

After the Fourth Week

they may run, when three feeds will be sufficient. The grain ration may be gradually increased, feeding not corn, but buckwheat, wheat, and similar grains.

During the whole period guard against the chicks getting wet or chilled, avoid wet, cold, raw foods, and be economical with the grain. When three months old the chicks "throw the red," and this is a critical period. Keep them warm and feed plenty of milk, meat scraps, and ground bone.

Easy Money.

Turkeys are not hard to raise if given reasonable care and attention, and by fall one will have a nice flock ready for market. Nothing gives a tone and dignity to the place as a flock of these gaudy birds, in addition to their commercial value. The housewife with a desire to make a little pocket money, and the farmer with a liking for new ventures, will both find ample opportunities in these noble birds.

A Grand Medicine for the Kidneys.

"I have been a sufferer with Kidney Trouble for years. Have tried medicines and doctors' prescriptions, but could get no permanent relief, my case being pronounced chronic. As it is generally known that the properties of gin without the alcohol is good for the kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills, but must admit with very little faith. From the very first pill I got relief, and have since taken nearly four boxes and am COMPLETELY CURED, but am going to continue them a while longer. No dull, sickening pains in the back—no low spirits—am increasing in weight—and more vim and vigor than I have had for years—is what Gin Pills have done for me.

"H. P. HERBERT, Ottawa."

Be well and strong. Be free of pain. Be able to enjoy all the good things of life, with all your old-time vigor and enthusiasm. Gin Pills will cure those sick kidneys. Start now—to-day—and see how much better you feel to-morrow. 50c box—6 boxes for $2.50—and your money back if they don't cure.

Special offer: If you send us your name and address and tell us the name of the paper in which you read this we will send you a trial box absolutely free and post prepaid. Write today and get the medicine that cures.

THE HORSE.

Castration.

Apart from the many influences that have led to the deterioration of stud horses is the pernicious habit of many breeders in castrating their colts too early. Operating on colts when young facilities their management, but, unfortunately, does so at the expense of their development. Castration is practiced to render the male horse more serviceable for certain purposes, by doing away with undesirable habits and vices of the stallion, while the good characters of the entire animal are retained. The best time, therefore, to castrate a horse is between one and two years of age, when the structural characteristics of the sex are evident. Horses castrated under one year old are unsexed before their character has developed, and grow into loosely made animals with flat sides, narrow chests, and long, effeminate-looking heads. They often lack stoutness, courage and endurance, because these qualities have not had time to become properly developed. Several breeders who used to castrate their horses under 12 months old, acting on advice, now allow their colts to run entire until they are between fifteen and eighteen months old, and report that there is a decided improvement in the young stock. With improved castrating instruments, the risk of operating on the older animals is no greater than in castrating nine months old colts by means of the obsolete smearing iron, while the operation is more quickly performed, with less pain to the subject.

GRANGE MATTERS.

The Kitchen Garden.

If the average gardener of to-day would make a combination of the care, patience and labor which his grandfather put upon the kitchen garden, with the splendid variety of fruits and vegetables which science and plant-breeding have made available to-day, we would have more of wholesome table food the year round and less of poor canned stuff.

The farm gardens, "market gardens" and "truck gardens" of to-day are the producers of a multitude of "miscellaneous vegetables" almost unknown fifty years ago. In the census of 1890 the large increase in garden products was recognized, and a systematic count of their bulk and value was made. It is possible, therefore, to make a ten-year comparison of the increase of such products, and this records the remarkable increases from 100 per cent. to 400 per cent. in the five several divisions of the country. The North Atlantic States had a well-developed industry in "garden products" before 1890, which accounts for the relatively low increase. However, 190 per cent. in ten years, while the population increased only a trifle over 20 per cent., is amazing.

Could our great-granddaddies, who thought tomatoes poisonous, and our great-grandmothers, who grew them as ornamental plants in window pots under the attractive name of "love-apples," come back and realize that over thirty million bushels of the pretty poisonous vegetables, according to a statement in Harper's Weekly, are eaten as a common and healthful food, they would surely realize that time works wonderful changes. Another interesting statement is that the lettuce crop of the South has so increased that in the spring of this year North Carolina sent twenty carloads of that vegetable North in a single day.

Thirty-five years ago celery was a rarity, even on hotel tables, and was used by few families even of wealth. To-day it is a common edible, occupying thousands of acres. One firm is engaged in shipping celery by the carload the whole year round. Twenty-two million bunches of radishes and twelve million bunches of asparagus are figures given for the crops of these vegetables.—American Cultivator.

HAPPY RESULTS OBTAINED.

By the Use of the New Scalp Antiseptic.

It wouldn't take long to number the hairs in the heads of some people, the reason being they haven't many to number. In most instances, however, the fault is their own. A germ at the root soon plays havoc with the most luxuriant growth and causes it to fade and fall out. A remedy for this has recently been discovered, called Newbro's Herpicide, that acts by destroying the germ that does the damage, besides removing all impurities from the scalp. In addition it permits new life and vigor to enter the scalp, and happy results are sure to be obtained from its use. Try it. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

WOMEN AND MUSHROOMS.

To most people the question of mushroom culture brings up visions of dark, damp cellars and vague stories of enterprising women who have made "loads of money" at the business. The dark, damp cellar is not necessarily a factor in the process of growing mushrooms, popular ideas to the contrary notwithstanding and although the vague stories of the enterprising women are oftentimes exaggerated, the fact remains that the culture of mushrooms is a most interesting and profitable way of earning money at home for women who have energy and a certain amount of time to devote to it.

They can be grown at all seasons and in almost all places. In raising mushrooms the point to be considered is not "can they be grown?" but "can they be disposed of?" For the woman, therefore, who lives sufficiently near a large city for their transportation to be a simple matter, the mushrooms may be made to bring in a most satisfactory little sum of additional money.

To the uninitiated the process of starting a mushroom bed is an unknown proposition. Mushrooms are not grown from planted seeds, nor from bulbs, but from spawn, and the chances are that the uninitiated person would not know mushroom spawn if she were to see it.

It is prepared in most unprepossessing looking slabs of earth, apparently, each slab about one inch thick, five inches wide and seven inches long, and is sold at so much per pound.

The spawn consists of the small, whitish cords that are attached to the root of the mushroom and extend outward into the soil—this is the vegetative portion of the mushroom, the part that grows and spreads and that absorbs all of the organic matter.

In preparing the spawn for sale the little whitish cords are carefully removed from the mushroom and thoroughly worked into a mixture of manure; then this is cut into slabs and dried in the sun, when they are ready for use. This preparation of spawn is one of the most important features of the work of the large seed-distributing houses and a large tract of land is kept covered in warm, dry weather with the uninteresting looking slabs, that are carefully turned and watched, in order that they may be dried in just the proper way.

Mushroom beds may be made in a warm, dry cellar, or in any building where the frost does not penetrate, or in the open air during the summer and fall months. The preparation of the beds requires time and a certain amount of work, but it is work that brings most satisfactory results, and that is interesting while it lasts. The beds should be about three feet wide, ten feet long and two feet deep, and beaten down firmly in the process of building. After the bed has been made for about a week the spawn may be put into it. The slabs are broken into small pieces about two inches square, and these small pieces are placed in the bed about six inches apart, then the bed is covered with two inches of rich, loamy soil and packed down firmly, with a foot of dry straw or hay placed on top of all. In about six weeks, if everything goes on well, the mushrooms will begin to appear.

For the woman who does not care to go into the business of mushroom raising, but is interested in it as an experiment, small beds may be made in pots or boxes, or anything capable of keeping the materials together, and placed in a cellar or even a closet. Of course, if one is so fortunate as to have access to a greenhouse, the raising of mushrooms may be made a more simple proposition. In case the beds are made out of doors they should be carefully protected from the rain by shutters or sashes.

They should not be watered if possible, but the covering should be kept damp. If watering is absolutely necessary, it should be done with lukewarm water, applied very gradually, through a fine hose; otherwise the water will percolate through the mould. This will cause the spawn beneath it to perish and probably destroy any succeeding crops, as spawn will never grow where other spawn has perished.

There is always a steady demand for mushrooms in the hotels and restaurants, so that if once successfully started the question of their culture should be an easy one, and there is additional advantage in the fact that they are never "out of season."

The great curative powers of this remarkable remedy is attracting much attention, and everywhere it has been introduced it is winning its way among the people. It is a powerful, penetrating oil, which we believe has a larger percentage of cures of rheumatism to its credit than any other remedy ever offered for this dread disease.

TUCK'S BONE OIL

It acts directly on the bone—the lodging place of rheumatism—dispels the poisonous acid from the joints to be carried out of the system in the natural way and by its splendid work has proved that the surest and quickest method of getting relief from the torturing pains of rheumatism, as well as the common sense way, is by a direct attack on the affected part. For the small ills of life it is invaluable.

Mrs. W. H. Thomas, of Lombardy, writes as follows: I was subject to stiff neck. Suffered for years and have been as long as two weeks at a time not able to turn my head without turning my whole body. I doctored and got relief, only to have the trouble return again. In August last I had a severe attack and I tried Tuck's Rheumatic Bone Oil, having been reading in the papers about how good it was for rheumatism, &c. Three applications completely cured me and I have had no return of the trouble since. I recommend Tuck's Bone Oil to everyone.

MRS. W. H. THOMAS,
Lombardy, Ont.

For rheumatism, lame back, neuralgia, sprains, coughs, colds, quinsy or bronchitis, in short for any and all kinds of inflammation there is nothing to equal Tuck's Bone Oil. A bottle should be on the shelf in every home. For sale by all medicine dealers at 50c a bottle or sent prepaid by The Tuck Bone Oil Co., Limited, Smith's Falls, Ont.

DOMESTIC HINTS.

Rice with Cabbage.

Boil separately well washed Carolina rice and a small spring cabbage. Drain the cabbage and cut into tiny pieces. Mix with it the drained rice, and add an ounce of butter, salt and black pepper. A little cream and a tablespoonful of Parmesan cheese may also be added, and will be liked. Stir over the fire until quite hot. Serve with croutons of fried bread.

Honey Cake.

Soften a cup of butter and mix with it two cupfuls of strained honey, a tablespoonful of ginger, half a grated nutmeg, a little of the yellow rind of lemon grated and a small quantity of flour. Dissolve a heaping teaspoonful of soda in a cup of water and strain into the mixture, then add more sifted flour until stiff enough to roll out. Bake in a sheet like gingerbread, and eat cold or hot.

Orange Fritters.

Mix one-half pound flour and one-half pint milk into a stiff batter, add two ounces melted butter, two eggs well beaten and a very little salt. Peel two oranges, divide into sections without cracking the skin, have ready a pan of thoroughly boiling fat, put in a tablespoonful of batter with one piece of orange in the centre, fry a nice golden brown, drain on kitchen paper, then dish on lace paper, sprinkling powdered sugar on the top. They should be cooked and sent to table as quickly as possible.

Cream of Cheese Soup.

Scald one quart of milk with a teaspoonful of grated onions, a blade of mace, and a piece of a red pepper about as large as a knife blade. Make a white sauce with two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and a cupful of cold milk, and add it to the hot milk in a double boiler. When it cooks add a cupful of grated cheese. Let this melt, and add a little salt. Beat two eggs and strain the soup over the eggs, stirring all the time. Whip until light and serve.

Potato Salad.

Clean six medium sized potatoes and boil them in their jackets until not quite done. They must not be raw and hard, but cooked just enough not to be mealy. Peel them and divide lengthwise into quarters, then slice as thin as possible into a bread bowl. To each layer of potatoes add a sprinkling of fine shredded onion and celery, using one onion and one cup of celery in all. Shake on salt and pepper the same as if you were seasoning it at table. Use also a slight amount of cayenne or nepaul pepper and fine chopped parsley. Pour one tablespoonful of oil and a scant one of vinegar over each layer of potatoes. When all are sliced toss it up carefully with two forks and then set away in a cool place till serving time.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

Damp salt will remove tea stains from crockery.

To render stained water bottles beautifully clean and bright put in salt and pour on vinegar; stand a few hours, then shake.

An authority on laundering linen writes thus: "Use pure soap, fresh clean water and lots of it, plenty of air and sunshine, and carefully avoid starch. You should be careful to rinse the pieces thoroughly in good, clean water, and then give them plenty of light and air. They should be ironed damp to get the fine sheen so characteristic of well laundered linen. If linen is ironed dry, or nearly so, it gets fuzzy.

There is a new wrinkle, says the Brooklyn Eagle. It is located at the corners of the eyes, and it is a wrinkle which indicates deep thought. The wrinkle, or the group of wrinkles—when first seen may seem indicative of old age. But actually the lines are formed by study, by reading, by thought and by constant and repeated efforts of mentality. The age at which you may expect these wrinkles naturally is forty. But, if they appear under that, then it is a mark of too much brain work.

Equal parts of turpentine, linseed oil and vinegar make a splendid polish for furniture, etc.

The brushes should always be washed in cold water in which there is a little ammonia and a few drops of carbolic acid added to the water by way of a mild disinfectant.

If pains in the head are brought on by a nervous attack they will often be relieved by binding a silk handkerchief tightly about the forehead.

A dustpan with a long, perpendicular handle will save many a twinge in the muscles of the back.

The busy housekeeper is often troubled with tired feet. She will find relief if she keeps them on a cushion while she is preparing vegetables or washing dishes. Pads or cushions suitable for such purposes can be made of several thicknesses of old cloth, bagging, carpet, lining or horse blankets stitched together and covered with old carpet, the edges turned in and over-handed. The whole may then be tacked like a comfortable. When this cushion is not needed hang it up with two loops, one at each end, to keep the edges from curling.

A SILLY TOY.

The Way the Toothbrush Was at First Regarded.

Colonial diaries and letters make it plain that our unfortunate ancestors suffered much from jumping toothaches, swelled faces and the early loss or forcible extraction of teeth which at a later period might have been saved to render their owners many years of further service. No wonder, since the care of the teeth was little understood, and that little often but negligently practiced.

Toothpicks were known; the toothbrush was not, although rough substitutes were employed, made of flattened sticks, split and pounded at one end to a stiff, fibrous fringe. Toothbrushes when first introduced were regarded as by no means important accessories to the toilet, but rather as minor luxuries and suitable for women only.

The diary of a London merchant trading to the colonies has this entry:

"Bought a Toothbrush for my wife, which, used together with salte water, very strong, and a wasshe of Herbs, she is told will keep her Teethe from falling out or getting hollowe. The salte and Herbes may well prove strengthening to her Gummes wch. are tender, but for the brush it seemes but a silly Toy, hardly like to ware the worth of its price and scarce cleanley save when new. But she must have it, being a new thing late from France."

In the famous collection of the letters of the Verney family, as well, the toothbrush is referred to as "an elegant trifle, now used by the ladies of Paris."

But when Sally Aznts a colonial belle, wrote of it to her sister she had, like the London merchant's wife, good hopes of its proving of more than trifling value. Her seafaring father had just brought her one, along with other gifts.

"Besides these, and ye smalle combe, he brt. me a new mouth-brush made of eyvory," she wrote, "the back parte inlayed very pretty with silver: and ye brissles long and stiffe and sett very firme: wch he is assured will help me of my Tooth Akes: wch. you will guess deer Judy I do pray it may."—Youth's Companion.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

Melted butter will not make a good cake.

Veal should be white, dry and close grained.

The colder eggs are the quicker they will froth.

To make good pastry the ingredients must be ice cold.

Good macaroni is of a yellowish tint, does not break readily in cooking and swells to two or three times its bulk.

A simple and very efficient disinfectant to pour down a sink is a small quantity of charcoal mixed with water.

Warm bread and cake should be cut with a knife the blade of which has been heated by standing it in boiling water.

Mica Mining.

Mica mining is one of the greatest industries in North Carolina. Mica is found in all sorts of blocks of various thicknesses and shapes and can be split and resplit almost ad infinitum or until it becomes the thin, flexible wafer of commerce. The material is by nature imbedded or scattered through the feldspar in masses large or small, close together or far apart, and is blasted from the rocks by means of dynamite, the purer veins being found between walls of slate. From the mines it is taken to the shops, where it is split into thin sheets, trimmed into regular forms and made ready for the market, the price varying with the size and color of the sheets. The average size is about 4 by 6, though rare sheets of 24 by 18 inches are sometimes found.

Napoleon's Bad Handwriting.

M. Houssaye attributes the muddle over orders at Waterloo to Napoleon's execrable handwriting. This was the opinion of the writing master of Alexandre Dumas: "The emperor never lost a battle except by his bad writing. His officers could never make out what he meant. Remember this, Alexandre, and make your down strokes heavy and your up strokes light." Grouchy declares that during the battle of Waterloo he could not make out whether Napoleon wrote "bataille gagnee" or "bataille engagee," and he conjecturally read "battle gained."

TRAINING CROUPIERS

THE WAY THE EXPERTS AT MONTE CARLO ARE MADE.

Picked Men Undergo a Rigid Course of Instruction Until They Are Molded Into the Right Form to Preside Over the Gaming Tables.

The stereotyped words ring out in but slightly varying tones from the throats of those immaculate black coated functionaries. Indeed the most sensational coup of the season would, we believe, be powerless to move any of these suave officials into betraying even a momentary gleam of interest in the mere mortals he thus adjures to plank down "their ready."

The casual frequenter of the salle de jeu pays but little heed to these things—indeed takes them as a matter of course—nevertheless the croupier is "made," not "born," though he may have inborn qualifications. He is a creature of selection, and, given a candidate of seeming promise, there follow months of training and trial—aye, little temptations which shall test his honesty—before the three chiefs who watch him and consider all his points decide upon his actual election, and he is carefully molded into the "right form," that of the quiet, courteous yet ever alert gentleman, whose well kept hand spins the marble ball and throws the coins so dextrously across the green cloth.

It may be interesting to those who do not already know to hear that no more than thirty-six men can go up at a time for election. Thirty-six—the number which exactly corresponds with the numerals on the board—and of these, again, only the very fittest are chosen for final training and appointments.

The "making of the croupier" takes place during the dead season—that is, from about August till the end of December, by which time it is calculated a smart man may be considered fit to try his paces in public. The training is indeed no play, but consists of regular attendance at the classes of the "ecole des croupiers" for six hours a day, the exact time being from 8 to 11 in the forenoon and from 2 to 5 in the afternoon. Before admittance to the "school," however, a medical examination has to be undergone as well as examinations in viva voce arithmetic and tests put with regard to correct and fluent French and refinement of accent. Yet would all these avail a man nothing should his antecedents and character not bear the strictest and most searching scrutiny. During this time of probation coins of the value of those they will have to handle at the tables are not used, notes being represented by squares of paper of much the same size and texture and the louis d'or being "understudied" by one franc pieces, while the smallest stake permissible, the clumsy five franc piece, remains the same.

As we have, however, already observed, tests of honesty are at times resorted to in order to make sure of the man's qualities in this respect. Yet in order not to strain this point too highly the management pays the probationer a sum of 150 francs a month salary during his period of training. The daily "lessons" consist naturally enough principally in the acquirement of a nice manipulation of the ball and the rake, in quick "head reckoning" and in dextrously pitching the coins across so that they seem to fall in an orderly golden row, each separate and distinct.

A distinction is made between candidates for the trente-et-quarante tables and those devoted to the more easily grasped game of roulette. The men serving the former are, as may have struck any observant visitor, of a distinctly better class, a higher mental caliber. Their salaries, too, are proportionately higher, ranging from 400 to 600 francs a month, while the "chef" draws 725 and the inspectors and subdirectors from 750 to 1,000 a month, with a bonus also at the end of the season and the comforting prospect of a pension when old age or sickness comes along to lay them on the shelf. That these men are also well worth it goes without saying.

A lesser grade of intelligence is required at the rouge-et-noir board, yet here, too, the salaries are such as many a civil service clerk might well envy—earned, too, in a lovely climate and bearing in mind that, given fair health and a steady devotion to duty, the appointment may be considered good for all the man's working life—leading also to the ultimate pension in recognition of faithful services. The salary of the roulette croupier starts at 250 francs a month and may rise to 400 francs, and he also is the recipient of an annual bonus at the end of the "grand season." It should also be observed that while "on duty" the strain is continuous. Each man is "relieved" every two hours, when occurs that curious little ceremonial of turning the cushion on his chair, a "matter of form" to show he has hidden no coin beneath it.

The ages at which men may enlist in Fortuna's ranks lie between twenty-five and thirty, the adventurer, in the general and derogatory acceptation of that term, having no chance whatever, there being no place for such under the red and black flag of M. Blanc. A few of the older men one still meets—and there are now less of them every year—have "won their spurs" on other fields before the fickle goddess was driven into exile on the fair shores of the Mediterranean. Such who have grown gray in her service remember Homburg and Baden-Baden, have lively memories even of those halcyon days when the chink of the gold was borne out through the open windows of the now decorous Kurhaus in Wiesbaden.—London Pall Mall Gazette.

It Springs Back

quickly into shape—for it is The Ellis Spring Needle Ribbed Underwear—made on the famous Cooper Spring Needle Circular ribbed Machine.

Wears — looks — and feels better than any underwear made in the old way with the latch-stitch—a stitch so short and uneven it cannot withstand strain.

The Spring Needle runs at an angle that makes every stitch the same length, giving a peculiar elasticity, which endures till the garment is worn out.

Fits perfectly. There's never any bagging at knees, elbows or shoulders.

Soft, smooth and unshrinkable. In two-piece and combination suits. Men who are careful about the fit of their clothes prefer the union suits, for they fit like one's skin.

MAYNOOTH.

The spring sun has chased from our surroundings The Beautiful; sugar-making is in vogue and farmers are making ready for the new season's work.

The attendance in rural schools throughout the winter is more than double that of the last two winters, as the children have had no snow to wade through. Then, with all about us going apparently well, we are reminded of the fact "That in the midst of life we are in death." The Grim Reaper claimed two from among us last week, in the persons of Mr. Joseph Murphy, aged thirty-one, and Mrs. Wm. Fiss, whose husband died some twelve years ago, leaving a family of eight small children. These the mother now leaves and the youngest, Master Hadden, and Madge, will be left in charge of two of the mother's sisters, Mrs. F. Fiss and Mrs. H. Keluskey, respectively. The older members of the family are engaged in various duties in the vicinity of Cobalt. The body was interred in the burying ground at the Emmanuel Church, Saturday, March 31st. Messrs. Clapp and Morton, two evangelists, conducted the funeral service. Pall-bearers were her three eldest sons, Henry, Fred and William Fiss, her brother, W. Bahm, and two nephews, W. Keluskey and F. Fiss.

"Teddy" Fitzgerald Drowned In Millrace.

SAD ACCIDENT WHICH CAST A GLOOM OVER WEST BELLEVILLE FAMILY YESTERDAY—LITTLE BOY DISAPPEARED YESTERDAY AFTERNOON, AND THE BODY FOUND THIS MORNING.

Yesterday was a sad Easter Monday for one family in this city, who lost a bright little boy as the result of a drowning accident—the first, so far, this season. The accident is believed to have occurred shortly after noon yesterday, but it was not till later that suspicion deepened into conviction. The victim of the sad accident was "Teddy" Fitzgerald, five-year-old and only son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Fitzgerald, who reside on Moira street, in a house at the rear of which is the mill race, filled with rushing water, which runs the Lingham mill.

When last seen "Teddy" was playing about the bank of the stream and the general impression is that he slipped and fell in. At that time there was upwards of 7 or 8 feet of water flowing through the millrace. As soon as the little fellow's absence was noised about, a number gathered upon the scene and a search for the body was instituted, and kept up until an early hour this morning without any result. In order to facilitate the work of the searchers, the sluiceway of the course was opened up and in a short time, the greater portion of the water was let off. This gave the searchers an excellent opportunity of dragging and even seeing the bottom of the mill race.

The search was continued this morning, with the result that the body was found, about 8 o'clock, by Messrs S. Greaves and Britton.

No person saw the boy fall into the water, but his absence from the noon-day meal and no trace having been found of him later in the day, led to the belief that an untimely death had overtaken him.

Such proved to be the case.

The body was found in the raceway, just behind the residence of Mr. Wm. H. Lingham a few yards below where he undoubtedly fell in.

It is needless to say that the parents are nearly distracted by grief, and the sympathy of all will go out towards them in their sore affliction. "Teddy" was an exceptionally bright and clever boy, beloved by all who knew him. A little girl is the only other child of the afflicted parents.

After the remains had been recovered a coroner was notified, but an inquest was not considered necessary, the unfortunate affair being beyond doubt accidental. The body was taken to the parents' residence and prepared for burial.

The Busy Burglar Abroad Last Night.

TWO STORES VISITED, BUT ONLY ONE MISSED ANYTHING.

Burglars got busy in the city during last night, but did not realize much gain for the pains they took.

Two business places on Front St. were entered and ransacked. They were the Oak Hall, of which Mr. C. H. Vermilyea is proprietor, and the tailoring and men's furnishing establishment of Messrs. Robinson & Thompson. In the former place about $6 in silver and coppers was taken, also postage stamps to the value of $1. The money was taken from a cash drawer in the office of Mr Vermilyea's store, and the stamps from a cigar box in which they were kept. Two other drawers were ransacked but nothing else was missed. It appeared evident that the thieves did not wish to take anything but money, as the goods in the store were not at all disturbed. The safe in the office was not touched. An entrance to the Oak Hall was gained by forcing open two doors at the side of the premises. The outer door was fastened inside by a hook and small staple. The staple was pulled out and the second door was opened by shoving the fastening to one side.

In the case of Messrs. Robinson & Thompson a window in the rear of the premises, situated near the back door, was broken and through the aperture made the thief or thieves drew back a bolt which held the door They then had access to the premises. Inside the door some drawers were ransacked, but the cash drawer was overlooked Nothing was taken from this place.

The affair was reported to the police as soon as discovered, but there is apparently no clue as to the thieves. From the fact that no goods were taken it would not appear that ordinary sneak thieves did the work.

Landscape Gardener to Lay Out the Corby Park

Mr. F. G. A Quiet Wedding.

A quiet wedding took place at the Bridge St. parsonage on the 10th inst., when Mr. Albert Burke, of Brougham, Ont., was married to Miss Grace Irene Carter, of Holloway. Rev Mr. Wilson performed the ceremony, and the couple were unattended. They will reside at Brougham.

Grass on Fire.

Some dry grass on Everett St., West Belleville, got on fire in some manner shortly before one o'clock this afternoon, and people in the vicinity had to turn out and fight the flames, as they might have proved dangerous. Several little boys in the neighborhood solemnly declared they did not set fire to the grass.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SWEET CLOVER."

The tremendous success which was accorded "Sweet Clover" when produced here last season may be attributed in part to the fact that "Sweet Clover" is a play that appeals to the wide range of amusement lovers, as it contains an intensely dramatic story, told with sharp contrasts of pathos and humor, and is thoroughly clean in its moral. The company presenting the play is one of the greatest ever taken on tour, and a specially constructed car is required for the transportation of the stupendous and elaborate scenic production, while the costuming is of the most costly and beautiful assortment. "Sweet Clover" will be seen at the Carman to-morrow night.

"FABIO ROMANI."

A great special attraction to be presented at the Carman will be that time tried romantic drama, "Fabio Romani," which is a splendid and deftly arranged dramatiaztion of Marie Corelli's wonderful work of fiction, "The Vendetta." In the history of romantic plays there is probably none on record that has had the continuous success accorded this remarkable play. A carefully selected cast is employed in this season's presentation and a complete scenic production is given. "Fabio Romani" is a play for the intelligent and happily adapted to please the masses. At the Carman opera house next Saturday night.

E. C. Rosenzi, the Oil Expert, is Dead.

Many in this city, who met him, will regret to hear of the death of Mr. E. C. Rosenzi, the oil expert, who passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital, Philadelphia, on April 7th. He will be remembered as having been in this city in connection with the Melrose oil well. He was a whole-souled man, and everyone who knew him will say "may he rest in peace."

Mrs. Solmes' Funeral.

The funeral of the late Mrs. D. R. Solmes took place at 9.30 this morning from the residence of Dr. Clinton, Bridge street. The remains were taken to St. Thomas' church, where the impressive burial services of the Anglican church were held, being conducted by the Rector, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish. The remains were then conveyed to the wharf, placed on board the steamer Annie Lake and taken to Picton for interment. The bearers were Messrs. C. M. Stork, D. M. Waters, S. S. Lazier, T. Ritchie, A. A. Roberts, and J. Williams.

A Transaction Which Was Not Profitable.

A few days ago, says a Madoc correspondent, Mr Geo. Wellman, of Springbrook, was before Casement and Wright, J.P's, for selling liquor without a license. Two charges were made and two fines were imposed—one for $50, and one for $75 and costs—making in all $132, on which he paid $30, agreeing to pay the balance the Monday following. When the time arrived to pay he refused, stating they could not make him as they had accepted $30 on the fine Mr Casement made out the committal papers and gave them to Constable St. Charles to take Mr. Wellman to the Belleville jail. Arriving in Belleville Wellman had a lawyer examine his papers, who informed him that he would have to pay or go to the coop, as he was credited with $30 on the $50 fine. The commitment was for the $75 and costs, amounting to $15 more. After making two trips to Belleville and paying his lawyer, Mr. Wellman is not much ahead, besides the way he took to get out of paying the fines. It looks hard, but some of the Springbrookers will be obliged to take to drinking water.

Annual Easter Vestry Meetings.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS PRESENTED IN ALL THE EPISCOPAL CHURCHES LAST NIGHT—THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

ST. THOMAS'.

The Easter vestry meeting held in the Parish Hall of St. Thomas' Church was largely attended, being one of the best ever held by this parish.

The Rector, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, presided and opened the proceedings with prayer.

The financial report presented was most encouraging, showing that all liabilities had been met.

The following officials were elected:

Vestry Clerk—Mr. S. R. Gorman.

Rector's Warden—Mr. J. P. C. Phillips.

People's Warden—Mr. T. E. Ketcheson.

The sidesmen are to be appointed by the Advisory Board.

A committee composed of Messrs. J. P. C. Phillips, T. E. Ketcheson, W. A. Hungerford, J. A. Kerr, H. Corby and F. R. Lingham was appointed in reference to having the stone wall about the church premises repaired.

Moved by Mr. W. A. Hungerford, seconded by Mr. J. A. Kerr, that the vestry deem it advisable that a new Parish Hall be erected in order to meet the requirements of the Sunday School and Parish.—Carried.

Mr. W. H. Spooner, organist, was re-engaged at an increased salary.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. A. A Roberts, retiring Vestry Clerk, and that gentleman replied in an appropriate manner.

This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned.

CHRIST CHURCH.

The annual vestry meeting of the above church was held in the body of the church last evening. The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, B. A., presided. After opening exercises the minutes were read by Mr. J. Lutton, Clerk of the Vestry. Reports from the W.A., J.W.A. and Ladies' Aid were also read and all were accepted. The total receipts for the year amounted to $3437.71. There is a small liability still to be paid up. The election of officers for the ensuing year was proceeded with, as follows;

Church Wardens. — Messrs. Frank Thompson and Chief Newton.

Sidesmen—G. Bennett, C. Boyle, H. Chene, W. Cole, C. Carrol, B. Backus.

Auditors—Joseph Tickell, G. Bennett.

Finance Committee—J. Lutton, G. Bennett, W. Cole, J. Sargent, J. R. Donnelly, Mr. Reid, Dr. Ackerill, A. Sherry, W. Alford, W. Rodbourne.

Vestry Clerk—J. Lutton.

Synod Delegates—F. Thompson, R. P. Hamilton, R. Greatrix.

Altar Guild—Mrs. Irwin, Miss Lucy Mills and Miss Mabel Doxsee.

St. George's Altar Guild — Miss Palos and Miss Lutton.

Assistant S. S. Superintendent and Librarian—Frank Mills.

St. George's S. S. Superintendent—Fred Palos.

Assistant Librarian—Russell Bell.

Mrs. Campbell is retained as organist, to the great satisfaction of all concerned.

Very kind words were spoken by those present expressive of satisfaction with the work the Rector has done, and by unanimous voice the sum of $200.00 was added to his stipend for the coming year. The Rector replied fittingly, expressing his appreciation of the feeling of the people.

The meeting adjourned till Monday night next, when the auditors' report will be received.

EMMANUEL R. E. CHURCH.

The Rector, Rev. A. M. Hubly, presided at the annual Easter Monday parish meeting of the above church last night. After brief devotional exercises the reports of the different societies of the church were read, which showed them to be in a very healthy condition. With one exception—the Women's Foreign Mission Society, which stood even—all the societies showed a comfortable balance on the right side. During the past year the church has raised, for all purposes, $1856.34, as follows: Sunday School, $186.86; Mission fund, $60.50; Ladies' Aid, $187.78; Christian Endeavor Society, $39.80; Women's Foreign Missionary Society, $50.71; Vestry, $1168.38; Communion alms, $26.73; testimonials, $135.50.

The Rector presented his report, which showed that his faithfulness and zeal had been great. The esteem in which he is held by the congregation was markedly in evidence last night.

The election of officers resulted as follows;

People's Warden, Mr. E. T. Thompson (re-elected.)

Rector's Warden, Mr. Geo. Leach (re-appointed.)

Vestry Clerk, Mr. R. H. Ketcheson.

Vestry, Messrs. Thos. Thompson, John Neate, J. D. Ford, Jesse Barlow, William Thompson, Geo. Robinson, Geo. Warham, A. S. Large, E. Dobbs.

Delegates to General Council, Messrs. Barlow and Robinson.

Parish Council, Mesdames Dunnet and Hubly.

Auditors, Messrs. Thos. Thompson and J. D. Ford.

Hearty votes of thanks were passed to the different societies of the church, especially to the Ladies' Aid and choir, and the meeting adjourned for two weeks, when the auditors' report and other highly interesting matters will be presented.

ST. JOHN'S.

The Easter vestry meeting was held last night in the parish hall, the Rector, Rev. Canon Begert, presiding. The financial statement presented was of a very satisfactory nature, showing a balance on hand. Mr. F. R. Clarke was appointed Rector's Warden, and Mr. F. D. Ford as the People's Warden.

Sidesmen—Messrs. Thos. Nightingale, G. R. Brown, S. Symons and W. Harden.

Auditors—Messrs. J. Harker and Thos. Nightingale.

Vestry Clerk—R. S. Bell.

Votes of thanks were passed to the J.A.A. for donations; to the Women's Guild, to the retiring Wardens for their services, and to Mr. F. D. Ford for faithful and efficient services as Vestry Clerk for 25 years.

The vestry then adjourned, and Mr. R. S. Bell was appointed lay delegate to the Synod for three years.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

If It Wasn't For Carnegie Libraries Would Be Scarce.

Toronto, April 17.—Several matters of interest were discussed at the sixth annual meeting yesterday of the Ontario Library Association, held both afternoon and evening, in the Canadian Institute on College street, under the chairmanship of the president, W. J. Robertson, B. A., LL.B., of the public library, St. Catharines. There was a goodly gathering of members, including several ladies.

The treasurer, Prof. A. B. Macallum, regretted to have to present a somewhat unsatisfactory report, inasmuch as the expenditure of $113.63 left a deficit of $40.62. Owing to a technicality the Government grant promised was not forthcoming, hence the deficit.

N. Guard, B. C. L., of Sarnia Public Library, stated that a list of children's books had been prepared and sent to the Government. A brief discussion ensued concerning suitable books for children.

A resolution was passed, urging on the Government the reduction of postal rates on books, periodicals and magazines.

Smoking Rooms.

Rev. W. A. Bradley of Berlin made some remarks on chess, checkers and smoking-room in connection with a public library. The smoking-room was not a success at Berlin, owing to the inadequacy of accommodation. W. H. Henwood, librarian of Brantford, reported that there was accommodation for smokers at Brantford—the home of artisans—and the scheme worked well. Opinions for and against the idea of smoking quarters in libraries balanced evenly.

T. W. H. Levitt, superintendent of public libraries, advocated a reform in classification. It was the intention to see that there was a library in every school to foster a love of good reading in the young.

In the evening Mr. Robertson gave the presidential address, in which he said that had it not been for the generosity of Andrew Carnegie they would have to note that comparatively few library buildings were erected. He advocated a revival of scientific and literary library institute meetings.

INSURANCE BILLS PASS.

Governor Makes Two More Laws—Senate Confirms Anti-Perjury Bill.

Albany, April 17.—Governor Higgins yesterday signed two more of the insurance investigating committee bills, as follows: Chapter 238, Senate bill No. 1,160, which will permit policyholders in stock life insurance companies to act as directors therein, regardless of whether or not they hold stock in the company. Chapter 239, Senate bill No. 1,155, which will prohibit any corporation (insurance or other) not organized for purely political purposes, from making any contribution for political purposes.

This makes a total of five laws added to the statute books out of the total of nine bills introduced by the committee. Two others are in the Governor's hands awaiting his approval and two are still pending in the Legislature.

The Senate last night passed the so-called anti-perjury bill, proposed by the insurance investigating committee, the vote being ayes 28, nays 16.

SUNK FROM COLLISION.

Two Steel Steamers With Valuable Cargoes Lost In Soo Passage.

Detroit, Mich., April 17.—The most disastrous collision in years in the Soo passage occurred yesterday morning when the steel steamers Saxona and Eugene Zimmerman came together at the foot of the dyke. The Zimmerman sank at once in twenty feet of water on the Canadian side of the river. The crew are safe. The Saxona continued on down the river as far as Little Mud Lake, where she filled and sank on the west side of the river. The channel is not blocked by the accident.

The Saxona was bound down from Duluth with a valuable cargo of flax seed and the Zimmerman was taking a load of coal to Lake Superior. Both steamers are among the highest class of lake craft.

BIG PRIZES FOR WHEAT.

Winnipeg Industrial Fair Offers For Wheat, $200 As First Award.

Winnipeg, April 17.—As due recognition of wheat-growing as the leading industry of Western Canada, the Winnipeg Industrial Fair board will hang up prizes for cereal this year aggregating $500.

The first prize will be $200, which is believed to be the largest award for exhibit of grain made at any fair on the continent. This will be for red fyfe only.

Prizes will range down to $35 for fifth place. Provision will also be made for Alberta red winter wheat, but all white varieties are excluded from honor.

Rodrigue Desaules Charged With Strangling a Woman.

Desaules Has Been Arrested—Prisoner, Who Is a Hunter and Trapper, Had Quarrelled With the Woman and Her Husband, Leopold Gendreau, a Bridge Keeper, Living About a Mile From the Village.

Montreal, April 17.—A despatch from St. Cesaire says:

About 6 o'clock Saturday morning passers-by on Notre Dame street, of this city, discovered the body of a woman near the convent. The body bore very evident traces of violence, and was recognized as that of Clara Ducharme, the wife of Leopold Goudreau, a bridgekeeper living about a mile from the village.

Sunday a man suspected of the crime was arrested. His name is Rodrigue Desaules, a hunter and trapper. The motive for the horrible crime is supposed to have been vengeance. He had lived with the Goudreau family till last Thursday, when, as a result of an altercation with the husband and wife, he was ordered to leave.

The woman was strangled to death.

WOMAN TEMPORARILY INSANE.

Shoots Top of Head Off Near Brampton, Ont.

Brampton, April 17.—Mrs. Frank Ruston, wife of a farmer who lives five miles from here, ended her life with a shot gun on Sunday afternoon.

She was suffering from temporary insanity, caused by illness. Careful watch had been kept over her, by her husband, but while he was at the barn getting a team ready to take her to Brampton to consult Dr. Sharpe, she secured an old shot gun, placed the muzzle to her head and fired.

The family are well-to-do people, and very great sympathy is felt for her relatives.

Shoots Just "To Spite" a Negro.

Montreal, April 17.—A white girl, Maggie Dean, met a colored man named Thompson last evening on St. James street and shot herself in the side, just to spit him, she said, because he had married another. She will not die.

Investigating a Death.

Ottawa, April 17.—Coroner Baptie is investigating the death of May Donnelly, the seven-year-old daughter of J. Donnelly, driver, of Rockliffe, who died Sunday at the family residence, as the result of falling into a pot of boiling water. The accident occurred one day about three weeks ago, and the child is said to have been terribly scalded. An inquest may be held.

TUG'S ERRAND OF MERCY.

Goes to Rescue of Man Who Was Terribly Scalded.

Owen Sound, April 17.—The steamer J. H. Jones made a special trip yesterday morning, bringing in a man named Joseph Collins, who was terribly scalded while loading a tug with wood five days ago at Rattlesnake Harbor. Collins had been in the hold piling slabs, when a flying slab broke a steam tap. Collins was horribly scalded, and for four or five days lay without medical aid, his comrades not daring to move him.

A message was sent to Gore Bay for a doctor, but he did not come. The officers of the Jones, hearing of the accident, made a rush visit to Rattlesnake and, finding the man's condition to be very serious, started for Owen Sound with him at once.

Collins is reported as resting more comfortably now, but is still in a serious condition.

KILLED BY A BULL.

Animal Had Been Dehorned, But It Used Its Feet.

Dauphin, Man., April 17.—William McFarlane, an employe on the farm of A. Bond, a few miles east of the town, was attacked by a bull on Saturday morning, and so badly injured that he died on Sunday night. McFarlnae was herding the bull with other cattle when it attacked him. The animal was known to be of a vicious disposition, and some time ago was dehorned. McFarlane was knocked down by it and when lying prostrate on the ground it used its forefeet on him. Deceased was 45 years of age, and his home is at Venlow, near Gilbert Plains.

JUMPED OVERBOARD.

Honolulu, April 17.—Capt. Martin of the Light Artillery, en route home on board the U. S. transport Sherman, under guard as insane, jumped overboard during a storm on April 5, three days after the steamer left Nagasaki. His body was not recovered. Capt. Martin went to the Philippines about three months ago.

London, April 16.—Cattle are quoted at 10c to 11¼c per lb.; refrigerator beef, 8½c per lb.; sheep, dressed, 15c to 16c per lb.; lambs, 17c, dressed weight.

TORONTO JUNCTION LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, April 16.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 33 carloads, composed of 668 cattle, 42 sheep, 24 calves and 6 horses.

The quality of fat cattle was fair.

Exporters.

Prices for exporters ranged from $4.90 to $5.15, with about two or three loads at $5.20 to $5.25, the bulk selling at $5 to $5.12½ per cwt.; export bulls sold at $3.75 to $4.25 per cwt.

Butchers.

Good butchers' cattle were scarce, and more would have sold. Choice picked lots sold at $4.75 to $5 per cwt.; loads of the best sold at $4.65 to $4.90; butcher cows at $3.50 to $4.50 per cwt.

Veal Calves.

About 40 veal calves sold at $4 to $6 per cwt.

Receipts were not large, but prices were firm at $5 to $5.25 for export ewes; yearling lambs at $7 to $7.25 per cwt.; spring lambs at $4 to $6 each.

Hogs.

H. P. Kennedy reports hog prices 10c per cwt. lower; selects, $7.15; lights and fats, $6.90 per cwt.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, April 16.—(Special.)—Cables from Liverpool on Canadian cattle were firmer at 11¼c to 11½c; exports from Portland and St. John, N.B., for week were 2015 cattle, 1525 sheep. Receipts were 250 cattle, 10 milch cows, 75 calves and 500 hogs. The market for hogs was weaker and prices declined 5c to 10c per cwt. Of above number 700 were bought in west by two packing companies, leaving only 200 on the market for sale, for which demand was very slow. Sales selected lots were made at $7.75 to $7.80 per cwt., weighed off cars. The trade in cattle was slow, as is always the case on Easter Monday, as butchers generally had ample supplies on hand. Prime steers were held at 5¼c to 5¾c; choice, at 4¾c to 5c; good, at 4¼c to 4½c; fair, at 3¾c to 4c; common, at 2¾c to 3½c, and inferior, at 2½c to 3c per lb. Milch cows sold at $25 to $50 each, and calves at $1.50 to $3.

Piles 14 Years

TERRIBLE CASE CURED PAINLESSLY WITH ONLY ONE TREATMENT OF PYRAMID PILE CURE.

FREE PACKAGE IN PLAIN WRAPPER MAILED TO EVERYONE WHO WRITES.

"I have been a terrible sufferer of piles for fourteen (14) years, and during all this time you can have an idea of how many kinds of medicine I tried. But I found no relief whatever. I felt there must be something that could cure me without having to undergo an operation, which might kill me.

"Now, after trying but one treatment of your 'Pyramids,' I am free, free to tell all sufferers of this dreadful disease to try this medicine—the Pyramid Pile Cure. It will cure when all others fail. Sincerely yours, G. Braneigh, Schellburg, Pa."

Anyone suffering from the terrible torture, burning and itching of piles, will get instant relief from the treatment we send out free, at our own expense, in plain sealed package, to everyone sending name and address.

Surgical operation for piles is unnecessary and rarely a permanent success. Here you can get a treatment that is quick, easy to apply and inexpensive, and free from the publicity and humiliation you suffer by doctors' examination.

Pyramid Pile Cure is made in the form of "easy to use" suppositories. The coming of a cure is felt the moment you begin to use it, and your suffering ends.

Send your name and address at once to Pyramid Drug Co., 3878 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich., and get, by return mail, the treatment we will send you free, in plain, sealed wrapper.

After seeing for yourself what it can do, you can get a regular, full-size package of Pyramid Pile Cure from any druggist at 50 cents each or, on receipt of price, we will mail you same ourselves if he should not have it.

LYNCH INNOCENT MEN

Woman Declares They Were Not Her Assailants.

People of Springfield, Missouri, Thoroughly Ashamed of the Conduct and Acts of Mob—Colored Clergy Appeal to President Roosevelt—Four of the Springfield Lynch Mob Under Arrest—Special Grand Jury.

Springfield, Mo., April 17.—Four men are now under arrest here and charged with being leaders in the mob that broke into the County Jail Saturday night and lynched three negroes.

Charles Cannefax and Oney Calfrey were the first men arrested. Cannefax has been a poolroom proprietor, but is at present employed at the St. Louis and San Francisco yards. Calfrey is a switchman for the same road. Both have been released on bail. Daniel Crane, son of a saddlery merchant, and Otis Hall, a police court character, are in jail.

Quiet prevailed here yesterday and the indications are that the race trouble is over. The presence of troops has had the effect of bringing the people to a full realization of the situation. Before midnight Sunday a decided reaction had set in and people began to condemn the mob. Yesterday this feeling gained strength, especially when it became thoroughly appreciated that Mabel Edmondson has declared positively that the negroes lynched were not her assailants.

Judge Lincoln of the Criminal Court yesterday ordered a special grand jury to be convened to-day.

A negro named Burns was shot and instantly killed last night by a white man, who was escorting a woman to her home, when he was held up by two negroes.

The white man drew a pistol and fired at the negroes. The negroes fled, as he supposed, and he ran after them not knowing he had hit one, and stumbled over the dead body of the man he had shot. The other escaped.

Appeal to Roosevelt.

Chicago, April 17.—The colored clergy of Chicago will appeal to President Roosevelt for an official investigation of the lynching of three members of their race at Springfield, Mo., Saturday night. A resolution was prepared Sunday night asking the President to take action and it was laid before the Chicago A. M. E. Ministerial Association yesterday.

Negro Was In Peril.

New York, April 17.—Thomas Maher, a well-known contractor, 43 years of age, was murderously assaulted a short distance from his home early yesterday, receiving a dozen cuts from a razor.

The assault was witnessed by several persons, and Robert H. Scott, 35 years of age and colored, was arrested after police reserves had been called out to protect him from a crowd which had followed the negro to his home, several blocks from the scene of the assault.

NEWS IN A FEW LINES.

Christ Church congregation, Petrolea, cleared off a $1,500 debt on Sunday.

Warden Selkirk of Essex County Council, has resigned. He is going to British Columbia.

The widow of the late Col. Hamlin dropped dead at Maxwell, Ont., on Sunday. She was 82 years old.

Toronto, April 17.—The postmasters of the Toronto, London nad Kingston inspectorates met yesterday and organized a provincial association.

London, April 17.—The newspapers announce that General Booth has expressed his intention to visit Japan, returning to England via Canada.

Canada's foreign trade returns for the nine months of the fiscal year ending with March, show a total trade of $396,859,305, an increase over 1905 of approximately $56,000,000.

At Waterbury, Conn, Rev. J. Edmund Sencsac, pastor of Stannes' Roman Catholic Church, is dead. He was born in Canada 46 years ago and graduated from the Montreal Seminary.

Toronto, April 17.—The Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada will meet in Toronto city hall this morning at 11 o'clock, and will commence the hearing of a long list of cases.

Detroit, April 17.—Edwin Moles of Quincy, near Kalamazoo, claims to be 107 years of age. He was born near Niagara Falls, Ont., in 1799, and says he recalls plainly the battles of Lundy's Lane and Chippewa in the War of 1812. Moles still follows his business of a wagon-maker.

A Mining Commissioner.

Toronto, April 17.—A provision of Hon. Mr. Cochrane's mining bill that was not brought out when the bill was introduced last week is announced as the appointment of a mining commissioner to deal with all disputes arising out of the decisions of district recorders.

His commission will allow him to travel from point to point as cases spring up, and the only recourse from his decisions will be through the divisional court at Osgoode Hall.

The new office will relieve Mr. Cochrane of a portion of his present duties. The commissioner will be free of Government control.

The qualification for appointment is that the candidate must be a solicitor who has practiced for at least ten years.

S. A. International Congress.

Binghamton, N. Y., April 17.—Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, announced yesterday that the International Salvation Army Congress will be held in the Hippodrome, New York, from May 1 to 16.

Use "Made In Canada" Stamp.

Winnipeg, April 17.—Manitoba millers have discovered a way by which San Francisco competitors are endeavoring to evade the Chinese boycott and capture Canadian trade. They are bagging their flour in bags stamped "Made in Canada." The matter will be brought to the attention of the Canadian Government.

FIRST CARRIAGE IN MAINE.

How a Minister Came to Buy It and Why He Sold It.

The Rev. Francis Winter was a native of Boston and a graduate of Harvard college. He went to Bath early in 1707 and, after preaching on probation for the orthodox church, was invited to settle, which invitation he accepted. He was ordained in the autumn of the same year. He went to Bath on horseback in company with Lemuel Standish. Mr. Winter came from Boston, where he had associated with such eminent men as Adams, Otis and Warren, himself becoming an ardent patriot, taking the lead in the Revolutionary measures adopted in Bath during that memorable period.

Mr. Winter married Miss Abigail Alden in 1768, and it is through her that the Winters of today trace their ancestry back to the "Puritan Maiden of Plymouth."

Three years after the marriage of the Rev. Francis Winter and Abigail Allen they started to visit a sister of Mrs. Winter living in Connecticut and intended to ride all the way on horseback, but Mrs. Winter became so fatigued that Mr. Winter sold one of the horses for a carriage and harness. It was the first carriage that ever came into Maine and was called a chaise. Traveling was so difficult that two negroes were employed to accompany them with shovels and axes to clear the road. Several times the chaise had to be taken apart and lifted over fallen trees. The minister's parishioners thought that it was putting on too much style for their pastor to ride in a carriage, and in consequence Mr. Winter sold it. This was in 1771. It was a two wheeled chaise, the body resting on leather braces, which were attached to wooden springs.

A DAZZLING EFFECT.

Old Time Illumination With Lanterns and Candles.

In these days of electric lights, with all their capabilities for brilliant illumination, it is amusing to read what the subjects of George II. considered a dazzling effect. A Frenchman visiting in London at the time of the coronation of that monarch in 1727 writes enthusiastically in praise of the lighting of the city as well as of a banquet display.

"Most of the streets," writes M. Saussure, "are wonderfully well lighted. In front of each house hangs a lantern, or large globe of glass, inside of which is placed a lamp which burns all night. Large houses have two of these suspended outside the doors by iron supports. Some even have four."

How one arc light would have dazzled the good people of that day!

"When the coronation procession entered Westminster hall," the writer continues, "the light of day was beginning to fade. Forty chandeliers, in shape like a crown, hung from the ceiling, each having thirty-six wax candles.

"On the king's appearance all suddenly lighted, and every one in the room was filled with astonishment at the wonderful and unexpected illumination. Little cords of cotton wool, imperceptible to the eye, saturated with sulphur of saltpeter, spirits of wine and other ingredients, had been prepared and arranged so as to carry the flame rapidly from one candle to another. The arrangement had been so skillfully prepared that scarcely a candle failed to take fire."

For Dosing Oneself.

A physician recommends rochelle salts for amateur doctoring. He says that it is an excellent thing, several times a day, to take as much of the salts as may be put on a cent in a little water. That will sweeten the stomach and act as a very desirable spring medicine. He also speaks highly of soda, having no patience with those timid people who have an idea that it is a dangerous dose, doing some vague harm to the coating of the intestines.

"Why, everything we eat, almost, has soda in it," he cried in disdain. "It is an admirable thing to take half rochelle salts and half bicarbonate of soda, as directed, several times a day. I know of few gentler and still more beneficent general medicines."

A Poisonous Frog.

People in general look upon all species of the frog as being perfectly harmless. Should you be traveling in New Granada (United States of Colombia), however, you would do well to let a certain little tree croaker severely alone. He secretes a poison equally as deadly as that of the rattlesnake. It exudes from his skin in the shape of a milky liquid and is used by the natives as a poison for their arrows.

Write as You Feel.

If you would write to any purpose, you must be perfectly free from within. Give yourself the natural rein; think on no pattern, no patron, no paper, no press, no public; think on nothing, but follow your impulses. Give yourself as you are—what you are and how you see it. Every man sees with his own eyes or does not see at all.—Emerson.

Wouldn't Trust Him.

"Of course," said the sarcastic man, "you always do your wife's bidding."

"Gracious! No!" replied Mr. Henpeck. "She wouldn't let me. When she goes to an auction sale she never takes me with her."

A SABBATARIAN.

Result of a Doctor's Compact With an Insane Patient.

Dr. A. did not believe in forcible restraint for the insane. Therefore, as head of an insane asylum where personal influence was made to take the place of bolts and bars and shackles, he was kept a busy man. One patient in particular was a young boy continually complained of at headquarters because he refused to wear his clothing, preferring to tear it into rags.

Dr. A. remonstrated in vain, then thought out a plan of diplomacy, with which he approached his patient.

"John," said he, "I find I am in need of a boy and thought you might like to take the position. I want to engage a boy not to tear clothes. Do you think you could do that work?"

"Yes, I could," said John.

"Very well. What wages will you ask?"

"Twopence a day."

The bargain was closed on the spot, John's destroyed clothing having cost the asylum pounds where his wages were pennies. From Monday to Saturday John was a model laborer, receiving at the end of each day his wage with the other workmen about the asylum. Sunday came, and with it John's mania. He had not a whole rag on his back when Dr. A. was called upon to speak to him.

"How did this happen, John?" he asked. "Weren't you engaged to work for me? You have broken your contract."

"I have not, sir," asserted John, with warmth. "Didn't I work for you all the week? Today's Sunday, and I'll be hanged if I work for any man on Sunday."

CAVE OF THE WINDS.

The great wind cave has the form of an eight story house, each story, or stratum, containing a distinct formation of its own and each containing chambers of a size and magnificence of decoration such as have never been found in any subterranean cavern of the world.

It is a dream, a nightmare, a vision, carved in solid stone under the green hills of Dakota, stone as white as the milk the hired man used to give us to drink in the dawn of a happy June morning, stone as red as the heart of the first bloodroot that you dug in the spring when the world was all spring to you, and stone that is blue with a blue that all the painters who have ever painted Venice have tried to get for generations and have failed.

Frozen fountains are there, white with the leaping foam of untold ages; sculptured cats and horses and great monsters to be dreamed about o' nights and feared in dark corners in the daytime, organs built by the hands of giant gnomes for a Titan to play wild hymns of praise upon, a kitchen for the cooking of weird dishes never thought of up here in the sunshine, all manner and all kinds of rooms, ninety miles of them, down there under the hoofs of the gallant little range horses who pound the grass into hay the year round, up there in South Dakota.—Exchange.

Napoleon's Ink Wiper.

Napoleon was a hero to his valet, Constant, though he sadly marred the servant's effort to dress him neatly. Said the valet:

His breeches were always of white cashmere. But two hours after leaving his chamber it often happened that they were all spotted with ink, thanks to his habit of wiping his pen on them and shaking ink all around him by striking his pen against the table. However, as he dressed in the morning for the whole day, he did not change his toilet on that account, but remained in this state until night. The whole inside of his boots was lined with white fustian. Whenever one of his legs itched, he rubbed it with the heel of the boot or shoe with which the other leg was shod, thus heightening the effect of the spilled ink.

An Aggravated Case.

Lord Justice Clerk Eskgrove, in sentencing certain housebreakers, began by explaining the various crimes of which they had been convicted—assault, robbery and hamesucken, of which last he gave them the etymology. He then reminded them that they had attacked the house and robbed it, and so worked gradually up to the climax. "All this you did, and, God preserve us, joost when they were settin' down to their dinner!"—Law Notes.

A Long Life.

To prolong life one should take plenty of sleep and remember to sleep lying on the right side, indulge in a morning bath in tepid water, take daily exercise in the open air, keep the window of the sleeping room open all night, take frequent and short holidays, not be overambitious and hold one's temper.

Considerate Discretion.

Stranger—How long since you made an arrest, constable? Constable Hi Medder—Quite a considdyrable spell. I'm goin' a leetle slow 'bout haulin' 'em in jest now. We hain't got no place to put 'em 'ceptin' Cy Tedder's chicken coop, an' Cy's got a settin' hen on.

Ross' Fate Awaits Laurier.

Day by day the thinking people of this province are becoming more and more disgusted with the Dominion Government. To those who watch the signs of the times, the evidence is clear that the same fate, from the same causes, awaits it as befell the Ross Government in this Province.

Even its friends acknowledge this. The Boston Transcript pays close attention to Canadian affairs, and is distinctly favorable to Sir Wilfrid Laurier; yet it acknowledges that the outlook is stormy, and the public esteem is precarious. Outsiders see most of the game it is said, hence this statement is valuable.

The Transcript bases its opinion on the Saskatchewan land job, and claims that the Government's defence of this is comicably absurd. "If Mr. Whitney, the present resolute Premier of Ontario, could but be employed to deal with the matter he would surely compel any due restitution," says the paper. This is how the Hon. Mr. Whitney is regarded and his work appreciated.

Then, it is claimed that Mr. Fielding has neglected his duties. He is condemned for not intervening when reports of malpractices were brought to his notice in connection with the Insurance Department.

A reliable Liberal authority in Quebec is quoted as saying that "there can be no doubt that the Premier's compatriots are blase of invitations to support his ministry on the ground that he is one of themselves. French-Canadians have always been peculiarly quick to turn out any Government clearly guilty of pecuniary corruption. If the Saskatchewan deal cannot be defended in a way not yet discovered, the political life of the Government is not worth three years' purchase."

Now, turn to another criticism of a different class. The Farmers' Sun had last week a strong editorial under the caption of "Amazing Indifference to Public Interests." It bore out exactly the accusation made recently as to our "Farcical Ministers." The following extract from it should be read and remembered;

"The Hon. Mr. Paterson is our Minister of Customs. It should be part of his special duty to keep watch on the tariff changes of other countries. And still two years after Germany began working along the lines which have recently reached full development, and nearly a month after a new German tariff had come into force, under which important Canadian products are absolutely excluded from the German market, this Minister can say no more than that he "believes" such a tariff is in being; he "does not know" what effect it will have on our export trade to Germany in apples and other lines. The Minister of Agriculture, whose chief business so far as his official life is concerned, is the development of outside markets for Canadian farm products, has not even "looked into the matter," and has accepted a statement made by his colleague some two weeks ago, to the effect that our apple trade has not been hit at all! If men in charge of the business of an incorporated company showed equal ignorance of, and inattention to, the business of that corporation, they would be asked to walk the plank at the next meeting of the Board of directors. What a Board of directors would do in a private company, Parliament should do in this case of national concern."

Sleeps Out of Doors.

'I have slept out of doors in a corner of my piazza summer and winter for five years, and in that time I never had a cold, though on several occasions it was twenty degrees below zero," said Mrs. Blanche C. Martin, at the close of a recital which she gave in the New York Waldorf one day last week. "I believe," she added, "that it is a cure for nervousness, and many kinds of pulmonary troubles. From experience I know that a few hours spent in sleep out of doors is far more beneficial and refreshing than twice the time in a bedroom, even with the windows open. The buoyant feeling in the morning following a sleep out of doors is one that surpasses description." She might have added that those who coddle themselves, who live and sleep in close overheated rooms, are the persons most susceptible to catching cold, and who most easily fall a prey to pneumonia and kindred diseases. To keep the respiratory organs in good condition lots of fresh air is needed.

SUN AND SNOW,

Sometimes Help the Hair to Go.

In any changeable climate the hair is apt to become brittle and to break off, stubby here and there. This makes a hair-dressing almost a necessity, especially to ladies. In using a hair dressing why not get the best, one that combines with it the efficiency in killing the dandruff germ, the germ that eats the hair off at the roots, causing what is called falling hair, and in time baldness. Newbro's "Herpicide" is that kind of a hair dressing. You have no idea how delightful your scalp will feel, and how stylish your hair will appear, after an application or two of Herpicide. It is certainly a wonderful innovation as a scalp antiseptic and hair dressing.

Considerable merriment is being caused these days by a story which some of the aldermen tell. It is alleged (mind, we don't vouch for it) that a certain alderman had for a long time been trying to get a certain measure through the Council, but without success. At last, so the story goes, a brother alderman jokingly asked him if, providing his pet scheme were carried, he would buy the oysters for the Council. It is alleged that in a moment of weakness, he consented to do so. Sure enough, the pet scheme was passed, but the City Fathers, some of whom are fond of oysters, are still waiting for the oyster supper to materialize. Now they think it looks as though a shell game was worked on them.

The Hamilton Times man hit the nail squarely on the head last Monday when, in his more or less humorous column, he gave vent to the following; "Mr. Chairman, in rising to move a vote of thanks to the city church choirs for their services yesterday, I beg to say that I don't think the congregations half appreciate the obligation they are under especially to the young people who give their time and labor free in connection with the praise service in the churches. Yesterday's programme itself meant a lot of hard work and some sacrifice for them. The house of God is not a place of entertainment, but music enters largely into the service and without the assistance of the choirs it would be shorn of much of its grandeur, and the best is none too good for the Almighty's praise. Not only our thanks but our encouragement should be given freely to them. The usual annual vote of thanks at vestry and congregational meetings is generally a tame and perfunctory affair. The choirs do much for the entertainment of the members of the churches, and it is not too much to expect that they should do a little now and then to entertain them. But how seldom do you hear of a congregation entertaining a choir? Did you ever hear of such a thing? (Applause.)"

It seems a peculiar coincidence that two stores were burglarized in Napanee on Sunday night or Monday morning. HELD THEIR FIRST ANNUAL BANQUET.

BROTHERHOOD OF HOLLOWAY ST. METHODIST CHURCH HAD PLEASANT AND PROFITABLE FUNCTION LAST NIGHT.

The Brotherhood in connection with Holloway Street Church last evening held their first annual banquet, which proved to be a most pleasant and profitable affair. Nearly every member was present and took part in the proceedings. Tables were spread in the basement of the church and an abundance of good things were provided.

The chair was occupied by Mr. W. J. Magrath, President, and associated with him were Rev. R. H. Leitch, Pastor and Hon. President, and Mr. A. E. Bailey, Vice-President.

After due justice had been done to the spread a comprehensive toast list was carried out, in a profitable and enjoyable way.

At intervals during the addresses Mr. C. McMeehan rendered solos, a quartette composed of Messrs. C. McMeehan, R. Leitch, B. McMurray and Dr. Duprau gave two selections, and instrumental music was furnished by Mr. R. Leitch on the piano and Mr. L. R. Walters on a mandolin.

A presentation also occurred during the evening. Mr. L. R. Walters, who is about leaving the city, and who had been chairman of the programme committee of the Brotherhood since its inception, was presented with an address, accompanying which was a beautiful music rack. The recipient replied appropriately.

At a seasonable hour the pleasant affair was brought to a close by the singing of the Doxology and the benediction being pronounced by the Pastor.

THE EASY OIL.

Scott's Emulsion is "the easy oil"—easy to take, easy in action. Its use insures deliverance from the griping and nauseating sensation peculiar to the raw oil. Nobody who has any regard for their stomach thinks of taking cod liver oil in the old way when Scott's Emulsion is to be had. It is equally certain that no one having a regard for their health will accept a cheap emulsion or alcoholic substitute for Scott's Emulsion. It fulfills every mission of cod liver oil and more.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SWEET CLOVER" TO-NIGHT.

There is no denying the fact that the beautiful scenic production of "Sweet Clover," which comes to the Carman to-night, was one of the artistic and substantial successes of last season, and that return dates were requested in every city visited, leads one to believe that this is one of those wholesome plays which will live for years and endear themselves to the public by repetition. Wherever possible return dates were arranged it is extremely gratifying to record that the attendance and receipts were increased in every instance. The public are not slow to appreciate a meritorious theatrical attraction and are always willing to bestow their patronage upon one which has proven worthy of it, nor are they clamoring for noisy or risque plays, as some managers appear to think, for the enthusiasm which greets the return of "Sweet Clover" in every city, proves beyond a doubt that pure, sweet and wholesome plays, when presented with a capable cast, are always appreciated.

"THE VENDETTA."

Marie Corelli's remarkable novel, "The Vendetta," which has been brilliantly dramatized into what is on record as the dramatic sensation of the past decade, will be the attraction at the Carman next Saturday night. In its present form, as "Fabio Romani," it is, if anything, more interesting than the famous book, which it is said, had the largest sale in the history of novelism. This fact alone should be a convincing point of merit. However, the management have stopped at nothing, nor considered expense in production or cast, which is composed of splendid players of importance, headed by John B. Arthur.

Work Commenced On Foxboro Tracks.

Peterboro Examiner: Five box cars of Italians and their properties left Renzetti's boarding houses, Bethune street, yesterday morning, bound for Foxboro, where the siding will be raised to the same elevation as the main track. It was thought the work would have commenced a little sooner than it did, but owing to the fact that the frost was in the ground the operations had to be postponed until the present time.

FASHIONS IN NEW YORK.

New York modistes are just now up to their ears in work, preparing trousseaux and gowns for Spring weddings, says Helen Berkeley Loyd in the May "Delineator." All the newest bridal gowns are cut on princess lines, but a distinctive feature is the abbreviation of the princess as we have known it, into the "baby princess." The skirt, with the addition of a Watteau plait in the back opens out into train, and is the newest effect in wedding gowns. The Watteau plait is not essential but as it adds dignity and grace, and helps hold the veil in position, its use is advisable. Silk and cotton rajahs, muslins and linens have a prominent place in the trousseau.

Linen has a particularly strong vogue, and is used for morning frocks in white and colors in sheerest quality and delicate tints for the afternoon gowns. The new parasols this season are simply beautiful, but not beautifully simple. They are made to match the afternoon gowns and show the same trimming. One finds them of hand-painted chiffon, bordered and inserted with duchess lace, and of the sheerest Persian lawn wrought in the daintiest lingerie effects. Many of the handles are expensively jeweled. The sticks are delicately enameled, and some are extra long and have a hinge near the catch that they may be folded when out of service.

MR. WALTER ALFORD, OF THIS CITY, GETS CONTRACT FOR ERECTION OF HOUSE OF REFUGE—HIS TENDER WAS FOR $31,000.

A special session of the County Council was held yesterday afternoon, Warden Lancaster and all the members, excepting Mr. Morton, were in attendance. After the Council had been called to order the Clerk stated the object of the meeting, namely, to pass a by-law in regard to changing the county road at Corbyville, and for general business.

Mr. Macfarlane moved the suspension of the rules for the purpose of introducing a by-law relating to the changing of the county gravel road at Corbyville. — Carried.

The by-law was read a first time and referred to the Committee of the Whole on By-laws.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole on By-laws, Mr. Dryden in the chair.

Messrs. Farley and Denyes were of the opinion that the Corby Company should keep this portion of the road in a proper state of repair for five years.

The Clerk was of the opinion that it would be unwise to add that to the by-law, as it had been advertised, and in the agreement with the Corby Company no such regulation was suggested. If any change was made now the by-law could not now be passed.

The by-law was read clause by clause and passed without any amendments being made.

On motion the committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

On motion Mr. Ware, of Tweed village, addressed the Council. He stated that he was present to represent the Electric Light Company of Tweed. Some two years ago the water overflowed the dam of the company and flowed over the gravel road for a distance of some 500 or 600 feet. Some damage was sustained and the company, he said, was prepared to contribute to the county a certain sum to assist in placing that road in a proper state of repair.

Dr. Bowlby, Reeve of Tweed, addressed the Council in reference to the road in question. He said that the road near the river needed to be raised a little and then it would be safe from flooding, which sometimes occurred now in the spring. He felt convinced that the Electric Company of Tweed would do what was right in the matter of placing the road in repair. The stop logs in the Electric Company's dam were not, perhaps, taken out as quickly as possible. He thought it would be a great hardship if the company had to remove its dam or had to build a new road in another locality.

Mr. Macfarlane was of the opinion that at the present meeting this matter could not be settled, and as it was in the hands of the Finance Committee that committee could attend to it.

This explanation was satisfactory.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole on Ways and Means, Mr. Nicolson in the chair. The following accounts were passed;

Greenleaf & Sons	$ 5.95
N. Allen	209.25
J. Cornelius	39.88
Central Prison, for clothing	31.75
W. McGie	22.45
S. Masson	129.22
Treasurer of Rawdon township	75.00

On motion the contract for supplying bread to the jail was given to Mr. E. S Sierichs at 11c for four-pound loaves.

On motion the Clerk was authorized to advertise a by-law for the issuing of debentures to the extent of $27,000, for the erection of a House of Refuge.

The committee rose and reported. Report received and adopted.

On motion the Council adjourned sine die.

HOUSE OF REFUGE.

Upon the adjournment of the Council, the special committee of the Council, which have in hand the matter of erecting the House of Refuge, met to consider the tenders. Mr. Miller, of Toronto, the architect, was also present.

A large number of tenders, the majority of which were for only certain portions of the work, were opened, and as the hour of 6 o'clock had arrived the committee adjourned until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

THE CONTRACT AWARDED.

The committee reassembled at 10 o'clock this morning, and, after comparing the tenders submitted and computing the various separate tenders for the work, awarded the contract to Mr. Walter Alford, of this city, for the complete building, at $31,000.

Work upon the structure will be commenced at an early date, but, according to the stipulations the structure need not be completed this year.

The building, as designed by the architect, Mr. G. W. Miller, of Toronto, will have a frontage of 120 feet and will be 110 feet deep. It will be three stories in height and in addition there will be an attic. The facing of the building will be of brick and stone.

In conversation with The Intelligencer, Mr. Alford stated that it was his intention to erect the superstructure and roofing this year and during next winter he would do the interior portion of the building. It is expected that by the 1st of September, 1907, the building will be ready for occupancy.

SPRING ADVICE.

DO NOT DOSE WITH PURGATIVES AND WEAKENING MEDICINES—WHAT PEOPLE NEED AT THIS SEASON IS A TONIC.

Not exactly sick — but not feeling quite well. That's the spring feeling. You are easily tired, appetite variable, sometimes headaches and a feeling of depression. Or perhaps pimples and eruptions appear on the face, or you have twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order, that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble. Don't dose yourself with purgative medicines in the hope that you can put the blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system, and weaken instead of giving strength. What you do need is a tonic medicine that will make new, rich, red blood, build up the weakened nerves and thus give you new health and strength. And the one medicine to do this speedily and surely is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which makes weak, easily tired and ailing men and women feel bright, active, and strong. If you need a medicine this spring try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and you will never regret it. This medicine has cured thousands and thousands in every part of the world and what it has done for others it can easily do for you.

Medicine dealers everywhere sell these pills or you can get them direct from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

FREAKS OF FORTUNE

WEALTH QUICKLY ACHIEVED WENT AWAY AS FAST.

Nothing in real life is more grim than the way in which fortune sought or unsought, will suddenly smile upon an individual, and then with equal suddenness withdraw her favors. Such cases, of course, are to be seen by scores at gambling resorts like Monte Carlo. Quite recently a young Austrian officer won £23,000 at the table in five days and lost every penny of it on the sixth.

The vicissitudes of fortune were never more vividly illustrated, says London Answers, than by the evidence given recently in a bankruptcy case in the Sydney Court.

The bankrupt, a mining engineer, had won and lost no fewer than six fortunes in his lifetime. Once he made £7,000 in a single week by buying a mine and selling it again. So soon as he was paid the money he went to Wyoming and invested it, and some three thousand besides, in purchasing an interest in another—a copper—mine. Before night came the news that the copper lode had suddenly "pinched out." The investors were beggared.

Maximillian Hershal, a wealthy miser, was found one day in his wretched room dying and carried to a hospital. At once he asked that his adopted daughter might be sent for. On her arrival he told her that he had left her all his wealth—over £300,000. Breath was failing him fast, but after a short pause he began to speak again, in low, broken whispers. Suddenly he fell back and expired. He had not revealed the secret of where his bonds or cash were hidden. Search proved useless, and the poor girl, wealthy for a minute, went back to work for 15 shillings a week.

The dog that was distinguished by being left $20,000 some time ago by its dying owner is not doing well. It is reported to have turned sickly and dissatisfied with life.

The executors seem to think that since the dog can en[illegible] the money only while i[illegible] only proper thing for th[illegible] to spend as much of it as p[illegible]ble on the dog's immediate comfort.

They give him massage, chicken, mush and cream and other delicacies, until the poor dog, created for a different kind of life, is surfeited and sick.

Instead of enjoying its money, the lucky dog is losing its doghood, cannot look an honest dog in the face, and no doubt in its heart envies the mongrel curs of the streets that, though kicked about, have the blessing of independence, and, because they are half-starved, have the joy of appetite when gnawing a bone.

Of course, there is nothing in the Constitution or the statutes that prevents a rich man from willing his money away foolishly. Since he cannot take it with him, he must necessarily leave it to somebody, or something; and, though it is a sad sight to see a good, honest dog sickened and ruined by it, still it is better that it is a dog than that it should be a human being.

Unfortunately most rich men, with more money than sense, inflict upon their own children the same woeful condition that has been put upon this too much-moneyed dog.

To be sure, a dog is somewhat at a disadvantage. It cannot find as many ways of spending money on itself as a young man can. The dog's wants and pleasures and vices are only elemental. When its stomach is filled—and the cheaper and coarser the food the better it likes it—the dog has come to the limit of its pleasures and wants only sleep, which costs nothing.

The dog's primitive mind has not cultured to a fine art the expenditure of money to its own ruin, as has the superior mind of man.

Small wonder that this decent dog finds its $20,000 inheritance an injury and a burden that is debasing its mind, destroying its spirit and ruining its health.

But again, it is better that it is a dog than that it should be a human being thus cursed and crushed by having more money thrust upon him than his system can assimilate.

The regular semi-annual meeting of the Belleville Football League was held in the Y.M.C.A. last night. It was decided that the Executive Committee should meet on Monday, the 23rd, at 8 p.m., in the Y.M.C.A. and all teams wishing to join could do so by sending two representatives to the meeting and paying the admittance fee at that meeting.

The following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mr. H. Corby.

Hon. Vice-Presidents—Prof. Doxsee and Dr. Goldsmith.

President—Mr. H. A. Fish.

Vice-President—Mr. C. Stroud.

Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Karl B. Conger.

All interested in forming a Junior League are requested to attend a meeting at the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday at 7.30 p.m.

Mount Vesuvius And Its History.

The recent activity of Mount Vesuvius coincided ominously with the phenomena which preceded and accompanied the two great and calamitous eruptions of the volcano which history records. Only twice before have such terrible eruptions of fire and lava and red-hot ashes and such terrifying earthquakes been experienced in this region, and each time the disaster was accompanied by awful loss of human life. The only difference between the circumstances lately described by press despatches and those accompanying the beginning of the great eruptions of the first and seventeenth centuries is that these came after long quiescence while this tremendous outburst follows a period of comparative activity extending over many years.

From the dawn of history to the beginning of the Christian era Vesuvius gave no hint of its deadly possibilities. Settlers by thousands dwelt on its fertile flanks and cities and villages grew in its shade without a suspicion of any volcanic danger. But about the year 63 A.D. a succession of earthquakes spread alarm through the country, continuing with more or less frequency and severity for sixteen years, when, one August day in 79, occurred the great explosion which overwhelmed Pompeii, Herculaneum and Stabiae and the surrounding country, with inestimable destruction of life and property. Then, satiated, the volcano slept again for nearly fifteen hundred years. In 1631, after six months of gradually increasing earthquakes, Vesuvius burst out in another devastating paroxysm, hurling floods of fire and lava and boiling mud for many miles, laying waste great stretches of country and killing eighteen thousand people.

Since this great convulsion the volcano has never been wholly quiet. At frequent intervals it has given terrifying evidence of its ability, especially in 1766, 1779, 1794 and 1822, but never to such an extent as today. However, it is improbable that this eruption will prove as violent as on the two historic occasions when the mountain cleared itself of the stored wrath and force of centuries. The smaller explosions must have prevented the accumulation of any such store of destruction as was then let loose. Even if this disturbance should excel in violence all others, modern methods of conveyance and of spreading information ensure against any such loss of life. Already one town has been destroyed, yet the cables mention no fatalities, and from other towns in danger special trains hurried the people away.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Henderson, Bayside, a most happy event was celebrated on Wednesday evening, April 11th, when their oldest daughter, Ellen J. (Helen), was united in marriage to Mr. Albert Juby, of Sidney. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. W. Foley, of Bayside, in the presence of the families of the young people. The bride was attended by her sister, Beatrice, while Mr. James Juby, of Peterboro, supported the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold necklet with brooch, to the bridesmaid a pearl crescent, and to the groomsman a gold pin. The happy couple will live in Peterboro, where Mr. Juby has been employed to take charge of a butter making factory. Mrs. Juby's many friends, who will greatly miss her in church, Sunday school and social circles, join heartily in wishing her a most happy and prosperous married life.

Happy at Last

Her Husband no longer gets Intoxicated—Samaria Tasteless Remedy Cured Him.

This lady says: "For the first time since I have been married I can be happy and content—my husband is cured of his bad habit of drinking. Several months ago you sent me a free sample of your remedy at my request, and without my husband's knowledge I gave it to him in his tea and food. I then got a full treatment and gave it regularly. It is wonderful, and I cannot sufficiently thank you for the blessed change it has brought to my home."

THE FEAST OF FRIENDSHIP.

(London Punch.)

A writer in Macmillan's has noted that "by a curious inversion the less friendly our guests happen to be the more lavish is our display of hospitality. Our intimates and dearest friends get pot-luck."

When Brown invites me home to dine
In formidable state,
I note the choice, expensive wine,
The quantity of plate,
The costly courses that they bring,
The culinary feat
Exemplified in ev'rything
They offer me to eat.

I heave a surreptitious sigh,
Which indicates regret,
Because I know that Brown and I
Are merely strangers yet.

With worthy Robinson as host
I have a plainer meal;
The circling bottle cannot boast
Such splendor in the seal;
We have a monster piece of beef
On a gigantic dish,
And often, to my great relief,
We skip the soup and fish.

I gather, from these homely ways,
That I am getting on
(To use a plain, familiar phrase)
With worthy Robinson.

But when I dine with dear old Jones
We revel at our ease
On bottle beer and mutton bones
And half a pound of cheese.
There is no plate, the cloth is soiled,
With unconsidered stains;
The cabbages are badly boiled,
But nobody complains.

When Jones, God bless him! offers me
A meal of odds and ends
(Without the last apology)
I know that we are friends.

Invention still acknowledges the motherhood of necessity. The ice crop of Illinois is said to have been short during the past winter, while the snow crop almost attained the dignity of overproduction. To meet the novel conditions, an Illinois ice man has rigged an impromptu press and has filled an ice house with baled snow, which he proposes to retail to his patrons during the summer

Henniker Heaton's scheme of a shilling house-to-house telephone is meeting with cordial encouragement. His object is to bring the telephone to the millions. "The householder of the future," he says, "will provide for it, and it will be installed in every new villa with the water and the electric light. By the payment of one shilling weekly the head of the house will be placed in direct communication with the baker, the butcher, the fishmonger, the doctor, the police and friends."

When the New Ontario mining bill becomes law a man in order to hold a mining location will have to mine on it. One calculation has it that the street railway strike in Winnipeg cost $70,000. That sounds high for a not very protracted struggle; but things in the West are generally high. At any rate it cost more than the experience it secured was worth, and that is the case in most strikes.

A CORRECTION.

(Church Times.)

"Which is the first and most important sacrament?" asked a Sunday school teacher of a girl preparing for confirmation.

"Marriage," was the prompt response.

"No, baptism is the first and most important sacrament," the teacher corrected.

"Not in our family," said the pupil, haughtily; "we are respectable."

Filling a Full Bottle.

At a race course the other day a sharper wagered £5 he could put more water into a black bottle than any person present. An individual present at once filled the bottle with water and passed it to the sharper, saying: "There: I think she's as full as she can get. If you can crowd any more water into her, mister, go ahead."

Without saying a word the sharper corked the bottle tightly. Then he turned it upside down, and in the large hollow which is found at the bottom of most bottles he poured about a gill of water. "I'll trouble you to hand over the money," he said to the stakeholder when he had done the trick.

Jackals and Crocodile Eggs.

Jackals and hyenas are very fond of crocodile eggs. The former is the more successful poacher of the two. Natives of central Africa say that the jackal has sixteen eyes, with one of which he watches the eggs and with the fifteen others he looks out for the crocodile. The hyena, on the other hand, being very greedy, has all his eyes on the eggs and so often falls a victim to the watchful crocodile in motionless hiding. The natives say, too, that the crocodile sometimes knocks its prey off the bank or off the canoe with its tail and then seizes it with its wide open jaws.

GOOD PROMOTERS.

They Must Possess the Power of Inspiring Confidence.

A story is told about a young fellow who applied at a big banking establishment for a position and who upon being told that all the clerkships were filled said quite confidentially, "I've never worked at the promoting business, but can't you send me to some friend of yours who needs a promoter?"

Strange indeed it is that almost every one of the successful promoters of the present day is a man who went into the exceedingly difficult work with scarcely more preparation than had gone the venturesome youth of this yarn.

Gifted with good address, control of the English language, fluency of speech and determination, a man who embarks in the field has in his possession the qualities that have made many promoters rich and powerful. Many of them were lawyers to begin with. Others were life insurance agents. One or two sold stock in a small way. Gradually each of these men came to see that carving out a new way for himself would give him a wider and more substantial future. And then at that moment the promoter was born.

But whether these promoters have won their spurs by organizing big concerns or corporations or by selling those already in the field there is not one of them but will tell you that most of his success was due to his power to inspire confidence. A promoter that can't make "the other fellow" believe in him and in his proposition might better be cleaning the streets. He never will succeed.

The successful promoter must be able not only to look men in the eye, but he must also be able to face the most discouraging circumstances and fight his way through them. "Fail" is a word the meaning of which he must never learn.

And the rewards? They range from millions to a fee of $7 that was once paid to a promoter who successfully promoted the amalgamation of two competing bootblacking establishments.

THE HINDOO FOOT.

It Is Quite Different From Ours In Its Formation.

In the native quarters of the towns of India the strange spectacle may be seen of a butcher seizing a piece of meat in his hands and cutting it in two with a stroke of his knife held between the first and second toes of his foot. The shoemaker uses no last, but turns the unfinished shoe with his feet, while his hands are busy in shaping it. So the carpenter holds with his great toe the board he is cutting, and the wood turner handles his tools as well with his toes as with his fingers.

This use of the feet to assist the hands in their labor is not, however, the mere result of practice, but is principally due to the fact that the Hindoo foot is quite different from ours in its anatomical conformation. The ankle of the Hindoo and the articulation of the back of the foot permit considerable lateral motion. Then the toes possess a surprising mobility. The great toe can be moved freely in all directions, and the first and second toes are separated by a wide space, sometimes as much as five-eighths of an inch across at the base of the toes and two inches at their extremities.

The articulation of the hip is also peculiar, and this renders it easier to use the toes in handling the objects by enabling the Hindoo to sit in a squatting posture much more comfortably than we can do. A similar formation of the feet and toes is found among the Annamese, but it is not, as might be supposed, a common thing among barbarous and savage tribes.

One naturally thinks of the resemblance to a monkey which a human being using both feet and hands in the manner described above must present, and yet the Hindoo foot is not at all like the foot of an ape or monkey. The great toe is not opposed to the other toes like a thumb, as occurs with the monkey, and accordingly the pedal dexterity of the Hindoos is not to be taken as an indication of simian descent.

Other Uses For Teeth.

The teeth, says the Medical Fortnightly, are said to have a higher office than that commonly assigned to them—namely, that of merely crushing or masticating the food. They are to be regarded as endowed with a tactile sense, a discriminating faculty corresponding to that possessed by the muscles and nerves of the eye and ear. They have an extreme delicacy of discernment both as to whether the objects comminuted be suitable as food or such as will irritate the delicate lining of the digestive passages. They speedily detect the smallest particle of cinder that has found its way into a freshly baked biscuit.

A Transmigrator.

Black Sarah was busily employed about our small northern kitchen when I had occasion to go out there and by way of being pleasant said, "You are from the south, are you not, Sarah?"

"Law, yes, miss!" was the answer.

"Born in the south?" I continued.

"Originally bawn in Richmond, miss," was the astonishing reply.

Our Way In Life.

It does not take much to determine the lives of most of us. We naturally follow the examples about us, and, as a rule, we rise or fall according to the strongest current in which we live.

Wipe out the past, trust the future and live in a glorious now.—Towne.

THE CHAMPAGNE MAKER.

Why His Face Is Always Decorated With Scars.

The Frenchman's face was hacked and notched.

"Have you been a duelist?" one asked.

"No, no," the man replied. "I have been a champagne maker." He touched his face. "These honorable nicks," he said, "are champagne scars.

"Champagne scars," he went on, "decorate the visages of all the workers in the underground champagne mills of Rheims. They are caused by the bursting of the bottles. About one bottle of champagne in every ten bursts.

"There are miles and miles of champagne caves in Rheims, caves cut in the solid limestone rock, where, in a constant temperature of 45 degrees, millions of bottles of wine refine and ripen.

"The workers down there smell nothing but champagne all day long, champagne escaping from burst bottles, and as the turners move along the racks—each turns 35,000 bottles daily—they are continually saluted with explosions. Bang! And the glass splinters fly, and a little fountain of champagne perfumes the damp air.

"Day after day each bottle must be turned, turned fifty times altogether, till the sediment in it has all mounted up and concentrated itself around the cork. Then the corkers remove the corks, let the sediment thickened wine in the neck of the bottle blow off and skillfully replace the cork again.

"The corkers' and turners' work is dangerous. These men are nearly all scarred like me."

WAYS OF PENGUINS.

These Birds Lay Out Home Sites and Build Cities.

Penguins mostly spend their lives on the water, but when, during the breeding season, they are obliged to seek the shore they establish cities, many acres often being laid out in squares, composed of what might be called streets, running at right angles. The birds not only lay out their city after picking up all the loose stones till the whole place is as smooth as a board floor, but they take possession in couples, each pair selecting a home site, not to build a nest, but merely to secure a particular spot on the bare ground.

The hen lays one egg, and only one, and during the time of incubation the male bird brings her food from the sea or sits on the egg awhile himself if she wants to go out and take a swim. The lady penguins grow so fat and sleek under the good care of their faithful mates that they are eagerly hunted at the breeding season.

The old birds are tough and fishy, but the tender young matrons are in great demand, both for their oil and flesh. Even the eggs have an oily and fishy flavor and taste as hens' eggs might if cooked in paraffin. The penguin has wings, like other birds, but they are altogether too short to fly with, though they assist him somewhat in waddling over the ground.

Nature's Perch Clamp.

"Chickens and other birds roosting on a perch no bigger than a lead pencil never fall off. Do you know why?" said a farmer.

"The tendon of a roosting bird's leg is so constructed that when the leg is bent at the knee the claws have to contract—can't open till the leg is straightened out again.

"Thus a chicken gets on its perch, bends its knee to be comfortable and with that bending locks itself, as with a key, to the wood. It can't fall off. Put a chicken on your finger and then make it sit down. Its claws will clamp your finger tight and be unable to let go until the bird stands up again. Nature, very kindly, has so constructed roosting birds that the act of settling down clamps them to their perch."

Shelley's Heart.

A well known and very prominent English family are the possessors of a remarkable relic in the shape of a human heart preserved in a jar of alcohol. It appears that Shelley, the poet, feared that there was a chance of being buried alive. To guard against any such a contingency he left directions that his heart should be removed immediately after death. The queer relic may still be seen by any one who visits Bascombe manor, Bournemouth, England.

Force of Perseverance.

There are two ways of attaining an important end—force and perseverance. Force falls to the lot only of the privileged few, but austere and sustained perseverance can be practiced by the most insignificant. Its silent power grows irresistible with time.

THE PLANET URANUS.

Oddities a Voyage to This Gigantic World Would Disclose.

If Uranus, which is a star of about the sixth magnitude, were a planet like those little ones called asteroids, which are being discovered by the dozen every year, it could not have much claim upon popular attention, but Uranus is really a gigantic world, more than sixty times as large as ours. Its vast distance, about 1,700,000,000 miles from the earth, is what causes it to look so small. Uranus has four moons, which revolve backward in their orbits—that is to say, they revolve from east to west around Uranus, while Uranus goes, like all the other planets, from west to east around the sun. It is believed that Uranus rotates backward on its axis also. Moreover, the axis of that great, strange globe lies in such a direction that in the course of its year, which is equal to eighty-four of our years, the sun shines almost perpendicularly first upon one pole and then upon the other. Measured by our time standard, there are forty years of constant daylight, followed by forty years of unbroken night, around the poles of Uranus. And the sun rises in the west and sets in the east there. But the sun looks very small when viewed from Uranus—only one four-hundredth as large as it appears to us. Still it sheds upon that planet 1,500 times as much light as the full moon sends to the earth, so that daylight upon Uranus, while faint compared with the blaze of a terrestrial noonday, is nevertheless a very respectable kind of illumination.

CAKE AN OLD INSTITUTION.

The Ancients Made and Ate It, but It Was a Simple Affair.

The ancients made cake, but it was not the rich, highly seasoned and flavored confection which we indulge in nowadays. They had plain cakes made with flour and water, some of them without a suspicion of sweet or flavor. Some of them were not unlike our plainest crackers and were often eaten as we eat bread.

Wedding cake was an institution among them, as with us, but the cake was a plain one and was broken above the head of the bride as she went to her new home. This was a special feature of Roman marriages 2,000 years ago. The breaking of the cake was part of a solemn ceremony. All of the cakes of ancient history are plain and simple. It is only as we come down to more modern times that we hear of spices and fruits and all of the rich and luxurious ingredients in which present day cakemakers delight. In Queen Elizabeth's time spice cakes and buns were eaten at weddings. From these the fashion and fancy grew for all sorts of elaborate and deliciously unwholesome combinations until there seems to be a perpetual struggle for something new and more unusual to stir into the cake of the period.

Measuring Medicine.

Use a medicine glass with the amount of each spoonful and drop marked upon it. Teaspoonfuls and tablespoonfuls are always mentioned, but as these vary in size it is not safe to rely upon them. Drops, too, cannot be properly measured without a glass. Keep the medicine glass perfectly clean. It should be washed out after each dose, in readiness for the next time. It is desirable that if the patient is to have medicine with a strong smell, oils, etc., to keep a glass specially for them, letting it soak in hot water for half an hour after use to remove all disagreeable odor. It is impossible to cleanse such a glass in a few moments. When the medicine is being poured out hold the label uppermost in order that it may not become stained with any drops escaping down the side of the bottle.

Mozart and Bretzner.

When Mozart was at the height of his fame he composed the music for Bretzner's "Belmont und Konstanze" ("The Abduction From the Seraglio") at the request of the Emperor Joseph II. The author of the drama was so angry at this that he inserted the following notice in the Leipziger Zeitung: "A certain fellow of the name of Mozart has dared to misuse my drama, 'Belmont und Konstanze,' for an opera text. I hereby solemnly protest against this invasion of my rights, and I reserve to myself further procedures. (Signed), Christoph Friedrich Bretzner, author of 'Rauschchen.'"

A Ground Hog Case.

"A ground hog case" is a case of absolute necessity—one in which the reward of perseverance is certain and the necessity for perseverance is imperative. Its origin is told in this story: A boy was seen digging vigorously with a grub hoe at the mouth of a hole in which a ground hog had taken refuge. He was asked if he thought he would get the ground hog, to which he replied with scorn: "Catch him? Why, yes; I'm bound to catch him; we're out of meat."

Johnny's Faith.

"But why do you think Johnny believes so thoroughly in the efficacy of prayer?"

"Because when I suggested that he pray for a little brother he refused to do it and prayed for a goat and a red wagon instead."

Gospel of Clothes.

It is a fact nowadays that fine feathers do make fine birds and that people are judged more by their appearance than their character.—Lady Violet Greville in London Graphic.

Opponents think that they refute us when they repeat their own opinions and take no notice of ours.—Goethe.

ALPINE ROOT DIGGERS.

Throughout the whole chain of the Alps there are men who make it their business to search for and root up the gentian, arnica, puffballs and other Alpine flowers.

High up in the mountains the root grubber, generally an old man, builds a little hut. He clambers precipices to the edges, where the blue flowers grow; or, if he cannot ascend, he lets himself down to their place of refuge by a rope fastened to a pine above.

He wanders to a long distance from his hut and does not always trouble to return to it at night, finding shelter under a rock. Next morning he spreads all the roots he has collected on a rock, where they may dry.

He collects herbs as well as roots, and the resin from the pine besides. When the summer is over and there are signs of snow, the root grubber collects all together in his little hut and finally transports the whole of his six months' collection to the valley.

The arnica and some other roots used in medicine are readily disposed of. From the gentian is made the favorite gentian brandy, which is considered the very elixir of life by the mountain folk. In other days, when gentians grew in great numbers, the root digger was able to realize a good income from his perilous occupation, but it is otherwise now.

THE TIMOROUS KUBUS.

They Live In Sumatra and Are the Shiest People Alive.

There is a very singular race of people in Sumatra, the Kubus, who are too timorous and shy to mix with the other races of the island and dwell in the recesses of the forests. They are looked on as inferiors by the Malays and thought to be little better than beasts. Such is their shyness that they will never willingly face a stranger.

Their trade with the Malayans is consequently carried on in a strange manner. The trader announces his arrival by beating a gong, and he then retires. The Kubus approach, put their forest treasures on the ground, beat a gong and retreat. The trader returns and lays his commodities down in quantities sufficient, as he thinks, for the purchase of the goods on sale. Then he retires, and the Kubus reappear and consider the bargain.

And so, after more withdrawals and approaches and gong beatings, the respective parties come to an understanding and carry off independently their bargains. The Kubus in their wild state do not bury their dead. They live on snakes, grubs, fruits and the flesh of any deer or pigs they can slay. They are skillful spearmen and throw stones with marvelous accuracy.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Meals In Schools.

In Paris the city government gives every school child one full meal a day. This does not tend to pauperize the children or to lessen the responsibility of the parents, for all those who can afford to pay for the meal are expected to do so. On the other hand, no jealousy or contempt can be felt by the richer children for their starved comrades, for all are supplied with the same metal token, which has to be given up in exchange for the meal. The "cantine scolaire," as this municipal soup kitchen is called, is not confined to Paris. In the provinces the "soupe scolaire," its equivalent, has sent up the school attendance by leaps and bounds. Here, however, instead of paying for their midday meal all those who can possibly do so are encouraged to bring to school their handful of vegetables and the like, and the contributions are all put into the common soup.

Madrid's Throne Room.

The throne room of the royal palace at Madrid is one of the most magnificent in the world. Decorated in red and gold, it contains rock crystal chandeliers, colossal looking glasses of the finest quality, marble tables and priceless porphyry. The ceiling is painted by Tiepolo with the "Majesty of Spain," in illustration of the virtue of the kings and the manliness of the people, who are represented in the different costumes of the provinces. Here the sovereigns of Spain receive on grand occasions when alive and when dead are laid out in state.

Women Sailors.

Women sailors are employed in Denmark, Norway and Finland and are often found to be excellent mariners. In Denmark several women are employed as state officials at sea, and particularly in the pilot service. They go out to meet the incoming ships; they climb nimbly out of their boats; they show their official diploma, and they steer the newcomer safely into the harbor. It is the same in Finland.

And He Got Her.

Mr. Millyuns—Is it my daughter you want or is it her money? Jack Gingleton (amateur champion for 100 yards)—Sir! You surprise me. You know very well that I'm an amateur athlete. Mr. Millyuns—What's that got to do with it? Jack Gingleton—A great deal, sir. It debars me from taking part in any event for money.

Strong.

Fair Customer—Have you any good butter? Dairyman—Certainly, madam. My reputation rests upon my butter. Fair Customer—If the last I got of you was a fair sample, your reputation certainly rests on a strong foundation.—Chicago News.

Disappointed love makes the misery of youth, disappointed ambition that of manhood and successful avarice that of age.—Goldsmith.

AN ECHO.

There is scarcely anything in nature that exerts the fascination over every one alike than does an echo, and common as it may become there is always a feeling of mystery about it that holds us as with a charm. Of course we all know that it is merely the reflection of a sound from some object, as the side of a house or a rock or a hill, but often we cannot tell how far away the object is that causes it. Here is a way to tell every time:

Holding a watch in your hand, shout a single syllable, as "Ho!" or "Ha!" and count the number of seconds from the time you shout till the sound comes back to you. Now, sound travels at the rate of 1,125 feet a second, so the number of seconds that elapse multiplied by 1,125 will give the distance in feet traveled by the voice in going to the object and back to you again, and one-half of that number will be the number of feet away that object is. Of course the object may be only a few hundred feet away, in which case the sound will come back in less than a second, but you may determine the distance, nevertheless, by calling a single syllable—"Ha!"—and calling it again as you hear the echo, not before or after it, but just with it.

With a little practice you can do this. Repeat the call ten or twelve times, counting the seconds between the first call and the last echo. Suppose, for example, that the time is seven seconds and that you called the syllable ten times. Then each echo took seventenths of a second, and the distance, found in the same way as before, is about 394 feet.—Exchange.

WATCHING THE BUILDERS.

Fire Insurance Folks Keep an Eye on Construction Methods.

A builder speaking of the watchfulness of fire insurance companies in New York city in the erection of buildings in that city says:

"Insurance companies in placing policies upon so called fireproof buildings do not accept the word of the builders and contractors, nor rest content with the evidence submitted by the city building department. Their own experts make an examination. Such an examination is made not at the behest of politicians or in the interest of a group of men, but by technical experts whose reports must be exact, detailed and exhaustive in the interests of shrewd business men. The insurance underwriters have their own corps of expert engineers and fireproof agents in the field all of the time. When a large building is in course of construction in New York these experts of the underwriters watch every stage of the development. They have no power to stop work on the building as city building inspectors have when the building laws are not complied with, but they possess another sort of check which is fully as effectual. The builders, contractors or owners, or all three, are notified that further insurance policies will not be made on the building until certain remedies are made."

Earrings.

Earrings have always been among the most favorite ornaments of nearly all the nations of the world, certainly with those which are called civilized. Indeed among the Persians, Babylonians and Carthaginians they were worn by men as well as women. They were always worn by Greek women from Hera in the "Iliad" down to the Venus de Medici, whose ears were pierced for the reception of earrings. Pliny tells us that there was no part of dress upon which greater expense was lavished among the Romans. Many Egyptian earrings of very beautiful design have been preserved, and these antique designs have been imitated in modern times.

Match War Erected a Fountain.

Probably the price of no other article in common use has undergone such a revolution as the match. The first friction matches in 1830—the "Congreves"—were placed on the London market in tin boxes of fifties at half a crown a box, with a piece of glass paper for striking purposes thrown in. Messrs. Bryant and May took a leading part in defeating Mr. Lowe's proposed tax on lucifers, as they were then called, and in recognition of their services a public drinking fountain was erected at Bow.—London Mail.

Not Well Enough For Hospital.

House physicians, when they wish to empty a bed of a chronic case, will welcome the new and original excuse contained in the following letter: "Dear Sister—When next the doctor attends mother, will you please ask him to dismiss mother, as she does not feel well, and oblige, yours truly, ——."

Necessity.

"Perkins has separated from his wife and gone to live in bachelor apartments."

"What did he do that for?"

"He said he couldn't live without some of the comforts of home."

Politeness.

Politeness is a kind of anaesthetic which envelops the asperities of our character, so that other people be not wounded by them. We should never be without it, even when we contend with the rude.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Steady for Cattle, Lower for Sheep—U. S. Markets Easier.

London, April 18.—Cattle are quoted at 10c to 11½c per lb.; refrigerator beef, 8½c per lb.; sheep, dressed, 13c to 13½c per lb.; lambs, 14c, dressed weight.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, April 18.—(Special.)—Receipts were 200 cattle, 50 milch cows, 3000 calves, 2000 hogs, 50 sheep and lambs. The market for hogs was weaker and prices declined 10c to 15c per cwt., selling to increased supplies and only fair demand. Sales of selected lots were made at $7.65 to $7.75 and mixed lots at $7.50 per cwt., weighed off cars. The butchers seemed to be out in full force, but the supply of catle was much too small for the demand and prices ruled higher. Prime beeves sold at 5½c per lb.; pretty good cattle at 4¼c to 5¼c per lb., and comon stock at 3c to 4c. Milch cows sold at $25 to $50 each, but there were no choice cows among them. Calves sold at $1 to $6 each, large lots selling at $1.50 to $2.50 each. A lot of 10 good sheep, mostly yearlings, sold at $7.50 each. Spring lambs sold at $2.25 to $5 each.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET.

Veals—Receipts, 500 head; slow and 25c lower at $5 to $6.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 1300 head; slow and 5c lower; heavy and mixed, $6.90 to $6.93; yorkers, $6.85 to $6.90; pigs, $6.80 to $6.85; roughs, $6 to $6.20; stags, $4.25 to $4.75.

Sheep and lambs,—Receipts, 9000 head; slow; lambs 10c to 15c and yearlings 25c higher; lambs, $6.25 to $7.20, a few at $7.25; yearlings, $6.25 to $6.50; wethers, $6 to $6.25; ewes, $5.50 to $5.75; sheep, mixed, $3 to $5.75.

NEW YORK LIVE STOCK.

New York, April 18.—Beeves—Receipts, [illegible] steers very dull and 10c to 15c lower; bulls steady; cows uneven; some sizes lower; steers, $4.80 to $5.85; bulls, $3.40 to $4.40; extra, $4.65; cows, $1.75 to $3.50; fat oxen, $4.75; exports to-day, 527 cattle and 2850 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 3850; demand fair, but prices 25c to 50c lower; veals, $4 to $6.75; choice lots, $7; culls, $3.50 to $4.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 8808; sheep steady to strong; lambs firm; clipped sheep steady; clipped sheep, $3.50 to $4.65; choice wethers, $5.20; wooled sheep, $5.50 to $5.75; clipped lambs, $5.12½ to $5.65; wooled lambs, $7 to $7.35.

Hogs—Receipts, 1374; market weak; state hogs, $7 to $7.10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, April 18.—Cattle—Receipts, 17,000; market steady to a shade lower; common to choice steers, $4.50 to $6.25; cows, $3.25 to $4.00; heifers, $2.75 to $5.35; bulls, $2.60 to $4.25; calves, $2.75 to $6.25; stockers and feeders, $2.75 to $4.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 20,000; market 5c lower; choice to prime heavy, $6.75 to $6.80; medium to good heavy, $6.70 to $6.75; butchers' weights, $6.70 to $6.80; good to choice heavy mixed, $6.70 to $6.75; packing, $5.80 to $6.75.

Sheep—Receipts, 16,000; market strong to 10c higher; sheep, $4.25 to $6.40; yearlings, $5 to $6.25; lambs, $4.75 to $7.

One Thousand Injured And Property Loss is $100,000,000

First Shock of Two Minutes' Duration Came at Dawn, and Panic-Stricken Inhabitants Rushed Out In Their Night Attire Only to Be Crushed to Death—Water Supply Was Cut Off, and Fires Broke Out In Various Sections of the City.

San Francisco, April 19.—Earthquake and fire yesterday put nearly half of San Francisco in ruins. At least 200 persons have been killed, a thousand injured, and the property loss will exceed $100,000,000. Thousands of persons are homeless and destitute, and all day long streams of persons have been fleeing to places of safety.

It was 5.15 yesterday morning when a terrible earthquake shock shook the whole city and surrounding country. One shock apparently lasted two minutes, and there was almost immediately collapse of flimsy structures all over the city.

The dreadful earthquake shock came without warning, its motion apparently being from east to west. At first the upheaval of the earth was gradual, but in a few seconds it increased in intensity. Chimneys began to fall and buildings to crack, tottering from their foundations.

The people became panic stricken, and rushed into the streets, most of them in their night attire. They were met by showers of falling buildings, cornices, and walls.

Many Crushed to Death.

Many were instantly crushed to death, while others were dreadfully mangled. Those who remained indoors generally escaped with their lives, though scores were hit by detached plaster, pictures, and articles thrown to the floor by the shock.

It is believed that more or less loss was sustained by nearly every family in the city.

The water supply was cut off and when fires broke out in various sections there was nothing to do but let the buildings burn. Telegraph and telephone communication was shut off for a time. The Western Union was put completely out of business and the Postal Company was the only one that managed to get a wire out of the city. About 10 o'clock even the Postal was forced to suspend. Electrical power was stopped and street cars did not run. Railroads and ferry boats also ceased operations.

Fires Rage All Day.

The various fires raged all day and the fire department was powerless to do anything except dynamite buildings threatened. All day long explosions shook the city and added to the terror of the inhabitants.

Banks and commercial houses, supposed to be fireproof, though not of modern build, burned quickly, and the roar of the flames could be heard even on the hills.

Here, many thousands of people congregated and viewed the awful scene. Great sheets of flame rose high in the heavens or rushed down some narrow street, joining midway between the sidewalks.

The dense smoke that arose from the fire districts spread out like an immense funnel and could have been seen miles out at sea. Occasionally, as some drug house or place stored with chemicals was reached, most fantastic effects were produced by the colored flames and smoke, which rolled out against the darker background.

Following the first shock, there was another within five minutes, but not nearly so severe. Three hours later there was another slight quake.

Great Damage.

San Jose, 50 miles south, lost many buildings, and from 15 to 20 persons were killed. The annex of the Vendome Hotel collapsed and the fires broke out.

Stanford University and Palo Alto suffered. At Stanford many of the handsome buildings were demolished and two persons were killed. One of them was Julius Hanna of Bradford, Pa., and the other was Otto Gurts, a fireman. Six other students are lying seriously hurt in the Palo Alto Hospital.

Reclaimed Land Aids Ruin.

The greatest destruction occurred in that section of the city which was reclaimed from San Francisco Bay. Much of the devastated district was at one time, low, marshy ground, covered by water at high tide. As the city grew it became necessary to fill in many acres of this low ground in order to reach deep water.

Residence Section Escapes.

The damage by the earthquake to the residence portion of the city, the finest part of which is on Nob Hill and Pacific Heights, seems to have been slight.

300 Dead at Santa Rosa.

A. 2? p. m. it looked as if the entire city would be burned. Thousands of people are fleeing to the hills. It is believed the damage has reached $200,000,000. At Santa Rosa nearly 300 persons are dead.

The burned district extends from the water-front south of Market street to Market street and west to Eleventh street, north of Market. The fire extends out Hayes and McAllister streets nearly to Fillmore and from the water front along Market to Montgomery, and north from the water front to Montgomery north.

Swept Clean by Fire.

The latest reports at police headquarters show that the entire district surrounded by Vallejo, Howard East and Sansome streets, embracing practically the wholesale portion of the city, has been swept clean by the fire. The district bounded by Market, Eighth, and Folsom streets has been devastated. In the latter district are most of the city's finest and most substantial buildings. The area covered by the flames up to the present time is about eight square miles, or several hundred city blocks. Very little, if any, water, is available, and the blowing up of buildings by dynamite is the only means of checking the flames.

A portion of the new city hall, which cost over $7,000,000, collapsed, the roof sliding into the court yard and smaller towers tumbling down. The great dome was moved, but did not fall.

Drowned in Ruins.

The Valencia Hotel, a four-storey wooden building, sank into the basement, a pile of splintered timbers under which were pinned many dead and dying occupants of the house, of whom there were 70. The basement was full of water, and some of the helpless victims were drowned.

A house on 14th street, near Valencia, was wrecked, killing two persons. A lodging house on Seventh street, known as the Kingsley, entirely collapsed, and took fire, and 75 to 80 persons are believed to have been buried in the flaming ruins.

At 18th and Valencia streets there is a crevasse in the street six feet wide, and entire sidewalks torn up. The street car tracks are badly twisted all through the southern section of the city, and traffic is at a standstill.

Military in Possession.

At 9 a. m. a thousand men from Presido arrived to patrol the down town streets. The 13th infantry, 1,000 strong.

Rural Postmasters and Their Pay.

We have frequently called attention to the case of the postoffice clerk who is required to work ten hours a day, and extra hours on holidays, for 85 cents a day. But the pay of this official, says the London Free Press, is princely beside that of the country postmaster, whose total income from the department is $25 a year, with office open sixteen hours daily. It is stated on behalf of these disgracefully underpaid servants of the public that one of them handles three mails each way daily for $30 a year. In many cases the postmaster is a farmer. His house is not a home any longer. He is frequently called from bed near midnight and before daylight to give out mail matter. The rate of pay received, fifty cents a week, does not cover the cost of scrubbing. In the County of York, and elsewhere where train or electric car service permits of more frequent mail service than in the back country, postmasters still receive the minimum of salary.

Is it any wonder that country postoffices are being closed because no one can be found willing to accept the job at such figures? So far from considering a rural free delivery in accordance with an increased revenue, and with the country's progress, the people are being robbed of the privileges they have enjoyed through the policy of the Government. Where the money order system has been introduced in the smaller accounting offices, the work has been increased and the responsibility doubled, without a cent added to the postmaster's pay, and without a cent granted for assistance. It is confidently stated that an office with a postal revenue of $1,600 and more, requires an assistant, yet the salary and allowance are not nearly the remuneration of a second-class railway mail clerk, who is not more competent than the postmaster is required to be. Indeed, such postmaster is not better paid than the street laborer in a city.

In the United States it is shown that the salaries of postmasters are 75 per cent. above those in Canada, and yet it is not complained that they are overpaid. If there is any class of men in this country entitled to better consideration than they have been receiving, it is that of the rural postmasters. Yet when these matters were presented to him, the P. M. General, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, said he would have seriously to consider which improvement the department could best afford, an increase of salaries for these underpaid and overworked officials or an extended mail service, which would give the people more frequent communications and pile more work on the postmasters. He plainly intimated that the two items could not be entertained together. But there can be no two opinions which of them is justly entitled to first consideration, viz., the claim of the underpaid postmaster to better pay for his services

TIMELY TOPICS.

The remarks of Ald. Cooper at the Council meeting on Tuesday night, re the road-building material on Zwick's Island, have been favorably commented on by many people. It is a fact that the chief argument used for the city's purchase of the island was that there they would find, in unlimited quantities, all the material they needed for road making, and the supply, it was said, would last for centuries. And what has been the result? Certainly not what people expected it would be.

The chief disappointment, in the minds of a great many people, lies in the fact that the gravel, which it was expected the island would yield in large quantities, has hardly materialized at all. To be sure a large amount of cracked stone is drawn from the island crusher every summer, but cracked or crushed stone is not gravel, as most people understand it. If the product of the island were screened into different sizes, as is done in other places, a vastly different result would be obtained, and better roads built.

Ald. Cooper appears to think that the city might build cheaper walks by using, altogether, the material taken from Zwick's island, which would last quite as long as any walks could reasonably be expected to. The idea appears to be a sound one. The supposition that the walks laid by the city recently will last for 50 years is purely imaginary. Most of us won't be here in 50 years to see whether the walks are in good condition or not, and for all intents and purposes, in the opinion of people who have studied the matter, walks built of the material found on Zwick's island would be quite as good, so far as this city is concerned, as walks built of much more expensive material. Why could the Council not give it a trial, providing, of course, it could gain the consent of some employees who are supposed to be under its orders.

We don't hear much about the Zwick's island filtering scheme these days. But wait till the blossom comes on the bay again. Then there'll be a roar that will make the Point Ann whistle sound like a Salvation Army horn.

Are we going to have any kind of a celebration on Victoria day? A fine feature of the procession would be a bunch of dog haters, headed by Ald. Knox, carrying a banner bearing the legend "Victory; our life's work is done!"

An optimistic writer in a Chicago paper says that the joy habit can be cultivated. It doesn't need cultivation. There are institutions now for the cure of the joy habit.

Because the provisions of the Dog by-law were not carried out, the Council doubled the tax on dogs. The provisions of the by-law which forbid spitting on the sidewalk are not carried out, either. Why don't the Council put a head tax of $2 on all people who use tobacco? That would be about as logical as the other.

This causes our contemporary to very truthfully remark that "This is a common trouble for newspapers, and a difficult thing to provide against. Ontario law is better in this regard than law in most other places. Still, it could possibly be improved." It might, indeed!

BENEFICENT BALDNESS.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

Only the other day the Spectator printed an extract from an exchange which stated that the bald are never crazy—that a man who has no hair on the outside of his head never has wheels inside. And now a cablegram brings information from two independent sources, that there are no bald criminals. Neither the assertion that the bald are not "bug" nor the statement that they are not criminal, is put forth as an absolutely infallible rule; but it is asserted that the exceptions are so very rare that they do not count.

It may be added that the bald man is not so subject to the sin of pride as the man—or the woman—who has beautiful hair plentifully growing on the scalp; nor is he subject to being "hung up" in a tree, as was a young gentleman mentioned in the Bible. And the bald man is exempt from a certain mode of warfare sometimes carried on by angry women.

On the whole the bald man has much to be thankful for.

DANGER IN SKIPPING.

(Boston Traveller.)

This is the marble season for the boys and skipping rope for the little girls. There is nothing more dangerous to a child with a weak heart than the violent exercise of rope-skipping, and it brings its toll of death each year. Parents who suspect that their little girls have any heart trouble, due to scarlet fever or any children's disease would do well to prohibit rope-skipping altogether.

The lynching of three negroes in Springfield, Missouri, should make every American blush with shame. A country which attempts to impress the world with its laws of justice should leave no stone unturned to punish the murderers of this latest heinous crime. In the majority of lynching cases, which are of almost weekly occurrence in the South, the victims are generally guilty of the crimes for which they are arrested, but what civilized country gives a mob of citizens the power to enter a prison and murder the prisoners, whether guilty or not guilty. In this case, however, the reports say that there was no evidence to prove the guilt of the victims, so that the action of the lynching mob borders on cold blooded murder in the sight of the whole world—and is as we said before—a disgrace to the Republic to the south of us.

It is now said in Toronto that Joseph Phillips and his "agents" will turn over about $200,000 to the liquidator of the York Loan, and thus possibly escape prosecution. A GREAT WORK OF PHILANTHROPY

THE MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTIVES—WHAT IS BEING DONE LOCALLY.

Perhaps the greatest philanthropic work being carried on in Canada today is the fight against that dread disease, consumption, by the National Sanitarium Association at its two hospitals at Gravenhurst. The Muskoka Free Hospital for consumptives is supported entirely by voluntary subscriptions, and no person has ever been refused admittance on account of his or her poverty. Patients have been taken ranging in age from under 15 years to nearly 70, and embracing every religion. The average age of the patients last year was 32 1-2 years, which but shows that this awful disease is attacking our young men and women in the very prime of their life, and that it should be the duty of all those who can help, by their contributions, in this great undertaking. In round figures 2,700 people die in Ontario each year from consumption. The Muskoka hospitals are for the treatment of the disease in its early stages, when it will be possible not only to arrest the trouble, but to effect in the majority of cases a permanent cure. Over 2000 patients have already been cared for in the two hospitals, and of these a large majority have been able to take up their work again as bread winners of a family.

IN THE COUNTY OF HASTINGS.

According to the latest report of the Registrar-General, 1903, there were 88 deaths from tuberculosis in a population of 60,000 in this county. This is almost double the number of deaths from any other cause. Of these 42 were male, 46 female; 84 Canadian, 4 foreigners; 53 single, 35 married, and the average age at death was 29 years.

In the City of Belleville we find there were 19 deaths of the above 88, which was 2.1 per 1000 of population, and is a very high percentage from any one disease. Of these 19 deaths 13 were male, 6 female; 15 married and 4 unmarried, and the average age was 26 years.

Does not this show the need of most strenuously fighting and conquering this terrible disease, which, if not checked, will spread so rapidly.

The local branch is in good condition, and is confident of being able to raise $300 this year, in order to endow a bed for the deserving poor consumptives from this locality, in the Muskoka Free Hospital for consumptives

The officers of the Belleville branch are:

Hon. President — Sir Mackenzie Bowell.
President—Ex-Mayor Chown.
Secretary—W. C. Mikel.
Treasurer—Thos. Ritchie.

Mr. C. L. Jennings, Field Secretary, is in the city at present in the interest of the local branch, and hopes to bring the subscription list to the above sum. A special effort is being put forth by the association on account of a loss of $3,400, sustained in February last by the burning of the new laundry buildings at Gravenhurst.

Any subscriptions will be most gratefully received, and will be acknowledged daily in the press.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SWEET CLOVER."

The melodrama, "Sweet Clover," was presented at the opera house last evening to a rather slim audience. Those who did attend were apparently well pleased with the production. It is a pretty, sweet and pure play, representing as it does, country life with its many pleasant associations. The various members of the company, and especially the leading lady, carried out their parts well.

"FABIO ROMANI."

"Fabio Romani," that romantic record maker, both in book form and as a four-act play, is to be the attraction at the Carman on Saturday night. To the intelligent theatre goer, to admirers of romance and fiction, in fact, for all sorts of people, "Fabio Romani" will appeal to and thoroughly please. Beyond its intensely deep plot, beautiful language and interesting narrative, there is an indescribable something that makes this play so wondrously and permanently successful. It has stood the test of trial for a score of years and becomes more popular with each year's tour. The present company is a special and carefully selected one, including the star of romantic players, John B. Arthur.

BUSINESS COLLEGE

BESIDES giving thousands of bright boys abundant spending money (some earn $15.00 a week) we teach our boys salesmanship, that quality that commands such high salaries in the modern business world. A Brooklyn insurance man, whose son sells THE POST, writes us:

"You are probably conducting the best business college on earth, for you are not dealing with theories but with cold facts in practice, based upon your excellent methods for encouraging and helping boys in every way."

¶ Boys who want to make money, boys who want to be taught how to win, by one of the most successful business firms in the world—these are the boys we want to hear from. We can teach you how to "play the game" and you make good money while you are learning. It doesn't cost you a cent to start—for we furnish the first supply of magazines free and you can buy your next supply with the sales of the first.

¶ We have a booklet that tells about some of our boys—the money they have made, the extra prizes they have won and how they gained success. If you are a "success boy"—made of the right stuff—we want you to write us—right now.

Celebrated Their Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Creeper, of Shannonville, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary at Shannonville, on Monday, the 16th. Daughters, grandchildren, friends, from Ottawa, Toronto, Belleville, Deseronto, all in sweet confusion, crowded the Creeper residence all day, and the bridal couple were the recipients of many very nice presents. The congratulatory address was read by Mrs. T. F. Maiden, and Mr. Creeper, in a few remarks, thanked all present. Rev. Wm. Coombe was present and baptized Elizabeth Marie Emmons, a grandchild of Mr. and Mrs. Creeper, also baptized Charles Williams Earle, son of H. C. Earle, of Belleville, solemnizing the occasion of wedding anniversary and christening with prayer. The guests, about fifty in number, sat down to a wholesome supper and all thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The many friends and relations of Mr. and Mrs. Creeper who lived at a distance sent messages of congratulations. Mr. T. B. Gerow, sen., who is Manitoba manager of the Continental Life Association Co., was heard from, and Mr. Creeper's brother Silas, who lives in Clare, Mich., stated his regret at not being present. Miss Elizabeth Jose, of Holloway, Ont., also wished the bridal couple continued happiness. Mr. and Mrs. Creeper have been residents of Shannonville for forty-two years, Mr. Creeper being Postmaster for the last quarter of a century. Judging from the vigorous old age of Mr. and Mrs. Creeper they will inhabit the neighboring village for years to come.

DON'T BE AFRAID OF THE MICROBES.

BEST OF ALL RESISTANCE IS A SOUND, STRONG BODY.

New York Herald: Sir Frederick Treves not long ago, in a notable address delivered before a learned scientific body in England, made the rather startling statement that disease was essentially a beneficent process—a blessing in disguise. Although at first sight it may be difficult to accede to such a proposition, we must realize that all infection is a fight between man and the microbe, in which the latter must necessarily be defeated in the long run. Otherwise the human race would eventually disappear.

The law of survival of the fittest is always on the side of the stronger influences. If the law is openly violated the punishment is inevitable. In the self-conscious estimate of our superior intelligence we are not prepared to believe that disease as such is the penalty of our ignorance, but such is the melancholy fact. This has been proved over and over again by the various discoveries in disease prevention, and more revelations on that line must come to light as we advance in sanitary investigations.

It is only during the last few years that the microbe has become an important factor in the problem of infection. The discovery has simplified our methods of inquiry very much. We now know the causes of tuberculosis, cholera, plague, malaria, yellow fever, cerebro-spinal meningitis, typhoid fever, the sleeping sickness, the hook worm disease, elephantiasis and various minor affections, and the end is not yet. All these findings are dependent upon direct and preventable microbic infection. Certainly so far we have done exceedingly well.

As in all other matters of similar interest, we are likely to have the pendulum swung to an extreme degree in the opposite direction. The microbe, important as it may be as a disease factor, may have its good points. We have, in such connection, but to think of the vast culture ground for the friendly micro-organisms in the various cavities of our bodies. These microbes help digestion by creating needful ferments. They combat pathogenic germs and cancel their detrimental influences in various ways, and thus help us to conserve our vital forces, maintain nutrition and maintain neutral immunity against infection of any kind.

It behooves us then to be careful not to disturb this equilibrium of healthful processes by applying foolish and scarce theories regarding the assumed harmfulness of all microbes. But we are liable to do this all the time in our anxiety to escape threatening diseases.

There are very many persons, for instance, who dare not drink water unless it is boiled. Its taste killed and its health giving properties virtually destroyed. The same with sterilized milk. We forget that the raw article, if only pure, is the safest of all food products. Even with the dreaded tuberculosis milk the dangers are mercifully reduced to a minimum. So with our water. Experts declare that our Croton, in spite of its accidental impurity at times, is the best and safest drinking water in the world.

Even when pathogenic germs are almost everywhere we have a fair chance of living on. The inhaled tubercle bacillus is harmless to most persons; with others the typhoid germ is inert. If all who breathed tuberculous germs or ingested typhoid microbes should die the human race ere this would have been long extinct. Nature protects us by a natural immunity against all widely spread maladies. It is only when we furnish the soil for the seed that disease takes its hold. The best of all resistance is that of a sound, strong body, germ or no germ.

Huge Oil Deposits.

Oil of the highest quality ever discovered is now flowing from the earth in huge gushers in the southwestern portion of Alberta. These new oilfields are situated in the extreme southwestern section of Alberta within five miles of the international boundary, and some forty-five miles southwest of Pincher Creek, a station on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The valley in which these oil discoveries lie is described by geologists as one enormous crevice caused by volcanic eruption crosscutting the formation of the Rocky Mountains and forming a huge basin, or vacuum, into which the oil has been seeping for centuries from the coal deposits in the North, forming a vast lake underlying the rock formation at a depth of a little over a thousand feet. The country in mountainous, and in most cases the valleys are narrow and heavily timbered; on the mountain sides the formation is exposed, showing a gently folded strata, or anti-clinals, which can be traced for miles. Where a break in the formation occurs a seepage can invariably be found. A large number of these seepages exist where the oil can be dipped up, and all along the creeks oil indications are plentiful.—Canadian Trade Review.

DOES YOUR SCALP ITCH?

Are Your Hairs Dropping One by One?

If your scalp itches you are doubtless suffering from dandruff. The dandruff germ is digging up your scalp in little flakes, called dandruff and sapping the life of the hair bulb. No hair preparation that is a mere hair stimulant and tonic will cure dandruff, because it won't kill the germ that causes the trouble. Newbro's Herpicide is the latest scientific discovery; and it will kill the dandruff germ. Destroy the cause, and you remove the effect; kill the germ and you will have no more dandruff, falling hair or baldness. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

The York County Loan

PROSECUTION OF PHILLIPS MAY BE DROPPED — $200,000 WORTH OF PROPERTY MAY BE HANDED OVER.

Toronto, April 19. — From present indications it seems very probable that arrangements are being made whereby the prosecution of Joseph Phillips, former President of the York County Loan & Savings Company, on the charge of conspiracy, is to be dropped after the case leaves the Police Court. Negotiations which have been pending for the past few days have reached such a point that with the handing over by Mr. Phillips of valuable securities to the liquidator of the loan company active action against the accused may not be prosecuted further.

It was stated on good authority yesterday that the proceedings against Phillips will practically end with his committal for trial in the Police Court to-day.

The total value of the shares which he can transfer either by his own act, or by influencing his friends, amounts to over $60,000, but by his act he will give value to probably $200,000, which will inure to the benefit not merely of the liquidator of the York County Loan, but also to the independent shareholders and policyholders in the Toronto Life. The settlement has already been carried through as to the piano company, the assets of which have been handed over to the liquidator without the piano company forcing the liquidator to wait until the maturity of the bonded indebtedness. Thus the rumored settlement, if it goes through, will be far more wide-reaching than the public have any idea of, for it will conserve the interests of those who have shares or policies in the allied concerns. If Phillips had held out and refused to make this settlement, the matter might, with appeals, have dragged along in the civil courts for an indefinite period, and have incurred huge legal expenses in the score of pending actions.

In the meantime, the Toronto Life, it is claimed, would have become of little or no value, for the inevitable effect of the Police Court proceedings has been to affect the business of the insurance company, an otherwise flourishing concern, while expenses for salaries, rent, etc., necessarily continue.

It is said that the liquidator will have no difficulty in a speedy realization upon the assets, for they can either sell the policies or sell the company as a going concern. If they sell the policies they can distribute the assets among the shareholders without delay.

As has been said, Phillips will no doubt be formally committed for trial to-day by Magistrate Denison, but as the liquidators' audit cannot be completed for several months, the books of the company having ever since the winding-up order been for the most part out of their possession, and in the hands of the court, and as Phillips will no doubt be occupied, like many of the former officials, in explaining the workings of the company and its dealings with over 100,000 shareholders, there is no likelihood of the matter coming up at the May Court of Criminal Session. In the meantime he will probably get bail, and if he assists the liquidator, as he no doubt can, he will later on be released on his own recognizance. That is the statement made to The Globe by a gentleman who is in a position to be well acquainted with the facts.

Crown Attorney Curry, when interviewed by The Globe last night, said that he knew of no arrangement by which Phillips was to go free. "All I have done," he said, "is to promise to advise the Attorney-General to recommend the trial Judge to take into consideration the fact that Phillips has handed over this money."

"And you have made no arrangement for him to go free?"

"No, I have not," said Mr. Curry.

"But when his case is taken to the other court will he be allowed to go?"

"Oh, of course, what the other court will do I cannot say," Mr. Curry answered. "As I told you yesterday, my point has been to get as much money as I can for the York County Loan shareholders."

Mr. Curry finally intimated that the case will go for trial to-day.

The injunction secured by the National Trust Company, as liquidator of the York Loan & Savings Company, against Joseph Phillips, President of the company, and other shareholders, restraining them from disposing of their stock in the Toronto Life Insurance Company, was returnable yesterday, but on a motion on behalf of the liquidator the injunction was enlarged for four weeks by Mr. Justice Meredith.

Safe Crackers Get Stiff Sentences.

A despatch from Toronto announces that the burglars and safe crackers tried in that city have got theirs all right. The following sentences were this morning meted out:

Robert Bennett, 10 years.

John Crosby, 8 years.

James Hunter, 8 years.

Patrick Lawlor, another member of the gang, was acquitted of complicity with the Toronto burglaries, but the authorities believe they can convict him in connection with the Shannonville burglary.

This is undoubtedly the same gang which broke into John Sloan & Co.'s premises in this city. They were a dangerous crowd, and are well out of the road.

DON'T MIND ME.

(Chicago Tribune.)

"Don't mind me," he told the iceman; "if you want to raise your price, man.
Go ahead and put it higher, and I will not say a word,
I am merely the consumer; I have heard a baleful rumor
That the cost of ice this summer will go soaring like a bird.
Raise it hourly, daily, weekly; you will find I'll stand it meekly.
For I'm learning to be patient with the irking things that be.
Show me no consideration; give your price the elevation—
Do your worst, O Mr. Iceman, and, I beg you, don't mind me!"
And the iceman said; "I won't."

"Higher prices? Bless your soul, man," he said sweetly to the coal man,
"Put them up, and keep a-putting just as swiftly as you like.
Tell me not in mournful numbers of the fear that haunts your slumbers,
Of the famine in the coal bins if the miners go on strike.
You who sell me all my fuel, mention not the coming duel
Between capital and labor that the summer days may see:
Go ahead and boost the prices to the figure that suffices
For your perfect satisfaction, and, I beg you, don't mind me!"
And the coal man said: "I won't."

"More for steaks?" he asked the meat man. "Well, we people have to eat, man.
So go on and raise the price for my bacon and my ham;
Why, you needn't care a button what I have to pay for mutton
Or for ribs or chuck or sausage, or for liver or for lamb.
Raise the prices, but be cheerful; 'tis no time for being tearful;
I'm an uncomplaining person, as I'm sure you will agree,
I must do my daily carving lest my family be starving,
So go on and use your judgment—and, I beg you, don't mind me."
And the meat man said: "I won't."

"Prices will go up this summer?" Thus he murmured to the plumber.
To the tinner and the tinker, to the man who puts on paint;
To the tailor and the grocer—"Put them up, for well you know, sir,
I will view the operation with the calmness of a saint.
I am merely the consumer; I have heard the warning rumor
That expenses will be greater—and you've got me up a tree.
Go ahead, and use your pleasure; fit your price to any measure;
I will have to grin and bear it: so I beg you, don't mind me!"
And the others said: "We won't."

Recent developments bid fair to put Ontario at the head of all the provinces in the confederation as regards the value of the mineral production. The aggregate output of minerals and mineral products, which for several years has been about $11,000,000 or $12,000,000, rose in 1905 to about $19,000,000, or if the refined values of nickel and copper are used as a basis of computation, instead of the value in the matter, the total would amount to $22,000,000 or $23,000,000. This large advance is due to the increased output of nickel, silver, copper and pig iron.

Incidentally, says a Quebec paper, the steady disappearance of the maple sugar industry has had a depressing effect on forest conservation and propagation. Maple trees, which were preserved for their value and interest as a source of sugar supply, are annually cut down to be burnt as fuel or sold for lumber. Within the past few years strenuous, and not entirely unsuccessful, efforts have been made to promote a forestry revival for both climatic and economic reasons: the Dominion Parliament can greatly aid this beneficent movement by encouraging the manufacture of maple syrup, not through giving bonuses or bounties, but by affording legitimate and equitable protection to the makers of the genuine article against the vendors of wretched imitations.

Gamey Cheque and Cash Exhibits to Go to Sweet Charity.

Province to Borrow $3,000,000 on Ontario Revenue Funds—Col. Matheson Would Have It In Bonds or Inscribed Stock—Railway Bill Carried To An End—Other Government Bills In Committee—Manhood Suffrage Stays

Toronto, April 19.—The historic $1,500 cheque, and equally famed $500 cash that figured as exhibits in the Gamey investigation, and which have since been held in legal custody, will be devoted to purposes of sweet charity.

Some weeks ago Mr. Gamey made enquiry of the Ministry what it was proposed to do with the assets. He was then told that the Government hadn't decided.

Yesterday the Premier introduced a bill. It was called a "bill respecting a certain sum of money in custody of the Supreme Court of Judication." Nothing was said in the House, but Mr. Whitney afterwards explained that the Gamey exhibits were referred to, and that the Government had decided on an act of philanthropy. Just what institution or institutions will benefit he wouldn't say.

Wants to Borrow $3,000,000.

Several bills of importance were put through the committee stage of the Legislature on Wednesday, and, in addition two Government measures were introduced.

An act introduced by the Provincial Treasurer, to raise money on the consolidated revenue funds of Ontario, aims at the securing of a loan of $3,000,000 in the form of bonds or inscribed stock. It would be, he said, on the same lines as the loan made last year, of which amount $1,900,000 still remained. The province had authority for the raising of a larger sum if desired. Col. Matheson pointed out that the Dominion Government would have to offer inducements.

It was provided that the bonds or stock issued should be free from all provincial taxes, including succession duties, following the precedent of the Imperial act as to Government annuities.

"You will get 96," suggested Hon. Mr. Ross, to which Col. Matheson replied confidently, "We will get 100."

"I hope the Treasurer won't be satisfied with $25,000," remarked the Premier, casually.

"He didn't get that before," returned Mr. Ross.

"That's just what we can't find out," retorted Mr. Whitney, and the bout was off.

Mines Bill.

Hon. Frank Cochrane gave an explanation of his mines bill, a synopsis of which was given some days ago.

Mr. Ross asked the intention of the Minister regarding royalties, and Mr. Cochrane replied that they would be provided for in a subsequent bill.

The ex-Premier spoke of the importance of the mining industry, and hoped there was nothing in the bill to discourage the prospector. He cordially approved of the feature which would prevent a prospector squatting upon a claim. He promised fuller consideration later, as he had not had time to digest the bill.

Bills In Committee.

Mr. Downey's Pharmacy Act amendment was taken up in committee of the whole House. After some discussion the bill was reported.

On the House going into committee on Mr. Whitney's bill to amend the Election Act, the Premier said it would remove every vestige of a number from the ballot. Whether this was a wise thing to do, he was not prepared to say, but by next session something would be done that would give them proper protection.

The ex-Premier explained the working of the Dominion ballot, and Mr. Whitney observed that the Government would either adopt it or something else that would serve the same purpose.

"It will be the Dominion ballot, I hope," said Mr. Ross.

Telephone Bill.

On Hon. Mr. Beck's municipal telephone bill being reached in committee, Mr. Graham put in the objection that it did not stipulate the number who might petition to the council.

Both promoter and the Premier said it should not be necessary to require any number, as a very few subscribers might be willing to pay for a service extending over a large area.

Mr. Beck said, on the third reading, he would move that municipalities may take over existing lines, "with the consent of their owners."

The Government's railway bill was taken up again in committee and carried through to an end.

"We intend to stand by the law as it is as to Sunday observance," was the emphatic assertion of the Premier, in reply to a complaint from Mr. Bowyer, who pointed out that electric railways operating under Dominion charters were privileged to run on Sunday.

Manhood Suffrage Stays.

On the opening of the evening session of the Legislature Premier Whitney announced the withdrawal of his bill to repeal the Manhood Suffrage Registration Act. He said that the Government would revise the whole Election Act next year.

The House went into committee on Mr. Hendrie's bill for the appointment of a railway and municipal board. Several amendments to the bill were adopted, which were reported. Mr. Whitney said on the third reading, the blanks would be filled in and an opportunity given for further discussion.

The University Bill.

The University Act was introduced and follows very closely upon the lines of the commission's report, though a few amendments appear. The act, as has been pointed out by the Premier, is by no means in a finished state.

It is provided that the election of a chancellor and elective members of the Senate shall take place this year. The registrar must, between June 15 and Aug. 15, register the names and known addresses of all graduates entitled to vote, and no one not thus registered shall have the right to vote.

It is also provided that the lands to be set apart for the use of the university and University College as part of their endowment, shall be Provincial Crown lands.

Trinity College is empowered to raise money by loan, guaranteed by the province.

End Is In Sight.

At 9 o'clock the Premier announced that the end of the Government bill of fare was in sight and for want of business the House would adjourn.

In reply to Mr. Ross he said the supplementary estimates were not yet ready.

Pledged to Cheap Power.

Toronto, April 19.—"We are not pledged to any scheme, but we are pledged to any scheme, but we are people of Ontario. You may rely on it that all reasonable methods will be exhausted in order that cheap power may be brought to the people of Ontario."

Thus spoke Hon. Premier Whitney on Wednesday in reply to a large deputation from Niagara Falls and vicinity, who appeared to protest against Government development and transmission of Niagara Falls power.

WITH THE TEACHERS.

Had Busy Day of Papers and Valuable Discussions Wednesday.

Toronto, April 19.—The many sections of the Ontario Education Association were again very busy yesterday.

It was also resolved that the majority of the advisory board to be formed by the education bill consist of those interested in public schools, viz: Public and separate school teachers, inspectors and trustees.

At the night session the election of officers resulted as follows: President, Dr. Wm. Scott, principal Toronto Normal school; general secretary, Robert W. Doan, Toronto; treasurer, W. J. Hendry, Toronto.

Suicide at Allotted Age.

Hamilton, April 19.—Even though he had reached the three-score and ten years allotted to man, John Fleming, a city laborer, could not wait for death to overtake him, and he ended his own life by carbolic acid yesterday.

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

Mr. Greenstreet received me with ceremony.

a curious coincidence"—and here he rummaged among his papers—"if you are anxious to get rid of the castle, I dare say it can be managed. Oddly enough, only this morning I had a letter from a firm of solicitors in London, assuming it was for sale and inquiring the terms. Let me see. Ah, here it is!" He handed me the letter, which was directed from the offices of a firm in Pardoe street, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

"Quick work," I commented.

The little solicitor assented. "It is a beautiful neighborhood," he replied, rather proudly, "and the castle is a fine building. Very antique, remarkably antique."

The adjectives were hardly chosen to my taste, but I could find no fault with the sentiment. Yet it seemed strange that a purchaser should have been so instant; I had understood that the experience was uncommon in the property market. As I sat contemplating the letter Mr. Greenstreet interposed.

"Well, sir," said he, smiling, "am I to entertain the offer?"

"No," I answered, though I could hardly have said why.

"You will live on the property?" inquired the lawyer.

"Yes," I replied, adding, "for the present."

But, in truth, I was in no state of mind to determine upon any particular course with definition, so involved were my emotions in the face of the extraordinary news I had heard. It was an amazing stroke of good luck which by a signature of a dozen letters converted a comparatively impecunious and briefless barrister into the proprietor of an ancient estate. These thoughts and feelings moved me as I rode back to the castle, quite oblivious of my earlier resolution to be gone from Raymond and the scene of that disaster. It seemed now that I was definitely bound up with the fortunes of the place unless I accepted Greenstreet's offer to negotiate a sale of the property for me. I had fallen into a reverie—nor am I ashamed to confess that it was a very pleasant reverie—when I reached the top of the hill upon which the castle stood. That hurried drive which Mr. Kesteven and I had undertaken three days previously had obviously been for the purpose of executing the will. I now asked myself the motive which had induced him so to favor a casual acquaintance, but I could find no answer save in the general eccentricity of his conduct. He had died without a relative, even without a friend, as it appeared, and to that fact the mere addition of a passing whim, generated possibly under a stress of unknown emotion, must suffice to explain his behavior. At that phrase of my own, "unknown emotion," I was pulled up sharply once more. What was there at the back of all these incongruous and incomprehensible incidents? In the current of these reflections I almost rode over the innkeeper Hood by the entrance of the park. He saluted me deferentially, stepping aside to let me pass and gliding noiselessly to open the iron gates. At the sight of him the lawyer's statement as to the contents of the will recurred to me, and I reined in, giving him good day.

"This has been a sad business, sir," he ventured in his even tones.

I nodded, replying with some commonplace.

"Especially, sir, for poor Mr. Kesteven, who was, in a manner of speaking, quite alone in the world."

"Yes," said I, though the remark was perhaps irrelevant. "So Mr. Greenstreet, his lawyer, tells me."

Hood's glance met mine, as though he would inquire of me; but feeling, no doubt, that this would be too great a liberty, his eyes reverted to the gate, which he still held open respectfully.

"Mr. Greenstreet tells me," I went on, "and I suppose I am free to repeat it, that your old master has left you a small legacy."

The man started visibly, and for a second his dark eyes shone on mine. He seemed almost as surprised as I had been, but he recovered his astonishment next minute and dropped his gaze.

"Thank you, sir. It is very kind of him—Mr. Kesteven, I mean. I served him three years, and a better master no man need want."

"He paid you a similar compliment," said I, smiling.

"He was always very good to me, sir."

He stood silent, as though for me to enter, but as I did so he said respectfully:

"I suppose we shall be losing you, sir? It's a great thing for Mr. Kesteven to have had you with him in his trouble."

"Well," said I, with a little laugh, which I really could not restrain in my excited condition, "not just yet, Hood, I think. I'm afraid you'll have to put up with my company for a little longer. You see, Mr. Greenstreet informs me that I am quite unexpectedly, left heir to the castle."

If Hood were as much astonished at this statement as at his own good fortune, he certainly did not show it. I caught one glance of his extraordinary eyes, and then he had turned and was closing the gate.

"I'm sure I congratulate you, sir, if you'll pardon the liberty. The castle wants an owner, and I hope you'll be living here, sir."

I told him I did not yet know and rode up the park, leaving him to fix the locks.

I had said no less than the truth when I had answered Hood's questions, but circumstances soon made my resolution for me. The rumor of my inheritance was spread about the country, and I found myself suddenly elevated to new dignity in the eyes of the neighborhood. And the first fruits of this celebrity appeared in an unexpected visit from my young acquaintance, Montgomery. His farm, it seemed, was a mile or two from the castle, lying in the next valley, and he rode over to offer me his congratulations. It was plain that he had not been so deep in liquor as he had appeared upon that evening at the Swan, for he was hugely embarrassed during the interview and more than once offered to reflect upon himself in somewhat deprecating terms.

"I'm not a bad fellow," he was good enough to explain, "but I'm a devilish fool. All the Montgomerys are. We've had a lot to put up with. Our estate's no better than a barnyard. We're a pack of idiots, that's what we are, Mr. Greatorex. And when there's liquor about— Well, you know what it is."

I didn't quite follow out his meaning, but, on the whole, he struck me as a very amiable fellow, honest according to his lights, and bearing a certain distinction of person which, derived from a long and gentle race, could not wholly be concealed in the dull and uneducated individuality of its last representative. He certainly knew a great deal about horses, and as a result we grew very friendly ere he left. When he did so, it was with a frank hope, boyishly expressed, that I intended to live at the castle.

But it was not due to the arguments of Montgomery that I finally decided to stay at the castle, but to an incident very different, which fell out in the following way on the next evening: I had dined early, and as the light was still very full across the valley I sauntered out through the park and wandered down the road toward the Woodman. When I reached the inn I noticed in the twilight the figure of a stranger leaning against the stone coping before the doorway smoking a cigar. At this moment Hood emerged from the taproom, and I nodded to him, asking if he had heard yet from the solicitor.

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir," he replied. "It's a very welcome present, sir; many thanks to my poor master."

"Well, you seem to be getting on," said I, with a glance toward the stranger, who, seeing my eyes on him, lifted his hat and smiled.

"Yes, sir," responded Hood in a lower voice. "The gentleman's come to stay a bit, sir. Name Captain Sercombe, sir. You don't happen to know him? No, sir. I thought I'd mention it, in case you did. The gentleman likes the fresh air, sir. He's been living abroad. I always told poor Mr. Kesteven that I'd make it pay, sir." And a furtive smile crept into Hood's somber face and broadened it into a grin.

The stranger advanced in a leisurely fashion and said good day; then, cocking an eye at the clouds, asked me my opinion of the weather. I gathered that he was a fisherman and that the stream in the valley had excited his hopes. He was a very tall man of forty or more, somewhat stoutly built and with a military gait. His face, which was bare save for a long reddish mustache, was puffy and swollen, but he had a pleasant gray-green eye and a genial and engaging manner. His thin red hair was carefully brushed over a rather bald head.

"My landlord tells me there has been a death up yonder," said he, nodding toward the castle. "A regular romance, if I'm right in supposing you are Mr. Greatorex?"

I told him that I was.

"Ah, well, you're very lucky."

I replied somewhat coldly that he seemed to know more than I did myself.

"Come, come," said he, with a laugh. "My dear sir, we are all gossips, and, after all, I was bound to talk of something besides the weather," and his way was so good humored and withal so frank that I could not but join in his laugh. In the issue I accepted his invitation to drink a little whisky in his room, and being apparently a talkative fellow he was very soon in the full swing of soliloquy. I must confess that he was an entertaining talker. He had seen a vast deal of life and in many countries. He had apparently been a soldier of fortune since he left the English army, for he spoke of service with the Peruvians, of brushes and escapades in sundry parts of South America and of multifarious adventures in several continents. It might have seemed odd that the lord of Ivor castle should be seated there in the parlor of a shabby inn, hobnobbing over whisky and cigars with an utter stranger about whom he knew nothing and cared less, but I myself was little better than a fellow stranger, and at all events I required no excuses for myself. It has ever been my habit to give myself full license in my commune with my fellows, and in the result I have usually found the custom productive of amusement and interest. We parted on friendly terms, and I congratulated myself as I walked home upon a very agreeable neighbor.

When I reached the castle the night had fallen, unrelieved by stars. I rang for a lamp and retired to my bedroom for a pocketbook which I had left in one of the drawers in an old bureau. I remembered to have placed it in the left hand drawer in the secretary. I took the key from my pocket and twisted it in the lock, but as it would not turn I became impatient and shook the handles. The lid fell open of itself. Clearly it had not been locked. And yet I could have testified in a court of law that I had locked it in the afternoon. Furthermore, my pocketbook was not where I had left it, but in a lower drawer. The oddness roused my curiosity, and I went carefully through the drawers only to find that without a doubt they had been conscientiously and scrupulously rummaged by some one. The thought was not inviting. I sat down in a chair to consider. Later I went down to the dining hall and made out my notes for the day. A letter by the second post, which arrived late in the evening, lay to my hand on the table. The situation demanded a patient temper and some thought. It threatened to discover a grave climax. So far my reflections led me. Why had my bureau been rifled? What did this robber want? And yet again the problem fell upon me, something darkling, but urgent, importunate—had any one visited Mr. Kesteven through that open window in the article of his death? The confluence of these questions embarrassed me, and I opened my letter absently.

It was from Greenstreet and invited my consideration of the offer made by the London solicitors. They were pressing to know my price for the castle. I seized a sheet of paper and scribbled a line, sealing and stamping the envelope ere I went to bed. It was merely to tell Greenstreet that the property was not in the market.

CHAPTER V.

UPON the third day after the events of the preceding chapter Mrs. Main announced a visitor, handing me at the same time a card on which was printed with an abundance of flourishes and ornament "Mr. Morris Barnett." He made a ceremonious entry and politely discharged a few courtesies ere he got to business.

"I have come over, Mr. Greatorex," said he suavely, "to see if you are at all disposed to do a client of mine a great favor."

I did not see any very strong reason why I should favor a client of Mr. Morris Barnett, but I murmured that I was always glad to be of service to my fellow creatures.

"The fact is, sir," he resumed, laying his hat and stick upon a chair and drawing a packet of papers from his pocket, "my firm has a client who is related to the ancient Vyvian family, the original owners of this castle, as you are no doubt aware, and he has been informed that you have come into possession of this very beautiful estate in accordance with the will, if I mistake not, of the late Mr. Kesteven."

He looked at me inquiringly, and I told him that his information was quite correct.

"I gather, Mr. Greatorex," he continued affably, "that you have been until comparatively recently a stranger to these parts and that, in short, you have no particular ties in the county?"

"That is true," said I.

"My client, sir, has naturally—you will understand the motive—a desire to purchase the property, if you are disposed to meet him and we can arrange terms. And that, shortly, is the object of my visit."

Now, you will easily conceive that, falling in the present circumstances, this set my blood humming. Here was yet another, and within a few days of the demise of the old proprietor, who must needs come clamoring for a sale of the castle. The fact stirred my curiosity—nay, to speak truly, inflamed me with something very like excitement.

"And what, then, is your proposal, Mr. Barnett?" I asked calmly enough.

I was sharp enough to notice a gleam of satisfaction pass over his face, but he displayed none of his triumph in his very businesslike tone.

"Ah, well, Mr. Greatorex," said he, lolling back in his chair, "you see these old places are more matters of sentimental than profitable investment."

"True," said I shortly, "and men are usually willing to pay a high price for sentiment."

"Ah, no, Mr. Greatorex," said he promptly, shaking his head, and here there was a real touch of gutturals, "you mistake. My client is not a rich man, but he hankers after the place of his fathers. It would mean much to him."

"It means a good deal to me," said I. "How much?" said Barnett suddenly. "Supposing I said £20,000?"

He held up his hands. "My dear sir, my dear sir!" he repeated and stared at me as if my audacity had plucked away his wits.

"Why not?" I asked.

Mr. Barnett was thoroughly enjoying himself.

"Do you know what landed property is selling at, Mr. Greatorex?" he asked confidentially. "It is practically a drug in the market, sir, just now."

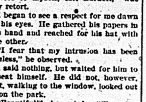
"Then," said I, "will you kindly explain, Mr. Barnett, how it comes that I have had two offers within a week of my inheritance?"

"Ah," he said meditatively, rubbing his chin.

"It looks as if this particular property was not a drug in the market, doesn't it?" I asked.

"To be sure," he remarked vaguely, and then, recovering himself, resumed his gentle smile. "But let us come back to business, Mr. Greatorex. Shall we say £5,000?"

He cooed at me enticingly. His assumption that we had wandered into the regions of fancy and romance tickled me, and I broke forth laughing.



Mr. Barnett held up his hands.

"Ah, well," said he, grinning sympathetically, "we might make it £7,500 with immediate possession."

"Mr. Barnett," said I gravely, "your client seems to have been born too late by a hundred years."

"I dare say, Mr. Greatorex, that my client would go to the length of £10,000 upon my advice."

"Then I should certainly keep my advice to myself, Mr. Barnett," was my retort.

I began to see a respect for me dawn in his eyes. He gathered his papers in his hand and reached for his hat with the other.

"I fear that my intrusion has been useless," he observed.

I said nothing, but waited for him to reseat himself. He did not, however, but, walking to the window, looked out upon the park.

"Beautiful!" he cried. "Charming prospect! Really, now that I have seen it, Mr. Greatorex, I feel justified in advising my client to go a little higher."

"I think the view is worth an extra £5,000," I suggested.

"I think he might rise possibly to £15,000, Mr. Greatorex, if you will allow me to communicate with my client," he said softly. "But my client is a poor man, and it is a ruinous price."

"Then why ruin your client, my dear sir?" said I.

Mr. Barnett laughed pleasantly, as if at my little joke, but, becoming serious again, shook his head.

"A stiff price, but I think I can manage it," he said.

"I have little doubt that you can manage anything," I said, bowing.

"You agree?" he asked.

"It is not necessary," said I, "since you seem to have agreed for me."

"It is monstrous!" he said gloomily. "But my client has set his heart on it. You shall have your £20,000, Mr. Greatorex."

He sighed resignedly and, having selected a document in his pocketbook, proceeded to unfold it and smooth it upon the table. All the spirit was out of him. He had been worsted and owed me a grudge, I could perceive.

"If you have a pen, Mr. Greatorex," he said sullenly, "I will fill in the figures. I have the agreement here."

"Pardon me," said I.

He looked up and, meeting my gaze, offered an explanation against my protest. "There's no time like the present."

"You misunderstand me, sir," I said cheerfully. "I have no intention of selling the castle."

He leaped to his feet. "What!" he yelled, and his sallow face spread with color. "You said £20,000!"

"Excuse me; no," I said. "Your client, Mr. Barnett, did me the honor to suppose I should be willing to sell, and I was polite enough to suppose so with him."

There was never a man in so atrocious a temper as my little attorney. His color went, and he grew a livid yellow with passion, and, being now no longer at the necessity of civility, he broke into covert invective, presenting to me a surly demeanor. I ignored his unmannerliness, but kept my placid smile all the time that he was arranging his departure. On the threshold of the door he paused and, turning, demanded:

"Is your decision final?"

I assured him that it was absolute. He gave me an extremely vicious look as he disappeared.

"You will regret this, Mr. Greatorex," he observed.

I understood that the phrase was not uncommonly used in similar circumstances, but in truth I need hardly say that I should not have turned a sarcasm at the expense of Mr. Barnett's inoffensive client, despite Mr. Barnett's offensive manner, if I had not been absolutely certain that Mr. Barnett's client did not exist. At least I would have gone bail that he was no relation to the departed Vyvians, and I would even have ventured to doubt if he knew much more of them than did Mr. Barnett himself, for it was plain enough to me by this time that some person or some persons had particular reasons for desiring to obtain possession of my inheritance. So much being clear it only remained to determine those particular reasons, reasons which I could now perceive were involved in the secret of my dead friend and probably also in the culminating tragedy of his death.

When I was rid of my visitor I set forth upon a stroll in the woods. It was 4 in the afternoon, and the sun shone very fiercely upon the white roads, throwing black shadows from the trees. I dropped from the roadway into a rude moss grown track that ran into the heart of the valley, and presently, leaving the more open parts of the forest, struck into the deeper brakes and tangles below. The little stream ran here in the bottom very pleasantly, sometimes brawling over shallows and at other parts more silently in eddies and drifts over darker and deeper pools. As I followed its course I came shortly upon a spot where the channel made an elbow almost at right angles with its former direction, and here I descried the form of Captain Sercombe. A sound of voices reached me, and, cheered by the prospect of a companion with whom to exchange sentences, I uttered a short "Hello!" and dived through the undergrowth toward him. When I emerged upon the open space upon which the captain stood my attention was caught by a rustling among the branches, and I had a glimpse of some one just disappearing into the wood. I stopped with my eyes fastened upon the point, for something familiar in the incident struck me all of a sudden. That lean, slim figure, that swift, precipitate rush—these were as impressions recovered from some past experience. Captain Sercombe was lazily whipping a deep pool, a pipe between his teeth, and, turning his head, he hailed me:

"You have frightened my fish, sir," said he.

I begged his pardon somewhat abstractedly, and, raising himself, he looked at me, following the direction of my glance.

"Oh, that's my worthy and very obsequious host," said he, with a smile, taking his pipe from his mouth. "I wish he would let me alone, but he's so awfully officious. Thought he knew the likeliest spots, and would insist on showing me. As if I hadn't fished before he was born!"

I joined him on the bank.

"Any luck?" I asked.

He opened his basket. "A couple of smallish ones," he returned. "But there's a big fellow here, if your noise hasn't frightened him."

He threw a cast very neatly and, bending over his line, was wholly absorbed by his occupation. But nothing would tempt the trout to rise, and the captain soon gave me his attention again.

"There's nothing equal to an obstinate fish," he remarked thoughtfully. "I envy you, Mr. Greatorex. If I lived in this spot I could ask no better than to spend my life on the banks of this brook."

"Ah, you have the proper spirit!" said I.

"All the same," he declared, "it's a mighty hot tramp through those brakes, and I've earned my dinner."

"Come in," said the captain as we reached the Woodman, and the invitation was so natural, issued as so much a matter of course, that I entered behind him almost unconsciously.

"You will excuse me if I have a little refreshment, Mr. Greatorex," he said. "I have been out since 10 o'clock and am only held together by a few sandwiches. Besides, I have always an appetite. Hood! Hood!" he called.

The inkeeper entered and received his orders.

"Now, sir, take a seat. I think you'll find that apology for a sofa at least comfortable," continued my host, and he flung himself, breathing hard, into an armchair and fanned his face with his handkerchief.

"How is the new inheritance?" he asked presently.

There was no shadow of offense in his voice, and I should have been surly indeed to have taken for a liberty what was clearly a friendly interest in my affairs. I said I hoped that he would pay me a visit and see for himself.

"Thank you very much," said he, with a delicate bow of acknowledgment. "I shall be delighted. I had a sight of the old place yesterday as I passed the gates."

Hood entered with a tray of refreshments, and Sercombe drew himself up to the table and began upon his untimely meal.

"I don't know what digestion is, Mr. Greatorex," he explained. "I believe it is a term in use among doctors to terrify nervous patients. I eat when I like, not when society wants me." And, filling his mouth, he asked me if I had resolved to live in the castle.

"You have frightened my fish, sir," said he.

"At present, yes," I answered, "though certainly it would appear to be in despite of fortune, for it is not the fault of some people that I am not sent packing off to London."

He stared at me in the act of drinking, and I felt Hood's eyes also upon me. The next second the innkeeper resumed his work, placing a fork softly by the captain's plate.

"How do you mean?" asked Sercombe.

As I had started the tale, I went on with it, rehearsing briefly the visit of Barnett.

Captain Sercombe smiled and went on with his food.

"Oh, I thought some one had been disputing your title," he said, "that is all. I hope you fooled him?"

I related my victory with some satisfaction, and Sercombe chuckled.

"Well, you're going to keep your castle?" he resumed. "Patriotic man! Though I should judge £20,000 to be a good market price for the property."

"It is not worth half as much," said I.

"Then why not, in the name of goodness, take your profit?" demanded the captain, opening his eyes in astonishment.

"I'm in no hurry," said I, smiling.

"Humph!" ejaculated the captain, picking his teeth thoughtfully. "Well, you may be right, though I don't see your reasons. A landed estate is merely a nuisance, so far as my experience goes. It's all payment and no returns. It takes a wealthy man to keep an estate. If I had your place, Mr. Greatorex, I should be disposed to let it, at any rate, and enjoy the proceeds while I might. You'd find no difficulty in doing that, I should think."

"I dare say not," was my reply.

"Why," continued the captain, as if smiling at his own thought, "I would take it off your hands for a month or so for the fishing alone—that is, if you were reasonable."

For some reason or other this semijocose offer irritated me, possibly because of previous experiences.

"Between you, you are bound to have me out," I said, rather dryly. "But I assure you I will not budge."

I was not looking at him as I spoke, but out of the tail of my eye it seemed to me that I caught a quick exchange of glances between the captain and the innkeeper, and to my imagination—for such it may have been—the face of the man Hood wore an unmistakable frown. But as I turned sharply he was merely refilling the captain's glass and using a deft napkin upon the soda water bottle.

"My dear sir," said he, "it is long since I was in a position to pose as a country gentleman, and for my own part I sincerely hope you will occupy the castle as long as I occupy the inn. After that I fear I shall have no further interest in the matter."

I felt distinctly snubbed by the rejoinder, for all that it was delivered in so hearty a manner. But I got out of the inn creditably enough and with a neat stroke in return, all very good humored. All the same, upon my homeward journey I was troubled by that mutual signal which I had seemed to discover between these two incongruous people. As for Sercombe's offer, it was plainly intended for a jest, and I thought no more of it. Yet I was still exercised in my mind, vaguely uneasy and distrustful. And in this mood I settled down to consider my situation that evening and to review the events which I have here narrated. The puzzle was to determine a cause for all the remarkable transactions. Some one wanted to acquire the castle, and went about it very persistently. Why? And some one had made raids upon the house to secure something of which I was in possession. What?

Suddenly, and as if revealed by a flash of illumination, the reason was lit up and stood bare and bright before me. It was hidden treasure!

CHAPTER VI.

NOW that I had put my tongue to the word I was confident of my discovery. All the facts pointed one way, and I was dumfounded at my previous obtuseness. For what but a hidden store of treasure would explain these incessant attempts upon the house itself or the insistent efforts to take it out of my hands? And what again but treasure could supply so natural a key to old Kesteven's death and his mysterious secret? It seemed to me, too, that upon this hypothesis several facts hitherto inexplicable might be referred to reason. The eccentricity of my host in choosing me for his heir became not so much an eccentricity as a studious piece of policy. He was, in the general verdict, devoid of living relatives, and had so long fallen out of the world as to be practically friendless. He had made up his mind to my honesty, possibly to my capability, and was resolved to trust me. If this were so, as I saw it now, the making of the will had been an inevitable act in the game he intended to play.

I could not imagine that he had foreseen his sudden death, yet with his knowledge that he had an organic disease it was wise to take punctual precautions. It was probable also that the news he had evidently received upon the morning of that fatal day had conduced to his visit to the lawyer. I was to be admitted to his confidence. Twice he had been interrupted in the very nick of his narrative—the second time by the interposition of Death himself. In these considerations my thoughts were naturally drawn to the events of that evening. Why had Kesteven retired to his room? Obviously there was a connection between his errand and the sheet of parchment which I had detached from his clutch.

I opened my dispatch box and spread out the paper on the table once more, poring over it with my pulse throbbing to my finger tips. The meaning was now plain, though the main secret was yet to find. The parchment was clearly the second sheet only of the document which Mr. Kesteven had desired to bring down for my perusal. I sat up at a new and more alarming discovery. Where was the first sheet?

That open window now offered up its secret. That desperate cry was no longer now the scream of mortal agony, but an appeal for help. From the dead fingers I had taken the second sheet of the mysterious document, so pregnant with interest, but from the hands of the living I could not doubt that the first had been violently torn in the course of a struggle in that silent chamber. Terror had surprised the rascal at his work—the terror of that sudden and fearful dissolution, of that humped and pitiful body fallen on the floor. And here now with two ends of the secret, whatever it might be, rent asunder and secluded in separate hands, the hoard of treasure still lay buried in its ancient hiding place as intact and private as it had lain maybe through hundreds of years of silence.

My riddle was read. That certainly was a great step, and in the heat of my discovery, as I sat palpitating with strange emotions of adventure, avarice, even of ferocity, I had no intention to leave the matter where it stood. I was resolved to confront fate and to enter the lists against those undetermined enemies. So far they had kept very silent, working only in the dark, but I swore then and there to meet them, drag them forth into the broad daylight and contest my rights in the hidden treasure, if it existed, against a dozen sorry knaves. I am a patient man and not overquick to take a resolution, but I do not easily lay down a task which I have once undertaken. I swore upon the spot to undertake this.

In the circuit of my fancy I came uddenly upon this consideration, which pulled me up quite sharply, even with a little breathlessness. These unknown antagonists were still banded in arms against me, and I was alone. I had had repeated evidence that I was pursued by their ingenuity and in two ways. On the one hand I was to be evicted from my own house, and simultaneously my bureau was rifled, as I could not now doubt, for the purpose of securing my remnant of the precious document. What would be the next step which these insolent tricksters would essay? I had no one in the castle beyond the estimable Mrs. Main and a neat housemaid, neither of whom was to be counted in a warfare such as the situation promised to my imagination.

The one man that was daily visible about the place slept at Llanellan, as Mr. Kesteven had informed me. What puzzled me at this point was the isolation in which my host had enwrapped himself. He had taken no pains to protect himself. Exposed, as he must have known he was, to the treachery of an unscrupulous foe, he was thrown absolutely upon his own resources unless indeed he relied upon the near proximity of Hood in times of emergency. But Hood perplexed me, recurring in my thoughts, a haunting figure, provoking only a vague uneasiness and a great uncertainty. And once again the odd conjunction of the captain and the innkeeper returned before my eyes. One thing was certain to my newly awakened wits—I must have some companion in my confidence. There were several friends among my old acquaintances who would serve me, but the year was drawing on and the holiday season was at his height. The odds were that I should discover Pengelly or Rogers or Sheppard was far enough from London by this. I wanted aid forthwith, and forthwith must have it. So it fell that my mind recurred to Montgomery. He was not very much to my taste, certainly not congenial company, but he was obviously honest, and I could swear that he would be faithful.

And so indeed he proved. I rode over next morning to the farm which constituted now all that was left of the old estate of the family. He was plaiting a whip in his dining room—a high wainscoted chamber, very dingy and untidy and heaped with all the unimaginable rubbish of a young man's fancy. On my entrance he rose, his silly face beaming red, and grasped my hand with an awkward sentence of welcome.

"It's good of you to come so soon," said he.

"I've come to take you back," said I.

He stared at me. "Oh, all right!" he said, as if this mission of mine had been a matter of course. "Come and have a drink."

It was but 11 in the morning, though the breakfast things still cumbered his table, and so I refused his hospitality, a refusal which did not prevent his pouring himself out a glass of beer.

"Montgomery," said I, "leave that alone and keep your head clear. I want you."

The boy bounded to his feet sheepishly enough to what he doubtless considered my rebuke, but with a show of eagerness which pleased me.

"Got your horse?" I asked.

He nodded, all attention now, and I continued:

"Then fling your legs up and be off, and ask your servant to send on your bags. I'm going to keep you for a week."

"Bully!" he said and clamored out of the room in a cheery fashion.

I had already made up my mind not to be too explicit with Montgomery. He was too recent an acquaintance, despite my conviction of his fidelity, to intrust with a precious secret. Indeed, the first occasion of our encounter would not have commended him to many particular people. What I told him, therefore, as we rode back embraced but the general atmosphere of intrigue in which I was involved. The word that stuck in his mind was "burglary," and it greatly excited him.

TRAINING DOGS.

Poodles the Easiest to Teach, Dachshunds the Most Difficult.

A poodle is the easiest of all to train, and the dachshund is the most difficult, the latter not because he is too stupid, but because he is too smart. A dachshund readily understands what you want him to do, and he can do it, but he thinks he knows a better way, and he invariably tries his way first. As a result, he is never trained in anything that is really difficult. A dachshund seems to be always poking fun at one and getting no little amusement out of it for himself. Collies are easily trained, but they are more or less unreliable, and they are such flatterers. They make you think things are all right and then they run away at the very first opportunity. In preference to other dogs, collies are trained almost exclusively in the militia of Vienna for carrying, in time of war, messages and medicine to and from the camp and the sick soldiers, but they are chosen more for their speed than their faithfulness. Fox terriers are natural acrobats. Within a few weeks one can be trained to turn a somersault. A few weeks more and he will do a double turn. To teach him to do this the trainer calls the animal to him, and as he comes jumping playfully against the trainer he is caught and turned quickly in the air, much to his surprise. He thinks it is play, and he comes jumping up again. After each turn he is given a small piece of meat. In a few weeks he will run up and try independently to do the turn over in the air for the meat, and if he is encouraged it will not be long before he is an accomplished acrobat.

ERRATIC ENGINES

Locomotives That Act as Though They Were Bewitched.

You never see a ship launched on a Friday, and similarly a new locomotive hardly ever makes a trial trip on that day or on the 13th of the month. Even though the superintendent may jeer at the superstition, yet he knows too well to set it at naught, for just as sailors consider that some ships are unlucky so do train hands credit certain locomotives with a sort of demoniacal possession.

It is certainly very strange the difference that may be observed between two locomotives built from the same plans, at the same time, of similar material. One goes on her way quietly and smoothly, never breaks down, costs little or nothing for repairs. The other causes trouble from the very first, runs off the line, kills the drivers, gets into accidents of all kinds and generally acts as though possessed by some evil spirit.

There was a famous instance some years ago on the South Florida railway. A locomotive killed so many people that she got the name of "the hearse," and no fewer than three engine drivers actually left the employ of the company rather than continue driving her. The odd thing was that she never seemed to injure herself. Eventually the owners were forced to break her up, although she was by no means worn out.

The Art of Flattery.

There are those who have an instinct which prompts them to offer verbal caresses to all with whom they come in contact, and there is no doubt that, if such people are gifted at the same time with good hearts, they greatly sweeten life. They do not know how to say, much less write, a disagreeable sentence. They see with their mind's eye the exact spot where a flattering word would produce pleasure or salve a smart, and the temptation to say it is very great. The pleasure they produce delights them, and they study to produce it again. No doubt they practice an art, but not a very black art, and it is difficult not to like them, especially if they are women. Real flattery—the really false article—can hardly exist with a warm heart. Plenty of folly and too much desire to be popular may go with that, but nothing else.

Church Built of Bulrushes.

The first place of worship in Western Australia was unique in two respects—the materials of which it was built and also the several purposes to which it was devoted. This remarkable building was made at Perth by soldiers shortly after their first arrival in 1829 and was composed almost entirely of bulrushes. In addition to its use on Sundays for divine worship, it occasionally served as an amateur theater during the week and during the whole time as a barracks.

The Pawnbroker's Sign.

The pawnbroker's sign came from the sign used by the Lombard bankers, who took it from the sign used by the Medici family of Florence. The founder of the house had been a medicus, or physician. His descendants became bankers and brokers, and their sign was their ancestor's golden pills. When they became nobles they assumed as arms six golden pills or balls on a blue field.

Sunny People.

The world delights in sunny people. The old are hungering for love more than for bread. The air of joy is very cheap, and if you can help the poor on with a garment of praise it will be better for them than blankets.—Henry Drummond.

The Critical Period.

Duffer—One is born every minute, you know. Puffer—Yes, but they're not listed till they get old enough to think they are not.

A GENEROUS CRITIC.

John Oxenford was for years the leading theatrical critic of London. Mr. Oxenford was troubled with a serious bronchial affection, which occasionally disturbed the audience, for he refused to give up his beloved theater, although desperately ill. A certain rising young actor was very anxious to obtain Oxenford's valuable opinion on his work, and the tender hearted old gentleman literally left his bed and came down to the theater on a bitter cold night to do a good action to a clever youngster. In the middle of one of the actor's finest scenes on came the cough from the Oxenford box. It continued so long that it unnerved the actor, and he came to a dead stop. To the surprise of everybody he advanced to the front and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, I am sorry to say that unless the old gentleman with the irritating cough retires temporarily from the theater I really cannot go on. I forget everything. It is painful so to address you, but I am powerless in the matter and place myself in your hands."

The disturbance at once ceased, and the box was empty. When the curtain fell a friend rushed around and, breathless, said to the distressed actor: "Do you know what you have done? Do you know who it was that you turned out of the box?" "I neither know nor care," was the reply. "Why, it was John Oxenford!" The actor was paralyzed, but he got his good notice all the same. The veteran critic went home coughing to praise the young actor who had turned him out.

JUDGING DOGS.

The Rules by Which the Different Points Are Valued.

The average man is greatly puzzled to find one dog awarded a first prize and another, which to him appears to be quite as fine a specimen, awarded no prize at all. A man who knows the relative values of the different points in all breeds of dogs is a veritable walking encyclopedia.

Generally speaking, the best dog is one which comes nearest the standard of requirements for its own particular breed, about 25 per cent of the points being usually awarded for fine head proportions, an equal number for legs and feet, a similar number for body and color and the rest for symmetry.

In the Dalmatian, for instance, thirty points are given for color and markings, while head, eyes and ears have only fifteen; the bulldog, on the other hand, has forty-five for head and ears, while coat and color amount to but five points; the collie has twenty-five for coat, color being immaterial, and twenty-five for head and ears.

The St. Bernard has forty for head and ears and five each for coat and color. The Pomeranian has but fifteen for head and ears, forty-five points going for coat, color and tail, with fifteen for appearance. It may be set down as governing in all breeds of dogs that whatever is the typical feature of that breed is the feature upon which stress is laid in the allotment of points.

The Ant's Cow.

The aphis, one of the most widely distributed species of insects known to the entomologists, is sometimes referred to as the "ant's cow." The aphis actually gives milk, although the creature itself is so small that it is estimated to weigh but the one one-thousandth of a grain. Out of the back of the aphis project two hollow tubes. These connect with ducts in the body, which secrete a sweet liquid. When the tubes are touched the liquid exudes in small drops. The ants know this, and they make a regular business of tickling the tubes of the little aphis to make her "give down her milk." The ant is very fond of this saccharine food and will "milk" a hundred aphides in the course of an hour.

Why He Resigned.

The French Baron Rothschild once had in his service a valet named Alphonse, first class, but an acknowledged "red." This valet obtained permission once a week to attend the meetings of his Socialist lodge. Suddenly the baron noticed that Alphonse no longer desired this off night and, inquiring into the cause, was informed that the valet's late Socialist colleagues had worked out a calculation that if all the wealth of France were divided equally per capita each individual would be the possessor of 2,000 francs. "Monsieur," said Alphonse, with dignity, "I resigned. I have 5,000 francs!" —Argonaut.

Henpecked Husbands.

Henpecked husbands are found even in India. A writer says: "To live as I have done in a Hindoo house, especially when the real house mistress is a masterful and deeply religious widow, who is grandmother to the babies and mother to their parents, is no longer to wonder at the absolute terror with which men speak of the 'stri achchar.' For the men of India are, poor souls, the most henpecked in the world."

Too Much Heart.

"And you rejected him?"

"I did."

"He has the reputation of being a large hearted man."

"That's the trouble with him. He is too large hearted. He can love half a dozen women at the same time."

Domestic Finance.

Mrs. Knicker—Can you get money from your husband? Mrs. Bocker—No. By the time I've paid the cook for a good dinner before I ask him I'm just even.

Music is the prophecy of what life is to be, the rainbow of promise translated out of seeing into hearing.—Mrs. L. M. Child.

ANCIENT WATER VILLAGES.

One of the most interesting regions in the "old fatherland" is the so called "Spreewald," the forest of the Spree, situated not far from the German capital, in the province of Brandenburg. Each village is a little Venice, every house a little island, and these islets are connected by bridges sufficiently raised to allow boats to pass under them. Most of the houses, with their barns and stables, rest on piles, and there is generally a strip of artificial terra firma either in front or at the rear of every building. By means of these land strips and of the bridges the slender land communication is kept throughout the district, but most of the business and amusement are carried on through the canals, which not only form the main highways, but penetrate and cross and recross the whole region. It is on these lagoons that all traffic is conducted in boats during the period from spring when the last vestiges of frost and ice are disappearing until the end of autumn. You see the letter carrier shoot up and down the canals, performing his duties in his frail craft; the police glide leisurely along the banks, watching everything going on; peasants bring the products of their toil to the nearest towns; children go to and from school; young mothers, dressed in their Sunday clothes, are rowed to church, carrying in their arms a small, queer looking bundle from which two large eyes in a tiny face stare at the stranger in wonderment—baby is going to be baptized, an important moment with this strongly religious people.

DREAM MYSTERY.

The Events That May Be Crowded Into a Few Seconds.

The duration of a dream is so seldom accurately measured that a story published in the St. Louis Medical Record is worth repeating.

The writer, a doctor, was seized with an uncontrollable drowsiness during a call and was struggling to keep awake when he was asked by his companion, "How long may you stay in B.?" His answer, which came promptly enough, was, "That depends on the Western Union," and, catching himself, he explained that he was expecting a telegram. In fact, however, his answer related to the facts of a dream which had been sandwiched between the two parts of the sentence.

After hearing the words "How long" the doctor had dozed off, dreamed that after long and tedious experiments he had invented a wonderful apparatus for holding telegraph poles in a vertical position, had negotiated with the postal company for its sale, but unsuccessfully, and had finally gone to the authorities of the other company. They, in the dream, told him they were considering a German invention for the same purpose, and the dreamer crossed the ocean to examine the rival device, returned, explained the differences to the intending purchaser and was writing a reply when he woke in time to hear the end of his companion's question.

The events of the dream had apparently consumed months, yet the actual time that elapsed was merely that required for uttering about four short words.

Precedent For "Governess."

Albert VII., archduke of Austria, married Isabella Clara Eugenie, infanta of Spain, who brought to him as dowry the sovereignty of the Low Countries, etc. When Philip IV. of Spain ascended the throne in 1621 he took from his aunt the sovereignty of the Low Countries, but left her the title of governess. Her husband died soon after, whereon she took the veil, though still retaining the reins of government. She died at Brussels in 1633, aged sixty-six. Here there is precedent for the use of the word governess when a lady holds the post.—London Notes and Queries.

Paid For the Opinion.

Shortly after Chief Justice Purley of the court of appeals of New Hampshire had retired from the bench and resumed the practice of his profession a man called on him to get his opinion in a certain matter. After stating his case clearly he said, "Well, judge, what do you think of my case?" The judge promptly replied, "I think you are a scoundrel." "How much do I owe you for that opinion?" inquired the client. "Ten dollars," demanded the judge. The fee was promptly paid.

Rhodesia's Largest Nugget.

Weighing 21.02 ounces, a gold nugget which measures five and a half inches in length and three inches in width was recently found near Bulawayo. It is believed to be the largest yet found in Rhodesia, and is now in the British South Africa company's museum at 2 London Wall buildings, E. C.—London Mail.

The Woman of It.

The Determining Factor.

Helen—Sometimes I like waltzing and sometimes I do not. Ethel—It depends on your mood? Helen—It depends on my partner.

Of all persecutions, that of calumny is the most intolerable.—Hazlitt.

DESPERATE HEROISM.

An Incident of the Indian Fighting Days in Illinois.

The desperate intrepidity and warlike heroism of the early settlers of Illinois are illustrated by an incident narrated in "Historic Illinois." The early days were a time of hardship, danger and death. Every forest covert, every tuft of prairie grass, might hide some skulking red enemy. Among the early frontiersmen was a Captain Whiteside, whose name became a terror among the Kickapoos.

A party of fourteen white men led by Whiteside made an attack upon an encampment of Indians of greatly superior force. Only one Indian escaped. During the heat of the skirmish Captain Whiteside was severely wounded, he thought mortally, having received a shot in the side.

As he fell he called to his sons to keep on fighting and not to yield an inch of ground or permit the savages to touch his body. Uel Whiteside, who had also been shot in the arm, so that he could no longer use his rifle, hastily examined his father's wound, discovering that the bullet had glanced along the ribs and lodged against the spine.

With that daring and disregard for pain so often characteristic of border men he immediately whipped out his knife, gashed the skin, extracted the ball and held it up, crying:

"You're not dead yet, father!"

The old man leaped to his feet, renewed the fight and bore his full part to the end. Many such instances of heroism distinguished the men who in those days of peril were called upon to defend the frontiers of Illinois.

EASILY SCARED.

An Adventure With a Rhinoceros in East Africa.

Of a curious encounter with a rhinoceros an African traveler writes in the Globe Trotter, published in Nairobi, British East Africa: "He was peacefully grazing on a choice patch of green stuff and apparently meant to do the well bred thing and allow us to pass by; so, with my heart in my mouth, nothing in my pockets and an empty magazine rifle in my hand, I attempted a slide for a more secure position. But I was immediately foiled of this object by a suspicious movement on the part of the enemy. A swish of the tail, a suggestive uplifting of the snout and a sniff of the atmosphere, and the delicate and fairylike creature bore down ponderously upon my two native bearers and myself.

"My knees promptly refused to work. I could not move a muscle, and so with all the British pluck and courage of which we have read so much I calmly resigned myself. By this time the hideous beauty had advanced to within ten yards of its prey, when, to my surprise, the two boys accompanying me hastily dismantled themselves of all baggage, and, with all muscles stretched, ready for a sprint, they stood their ground and, without moving an inch, began to whistle for all they were worth.

"Quickly noting the satisfactory result of the maneuver, I blew my whistle hastily and with good will. The shrill notes struck strangely on the untutored ear of the rhino, for he promptly turned tail and fled."

A Short Cut.

"There goes a man," observed a steamship agent as he directed attention to a surly looking individual who had just engaged passage for Europe, "whose efforts are devoted to constructing short cuts in business methods and in eliminating all time consuming men and their propositions from his busy existence. He is a man of very few words. Some years ago this gentleman crossed the ocean and had a very unpleasant trip. One morning a sympathetic passenger offered him a lemon, expressing a sincere wish that it would give relief. The pale traveler seized the lemon, hurled it viciously into the ocean and growled:

"'This is a quicker way than the other.'"

An Odd Moorish Custom.

As a people the Moors are already well inclined to anything that gilds life. A correspondent says: "Nothing delights them more as a means of agreeably spending an hour or two than squatting on their heels in the streets or on some door stoop, gazing at the passersby, exchanging compliments with their acquaintances. Native 'swells' consequently promenade with a piece of felt under their arms, on which to sit when they wish."

His Statement.

Dr. Price-Price (diplomatically)—I don't know whether I sent you a statement of what—er—you owe me. Mr. Knok—Neither do I. Dr. Price-Price—Oh, you didn't get it then? I suppose I didn't send you a statement. Mr. Knok—Yes; you did. But it looked more like a statement of what you think I possess.

Knew Her Ways.

Mr. Gayboy—What did my wife say when you told her I wouldn't be able to come home tonight until a late hour? Messenger—She didn't say anything. Mr. Gayboy—Then you must have gone to the wrong house!

A Doubting Thomas.

She—Did you let father know you owned a lot of house property? He—I hinted at it. She—What did he say? He—He said, "Deeds speak louder than words."

A Common Delusion.

One of the commonest of delusions and one of the fatalest is where a man thinks he's in a hurry.—Puck.

No man can enjoy life or feel that he is really living who has no work to do. —Success Magazine.

The Punishment of the Bagne.

In former times the punishment of the bagne (bath), one of the most cleverly cruel inflictions ever devised by an official of the torture chamber, was administered in Italy, probably in Venice, where the water of the lagoons played so prominent a part in its penal system. The punishment was as follows: The prisoner was placed in a vat the sides of which were slightly in excess of the average height of a man. In order to hold in check the rising tide of a supply of water which ran into the vat in a constant stream the criminal was furnished with a scoop with which to bale out the water as fast as it came in. The respite from death by immersion thus obtained was more or less prolonged, according to the powers of endurance possessed by the victim, but imagine the mortal torture, the exhausting and even hideously grotesque efforts, the incessant and pitiless toil by night and day, to stave off the dread moment fast approaching, when, overcome by sleep and fatigue, he was unable to struggle any longer against his fate.

"Auld Robin Gray."

A ballad that won instant fame against the expectation and even the wish of its author was "Auld Robin Gray," written by Lady Anne Lindsay about the end of the eighteenth century merely for her own satisfaction to replace the coarse verses of an old melody that pleased her. She sang charmingly, and the new ballad soon came into favor. Great was the curiosity aroused as to the author of this pathetic song, in whose simple verses all the elements of a heartrending tragedy are contained, but Lady Anne, modest and retiring by nature, preserved silence for many years, smiling, no doubt, at the controversy that raged so hotly. In the course of it her ballad was attributed by some disputants to David Rizzio, declared by others to be a genuine sixteenth century production and finally made the subject of a twenty guinea prize to be bestowed on anybody acute enough to bring to light the veritable author.—Cornhill Magazine.

Cigars Few Can Afford.

"A long, low strip of land, a valley between high hills, lies five miles outside of Havana, and there," said a cigar salesman, "the best tobacco in the world is grown. The name of the place is Abajo, and the Vuelta Abajo crops are always bought up two or three years in advance of their planting. They yield only 35,000 cigars annually. These cigars sometimes sell as high as $150 a hundred—$1.50 apiece. Vuelta Abajo cigars are only smoked by kings and billionaires. There are many fake Vuelta Abajos on the market, but the real thing, once smoked, can never be mistaken, for there is no other tobacco in the world with an aroma at once so powerful and so delicate."

Eat Less and Eat It Slowly.

Economic methods of eating are so important and so axiomatic that it really occasions some surprise that more is not known about the matter. Horace Fletcher, in his famous A B Z books on nutrition, very wisely insists upon the necessity of slow mastication with abundant insalivation. It is really astonishing how badly people use the teeth nature gave them for this purpose. Children naturally bolt their food, so it is said, and adults retain the habit. Not having the digestive power of cats or dogs, which naturally bolt their food, it results that much of our food is undigested and wasted.

A Good Excuse.

After the Duke of Wellington's victorious campaigns the University of Oxford complimented the duke himself and his principal officers by conferring upon them the honorary and not very appropriate degree of doctor of civil laws. At that time the fees were heavy, and one of the distinguished soldiers, who had gathered more honor than profit in the wars, declined the proffered degree in the following verse:

Oxford, I know you wish me well,
But prithee let me be.
I can't, alas, be D. C. L.
For want of £ s. d.

Tradition.

What an enormous "camera obscura" magnifier is tradition. How a thing grows in the human memory, in the human imagination, when love, worship and all that lies in the human heart are there to encourage it, and in the darkness, in the entire ignorance, without date or document, no book, no Arundel marble, only here and there some dull monumental cairn.—Carlyle.

Violence.

Violence ever defeats its own ends. Where you cannot drive you can always persuade. A gentle word, a kind look, a good natured smile, can work wonders and accomplish miracles. There is a secret pride in every human heart that revolts at tyranny. You may order and drive an individual, but you cannot make him respect you.—Hazlitt.

Just a Dig.

Proud Mother—Professor Octave called at our house today, and my daughter played the piano for him. He just raved over her playing. Her Neighbor—How rude! Why couldn't he conceal his feelings just as the rest of us do?

Hopeless.

"Tom has proposed, and asks me to give him his answer in a letter."

"Shall you do it?"

"No. I will be more liberal and give him his answer in two letters."

Or Cook With Them On.

There never was an angel who wouldn't take off her wings and cook for the man she loved.—New Orleans Picayune.

STAGECOACHING DAYS.

The old coaching days, as far as convenience for travel was concerned, were the dawn of the great days of our present rapid means of communication. The seventy years or so in which mail coaches waxed and flourished and finally died out before the incursion of railways and steam engines have a decided flavor of romance attached to them, and no doubt the coming and going of stagecoaches lent a certain amount of color and interest and life to the country places and towns through which ran the great main coaching roads. The Bath road, the Dover road, the York road were highways of communication along which rolled the heavy private coaches and chariots of the country magnates, and the stagecoaches with their steaming horses passed the various stopping places with the regularity of clockwork.

These stagecoaches, with their complement of coachmen and guards, afforded endless subjects of interest and illustration to the artist and the literary men of the day. Imagine Charles Dickens without stagecoaches and denuded of all his vivid descriptions of the scenes such as those in the yard of the White Hart inn, High street, Borough, in "Pickwick," or of the mail coach on the Dover road in "A Tale of Two Cities." It is difficult for the present generation to realize the fatigue and the wintry cold of such long journeys, when frozen feet were enveloped in a little straw, and a "shawl" folded round the neck was thought to be a fit protection against the keen night air.—London Standard.

THE PRIVATE WON.

Rebuked His Superior Officer and Escaped Court Martial.

Charles Bradlaugh when in the British army was orderly room clerk, and a newly arrived officer once entered the room where he was sitting at work and addressed to him some discourteous order. Private Bradlaugh took no notice. The order was repeated with an oath. Still no movement. Then it came again, with some foul words added. The young soldier rose, drew himself to his full height and, walking up to the officer, bade him leave the room or he would throw him out. He went accordingly, but in a few moments the grounding of muskets was heard outside, the door opened and the colonel walked in, accompanied by the officer.

It was clear that the private soldier had committed an act for which he might be court martialed, and as he said once, "I felt myself in a tight place." The officer made his accusation, and Private Bradlaugh was bidden to explain. He asked that the officer should state the exact words in which he had addressed him, and the other, who had, after all, a touch of honor in him, gave the offensive sentence word for word. Then Private Bradlaugh said, addressing the colonel, that the officer's memory must surely be at fault in the whole matter, as he could not have used language so unbecoming to an officer and a gentleman. The colonel turned to the officer with the dry remark: "I think Private Bradlaugh is right. There must be some mistake." And he left the room.

A Scotch Test.

Auchtermuchty is the happy town which every Scot, proud of his unpronounceable tongue, uses as a shibboleth to test the linguistic skill of the southron. If you cannot say "Auchtermuchty" you are still an uneducated barbarian. The meaning of the word happens to be as monstrous as its sound. "The high ground of the wild sow" is not a name one would choose for a garden city. People, however, are found to flock to it as a summer resort, and as it has a lover's pool, the town has probably attractions more real than its name. In the early part of last century Auchtermuchty went bankrupt and was deprived of all its property except the jail and one or two other assets of an equally necessary character. It is now rich, peaceful and radical.

Really a Human Being.

The story is told in China that years ago a missionary made his appearance upon a platform there and that the native orator who introduced him closed with these words: "When I have finished a gentleman from the west is going to address you. He is not a foreign demon. His appearance and his clothing may seem strange to you, but look carefully at him. He has two arms and two legs, two ears and two eyes, a nose (though a long one!) and a mouth; and I assure you his teeth are made of bone, just like yours. He is really a human being, and I hope you will regard him as such."

A Rank Fraud.

Mrs. Nuwed—Here's the bread I started to make today. Isn't it too annoying? Mr. Nuwed—Why, it isn't baked at all. Mrs. Nuwed—I know it isn't; that's just it. I put plenty of baking powder in it, but it doesn't seem to have worked.

A Question of Cuts.

"There is no short cut to fame," remarked the wise guy.

"How about the upper cut?" suggested the simple mug, looking up from the sporting page.

Ennui.

"Oh, dear, how the hours do drag! I wish I knew how to hurry them on."

"Why don't you apply the spur of the moment?"

Facts About Old San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO WAS THE LARGEST CITY WEST OF THE MISSISSIPPI, WITH A POPULATION OF 350,000.

San Francisco's population is over 350,000. It is the largest city west of the Mississippi, and the ninth in rank in the United States. It is the seventh seaport in commercial importance.

The site is a very hilly peninsula between the Bay of San Francisco and the Pacific Ocean on the south side of the strait known as the Golden Gate. It has about 47 square miles of territory, or 30,000 acres, within the city limits. Many of the streets are very steep. There is a street railway system of 280 miles. The aristocratic residential districts are known as "Nob Hil" and "Pacific Heights," both of which command superb views of the bay and the Golden Gate. Market street, a broad thoroughfare 120 feet wide, runs from the waterfront by a gradual ascent into the interior of the peninsula. The districts on either side of Market street are designated north and south respectively.

San Francisco has six large and twenty eight small parks. The most famous is the Golden Gate, occupying 1,014 acres. Beginning in the center of the city, it extends in beautiful broad sweep to the ocean on the west. Its beautiful broad walks and winding boulevards, together with the magnificent views of the ocean and the city, constitute one of its greatest charms. It contains a most complete museum. Japanese tea gardens, children's playgrounds, and a lovely chain of lakes. Here is situated the celebrated Cliff House, built at an enormous cost, and in full view of the rocks whereon the seals lie basking in the sun. Here are also the Sutro Baths, to which the water is admitted directly from the ocean, and warmed in immense tanks 500 feet long and containing 1,801,962 gallons. Other striking features on the peninsula are the "Presidio," the military reservation of the United States, containing 1,500 acres, on which are the barracks, officers' quarters and many other handsome buildings needed for the troops of the Department of California.

San Francisco is famed throughout the world by reason of its beautiful public buildings. The Union Ferry Depot was erected at a cost of more than $1,000,000. It is 659 feet long, 156 feet wide. The United States appraizers' building is of brick, four storeys high, cost $1,030,000, and contains the coast and geodetic surveys.

The City Hall is the most imposing building in the south, and was erected at a cost of more than $6,000,000. The dome is 134 feet high by 115 feet in diameter, and rises 355 feet above the sidewalk. From its top can be seen one of the finest panoramic views of river, ocean, and land anywhere visible. The Public Library building is a magnificent structure, and contains 150,000 volumes. The citizens recently voted $1,647,000 for the building of a new library, which Mr. Carnegie has offered to supplement by $750,000 more.

San Francisco has 59 hotels, among the most famous being the "Palace," occupying one whole block, on Market street.

Until the discovery of petroleum, San Francisco was handicapped in the manufacturing industries. The coal used was formerly brought from Puget Sound and British Columbia. The use of coal has now been supplemented by petroleum, which sells for 75c per barrel. The United States battleship Oregon and the armored cruiser Wisconsin were built in San Francisco. In 1900 there were 4,002 manufacturing establishments in the city, employing $80,103,367 of capital, 4,041 salaried officials at $4,619,033 per annum, and 41,978 wage earners, at a cost of $22,037,527 per annum. Among the largest establishments are the Union Iron Works, employing 4,000 men. The Oregon, the Charleston, the Olympic, San Francisco, Monterey, the Ohio, the Wisconsin and other battleships were built there. The great Alaskan fisheries are conducted and controlled from San Francisco, and send into the city upwards of 2,000,000 cases of salmon alone each year.

Most of the foreign commerce of the United States on the Pacific slope passes through the port of San Francisco. The wharfs and warehouses constitute one of the sights of the city. The total exports in 1902 were $62,500,000. In 1902 488 sailing vessels and 420 ocean steamships entered the Golden Gate.

The assessed value of the buildings of the city is $128,150,408. San Francisco has no debt, but the city in 1903 voted to issue $1,000,000 in bonds for a city and county hospital, $7,000 for a sewer system, $3,595,000 for school houses, $1,621,000 for streets, $697,000 for jails, $1,647,000 for a library, $741,000 for children's playgrounds, and $623,000 for parks.

The Situation Has Not Improved in San Francisco.

FIRE IS STILL RAGING AND WIND IS RISING — WATER SUPPLY STILL INADEQUATE — MILITARY HAS FORCED EVERYBODY TO LEAVE THE CITY.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

San Francisco, April 19.—The fire is still raging this morning, and is working its way eastward. It has reached Nob Hill above the residence section of the city.

The fire is burning rapidly in a diagonal line up the hill commencing at McAllister street and ending at Battery street, and on the Mission as far as Sixteenth street.

There is still an inadequate supply of water.

The wind is rising.

The military authorities have just forced everyone outside the city. They have all they can handle without any more in.

Arrangements are being made to get additional electric power from Sacramento. The situation has not improved, and already the suffering for food and water is awful.

THE CITY IS DOOMED.

Oakland, Cal., April 19, 9 a.m.—The fire is still raging throughout San Francisco, and there is no possibility of stopping it until it exhausts itself for want of material.

The city is doomed.

The authorities are still dynamiting buildings, but a new misfortune has befallen the place. The explosives for blowing up buildings are becoming exhausted.

Washington, D. C., April 19.—Gen. Funston wires to War Department that it is impossible to estimate the full extent of the San Francisco disaster. The city is practically destroyed. Too many tents or rations cannot be sent. About 200,000 people are homeless.

Food is very scarce. Provision houses are all destroyed.

INTERIOR OF STATE SUFFERED SEVERELY.

San Francisco, Cal., April 19. — Reports from the interior are most alarming, Santa Rosa, one of the prettiest cities in the County of Sonama, is a total wreck. The loss of life is not to be estimated but it probably will run into the hundreds, if not thousands. The whole business portion tumbled into ruins, and what was not destroyed by the earthquake has been swept by fire. Messengers bring the saddest tidings from all over the state. The loss of life promises to be awful.

Peter Jarvis' Death Was Accidental.

CORONER'S JURY FOUND THAT HE CAME TO HIS DEATH THROUGH BREAKING ONE OF THE RULES OF THE MINE.

On Tuesday, at Bannockburn, an inquest was held to enquire into the death of one Peter Jarvis, who was killed recently in a mine at that place

It was alleged that carelessness was the cause of the unfortunate accident and the authorities decided to investigate.

Dr. Harper, of Madoc, coroner, presided. Mr. Falconer of Toronto, was present in the interests of the mining company, and Mr. P. J. M. Anderson, County Attorney, represented the Crown. Some 15 witnesses were examined, who detailed the circumstances of the accident.

The jury, after being out for a short time, returned a verdict of "accidental death," and exonerated the company from any blame.

It appears that Jarvis was a foreman of the mine and thoroughly understood the rules. In breaking one of the rules in reference to the using of the bucket he lost his life.

The accident has had the result of causing some improvements to be made about the mine, and the bucket service in so far as its being used by the men in ascending or descending, has been discontinued.

Mr. Corkhill, an inspector of mines, was an interested attendant at the proceedings.

THIS LOOKS LIKE CASE OF MURDER.

BODY OF CHILD FOUND IN RIVER AT TWEED.

County Attorney Anderson last evening received a message from the village of Tweed, stating that the body of a child, partially dressed and badly decomposed, had been found in the river near the village. From the fact that there had been no report of a missing child the circumstances appeared to be suspicious and an inquest has been ordered. Dr. Harper, of Madoc, coroner, will conduct the enquiry, which will be held in the early part of next week.

Liquor Licenses Have Been Granted.

WEST HASTINGS LICENSE COMMISSIONERS HELD A MEETING YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

A meeting of the License Commissioners for West Hastings was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of the Inspector, Mr. Hugh Walker, George street.

Mr. E. Powers, chairman of the Board, presided, and the other members present were Messrs. W. J. Diamond and A. Latta. The following licenses for the city for the year were granted;

TAVERNS.

J. A. Mackie, Dominion House.
Thos. Haslip, Albion Hotel.
Kyle & Gribble, Kyle House.
W. J. Watkins, Ferry House.
J E. Ketcheson, Windsor.

Geo. Wallbridge, Bridge St.

IN TRENTON.

In Trenton the tavern licenses so far granted are to W. A. Bleecker, S. Ventress and F. Fillon, and shop licenses to B. Hooey and S. S. Bonter.

The application for a license for the Anglo-American from J. B. Eagle & Son, of Belleville, and from four others in Trenton were laid over for consideration at adjourned meetings of the Commissioners, to be held at Frankford on the 25th inst., and at Trenton on the 27th inst.

The only application for a new license in the riding is that of Mr. Armstrong, for a tavern at Glen Ross. in Sidney Township. This will be considered at one of the adjourned meetings.

DEATH'S CALL VERY SUDDEN.

MR PETER FARGEY, OF THURLOW, A VICTIM OF HEART DISEASE.

Death came suddenly yesterday morning to Mr. Peter Fargey, a yeoman residing in the 2nd concession of Thurlow Township. It appears that Mrs. Fargey was awakened by the heavy breathing of her husband, and before she could summon help or do anything he passed away. Heart disease was the cause of death. Deceased, who was 54 years of age, was born in Tyendinaga and had lived the greater portion of his life in this county. Mr. Fargey was well known and respected by all who knew him. He was a member of the Presbyterian church. Deceased was twice married, and his second wife, and a family of one son and two daughters by the first wife, survives. Five brothers and two sisters also are left. Mr. Fargey was a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters. The remains will be taken to West Huntingdon tomorrow, for interment.

High Praise For Former Resident.

The Aberdeen, Wash., Bulletin had this to say of a young lady formerly a resident of this city; "Miss Susie Wiggins presented "The Old Settler's Story," a pathetic and beautiful composition. Miss Wiggins is petite and winsome and gives promise of success on the stage should she choose acting as a profession. During the recital of the long prose story she was ever entertaining and superb in the gentleness by which she portrayed the speaking character. Her varying moods were delightful."

Hard Hit at Many "Dakota Divorcees."

New York, April 17.—Men and women prominent in society in New York and Newport, and hundreds of others less prominent in a social way were staggered to-day when they learned of the decision of the United States Supreme Court, which declares that thousands of divorces are illegal and that children born of the marriages that followed are illegitimate. The principle established is that a state cannot grant a divorce when only one party to the marriage is resident within its jurisdiction. This is a blow to all Dakota divorces and all divorces secured in Newport, where society women have flocked in recent years to rid themselves of objectionable mates. The decision was by a vote of five to four. Justices Harlan, Brewer, Brown and Holmes dissenting. It is estimated that at least 20,000 children are affected by the opinion.

BREAD SUPERSTITIONS.

Peculiar Ones Still Prevail in Rural France.

There are some curious superstitions about baking bread in the course of religious seasons which seem so easy to prove fallacious that one has difficulty in understanding why they are still believed. One would think that some day a mistake would occur and the discovery be made that there was no force in them. Probably, owing to the constitution of the believers, the failure of the expected result would be ascribed to some supernatural cause rather than the real one, and the belief would be continued. Most of these superstitions are found in France, the greatest bread eating country on the globe.

For instance, in upper Brittany bread baked on Good Friday, it is declared, becomes black. In Charante it is held that he who eats of bread baked on All Souls' day will become diseased. The flames will burst out of the oven in one's face if bread is baked on the feast of St. Nicholas, say the good people at Aube, so it is not done. In Burgundy the people believe that if bread is baked in the course of Rogation week all bread baked during the remainder of the year will turn moldy. The inhabitants of the Black mountains believe the same thing. The Sicilians refuse to bake on Good Friday, because they fear that in some manner they will burn the Saviour.

The beliefs which other Europeans used to have in early times demonstrate how illogical is all this superstition. These used to think that bread baked on Good Friday would not grow moldy, and the hot cross bun was included in this belief. Some one has shrewdly suggested that the spice preserved them. A piece of bread baked on this holy day, perhaps because of its holy character, was supposed to have miraculous powers if preserved. The house containing it would not catch fire. It was useful for preventing whooping cough and if fed to cattle ill of certain diseases would cure them. The natural deduction from all this is that in one country bread baked on a certain day will work ill and that baked in another on the same day will work good, which means that bread baked on that day is about the same as bread baked on any other.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Every mother is a trained nurse, with the two unimportant exceptions of the uniform and the wages.

There isn't any greater waste of time than that spent in worrying because others are not doing their duty.

A man may think he is boss of his own home, but after his wife has been sick once or twice he finds it is the doctor.

There are a great many ways of becoming unpopular, but one of the surest is to rush in where angels fear to tread.

When a man comes home and asks if "mother is home" what he really wants to know is if she is in the kitchen cooking.

If there is whipped cream on any old thing on the table a girl is apt to think that the requirements for a "dainty" luncheon have all been met.

The Nautilus.

The idea of airtight compartments in ships was suggested by the peculiar construction of the nautilus. The shell of this animal has forty or fifty compartments, into which air or water may be admitted, to allow the occupant to sink or float, as it pleases.

Absentminded.

One of the most brilliant of all Eaton's masters some years ago was a very absentminded man. He was reported to have been seen one day chasing a hen down Windsor hill in the fond belief that she was his hat!

Malicious.

Miss Longyears—You know I have been called good looking. Cynicus—I dare say. The standards of beauty change every ten years or so.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Other Objections.

"Gladly would I die for you!"

Her look of hauteur was maintained despite this plea.

"You are in error," she replied coldly. "If you think the color of your hair constitutes my chief objection to you."

The good night was brief and soon.

A Big Difference.

She—How much do you earn a year?

He—About $2,000.

"But we can't live on that!"

"You asked me how much I earned. I make about $20,000."

McINTOSH BROS.

QUAKES AND FIRE IN SAN FRANCISCO KILL 200 PEOPLE

arrived from Angel Island and went on patrol duty. The soldiers have been ordered to shoot down thieves caught in the act of robbing the dead and to guard with their lives the millions of dollars' worth of property placed in the streets to escape the flames.

The First California Artillery, 200 strong, two companies, has been detailed to patrol duty on Ellis street. Two more companies are patrolling Broadway in the Italian section.

A Generous Firm.

Mayor Schmitz has sent out orders that physical necessities of the sufferers be first attended to. Goldberg, Bowen & Co. have placed all of their provision stores at the disposal of the city.

The sheds over the Southern Pacific long wharf on San Francisco Bay have collapse. Many of the bunkers fell into the bay, carrying with them thousands of tons of coal.

Great Buildings Destroyed.

Call building, entirely destroyed; Claus Spreckels building, gutted by flames; Hearst building, collapsed; new Chronicle building, hardly damaged at all; Winchester Hotel, Third street, totally destroyed by shock; Grand Opera House, entirely destroyed; Claus Spreckels house and stables, Vanness avenue, badly damaged and will have to be largely rebuilt; St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Vanness avenue, will have to be pulled down; Mechanics' Library, building, Post street, cornices fell to street, building slightly injured; Crocker building, Market and Post streets, slightly damaged, principally around light shaft; Lick House, walls and roof largely caved in; Upham building, Pine and Battery street, totally destroyed, loss $550,000; fire house, adjoining California Hotel on Bush street, Chief Sullivan and wife sleeping in engine house, severely bruised by bricks crashing through the roof from hotel; California Hotel, Bush street, upper walls collapsed and upper floors wrecked. St. Dominic's Church, Pierce street, total loss; the Parochial House is a partial wreck, loss to the parish $200,000.

Theatres All Gone.

All of San Francisco's best playhouses, including the Majestic, Columbia, Orpheum, and Grand Opera House, are a mass of ruins. The earthquake demolished them for all practical purposes and the fire completed the work of destruction.

Swept Into the Sea.

From the Cliff House comes word that the great pleasure resort and show place of the city which stood upon a foundation of solid rock has been swept into the sea. Not a thing stands to tell where the monster stone building once stood. It has been levelled to the foundation and only the rock lining the sea coast remains intact.

Fine University Gone.

Oakland, Cal., April 19.—Reports just received from Palo Alto say Stanford University is practically demolished. One student is reported killed.

700 in Wrecked Asylum.

San Francisco, April 19.—Santa Fe conductor reports that the Insane Asylum at Agnews is a total wreck, many of the inmates being killed. The building is a total wreck. The ruins took fire shortly after the collapse. There were about 700 persons in the building.

The above report has been officially confirmed and it is added scores of the inmates who escaped death are roaming about the country in a state of panic.

Santa Rosa in Flames.

San Francisco, April 19.—Reports from cities near San Francisco show the destruction was general. Santa Rosa, 60 miles north, is in flames, and the damage is over one million dollars.

At Napa, many buildings were shattered and the loss will amount to $300,000.

San Jose Loses Life.

Reports from San Jose indicate shock severe. Buildings demolished. Much loss of life is reported.

Losses in Millions.

Salinas, Cal., April 19.—At 5.15 a.m. yesterday three earthquake shocks shook Salinas, lasting respectively five, three and forty-two seconds. They came from the northeast and southwest. The damage $1,200,000. No lives were lost.

Funston's Dire Message.

Washington, April 19.—The first message received from Gen. Funston arrived here at 11.40 o'clock last night, as follows:

"Secretary of War, Washington,—We need thousands of tents, and all the rations that can be sent. The business portion of the city destroyed and about 100,000 people homeless. Fire still raging. Troops all on duty assisting the police. Loss of life probably 1,000. Best part of residence district not yet burned.

"Funston."

Orders will go forward from the War Department to-day.

The Quake in Canada.

Toronto, April 19.—From north to south and from east to west the continent of America felt the shock.

California alone suffered, but adjoining states as far east as Washington and as far north as Ottawa, felt the vibration by seismograph.

Yesterday from the meteorological office in Queen's Park the following bulletin was issued by Director Stupart:

"The San Francisco earthquake was well recorded by the seismograph at the Toronto Observatory. The first earth tremors reached Toronto four minutes and 36 seconds after the reported time of the quake at San Francisco, and the larger surface waves were recorded after an interval of 22 minutes and 16 seconds, indicating a velocity of 3.3 kilometres per second. The amplitude of the swing of the Toronto pendulum was about 20 millimetres, showing a tilting of the stone pillar on which the instrument rests of nearly 13 seconds of arc."

Felt at Ottawa, Too.

At 1 o'clock a bulletin from Ottawa read:

"The vibrations resulting from the quake at San Francisco were recorded by the seismograph at the Dominion Observatory at the Central Experimental Farm. The preliminary tremors began at eight hours nine minutes 30 seconds in the morning. The principal part of the disturbance occurred at 8 hours 30 minutes 30 seconds and the maximum disturbance at 8.35. When the sheet was taken off at 9.50 quakes were still being recorded, but not so violently."

Canadians in Stricken Zone.

There are many Canadians in California for the winter, and in thousands of homes there is the greatest anxiety. This will continue until detailed statements of the loss of life is obtainable. At present San Francisco is isolated telegraphically. The sending of private messages is impossible. Patience must be exercised until the wires are restored.

PRINCE ARTHUR IN PERIL.

Ottawa, April 19.—The event of yesterday morning for Prince Arthur was his trip down the slides in a lumberman's boat. The party, in three large 36-foot lumbermen's boats, each manned by four experienced men, one of whom was a pilot, made a run through the Remoux Rapids, the Little Chaudiere Rapids, and then down the Long Slide.

When the two batteaux containing the party were within from 75 to 100 feet of the head of the last slide, one of the chains holding the stop-log broke, and a shout of warning was given barely in time. The crews of the batteaux were alert, however, and stopped the boats with their pike poles. Had the break occurred when the boat was passing under, the party would have been swamped inevitably.

Gorky and His Hosts.

Paris, April 19.—Maxim Gorky has telegraphed the director of a French publication his impressions of the United States. Gorky says the Americans are the same spitting vulgar people that Charles Dickens found them, and that personal liberty is as much hampered in America as it is in Russia. The sooner he gets out of this wretched country the better he will be pleased.

Held Him Blameless.

Buffalo, April 19.—Rudolf Schilling, aged 19, who has been in custody since April 7, when he struck a fellow worker, Fred Cramus, of Brantford, with a file, causing death, was given his liberty yesterday by the coroner's jury. Schilling's claim was that Cramus struck him first, and that he acted in self-defence, which contention was sustained.

Not the Man Murdered.

Niagara Falls, April 19.—George McBean, who was supposed to be the man who was murdered and thrown over the cliff last August, has turned up safe at Glasgow.

"Black Pope" Dead.

Rome, April 19.—Father Louis Martin, general of the Jesuits, known as the "Black Pope," died yesterday. He had been suffering from a cancer in the breast.

Breach of Promise Case.

Brampton, April 19.—In Barton v. Davidson, a breach of promise case, the plaintiff, a dressmaker, 35 years of age, was awarded $1,200 damages.

In Toronto on Twenty-Fifth.

Ottawa, April 19.—Secretary Ross announces that the Insurance Commission will meet in Toronto on the 25th inst.

Piles 14 Years

TERRIBLE CASE CURED PAINLESSLY WITH ONLY ONE TREATMENT OF PYRAMID PILE CURE.

FREE PACKAGE IN PLAIN WRAPPER MAILED TO EVERYONE WHO WRITES.

"I have been a terrible sufferer of piles for fourteen (14) years, and during all this time you can have an idea of how many kinds of medicine I tried. But I found no relief whatever. I felt there must be something that could cure me without having to undergo an operation, which might kill me.

"Now, after trying but one treatment of your 'Pyramids,' I am free, free to tell all sufferers of this dreadful disease to try this medicine—the Pyramid Pile Cure. It will cure when all others fail. Sincerely yours, G. Braneigh, Schellburg, Pa."

Anyone suffering from the terrible torture, burning and itching of piles, will get instant relief from the treatment we send out free, at our own expense, in plain sealed package, to everyone sending name and address.

Surgical operation for piles is unnecessary and rarely a permanent success. Here you can get a treatment that is quick, easy to apply and inexpensive, and free from the publicity, and humiliation you suffer by doctors' examination.

Pyramid Pile Cure is made in the form of "easy to use" suppositories. The coming of a cure is felt the moment you begin to use it, and your suffering ends.

Send your name and address at once to Pyramid Drug Co., 2873 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich., and get, by return mail, the treatment we will send you free, in plain, sealed wrapper.

After seeing for yourself what it can do, you can get a regular, full-size package of Pyramid Pile Cure from any druggist at 50 cents each or, on receipt of price, we will mail you same ourselves if he should not have it.

KING EDWARD VII. QUEEN ALEXANDRA

Invited by Commons, by Address, to Come to Canada.

At Such Time as May Be Convenient—Col. Sam Hughes Draws Nice Tribute to His Majesty From Mr. Bourassa—Mr. Lennox Introduces a Bill to Hit Hon. Mr. Aylesworth re. Legal Practice.

Ottawa, April 19.—The House this afternoon passed by a unanimous vote the following address:

"To the King's Most Gracious Majesty:

"Most Gracious Sovereign,—We, the members of the House of Commons of Canada, in Parliament assembled, beg to humbly convey to your Majesty, with the assurance of loyalty and devotion to your royal person, the expression of the desire and hope, long and fervently cherished by all British subjects inhabiting British North America, that your Majesty would be graciously pleased to honor them with your Majesty's presence, and thereby enable them to offer the personal tribute of their unwavering attachment to the Crown and the Government of the Empire, of their deep affection for your Majesty's person, and their profound admiration for those kingly virtues and truly humanitarian deeds, which have earned for your Majesty first place among the great sovereigns of the world. We, therefore, most humbly pray that your Majesty and her most gracious Majesty the Queen will lend their august presence at such time as may be selected by your Majesty."

Mr. Belcourt (Ottawa) moved the address, seconded by Mr. Northrup (E. Hastings).

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and R. L. Borden both cordially supported it. Col. Sam Hughes commented upon the silence of Mr. Bourassa, but the latter responded heartily, supporting the address. He admitted that he did not especially favor the principles of hereditary power, but the remarkable talents, virtues and attainments of King Edward entitled him to the gratitude and devotion of all his subjects. He was especially beloved by the French-Canadians as a ruler who would never interfere with the rights of the minority in any portion of the empire.

Reorganized Harbor Board.

Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, introduced his bill reorganizing the Montreal harbor commission.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson, Minister of Railways and Canals, admitted that he held stock to par value of $109,000 in the New Brunswick Petroleum Co. This will be remembered as the concern from which the I. C. R. has purchased supplies by the direction of Mr. Emmerson.

Mr. Lennox (South Simcoe), introduced a resolution declaring it 'inexpedient that any member of the Government or deputy head of a department, should act or appear as barrister, counsel or advocate in an action, suit or proceeding, except where the interests of the Crown are involved, in any court presided over by judges or a judge appointed by the Government of Canada.

He charged that there had been a bargain made between the Premier and Hon. Mr. Aylesworth whereby the latter was to continue his private practice while serving as Postmaster-General. He pointed out the impropriety of a Minister appearing as an advocate before judges dependent upon him for promotion and preferment. He deplored the use by the Government of judges as buffers between its misdeeds and public opinion.

Mr. Lennox had not finished when the House rose for supper. The debate will be continued on Monday next.

At the evening session Hon. Mr. Costigan (Victoria) resumed the debate on the location of the eastern section of the G. T. P. and was followed by Mr. Stockton (St. John), Mr. Loggie (Northumberland, N. B.), Mr. Fowler (Kings), Mr. Daniel (St. John City), Hon. Mr. Fielding and Mr. R. L. Borden.

WON'T PUBLISH THE VOTES.

Secrecy in Committee Inquiry Into the N. A. Trading Co.

Ottawa, April 19.—The Evening Journal stated last night that the Government has decided to cancel its contract with The North Atlantic Trading Co.

The committee on Agriculture and Colonization yesterday by a party vote, decided that the yeas and nays should not be published respecting any decisions affecting the Northern Atlantic Trading Co. Many Liberal members are already hearing from their constituents, who condemn the mystery surrounding the corporation.

J. A. Smart, the Canadian agent, was put under oath yesterday and again refused to furnish any information.

Took Abram Off.

St. Petersburg, April 19.—Abram Off, the Cossack officer, who treated Maria Spiridonovo, the revolutionist, in an outrageous manner while she was in prison, has been assassinated at Borissoglicbsk, Province of Tamboff. He wa shot three times with a revolver.

Bole's Seat Protested.

Regina, April 19.—The seat of J. F. Bole for the City of Regina was protested yesterday. In addition to the seats of the four Ministers, five Government seats and seven of the eight Opposition seats have now been protested.

Race War Fracas.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 19.—One Italian was fatally and another seriously shot by three negroes. After firing six shots the Italians took to their heels. The shooting is believed to be the result of a recent race war.

Infant's Body Found.

Tweed, April 19.—The body of an infant was found in the river here yesterday afternoon. An inquest will be held to-day.

REPLY OF STRATHCONA

Does Not Reveal "Man Behind" North Atlantic Trading Co.

His Lordship Sends the Names of the Persons Named as Subscribers to the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and Gives Some Other Information—H. R. H. Prince Arthur Visits House and Holds Reception.

Ottawa, April 20.—The House was only in session a short time yesterday afternoon. Prince Arthur entered the chamber at ten minutes after three and occupied a seat on the floor at the right of the speaker. He wore the uniform of his regiment, the Seventh Hussars. During his stay the House was occupied with receiving petitions for the better observance of the Lord's Day. At 4 o'clock the prince held an informal reception in the Senate chamber, and members of both Houses were presented.

Strathcona Replies.

At the meeting of the public accounts committee yesterday W. Cory, deputy minister of the interior, read the following cablegram from Lord Strathcona:

"In reply to your cablegram of the 7th inst., the persons named as subscribers to the memorandum and articles of association of the North Atlantic Trading Co. and holding one share each are: Edward Sainsbury, hotel proprietor, London; Alfred H. Alexander, engineer, and John A. Randall, articled clerk, both of Cheswick; Geo. T. H. Downey, Palmell Park, East Sheen, solicitor's clerk; Henry James Whitman, builder, Cheswick; John H. S. Thomson, Epsom, chartered secretary; Chas. Guy Underwood, Acton, solicitor's clerk. The solicitor of the company is E. A. Alexander, Essex street, Strand. The capital of the company is 3,000 pounds sterling in 1,000 shares, £10 each.

"I am endeavoring to get list of shareholders and the amount actually subscribed and paid up. The company was incorporated in the Island of Guernsey as the North Atlantic Trading Co., Limited, registered June 3, 1905, and certificate registration dated Greeffe, Guernsey, June 4, 1905. Memorandum of association states registered office company situate Island Guernsey. Director, J. Gluck; managing director, H. Ph ifel; Secretary Kohan, business office, 92 Damrack, Amsterdam. Memorandum of association will be mailed by Campania 14th."

International Waterways.

The report of the Canadian section of the International Waterways Commission was issued yesterday. It covers a good deal of ground — or rather water — but contains very few specific recommendations.

He is the happiest of whom the world says least, good or bad.—Jefferson.

An Ash Heap By Saturday.

Three Hundred Thousand Homeless on Thursday Night.

Possibility of Famine Is Already Presenting Itself—Men Shot in the Act of Looting—Reports of Death and Disaster Received With Allowance—Residents Are Fleeing the City—Chinatown a Furnace—Scarcity of Water Causes Incessant Cry.

New York, April 24.—William H. Baker, vice-president and general man. of the Postal Telegraph Co., at 10.30 o'clock last night received the following from the deputy chief of the San Francisco fire department:

"Seven-thirty to-night fire still under headway, gathering force and spreading. Two-thirds of business section of city devastated. Fire heading for residential district. Efforts to fight flames futile.

"Three hundred thousand will be homeless to-night. By Saturday San Francisco will be an ash heap.

"The following is the district north of Market street now devastated:

"Sansome to Market street, to Sacramento, thence to California to Hyde, to Eddy to Larkin, to Gough and to Market. On the south side of Market street the fire extends along Market street to Fourteenth and below the Southern Pacific Railway tracks to the boundary."

"Chief of Police Dinan to-night said 250 would fully cover the number of dead. About 50 bodies have thus far been found. There was considerable shooting of looters to-day, but the offenders escaped with wounds."

THREE FIRES BURN ON. SWEEPING AWAY HOMES.

Mile of Palatial Residences Blown Up In Vain Effort to Stay Flames—Thousands Flee—No Panic.

San Francisco, April 20.—Thousands upon thousands of persons fled from the fire yesterday, which, after burning steadily all day, is still unchecked. They flocked to the ferries, to the parks, to the military reservation, and to the suburbs.

But there was no panic. The people are calm, stunned. They do not seem to realize the extent of the calamity. They hear that the city is destroyed in so far as business plants are concerned. They tell each other in the most natural tone that their residences were destroyed by the flames, but there is no hysteria, no outcry, no criticism.

San Francisco is not discouraged. Its best and highest class already has begun to plan for restoration and to care for the stricken ones, and the relief will be immediate and effective. Total subscriptions of $180,000 were announced last night. Arrangements were made for the immediate relief of the needy.

Three Distinct Fires.

Last night, three distinct fires were burning. One was in the territory that extends from Nob Hill easterly towards the telegraph hill section and may die out from lack of material, or may sweep towards the extreme waterfront.

The second centre was in the Mission district. Here the fire had reached Eighteenth street, but was making little headway towards the hillsides to the west, where thousands of people are camped.

The third and most dangerous fire is that threatening the western part of the city. This really is a continuation of the Nob Hill fire. It is wedge-shaped, with the apex pulling forward. This is the point against which the firemen are bending their greatest efforts.

Devastation Complete.

All efforts to check the spread of the flames at Vanness avenue by blowing up a mile of buildings on the east side of Vanness avenue proved fruitless. The fire has spread across the broad thoroughfare, and from present indications the entire western addition, which contains the homes of San Francisco's wealthier class, is now doomed. The destruction of the western addition of the city completes the ravaging flames and marks the devastation of the entire city.

A Shortage of Food.

The possibility of famine already is presenting itself. At best the city nevtr carried more than three days' supplies of provisions and food, and now with the wholesale districts and warehouses wiped out, there is a shortage of food.

Prices yesterday were in most instances more than trebled.

Yesterday morning policemen were stationed at some of the retail shops and permitted only a small portion of goods to be delivered to each purchaser. Reports were received that numerous men caught in the act of looting had been shot.

Reports of Disaster.

Wednesday some sort of systematic communication could be had by means of automobiles, but yesterday every street was piled high with ruins, and, to add to this trouble, there is constant danger from falling walls.

On miles of streets the front walls of ruined buildings stand swaying with the concussions of distant dynamite explosions and rising winds. Frequently a crash of stone and brick, followed by a cloud of dust, gives warnings to pedestrians of the unsafety of travel. All manner of reports of death and disaster are coming to the temporary headquarters of the authorities, but these reports are received guardedly, allowances being made for the likelihood of exaggeration due to the confusion that prevails in the stricken city.

Residents Flee From City.

The flight of residents from the city continued yesterday in the nature of a panic. A slight earthquake at 5 a. m. accentuated their terrors. The ferryboats to adjacent counties were crowded to the utmost, and to the westward portion of the peninsula a constant throng of homeless persons, carrying portable belongings, are adding to the colonies in the secure sand hills and parks. In Golden Gate Park, and the unimproved blocks of the district north and south, many varieties of shelter have been improvised from bedding and blankets.

Course of the Flames.

The wind changed yesterday morning to the west, and the flames changed their devouring direction southward and began eating their wide swath from the waterfront on the north of Market street up to what is known as Nob Hill, an eminence that had been selected years ago by the multi-millionaires of the bonanza days upon which to erect their mansions. The hill is surmounted by the Hotel Fairmont, just finished at a cost of over a million dollars.

Steadily, but surely, the fire ate its way up the slope, consuming the homes of the late Mrs. Jane Stanford and the Hopkins' Art institute, built by Mark Hopkins of Central Pacific fame.

From the upward slope the fire also took a direction northwesterly, to the district that had been left untouched Wednesday night. This portion of the town embraces the Latin quarter, populated by persons of various nationalities, and the houses are all of flimsy construction.

Checked by Dynamite.

In the Mission district, to the south of Market street, the zone of ruin was extended farther westward toward the extreme southern portion, but was checked at Fourteenth and Mission streets by the wholesale use of dynamite. At this point are located the Educational Reform in Ontario.

Those who have made even a superficial study of the question must admit that the bills recently introduced in the Ontario Legislature concerning the Department of Education and the Rural and Public schools mark a decided step towards placing the education question of the Province on a wiser and better basis.

The main provisions of the bill provide for the appointment of a superintendent of education, to supervise under the Minister in a technical and expert capacity, all classes of Provincial High, Public and Separate schools, the professional training schools, the work of school inspection, schools, etc., for the establishing of an elective advisory council, representing the universities, the teachers, and the school inspectors, to have executive powers with regard to the conduct of matriculation examinations, etc., and to act generally in a consultative and advisory capacity with the Minister: for the appointment of commissioners of enquiry, to make special investigations in regard to any subject for investigation being the matter of text-books; for the strengthening and extending of continuation classes in Public schools, for increasing the salaries of Public school inspectors and giving greater permanency to their positions; for a better system of training for teachers, and, finally, for a substantial increase in the salaries paid to rural school teachers by way of increased Legislative, county and township grants, and the fixing of minimum salaries.

The Advisory Board has been recommended for years by the Premier. Through this educationalists will be able to give the Government the benefit of their advice and experience as its seventeen members will all be elected, except two, by the profession or by educational institutions.

By abolishing the country and city Model schools, by requiring teachers to take henceforth a Normal school training of one year's duration, and by demanding at least a second-class non-professional certificate, a higher standard of professional equipment will undoubtedly be obtained.

The provision in the bill providing for increased salaries for Rural school teachers touches probably the basic defect of present Public school conditions. According to the report of the Minister of Education for 1905 the average salary of male teachers in Rural schools is $372; for female teachers $263. There are altogether over 6,000 rural school teachers, in the proportion of about one male to three females, as compared with about 3,500 teachers in the urban schools, including cities, towns and incorporated villages. The smallness of the salaries paid to rural school teachers has been a constant bar to good men entering the profession, has given an undue preponderance of female teachers, and has tended to make the business of teaching merely a temporary stepping-stone to some more remunerative calling. The new bill makes the minimum salary for rural teachers $300 in school sections where the assessment of the property of school supporters is less than $30,000; and by graduated steps to $500 where the assessment is at least $160,000. The average salary for rural school teachers under the new Act will probably be increased by at least $100. The burden of the increase will be shared by the Government and by the municipalities.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Very good imitation of summer this.

Several Bellevillians are (or were) living in San Francisco. Perhaps by this time they wish they had stayed here.

Count Boni Castellane cost his wife $2,000 a day, but he gamely tried to even up by staying up all night.

The concert in the City Hall, next Tuesday evening, April 24th, in aid of the Hospital, promises to be exceedingly enjoyable. Mr. D. A. Cameron, the promoter, is sure to have something extra good for those who attend, and for such a cause the hall should be packed. Help the Hospital.

Pretty tough to think that Prince Arthur of Connaught is not coming here. Probably he hasn't heard of all those "plug" hats that turned out to welcome Minto.

However, we are not so badly hurt as Hamilton. It was arranged that the Prince should stay two hours in that city, and the Council was going to shoot an address at him. The Prince must have heard of the address, for the Mayor of Hamilton was informed that arrangements had been changed and the Prince could only stay 15 minutes. Then the Hamilton people got warm under the collar and told Col. Williams, who has charge of the Prince's itinerary, that the reception was off, so far as they were concerned. Hamilton people must be pretty touchy. Even a prince must not slight them.

An accident attended with appalling loss of life occurred in West Belleville yesterday. A party over the river is the owner of an incubator, which has lately been occupied by about 300 chicks, more or less. Yesterday the lamp, which furnishes heat to the incubator, exploded, and there was a holocaust which for a time threatened to make Vesuvius look like a 24th of May bonfire. The chicks perished from suffocation. Requiescat in the back yard. The loss is quite a serious one, and the neighbors feel a good deal of sympathy for the owner of the dead chicks.

A Chicago lecturer says that women should be compelled to vote. If he knows so much about them, he ought to know that his saying they should vote will make them all the more determined not to vote.

A Cleveland clergyman, who formerly lived in Toronto, urges that every church should have a community parlor where young people may court. Evidently he feels that the wedding-fee business needs some booming.

A leading geologist says the whole Pacific coast may soon sink. Somehow or other, those places with "glorious climates" always seem to have a few offsetting disadvantages.

People who have relatives in San Francisco or other parts of California should keep cool. There is no need for panic. The telegraphic reports show that the loss of life was principally in a district where Canadians would not likely be. Just at present the wires are crowded with Government and press messages, and private telegrams cannot be forwarded at any cost. So the fact of no messages being received from relatives counts for nothing. They could not get a message through at present for love or money.

It is stated that 6,000 saloons in Ohio will close as the result of the new $1,000 license. This may not be prohibition but it is as good a substitute as Ohio can furnish under its present laws and it also shows that the sentiment of the people against the saloon is steadily growing.

The despatches state that the fall of volcanic dust within the city of Naples is estimated to amount to nearly half a million tons and is excessively fine. During violent and protracted eruptions the ejected rock fragments diminish in size, fall back into the crater and are re-ejected so frequently that by means of friction they are reduced to an impalpable powder.

Senator Loughead, of Calgary, has been chosen by his fellow-Conservatives to succeed Sir Mackenzie Bowell as leader of the Opposition in the Senate. Commenting on this the Mail and Empire says: "In the new leader of the Conservatives in the Senate Toronto has a worthy son. Mr. Lougheed was born in this city. He went West and practised law in Calgary. He was one of the first batch of Senators from the Territories, and is now the leader of his party in the Lords."

Referring to the fact that Prince Arthur of Connaught had positively declined to stay more than 15 minutes in Hamilton, the Spectator says: "Now if the Prince had made it twenty minutes I suppose we would have let it go at that. Now you will hear all the jay towns, including Belleville, give us the merry ha, ha! I still sing God Save the King."

It must have been the bad rep. Hamilton has got through the bad language used by her newspaper men that caused the Prince to cut his visit so short.

A BOORISH INSULT.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The excuse of the members of the American opera company playing at the Russell theatre that they could not sing God Save the King when H.R.H. Prince Arthur attended because they did not know the lines, confirms the impression that the slight was intentional. The music is the same as America and a child could memorize a verse of it in two minutes. We presume the Prince will survive, but while the people of Canada are inclined to be tolerant to the cheap bombast which finds vent in the safe heroics of pulling down the flag where there is nobody to protect it, and to such petty insolence as the theatre incident, a slight to a Royal guest even when coming from such a source might easily result in very disagreeable consequences, were it not for the good sense of our people. And the concensus of opinion would be that whatever happened to those who took people's money and then insulted them, they jolly well deserved whatever they got.

A Guelph Wedding.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elvin, Guelph, when their second eldest son, William, was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Trueblood, of Toronto. The bride was charmingly dressed in crepe de chene trimmed with white chiffon; she wore a spray of lilies of the valley in her hair. Miss Mary Trueblood, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing a dress of ceram lustre and over lace trimmings. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Alfred T. Trueblood, of Campbellford. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. George H. Elvin, of Guelph. After the ceremony the guests gathered around a well-filled table, which had been very handsomely prepared for the occasion, after which the happy couple left on the eight o'clock train for Toronto, where they will reside. The bride received many useful, handsome and costly presents.

Four Years in Penitentiary.

Picton, April 20.—At the spring Assizes yesterday, Judge Britton sentenced Frank Nelson to four years at Kingston penitentiary. The jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter. Nelson, who is only seventeen years of age, was arrested a few weeks ago for shooting Mrs. Sarah Brown, an old lady through the lungs from the effects of which she died a few days later. He was wilfully reckless in the handling of a small rifle on a public road.

LAKE SHORE SPIRIT.

Throughout the entire length and breadth of the great Lake Shore Railway System there is a spirit of co-operation and personal responsibility on the part of employees from the highest to the lowest that is reflected in every detail of the road's operation. The traveller feels that the great army of trained workers have his welfare and comfort at heart as much as though he were the only patron of the road. This spirit—the Lake Shore spirit—is one of the features that have made this line so popular among experienced travellers. Comfort, speed, safety and punctuality here have reached their highest development. Write for full information to J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N. Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, O.; or W. The Queen and the Birds

Branches of the Fish and Game Protective Association are springing up all over the Dominion. Their work is of the most beneficial description. But it must not be forgotten that ladies can help in the crusade on behalf of the birds. A royal example has been set by our gracious Queen.

With the varied humanity and tenderness of heart, which have so endeared her name to the British people, the Queen has replied to an appeal of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds with a letter granting that society her full support in its crusade against the cruel and thoughtless practice of destroying rare and beautiful wild birds for the sake of their plumage. Her Majesty's intervention is so powerful that it is certain to bring about the desired result, and to render unfashionable as well as reprehensible the custom of wearing such birds' feathers and plumage in millinery.

In the past that mysterious thing known as "fashion" has demanded the slaughter of birds, and all efforts on the part of individuals to change its dictates have been fruitless. But, fortunately, fashion can be changed by a royal decree, and where the First Lady in England leads the way the whole race of women may be trusted to follow. The offence has been largely committed in ignorance, for women are not by nature or instinct cruel. Many suppose that the plumes which they buy as "artificial" are really the creation of the manufacturer's dexterity, and do not involve the death of some mute and weak living thing. Yet, the alleged "artificial" plumes are really torn from the bird. For example, it is the custom to cut osprey plumes into two halves, when the lower half is sold as "artificial" and the upper half as "natural."

How widespread is the slaughter of beautiful birds for the sake of their plumage can be understood from the grim catalogues of the spring and autumn sales at Mincing-lane, when daily for a week the traffic goes on. Thus, to give an example, in the autumn sales of 1903, besides osprey plumes, there were sales of thousands of humming-birds, of eight different kinds of birds of paradise, of cuckoos, kingfishers, parrots, owls and hawks. In the spring sale of 1904 11,440 humming birds and 2,800 birds of paradise were sold, to say nothing of 400 tiny Indian owls disposed of at a farthing apiece. Ornithologists who have made the round of millinery establishments to ascertain what birds are being massacred in the sacred cause of personal adornment have noted in addition to the species which we have already named the bodies or feathers of egrets, herons, pigeons, swallows, and tits exposed for sale. It is known that the feathers described by the trade name of "ospreys" are "the nestling plumes of white herons and egrets, and are assumed at the nesting season only." The slaughter of the bird which bears this fatal attraction thus involves the slow death of all its young from hunger and starvation.

Many years ago the late Queen Victoria gave orders that osprey plumes should be no longer worn in the British Army. Queen Alexandra has henceforth made it impossible for the fashionable lady to wear them. All lovers of animals, all whose hearts beat warmly for the feeblest and weakest of created things, will thank her for her resolve to "discourage the cruelty practised on these beautiful birds" and to save them from extinction.

Even though a man may fling away ambition, his wife usually hunts around in the bushes until she finds it and then brings it back to him.

HOW TO LIVE ON FOUR CENTS A DAY

DIETARY EXPERIMENTS THAT HAVE PROVED SUCCESSFUL AND CHEAP.

Some years ago a medical man subjected himself to a diet experiment for six weeks in order to test his theory that he could live and keep strong and well on 12 cents a day. For the first seven days he confined himself to bread, milk, fruit and vegetables—an average daily amount of half a pound. At the end of the week he found that his health remained excellent, and his food bill amounted to 75 cents. During the second week of his experiment he lived on prepared farinaceous foods and fruit, eating 9 1-2 ounces and spending exactly 6 cents daily. In the fourth week he reduced his allowance to half a pound of food a day and an expenditure of 4 cents; and for the last two weeks he increased his daily allowance to nine ounces. At the end of his six weeks' trial he found himself better and stronger than when he began the experiment, while his total food bill for the period was exactly $2.40, an average cost of 5 cents a day.

A lady who was for a few weeks reduced to very low financial straits brought the cost of living still lower. All that she was able to allow herself for this purpose was 24 cents a week, and on this pitiful allowance she maintained health and strength for several weeks. This is how she apportioned her weekly 24 cents:—Oatmeal, 6 cents; potatoes, 4 cents; split peas, 4 cents; onions, 2 cents; apples, 4 cents, ship's biscuit, 4 cents. And this is a simple menu for one day: Breakfast, oatmeal porridge, baked apple; dinner, pea soup, roast potato, biscuit; supper, boiled onion, biscuit.

"On this Spartan dietary," she says, "I not only kept well and strong, for two months, but actually gained weight. I had neither headache nor indigestion, from both of which I suffered for years, and, as may be imagined perhaps, I always had a splendid appetite."

Quite recently a contributor to a London daily paper, showed how it was possible for a family of six persons to enjoy a varied and not untempting dietary at a cost of 21 cents a day, or less than 4 cents for each person. The weekly bill-of-fare was made up thus: Four quarts of skimmed milk, four pounds whole wheat or oatmeal, five pounds fine wholemeal flour, three pounds golden maize meal, four pounds broken rice, or pearl barley, four pounds small haricots, peas or lentils, three pounds raisins, dates or figs, two pounds currants, three pounds soft cane sugar, one pound shelled peanuts, half a pint of nut oil, two pounds darlene, watercress, onions and cabbage. The total cost of these articles of food is $1.61.

A sample day's menu for the family of six, at a cost of 21 cents, reads thus:

Breakfast — Wheatmeal, porridge, sugar, soaked raisins, griddle cakes and darlene. Dinner—Haricot bean stew, boiled rice, roast peanuts. Supper—Frumenty and milk and sugar.

For economical and nourishing food a diet of nuts is strongly recommended by experts, one of whom recently declared. "If the unemployed only knew, they could live luxuriously on two or three pence a day on the finest food in the world; and it would be varied so much that there would be no monotony of dishes." The nuts specified for this purpose are chestnuts, walnuts, Brazil nuts, cocoanuts, filberts, almonds, and pine-kernels. The least nutritious of these, it is said, contain twice as much nutriment as lean beef; while some such as pine-kernels and Brazil nuts contain considerably more than three times as much

CONSOLIDATE THE SCHOOLS.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION SAYS COUNTRY SCHOOLS ARE OUT OF DATE.

Toronto, April 19.—The Inspectors' and Trustees' Departments of the Ontario Teachers' Association this forenoon passed a resolution recommending that "inasmuch as 90 per cent. of the children of Ontario received their entire scholastic training in the Public schools, adequate representation should be given the Public school teachers and inspectors and the trustees' department of the Ontario Teachers' Association on the Advisory Committee proposed in the new education bill.

"That there should be at the very least two representatives from the trustees' department.

Mr. M. Parkinson, of the Toronto Board of Education, addressed the Ontario Teachers' Association this forenoon, on "The Consolidated Rural School" question.

Mr. Parkinson drew a woeful picture of the little, dingy, dilapidated country school house, "where a young girl presides over from 16 to 20 pupils of all ages and in every grade.

"The consolidated plan proposes to do away with all these little schools and establish one large, well-equipped graded school in each township. The pupils will be conveyed to and from the schools at the public expense.

Principal Scott, of the Toronto Normal School, had something to say on the way in which the teaching done in High Schools affected Normal School work. "Students often came up for their Normal training, who are very poor spellers, and know little about punctuation," said Mr. Scott.

A WOMAN'S GRATITUDE.

A Mountain Woman Writes in Praise of Newbro's Herpicide.

"For several years I have been troubled with dandruff, causing me much annoyance, and my hair became very thin. I have used Newbro's Herpicide for a month and the dandruff has entirely disappeared and my hair is becoming much heavier than formerly. New hair is growing where there was none and I am very thankful to you for the benefit I have received from Newbro's Herpicide Very truly yours.

Double Wedding On Easter Monday.

UNUSUAL EVENT TOOK PLACE IN WHICH THE BRIDES WERE SISTERS.

Monday, April the 16th, was a gala day at "Stone Villa," Rathburn, the residence of J. T. May, Esq., when his eldest daughter, Miss Eliza A., was married to Mr. J. A. Knox, and his youngest daughter, Miss Alice Helen, to Mr. P. A. White, both gentlemen from near Trenton, says the Courier. While the wedding march was played by Mrs. E. J. May, the brides, with their father, carrying bouquets of white carnations, passed through a ribboned aisle formed by four beautifully dressed flower girls, taking their places under an evergreen canopy, where the grooms awaited them. The rings were carried in Easter lilies by Master Cecil and Miss Hazel McMullen of Trenton. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. S. McMullen, of Trenton, brother-in-law of the brides, at three o'clock p.m., in the presence of some fifty invited guests. The presents were beautiful and useful. That of Mr. Knox to his bride, a pretty pearl amethyst brooch, that of Mr. White to his bride a beautiful silk dress, the flower girls received pearl brooches, the father's presents to his daughters were in cash. After a dainty and sumptuous repast the happy wedded couples drove to Orillia, taking the morning train to Toronto, when Mr. and Mrs. Knox will go West to spend their honeymoon amongst relatives at Berlin and London, Mr. and Mrs. White going east, taking in Cobourg and other points. Miss Eliza A., was beautifully gowned in cream crepe de chene, with lace and satin trimming, her going-away dress was of black taffeta silk, with Tuscan hat. Miss Alice Helen was charmingly attired in cream voile-de-soie, with lace and satin trimming, and going away dress of blue chiffon broadcloth and hat of white chiffon. Both couples will take up their residence in Sidney township, near Trenton, where receptions await them.

NAVIGATION ON THE GREAT LAKES

Ottawa, April 19. — Commander Spain, in his annual report to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, with respect to shipping casualties, says:

"I found, on enquiring into matters in different localities of the lakes, that it was necessary that strict investigation should be held as far as possible, as in some instances the lack of even moderate attention to the safe navigation of vessels was deplorable. The masters, officers and seamen who man Canadian vessels on the Great Lakes, are, as a rule, skillful and intelligent, and compare most favorably with their confreres on salt water, but there is no doubt that enquiries into casualties should be held in the same manner as on the sea coast."

In regard to casualties on the St. Lawrence route, Commander Spain says: "There has not been a single loss of life, and only in one case possible loss of an ocean liner." This, he states, compares most favorably with the casualties that have occurred in other parts of the world. There were three cases of vessels grounding when leaving their wharves, and three cases of collision. The ship canal cannot be held in the remotest degree responsible for any of these. In the case of the Victorian, the court of enquiry which was held, found that the casualty was an unavoidable accident, which might have occurred in any narrow channel and to avoid a repetition of a disaster of this nature, it proposed to establish telegraphic communication along the route, so that vessels may be held in the event of fog shutting down without warning.

Zutoo

Regarding your Zutoo Tablets I beg to say: I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market, till warned by my physician to discontinue their use on account of their bad effects on the heart. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never fail to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost.

JERRY McGLONE.

Here, fur yer pity or scorn, I'm presintin' ye
Jerry McGlone,
Trustin' the life of him will be preventin' ye
Sp'ilin' yer own.
Think of a face wid a permanent fixture of Looks that are always suggistin' a mixture of Limmons an' vinegar. There! ye've a picture of
Jerry McGlone,

Faix, there is nothin' but sourest gloom in this'
Jerry McGlone,
Chris'mas joy, anny joy, niver finds room in this
Crayture of stone.
Cynical gloom is the boast an' the pride of him;
An' if a laugh iver did pierce the hide of him
Faix, I belave 'twould immejiate, inside of him
Change to a groan.

Whist now, an' listen, I'll tell ye th' throuble wid
Jerry McGlone,
He preferred single life rather than double wid
Molly Malone.
Think of it! Think of an Irishman tarryin'
While there's a purty girl wishful fur marryin'!
Arrah! no wonder the divils are barryin'
Jerry McGlone.

Ah! but there's few o' the race but would scorn to be
Jerry McGlone,
Shure, we all know that a Celt is not born to be Livin' alone.
Oh! but we're grateful (I spake for the laity)
Grateful for women the bountiful Deity
Dowers wid beauty an' virtue an' gayety,
All for our own!

John Alexander Dowie, whatever his attitude to high thinking, is evidently not a devotee of the plain living cult. One of the overseers of Zion publicly stated on Sunday that the old chap spent $20,000 on his jaunt through Mexico, $50,000 on his tour of the world, $15,000 for a private yacht; $90,000 for his Shiloh house and stock and $12,000 for his library. "And he overdrew his account to the tune of $114,000," added the overseer. This is "living like a king." But Dowie plainly regarded himself as a monarch in his dominion, and he had some reason to do so.

The flow of emigrants through Hamburg is at present so enormous that the emigration shelters of the Hamburg-American Line are unable to hold all the passengers, and four steamers have been specially fitted up and stationed at the lower Elbe to serve as floating hotels. There the emigrants are quartered and remain till they can depart. The following figures, showing the number of passengers who passed through Hamburg during the months of February and January, illustrates the present extraordinary emigration tide: 1904, 17,925; 1905, 19,620; 1906, 22,461.

Dr. J. F. Schamburg, lecturing in Philadelphia the other evening, stated that of more than three thousand smallpox patients treated at the Philadelphia Municipal Hospital during the last three years not one had been recently successfully vaccinated. None of the medical attendants were attacked Of one hundred women workmen employed near the patients, four refused to be vaccinated. These were stricken with smallpox, while those who submitted to the operation were unscathed. Of seven hundred medical students who have worked in smallpox wards only one caught the infection and he had never been successfully vaccinated. If any evidence is good for anything, this is proof that failure to be vaccinated is an opportunity for smallpox. No such combination of circumstances as are here recorded could be without a reason, and the reason is clear enough. If a person persists in not being vaccinated, he multiplies his chances of having smallpox, and is a source of danger and ultimately, if he contracts the loathsome and unnecessary disease, of enormous expense to the community.

SECRET IS OUT.

Our leading druggists are very anxious to have Mi-o-na, a remedy which they sell as a cure for stomach troubles, tested rigidly in every case of heart-burn, acute dyspepsia, wind on the stomach, loss of appetite, annoying dreams, sleeplessness, general weakness and debility, or where the digestive organs do not act as they should.

Mi-o-na is composed of bismuth subgallate, by all odds the very best medicine known for intestinal diseases.

With this is combined cerium oxalate, a standard remedy in the treatment of all irritations of the stomach and digestive organs.

Sodium bicarbonate is then added to overcome the excessive acidity usually present in stomach troubles, and nux vomica for its general tonic and nerve-strengthening powers.

A large box of Mi-o-na tablets is sold for 50 cents.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

DACHSHUNDS.

As Fighters of Badgers They Have No Canine Equals.

The good natured, philosophic German dachshund has always been regarded as more or less of a joke in this country. Even in the fatherland he is a staple for jesting. His elongated body, his crooked legs, his animated tail, his resemblance to a sausage—who could fail to make some sort of joke about a dachshund?

But the dachshund has a very serious side and a work in life.

"Dachshund" means "badger dog."

Now, the badger is an animal that, generally speaking, needs neither game laws nor sympathy, because he is able to take care of himself and fight his own battles. Naturalists place him as a link between the bear family and the weasels. He has about all the strenuous characteristics of both, with some of his own in addition.

Badger baiting was formerly a barbarous rustic sport that drew trade to country inns and taverns. A badger was placed in a barrel, and the man whose dog could bring him out got a prize. A single dog seldom did it. A full pack might—sometimes. The badger is a tremendous burrower, and the jolly dachshund of the jokes has been trained for centuries in Germany to go into his burrows like a ferret after rats and drive the badger out or fight him. In some German and Austrian cities there were formerly badger baiting tourneys in which crack dachshunds entered a pit with an ablebodied badger and fought for points. It is said that such contests are still held in Vienna. For spirit, endurance and agility the dachshund has no peer in this work, and a bulldog pitted against a badger would probably find himself cutting a poor figure.

So, make the jokes about the dachshund if you will, but give him credit for his prowess and for that gentleness, characteristic also of the best bulldogs, that makes both an affectionate companion to man and a loyal playmate to children. Give the dachshund credit, too, for intelligence. He has it in large degree. Few dogs are keener.

Beef and Brawn.

It is said of Kean, the actor, that he ate mutton before playing the part of lover, beef before playing that of murderer and pork before assuming the character of a tyrant. That may be merely a story or a fact, but it is a well known truth that beef will enable more exhausting muscular work to be done than will mutton, so there may be something in the "roast beef of old England." In the eighteenth century this was one of the English "gods."

In Dresden 300 years ago "epicures" used to eat Venetian oysters that had been on the way three weeks.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, April 19.—Reports of live stock at the city market as reported by the railways were since Tuesday 96 cars, 1001 cattle, 1043 hogs, 281 sheep, 1009 calves. Besides the hogs mentioned above there were 1055 hogs to Park, Blackwell, 668 to King for Montreal packing Co. and 70 to Puddy Bros. that were shipped in from country points f. o. b. cars, a total of 1793 hogs, of abount 18 car loads, not counted in the above report, as they were not for sale and many of them never near the market.

Exporters.

Trade in exporters is dull on this market in comparison with what the farmers are reported as getting in the country. One commission firm sold 60 exporters to-day at $5.10 per cwt. that cost $5.25 per cwt. in the country, the drover losing 15c per cwt. and all expenses. There were about 5 loads of exporters sold on the market today at $4.75 to $5.10 per cwt. Export bulls sold at $3.60 to $4.15.

Butchers.

Picked lots sold at $4.75 to $5 per cwt., loads of good at $4.40 to $4.70, medium at $4 to $4.30, common at $3 to $4 per cwt. cows at $3 to $4.25 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. Murby reports a dull trade on stockers and feeders, except for a few odd lots of the assorted kind, which sold at about steady prices. The other kinds have been slow and hard to sell all week. Good breedy short-keep steers have been scarce all week, and more of this class would have sold. The run of stockers and light feeders wasn't very heavy, but more than the demand called for.

Mr. Murby bought about 250 head this week at the following quotations: Best feeders, 1100 to 1200 lbs., at $4.50 to $4.75; best feeders, 1000 to 1100 lbs., at $4.25 to $4.60; best feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs. at $4 to $4.25; best feeders, 800 to 900 lbs. at $3.85 to $4.10; best stockers, 500 to 700 lbs., at $3.50 to $3.65; common stockers, 400 to 600 lbs., at $3.

Milch Cows.

About 15 milch cows and springers sold at $30 to $52 each. More good quality cows would have sold, as the trade is good for such.

Veal Calves.

About 1300 veal calves were reported by the railways as having arrived in the city, but many of these went direct to the packing house or abattoirs. This heavy run had the effect of easing off prices, which ranged from $3 to $6 per cwt. for the bulk.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run was not large, but prices again went lower all round as follows: Export ewes sold at $4.50 to $5 per cwt.; bucks, $3.50 to $3.75; yearling lambs, $6.25 to $6.75 per cwt.; spring lambs sold at $3 to $6 each.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris got 1043 hogs and reports prices unchanged at $7.15 for selects and $6.90 for lights and fats; sows at $4 to $5 and stags at $2.50 to $3.50 per cwt.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET.

East Buffalo, April 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 200 head; steady; prime steers, $5.25 to $5.75; shipping, $4.75 to $5.15; butchers', $4.25 to $5; heifers, $3.75 to $5; cows, $3 to $4.60.

Veals—Receipts, 500 head; slow and 25c lower at $5 to $6.25, a few at $6.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 2000 head; slow; heavy and mixed, $6.90 to $7; yorkers, $6.85 to $6.90; pigs, $6.80; roughs, $6 to $6.20; stags, $4.25 to $4.75.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 6400 head; sheep steady; lambs slow, 5c to 10c higher; lambs, $6.25 to $7.30; yearlings, $6.25 to $6.50; wethers, $6 to $6.25; ewes, $5.50 to $5.75; sheep, mixed, $3 to $5.75.

NEW YORK LIVE STOCK.

New York, April 19.—Beeves—Receipts, 290; nothing doing; feeling steady; dressed beef in fair demand at 6½s to 8½c per lb. for native sides.

Calves—Receipts, 400; trade slow and prices 25c to 50c lower. Veals, $4 to $6; dressed calves weak at 7c to 10½c for city dressed veals and 5c to 8½c for country dressed.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 208; spring lamsb, $3.50 to $6 per head; sheep and yearlings entirely nominal.

Hogs—Receipts, 1043; market steady; state hogs, $7 to $7.10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, April 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 5,400; strong; common to choice steers, $4 to $6.25; cows, $3.25 to $4.30; heifers, $2.75 to $5.35; bulls, $2.60 to $4.25; calves, $2.75 to $3.25; stockers and feeders, $2.75 to $4.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,000; slow; choice to prime heavy, $6.65 to $6.72½; medium to good heavy, $6.60 to $6.65; butchers' weights, $6.65 to $6.70; good to choice heavy mixed, $6.60 to $6.65; packing, $5.75 to $6.65.

Sheep—Receipts, 12,500; steady; sheep, $4.25 to $5.50; yearlings, $5 to $6.25; lambs, $4.75 to $7.05.

Edson Fitch Dead.

Quebec, April 20.—The death occurred yesterday morning of Edson Fitch, one of Quebec's best known citizens and proprietor of the largest match splint facory in Canada, if not in the world. He was a native of Glens Falls, N. Y., where he was born in 1835.

It Springs Back

quickly into shape—for it is The Ellis Spring Needle Ribbed Underwear—made on the famous Cooper Spring Needle Circular ribbed Machine.

Wears — looks — and feels better than any underwear made in the old way with the latch-stitch—a stitch so short and uneven it cannot withstand strain.

The Spring Needle runs at an angle that makes every stitch the same length, giving a peculiar elasticity, which endures till the garment is worn out.

Fits perfectly. There's never any bagging at knees, elbows or shoulders.

Soft, smooth and unshrinkable. In two-piece and combination suits. Men who are careful about the fit of their clothes prefer the union suits, for they fit like one's skin.

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

"Shall we have the police over?" he asked anxiously.

But, strangely enough, although the thought had occurred to me more than once, it was almost in old Kesteven's words that I replied:

"There are none nearer than Raymond." To that I added, "Besides, I think we two are in no need of assistance against a ruffian or two."

The next two days passed very peaceably. As I am fond of laying my plans ahead, I wrote to Sheppard at his chambers asking him if he were still in town and if he felt disposed to pay me a visit, referring briefly to the strange turn which my fortunes had taken. I saw nothing of the captain, at least at the castle, and for some reason or other I felt no desire to revisit him just now. He had evidently forgotten my invitation, nor did I remind him of it when we met casually upon the road the day after Montgomery's arrival. He gave me a civil greeting, cocking his eye at my companion in his good humored, cynical way, and when we had passed, on looking back, I saw him standing at the crossroads, rod in hand, gazing intently after us. Seeing me do so, he waved his hand and moved off upon his journey. Montgomery was as docile as a spaniel, submitting readily, I suppose, to the superior will, and I had no complaint to make of him save that he wearied me a good deal. He himself, however, had a complaint, for he was grievously disappointed that there had been no bloodshed. We saw not a show of a burglar, and I fancy he thought me in his private mind something of an impostor, which possibly was the very reason which made him strike up an acquaintance with Sercombe. I certainly had no right to protest, for the captain was a pleasant fellow and so far as I knew harmless, and, moreover, life at the castle was not enlivening. But all the same I was a little annoyed to find them upon such close terms with one another.

The third day after Montgomery's arrival I resolved to ride into Raymond to see the little lawyer, and, mounting the black horse which had come to me as part of my inheritance, I left the castle shortly before lunch. The nag was a steady creature, though not very handsome to the eyes, and shortly I was upon the other side of Llanellan and cantering down into the long stretch of forest which lies toward the little town. Here, as it chanced very oddly, whom should I meet but Greenstreet himself, driving out to the castle upon the very point of business on which I was bound for Raymond. Encountering thus we agreed to make a convenience of the locality, since I could not persuade him to turn back with me, and we completed our conversation over a pint of ale at the little hostelry in Llanellan. The transaction was comprised in a brief time, and that finished I turned my horse's head forthright for home.

As I drew near the park gates it wanted a little of 4 by my watch. The sun beamed sharply overhead, and the great ilex by the stone pillars of the gateway threw a black blot of shadow across the drive. I headed the horse across the sward, making for the stables which lay among the farm buildings to the north of the castle. Leaving the animal in charge of the handy man, Williams, I walked back by way of the park, skirting the western wing of the building. Upon this side, as I have said, lay a dense shrubbery, through which the little brook streamed over its pebbly bottom to the waterfall upon the southern declivity of the hill. A pathway ran circuitously through this growth of laurel and box, evidently of comparatively recent origin, and winding by several pretty spots, bordered with the rivulet, finally emerged upon the boundary of the park and joined a cross track from the gateway by a leafy avenue of limes.

As it was early and I was in no mood to face Montgomery all at once, I struck into the shrubbery and sauntered quietly along the pathway. Suddenly at a bend before me and slipping softly round the elbow I beheld the figure of a man, but it was gone ere my senses were fully awake in that sultry afternoon. I stood still a moment, stirred somewhat strangely, and then ran quickly to the corner. Peering round, I caught sight of a figure stealing among the shrubs. It paused a moment and then, as it seemed to me, slipped stealthily through the bushes and disappeared.

The next instant I had recognized Hood. There was nothing very remarkable in this, but what moved my blood was a more curious recognition. Swift as the flight of a swallow there darted into my mind the recollection of another vision. I identified the memory. It came back upon me with an odd sense of perplexity and a still stranger feeling of fear where and when I had first encountered that lean and stealthy body. I had seen the man disappear in the same furtive fashion upon the banks of the stream in the valley below, and what had then arrested my vague memory now also again attacked it, but this time with certain knowledge. This was the man who had been with Mr. Kesteven upon the day on which I had first encountered him in the wood.

The fact astounded me, thrilled through my warm limbs to the very marrow of my bones. And yet it seemed too absurd to be accepted on the spur of a moment's fancy. I stood pondering in a state of excitement and then, hastily turning about, ran in the direction of the castle.

What was Hedd's business there? I asked myself the question without the assurance of an answer. There was really but little to arouse my suspicions, and yet I was agog with curiosity. I entered the castle courtyard and opened the door of the dining hall. The first object that met my eyes was Montgomery sprawling upon the table and stertorous with drunken sleep. Plates were laid for two, and empty bottles upon the table testified to a generous lunch. Leaving him for a moment, I ran upstairs and pushed open my door silently. As I did so there was an exclamation, and I entered and came face to face with Captain Sercombe.

Montgomery sprawled upon the table in a drunken sleep.

He held one hand in his tightly buttoned coat and looked at me with a watchful eye.

"This is very regrettable, Mr. Greatorex," he said.

The apology sounded so ludicrous in my ears that I broke into a tiny laugh and thereby relieved myself. The time for action was come.

"I must apologize," said I, "for my unexpected return, the more particularly as I have no doubt interrupted you on important business."

"Not at all," he said pleasantly; "not at all. I had quite finished."

"Then if you have been successful, Captain Sercombe," said I as pleasantly as himself, "I think we had better understand each other at once."

A slight smile ruffled his puffy face, but he kept his hand in its hiding place. "That will be unnecessary, sir, I assure you," he rejoined. "I fear I am a bad hand at crib cracking."

The effrontery of the man amazed me, but I showed nothing in the face that I wore.

"Why not give it up?" I asked smoothly.

He shrugged his shoulders. "Almost you persuade me," he returned jauntily.

"Fishing," I resumed, "is a more equanimous pastime, Captain Sercombe, I have heard."

"No doubt," he responded equably and glancing at the window. A twitching of his mouth belied his calm appearance, and I was disposed to believe that he contemplated a desperate move. I sat down upon a chair by the door and surveyed him coolly.

"May I ask," said I, "if you have found this sort of thing usually profitable?" I nodded at my bureau.

"I was in hopes this would prove so," he answered smoothly. "I am not an old hand at it."

"But you have able assistants?" I asked.

"Come, come, Mr. Greatorex," he replied, with a touch of impatience in his voice, "let us get to business!"

"By all means," said I. "You will find me a most reasonable man. In my profession I have had occasion several times to deal with your profession."

Help for the Kidneys Through Gin Pills.

A GUARANTEED CURE.

Read this letter. Read it twice. You have never heard such good news before—if your kidneys are sick. It tells how to be free of pain—how to have all your old-time health and vigor.

"I have been for years a sufferer with pain in the back and across the kidneys. There was scarcely a minute, day or night, that I was free of pain, and when I attempted to pass urine, the pain was almost unbearable. A friend of mine in Portage la Prairie, who was similarly afflicted, strongly advised me to try Gin Pills, as they had cured him. I bought a box of Gin Pills, and in less than a week, to my great delight, found myself without pain. I have had to go as often as every 20 minutes to urinate and several times during the night. Since taking Gin Pills, I sleep through the entire night and am not more than ordinarily inconvenienced during the day. I can earnestly recommend Gin Pills to anyone suffering from pain in the back, kidneys or bladder.

Mr. G. O. C. GOWLER, Portage la Prairie."

Your druggist has Gin Pills, or will get them for you. 50c box—6 for $2.50.

If you will send us your name and address and tell us the paper in which you have read this we send you a trial box of Gin Pills absolutely free. You will get such relief that you will gladly continue the treatment until cured. Do it to-day—now—and start to cure yourself.

Address The Bole Drug Co., Winnipeg, Man.

If I had expected him to wince at this undisguised thrust I was doomed to disappointment. A smile flitted over his face, and that was all. He withdrew his hand from the breast of his coat. "May I sit down?" he inquired in his most courteous manner.

"Come," said I, "it is rather I who should apply to you for permission."

"We will not stand upon ceremony," he observed, whipping a chair deftly beneath him.

"A very natural sentiment upon your part," I retorted ironically.

"Mr. Greatorex," said he, with his smile and now thoroughly in charge of himself, "there is one thing I pride myself upon, and that is command of my temper."

"A very useful trait—in your profession," I remarked.

The captain took a cigarette from his case. "You will not mind," said he. "The window will air your bedroom." And he puffed the smoke from his nostrils, and it hung about his ragged red mustache. I waited, my eyes fastened on him.

"What are you going to do?" he asked presently.

His own expression carried not a trace of anxiety.

"In these cases," I made answer, "there is a natural course with which her majesty's dutiful subjects do not usually tamper. For my own part I confess that I was at first tempted to take matters into my own hands, but on reflection I do not think I shall interrupt the ordinary course of justice."

"Ah," he said, taking the cigarette from his mouth, "you will call in the law."

I nodded, and a slow smile illumined his red face.

"I think I can persuade you to forego that satisfaction," he said, "though I may possibly find it more difficult to prevent your earlier resolution."

"I am entirely in your hands," said I, smiling to him, for indeed I was now chuckling to myself not only at the man's equanimity, which was quite to my taste, but at my own mastery of the situation.

He looked at me inquiringly, and I was amazed to see the difference in his eyes now. They were tense, sharp, and every trace of idle indifference had left them.

"You are aware, Mr. Greatorex, what we are quarreling over?"

"I assure you, my dear sir," said I, "that I am quarreling over nothing. I am sitting at your feet. Pray continue."

"I think," he said dryly, "that we are beating about the bush. This game of tierce and carte is very well for novices, but we are got beyond that and come to actual quarters. Come, I think this air of yours is a mere affectation which has played its part."

I said nothing save, "I am waiting to hear you, Captain Sercombe."

"You are aware," said he, "what you have in this house." He was watching me very carefully, ready, I did not doubt, to cry off in another direction if I showed my ignorance of his meaning.

"I know what you and your friends are after," said I.

He heaved a sigh of relief.

"Then I table my cards," said he. "You have a piece of paper which I want."

"Exactly," I answered, casting a look at my open bureau. He laughed.

"Oh, I will admit you have the better of me so far," he exclaimed. "But we are not yet at the end of the campaign."

"No," said I; "not until the police from Raymond arrive." He leaned forward and tapped me on the arm very earnestly.

"You mistake me," he said. "I think, Mr. Greatorex, that you do not quite understand the position."

"Upon my soul," said I, "I believe you are right. When a common burglar shall preach to his victim one must indeed revise one's notions of the world."

"You are determined to be flippant, Mr. Greatorex," he replied severely, "and so I will disillusionize you. You have inherited this property from Mr. Kesteven?"

I bowed.

"A gentleman with whom I had not the pleasure of personal acquaintance," he resumed, "but whom I have reasons for considering a very discreet and tenacious man. Now, why, Mr. Greatorex," he said—and he stared at me dispassionately—"now, why do you suppose that Mr. Kesteven did not employ these police of yours?"

The question certainly took me aback. I had never considered it. If the old gentleman had feared an attack, why had he not taken precautions against it? But I was not inclined to make a poor appearance in the argument, and so "He had excellent reasons," I said cheerfully.

"You say well," said he, nodding, but scrutinizing me keenly. "Excellent, indeed, with which, since you are obviously acquainted, you will no doubt understand a good many things which would otherwise puzzle you."

Here I confess he had me again in his hands. "Quite so," I stammered as bravely as possible.

He laughed softly. "I think, Mr. Greatorex, that we had really better understand each other and not be so civil. What you don't know, despite your brave profession of knowledge, is that the treasure disposed in this house is treasure trove—that is, that it was not the property of the late Mr. Kesteven and was not in his power to bequeath, and consequently is not now your property, but the property of her gracious majesty our sovereign queen, less a somewhat infinitesimal percentage which we may term salvage. That, I take it, is a statement which is new to you."

It was, indeed, and now that the facts were revealed to me suddenly and as by magic the many mysteries of the past few weeks were illumined and grew plain. I kept my countenance as well as I might, for all my astonishment, and then—

"This is very interesting," said I, "and I am in your debt for the news."

"Bah, Mr. Greatorex!" he interrupted. "Haven't I said that we must dispense with civilities? Time passes, I have much before me, and we have not concluded our bargain."

"Bargain!" I echoed.

"Why, certainly," said the captain, grinning pleasantly. "I take it that we are enemies, but that we make war upon terms."

"State your terms," said I coldly, having now an inkling as to the new situation.

"That is better," said he approvingly. "In the first place, this contest is a private one, carried on by both sides without public assistance."

"That is very well indeed," said I, "for a party, numbers unknown, against one man."

"If I have gathered any impression of your character, Mr. Greatorex," observed the captain dryly, "during a few days' acquaintance, you will be prompt to destroy that inequality. I put no embargo upon your numbers."

"I give you three minutes to be free of the castle."

"That is good of you," said I sarcastically.

"Secondly," continued he, unmoved and counting on his fingers, "there is no reason why this campaign should breed ill will. I like you, and off duty there is room for exchange of friendly courtesies."

"You forget," I said sharply, "in what relation I find you. There can be no peace between your profession and mine."

He smiled.

"The incident was an unpleasant necessity," said he airily. "But come, Mr. Greatorex, this attitude of high morals would be very well in you were you the proper heir. But what are we but both upon the same level? Robbers, bandits, what you will, certainly with no great reason for pride, and at least I face the position and would ask you to do the same."

The words of the man completely abashed me. And when I considered, he spoke no more than the truth. He said truly when he described us as upon the same level. We were conspiring each in his way against the laws of the country and risking our liberties in an illegal attempt to steal what the custom of the kingdom had claimed as the spoils of the crown. I will admit that the captain's reasoning confounded me, and I was left staring hopelessly at the situation in a kind of humiliation against which I kicked in vain. Yet I was not for his seeing so much as a wink or a blink in me.

"You must not misunderstand me," said I after a pause in which I digested these reflections. "I put my value on my own situation, and I am willing to agree to these terms, so far, at least, as they consort with my own inclinations. You will not look for a greater consideration than I would bestow upon you apart from this struggle in which we are involved?"

"Why, certainly not!" said he gayly and as one who had gained his point.

"Very well," said I, rising. "And that commits us to very little."

"Then, Mr. Greatorex," said he, "we have concluded, and we know where we stand."

At this I pulled myself up short, and, fetching my watch out of my pocket, I said:

"I know this, Captain Sercombe, that I give you three minutes to be free of the castle and outside the gate. After that time I will take what steps I choose against burglars."

The smile vanished from his face and was succeeded by a nasty frown. "You forget," he said, "that I am here as an invited guest."

"What, in my chamber?" said I hotly. "The devil take your invitation That I reserve for myself!"

He came into the passage. "I believe," said he as amiably as ever, "that I am now within the precincts of my right and within the rights of hospitality."

"As you choose," said I sullenly. "And that being so, I will trouble you to awaken your host from a drunken slumber, concocted I know not how."

"My dear sir," said the captain, laughing now quite cheerfully, "there is no concoction necessary, I assure you. A bottle of whisky or Burgundy to his elbow and my young friend Montgomery asks nothing better. And I trust that you will give me credit for this, that I do not trespass upon another gentleman's cellars."

"No," said I. "You keep sober, I grant you," and stalked somewhat angrily down the stairs.

Montgomery lay where I had left him, but lifted his head upon our entrance, glaring with a stupid and miserable eye upon us.

"Ah," said the captain pleasantly, "my young friend is himself again, or at least wants but a bucket of cold water!" And he clapped him on the back in a friendly fashion.

"You had better take him away," said I curtly, but at that remark and after glancing from one to the other the boy's eyes rested upon my face with a look of consternation, and suddenly he buried his face in his arms with a sort of sob.

"Faith, I am in the way here," said the captain merrily, and without more ado he shuffled out of the house, leaving me alone with the wretched youth.

I stood for a time regarding him with indifference, but presently another mood overtook me. He was honest and leal, I could swear, but he was an arrant fool and had a very sorry vice.

"Montgomery," said I, "you have been guilty of a grave breach of faith. But so far we are not the losers by it, and I think if you will take the advice of your friend, the captain, we shall be in a better condition to discuss this presently."

He took the hint, turned from me a blotchy face of shame and hurried with little dignity from the room. It was half an hour ere he returned and presented me an air of determination which I could guess had been assumed with difficulty. It was then that, without referring to his own conduct, I explained in a general way the harm he had done me.

"You have said hard words to me, Mr. Greatorex," he said, "none the less hard because they are true."

I appreciated the struggle which had been contested in the silly head.

"As it turned out, you have done me less mischief than you think," I replied.

"That is no excuse," he retorted hotly. "I have acted like a cad, but I will ask you to believe that I have the best will in the world to be your friend."

"You could be a very good friend to me," I answered, "if you would obey orders. A good soldier, Montgomery, has a scrupulous conscience while on duty. Outside that he may be what he will."

"I have done what I would all my life," he said moodily. "And I am all the worse for it."

"That is very likely," said I dryly. "But now you have the chance to amend."

He looked up eagerly. "Do you give me another chance?" he asked earnestly. "Mr. Greatorex, I will ask no questions. I don't pretend to understand the position. But you are free to use me."

"I am going to trust you," I answered him, "and in proof of my resolve I will leave you in charge here tomorrow."

An expression of satisfaction lit up his features.

"You will not regret it," he said. "And as for that scoundrel Sercombe"—he paused, with a savage look of dislike—"I will catch him and break his bottles over his head."

CHAPTER VII.

I HAD already resolved that it would be folly to depend upon Montgomery alone. Now that he was aroused and upon his guard I had no doubt of his constancy for a few days. But there was no saying how soon he might relapse. And in any case I needed a wiser head than his to oppose the cunning of the enemy, not to say that we should welcome two more strong arms should it come to the fact of war. That the captain and his friends, whoever they were, were in deep earnest and would stick at little I was by this time fully convinced. It was very plain that we were none of us in a position to demand assistance from the law. We were adventurers all, and now that I had had time to face the thought I confessed it without a blush, resolved, if anything, that it was a virtuous action to baffle such a pack of hardened scoundrels. But several duties importuned me greatly—of which one was to determine how far this plot had run and the particulars and persons of our enemies. Sercombe himself was one, and I had no doubt that he was co-operating cordially with Hood, that sleek and impassive scamp. Questions upon Barnett also flickered in my mind, and for the rest I must keep my senses brisk and my wits awake.

But the most instant task lay before me that morning and had been decided ere I went to bed the previous evening. I must have Sheppard or Rogers to help me against these odds, and that forthright. Here again I was confronted with a third necessity and luckily saw a means to conjoin both. These rascals were after my piece of parchment, without which their own fragment was useless. I must dispose of this at once and get rid of so much peril at the least. It was true that I might possibly drag Sheppard down by the telegraph, but then again this was most uncertain in a man of his temperament. He would want the persuasion of a sudden impulse and above all a stirring narrative to thrill his pulses such as might be presented to him in a personal interview.

Moreover, if I went to London my paper should go with me. And what was easier than to persuade Sheppard and secure my document at one throw? These considerations pointed to a journey to town, and that I must take at once and before either Montgomery's ardor had failed or the enemy had prepared a blow. I reckoned upon an interval of time after the recent exchanges between myself and the captain. What quickened my intentions was an incident which occurred shortly after breakfast and while I was still debating the dangers of the situation. I went to my room at 11 and began to pack a valise methodically in the manner of a man who has all his life been used to his own labors. The last and the most important particular in this work was to put up my writing case securely. To make sure of my precious paper I unlocked the case and took out the sheet. I was upon the point of replacing it when I suddenly decided to put it in my pocket, which accomplished I buttoned my coat tightly.

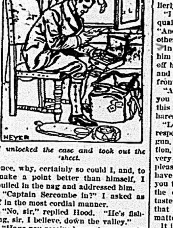
At this moment I heard the noise of a snapping bough and hastily looked forth by the window. The lowermost branch of a sycamore that stood upon the edge of the moat hung swinging in the air and showing a great gap of naked white wood. I sprang up, put my head out of the window and could just catch a sight of some one vanishing round the corner of the building. This news of the enemy came very sharply upon me, and without stopping to complete my packing I ran out of the door and took the stairs three steps at a time. But no stranger was visible when I emerged upon the park, and I was driven back upon Mrs. Main. Here I had a clew, for certainly a stranger had come up to the castle by the gates half an hour before; but, according to the housekeeper, no mystery enveloped him. He had rung manfully at the bell and demanded Mr. Williams, and had been sent on to the farm buildings by Mrs. Main herself, who had overseen his interview with the housemaid.

"What was this man like?" I asked.

"He was a short, dark young fellow, sir," said she, "and something odd about him." But what that oddness was she could not tell, and completed the picture by ascribing to him "a squint and somethink funny-like in his walk," adding again and with a sudden elation, "Like what a sailor might be."

I strode off to find Williams at the stables. The stranger had been there. Of that there was no question. Williams, a sharp, undersized and black avised Welshman, with a passion of sentiment in his meager body, confirmed the description given by Mrs. Main. The man had inquired if there was any chance of a job, but seemed (so thought Williams) inconsiderably concerned as to whether there was or was not. He added that the intruder was a foreigner, but to this statement I paid no attention, as to the Welsh and indeed to all country people the word implies little more than stranger. It was plain, however, that the fellow was my arboreal spy, and that was all I wanted, as, in fact, it was more than enough. I admit that I was disconcerted, but the more resolute to go forward with my London expedition. I have said that I reckoned upon an interval of truce. My ideas were destined to a rude subversal.

It was upon 3 when I started to ride into Raymond, for upon second thought I decided to leave my valise behind and put up with the provision of my own chambers in the Temple. As I reached the Woodman the thin figure of Hood was discernible smoking in front of his door. From the distance I saw that he was talking with a companion, but when I drew level with the inn the second man had disappeared. Hood straightened himself on the sight of me, took his pipe from his mouth and touched his hat with his habitual respectfulness. I had been wondering how the man would demean himself, aware as I was of his connection in some way with the plot against me. But not a trace of discomfort or confusion showed in his face, which was as grave as ever. He was clothed in a suit of very dark tweed, his brown face, cut very clean and without an ounce of waste flesh, cool as a statue's, the thin smoke rising from the pipe which he held behind his back. If a valet could wear this face of indifference, why, certainly so could I, and, to make a point better than himself, I pulled in the nag and addressed him.



I unlocked the case and took out the sheet.

"Captain Sercombe in?" I asked as if in the most cordial manner.

"No, sir," replied Hood. "He's fishing, sir, I believe, down the valley."

"Have you received your legacy yet?" I asked.

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir," said Hood. "Very acceptable, sir, from my poor master."

"I wonder what made him leave you that?" I asked.

"I have wondered myself, sir," he said. "But he was a kind master, and he seems to have been pretty eccentric, as you might say, in his manner of leaving."

"Look here, my man," said I, "what were you doing that Tuesday afternoon by the stream yonder when your master met with his accident?"

Hood's luminous eyes rested on mine for an instant, but he never moved a muscle. "I was with my poor master," he said.

I laughed. "Assisting him no doubt." I said dryly.

"No, sir; struggling with him," came the answer, pat as you please. I stared at him in amazement at the effrontery of the admission.

"Upon my soul," said I, "I am not sure but I ought to give you in charge! You admit you were robbing your master."

"No, sir," said Hood quietly. "You came too soon, sir."

I shook my reins with an oath. I could make nothing of the fellow. Hood stepped back as the horse shied.

"Thank you, sir; good afternoon, sir," said he civilly, and I struck my whip into the flanks of the animal and rode off without so much as a nod.

I was utterly confounded by this genteel, civil spoken scoundrel, with his impassive audacity. It began to dawn upon me now in what relations these men had stood. The legacy I attributed, as no doubt did the recipient, to a piece of eccentricity on Kesteven's part. But I had more than an inkling now of the plan of treatment which he had adopted. Hood knew too much, and he was bound to keep up appearances with him. Kesteven had a good idea of the danger with which he was threatened, had probably discharged the man with that knowledge, and yet up to the close he must needs keep his secret by a feint of his former kindly relations. I remarked several occasions upon which Hood had made an appearance in our conversation, and I now recognized the way in which his name was treated.

I rode into the reach of forest beyond Llanellan and presently came out upon a more open spot, where the trees hemmed in a piece of ground tufted with bush and bracken. At a turn of the road beyond me I saw a figure, seemingly that of a clergyman, walking to meet me. As I made this mental observation and without a note of warning there came the crack of a gun, and a bullet plowed a ridge in the grass before the horse's belly. The beast reared and came down upon his haunches, nearly throwing me, and I was aware that the man in front was running toward me, shouting. As I steadied the horse my eyes went in another direction and lit upon Sercombe stalking easily toward me, with a gun upon his arm. The two men came up to me about the same time.

"I hope there is no accident," gasped the clergyman. Sercombe put out his hand.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Morgan," said he. "How do you do, Greatorex?" he continued coolly. "No, I am glad to say there's no harm done, is there, Greatorex? But it's all my fault. This infernal undergrowth diverted the shot. I hope it did not scare you too much?" he asked, smiling at me.

I was too much astounded and far too indignant for words. "I thought I'd got the hare all right," he resumed amiably to the clergyman. "Lucky for you, Greatorex, as well as for me." And then turning to me, "Do you know Mr. Morgan, the vicar of Llanellan? My friend, Mr. Greatorex, you know—lately succeeded to the castle yonder. A fine property. I envy him."

His impudence was startling. Here was a man who had just made a barefaced attempt upon my life (for that was how I conceived it), and he was engrossing the conversation upon friendly terms and in the most cheerful spirit between his intended victim and the stranger who had all but actually witnessed his atrocious act of treachery. The bare audacity had left me gaping at the outset of the encounter, but the very process of his easy talk served to give me my wits again, and I was able to meet him upon his own terms, which I did, delivering a long, keen glance at him.

"I am afraid you are an indifferent sportsman, Captain Sercombe," said I after I had acknowledged the introduction ceremoniously. "You do better with the rod than with the gun. I see I must take you in hand for a lesson. When you see me shoot I shall shoot straight, even if the enemy be a hare."

Sercombe laughed and patted my horse's flank. The vicar looked from one to the other in some bewilderment, as well he might, for we had disposed of a curious incident somewhat cavalierly.

"I am pleased to have made your acquaintance, Mr. Greatorex," said he. "And I trust we shall see more of each other."

In my heart I hoped not, but I gave him the proper rejoinder, and, taking off his hat, he moved away. Sercombe and I were left upon the roadway confronting each other.

"And now, sir," said I quietly, "will you be good enough to tell me what this means, and why you shoot at hares with bullets?"

"Let me walk with you a little way," responded the captain, shouldering his gun. Suiting his action to the invitation, he marched beside me. "It is very plain, Mr. Greatorex," said he pleasantly. "It means that you must have a lesson, but I need not assure you that I bear no ill will to you. On the contrary, I have taken a great taste for you. But it is obvious to you that sentiment has no place in a mere matter of business."

It is not an uncommon practice with me to carry a pistol, and certainly, if it had never entered my head before, I think that the strange fortunes of the last week would have persuaded me to the precaution. As it was, the revolver lay to my hand in my coat pocket, and I took my course forthwith. Whipping round the horse, I drew and presented the weapon at his heart.

"You will do me the favor, Captain Sercombe," said I sharply, "to hand over your cartridges."

An indefinite expression of surprise passed over his face. He was evidently taken aback, and his high color strengthened. "Oh, come, my dear sir," said he. "I ask you to consider if it be worth while. For my own part, I have no desire to fire in your back, nor dare I if I had. You see, I am plain with you."

He certainly was, and I saw at once

MRS. E. B. DAVIDSON.

The Only Woman Bank President In New England.

York, Me., is the proud claimant of the only woman bank president in New England, Mrs. Elizabeth Burleigh Davidson. She is the head of the York County National bank. It is a flourishing institution, and in summer many deposits are made by the famous visitors to the harbor.

The bank was organized in February, 1893, with James T. Davidson president and W. M. Walker vice president. Mrs. Davidson at that time was very much interested in her home duties, and these home duties were as arduous as the duties of the head of a bank, for in the Davidson family there were six lively children. In 1901 Mr. Davidson died. Vice President Walker was elected as his successor, and Mrs. Davidson, to the general surprise of Maine people, was made vice president of the institution.

MRS. ELIZABETH BURLEIGH DAVIDSON.

Mrs. Davidson was very well informed on the business of the bank. Besides, she is possessed of a bright and alert mind. She stepped into the active life of the institution as though she had worked in the world of finance for many years. From the beginning of her financial career she showed much enthusiasm and acumen. Every day she spent several hours in her office, consulted the directors on investments and even ventured to suggest many avenues for profitable use of the funds.

The other officers ceased to regard her as a woman; they accepted her on a basis of masculine ability; they regarded her as one of themselves. Consequently, when the president of the bank died, in 1903, the directors unanimously elected Mrs. Davidson to the office. In her higher position she showed even greater activity and sagacity. She assumed undisputed control of the institution. Other banking men in the state, when they heard of her, smiled; later they said she was a very bright woman. They came to have much respect for her financial shrewdness and cleverness. The York County National bank received a higher rating and has become more successful than ever under Mrs. Davidson's management.—Boston Herald.

Clothes and the Working Girl.

"We try to impress our pupils with the fact that they must look the part when they are applying for situations," said a teacher of stenography in speaking of his business. "It's a lesson we find hard to teach, especially to the pretty ones, who insist on looking their best, but we had a case the other day which we will be able to use as an argument and illustration in the future. A girl who when she left us was a first class stenographer came back to complain that she couldn't get a place. She wore a picture hat and jewels and looked more like a duchess than a working girl and said she had been chasing a job three days without success. We told her we would guarantee her a place at the end of a day's search if she would dress as we told her. She agreed to this, and we removed the jewels, replaced the picture hat with a modest and unpretentious one and told her to put on neat white cuffs. She did this and got work upon the second application."—Philadelphia Record.

Chocolate Mousse.

A mousse is a dish that is made with whipped cream and frozen without being stirred. When the frozen mass is cut into, it has a texture like the fine moss found in the dense forests. The dish will take a long time to harden, but the labor of preparing it is slight. Whip a quart of cream for a chocolate mousse, being careful to drain off all liquid cream. Scrape an ounce of chocolate, melt it, and put it into a small pan with three tablespoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of boiling water. Stir it over a hot fire until smooth and glossy—that is, for about a minute—then add six tablespoonfuls of whipped cream and stir into the dish of whipped cream. Add a scant cupful of sugar and stir gently until the ingredients are thoroughly mixed. Turn the mixture into the mold you are to use, which should have been previously packed in ice and salt until thoroughly chilled. Cover it and set it away in a cool place for four hours.

A Kitchen Clothesline.

Articles required: One small single pulley, one small double pulley, three screw hooks, a bunch of clothesline and a pole, light and strong. Place two of the screw hooks in the ceiling at a distance apart equal to the length of the pole. Pass one end of the rope through one side of the double pulley, through the single pulley and tie to one end of the pole, then pass the other end of the rope through the other side of the double pulley and fasten to the other end of the pole, says Success. Put into the wall at a convenient height the third screw hook so that it will be under one of the screw hooks in the ceiling. Then hang the pulleys—the double one over the screw hook in the wall—to the screw hooks in the ceiling. This will leave a loop of rope in which knots are tied so that the pole may be either at the ceiling for drying clothes or fairly low to put clothes on it.

Almond Meal.

The best formula for almond meal is as follows: Shell and blanch enough sweet almonds to measure two ounces and pound or grind to powder. One of the small pepper mills is fine for this. Then add one ounce of ground cuttle fish bone, the kind you keep in the canary bird's cage, and it is so light that an ounce makes a quantity. Grind an ounce of white soap, the kind that has a great deal of palm oil in it; half an ounce of orris root powdered and quarter of a dram of oil of lavender. Mix the orris with the almond powder, add the oil of lavender, then four drops of the oil of cloves. Mix well, then add the cuttle fish and the soap last. Keep this in a glass jar and use instead of soap.

A Figure Maker.

"Just imagine," said a fashionable modiste to one of her customers who was deploring her ungraceful figure, "that you have a diamond pin attached to your waist just at the edge of that yoke and that you are anxious that others should see it. Unconsciously you raise the chest up and out, and in so doing you have put every part of the body into its proper relationship with every other part. You are standing or sitting, as the case may be, correctly, you are enabled to breathe properly, the poise of the head is right, and so on. It's wonderful what that little suggestion will do for me."

Washing White Clothes.

White clothes can be washed very easily by following these directions: At night dip the white clothes, one piece at a time, in cold water, soap each article, roll it up tight and place in a tub; when all the things have been manipulated, fill the tub with cold water. In the morning wring the pieces out into clean hot water (not boiling), wash in a machine or on a board and rinse. Do not use bluing, as the soap supplies all you need in that line. Do not boil them, as that makes the articles yellow. Much time and labor are saved, and the clothes will be beautifully white.

Dust.

A very simple experiment made by an eminent bacteriologist determines in a startling manner the potential dangers associated with accumulations of dust in living rooms. A pin point was used to convey as much dust as so small a vehicle will carry. This yielded no less than 3,000 colonies of living germs, when cultivated on gelatin, and although, fortunately, every species was not representative of disease, yet the majority were potent sources of decomposition and danger to health.

The Bathtub.

The bath is a little tiresome to keep in good condition unless great care is taken. When the enamel is dirty and discolored take some paraffin, dip a piece of flannel into it and keep rubbing the bath gently until all dirt is removed; then wash with warm soap and water. Zinc goods can be made to look like new in this way. Paraffin is used in many ways and is of wonderful assistance to the housewife while waging her war against dirt.

A Cozy Tea Table.

One of the prettiest, coziest tea tables seen lately was that on which Bulgarian embroidery mats, all in scarlet on canvas, were used. There were a centerpiece and square mats in wonderful openwork. A glass vase of scarlet nasturtiums and blue and white china made the table attractive and homelike.

Little Economies.

Do not throw away your lemon peel. Fill a bottle with rectified spirit, and, when using lemons, cut off the yellow part of the rind and place in the spirit. You will find this quite as good as the essence of lemon which is sold in the shops. Essence of orange can be made in the same way.

Look Pleasant.

Don't, if you are a woman with a sad face, try to look still sadder. Chirk up; smile; make your mouth into a Cupid's bow; force yourself to look animated; try to be expressive with your eyes. A sad, wan face never won out in a beauty contest.

Soap bark jelly is the best all around cleansing agent that a woman can keep on hand. It may be prepared by putting a handful of soap bark in a quart of boiling water and letting it cool.

Old sheets and other pieces of linen should never be thrown away, but kept in a convenient place for use in case of cuts or burns or other accidents.

In a sickroom do not sit on the edge of the bed or rattle leaves of a book or newspaper or swing back and forth in a rocking chair.

For red cheeks some good iron or sulphur preparation taken internally is the best thing.

MANAGING A HOME.

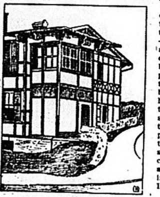
If you do not keep a servant and your family is small, don't "do" the supper dishes at night. Leave them until morning. Pack them up, scraping them a bit more thoroughly than you would to do them at once. If you have had eggs, wash the silver. Arrange the dining room and then go into the sitting room and sit down with "him." He will probably pick up his paper pretty soon, but by the time the babies are put to bed he will usually have finished it, and if the finishing of the paper coincides with your re-entry he will probably lose his impulse to go downtown if he had it.

Let an atmosphere of quiet and leisure prevail after supper. It will lead to pleasant things in the way of closer friendship and rosier sentiment. You can wear a daintier frock simply to get supper than you can if the work is to be done. And the gown counts, my dear girls, at thirty odd and over. It may not take you long to do the dishes, but even that half hour of alien occupation is enough to break the spell of the tea table talk, to loosen again just a little the hold you should at once take upon the heart side of "him" when his day's work is over. The spell is not abated while you are engaged in putting the babies to bed, especially if you sometimes invite him to assist at that function. Anyway it means a half hour longer with him. That is a good deal of time in a year for extra sweethearting. Next morning the dishes will take longer, and they may be sticky, but you are not paying for your pleasure until after you have had it, and the price is not high. Sometimes it will seem to be fruitless for a time, sometimes it simply cannot be done for awhile. I speak with all this in mind, but try it, try it, do it when you can. This is out of my own heart and experience.—M. C. P. in Healthy Home.

CANVAS COVERED HOUSE.

The Tough Cloth Takes the Place of Plaster or Cement.

In a suburb of New York city stands a house of the style of the Swiss chalet. Its owner learned that there are disadvantages connected with the use of rough cast plaster or cement, such as is commonly used in the exterior finish of a house of this type. It is almost impossible to prevent ugly cracks appearing in the plaster from time to time. The successful use of canvas on yachts and other craft constantly exposed to the weather suggested an idea. When his house was ready for its final exterior finish the owner purchased a quantity of stout sail cloth and nailed it securely to the sides of his house, over a lining of building paper, before adding the cleats that form the paneling. The canvas was painted gray, in imitation of plaster, and the deception to the eyes of the casual observer is complete. In a dozen years no crack or injury of any kind has appeared, and each successive coat of paint simply adds to the durability of the canvas, which has been proved to possess remarkable qualities of resistance to cold and dampness.—Good Housekeeping.



HOUSE FINISHED IN CANVAS.

Celery Jelly.

A writer in a household magazine recommends the following celery jelly: Cover two cups of celery stalks cut in small pieces with one pint of hot water. Add a few slices of onion, two sprigs of parsley, salt and paprika to suit the taste. Let it simmer for about three-quarters of an hour, then strain through a cheesecloth bag, allowing the liquid to be perfectly clear. Add to the celery water two tablespoonfuls of gelatine softened in a quarter of a cup of cold water and squeeze in the juice of one large lemon. Strain again on to a large platter wet in cold water. It should form a layer an inch thick. When cold and thoroughly hardened cut it into small squares and fancy shapes. Use five or six to garnish each plate of salad. This garnish would probably be nice with a chicken salad served with mayonnaise.

Coddled Eggs.

Until you have eaten a coddled egg you don't know just how delicious a soft boiled egg can be. Have your water boiling and have ready an earthen bowl or jar of some thickness, which you have previously made hot. Place your eggs in the bowl and pour on the boiling water. Then cover the bowl with a tight cover and put over it also a cozy or a folded napkin. In five or six minutes the eggs will be done, soft boiled to a consistency that it is impossible to gain in the ordinary way. One beauty of this plan is that the eggs are placed on the table together with the fruit, cereal and coffee, and by the time one course is finished the eggs are ready, without the necessity of watching over a stove or of getting up from the table to go after them in the absence of a maid.

USE OF PERFUMES.

Open Scent Bottle In Wardrobe Gives a Delicate Odor.

Two thousand dollars is the modest sum spent every year for perfumery by one American woman, well known both in London and New York society.

"I happen to know this," says the representative of an English perfumery house, "because she gets her goods direct from us. Scores of other women, both English and American, think it necessary to spend two or three hundred dollars every twelvemonth for scents. Ten or twenty dollars a bottle is nothing to the woman who can afford it, or the man either for that matter, and in my opinion people are quite justified in spending money that way if they have it, but those who haven't should try to get the same thing in a commoner bottle for a dollar. You see I am perfectly frank.

"A good deal has been said about the vulgarity of perfume. Of course there are vulgar perfumes, just as there is low music or art. The real reason, I think, for the prejudice some have against perfumes is that the scent bottle is made too evident. A woman of taste will not smother herself in perfume. It is not a rapid evaporation of strong scent that she delights in, but a very faint, clinging fragrance. A good way to secure that result is to leave a bottle open, so that the perfumery may evaporate in your wardrobe. It takes a long time for the subtlest part of the scent to get into every fiber of the clothes, but when you wear those clothes there is no vulgarity about them. You carry a kind of fragrant presence about with you."—New York Tribune.

THE BABY.

A Few Points by a Doctor About Its Training.

A baby can be taught to go to sleep at a certain hour in its own bed without breast or bottle and without a light just as well as it can be taught the opposite.

I have no patience with parents who want to drag a baby from one place to another, let every one handle it, trot it and excite it. Another point along the same line: We do not do our duty when we neglect to instruct parents in reference to punishment of children, telling the children the policeman will get them, cut off their ears, etc. Many an idiot and nervous wreck is the result of such training.

Raising babies on artificial food in our cities is a fearfully discouraging task. Above all else, here is where attention to detail and little things counts—attention not for a day, but weeks and months. The majority of sick, emaciated, rachitic, deformed children brought to my clinic are the result of poor artificial feeding. As to the little things in diagnosing babies' troubles, what a mine of information we have in the sleep, the cry, the gestures and the expression! The single sharp, shrill cry in the dead of night, tuberculosis of brain or bone; the suppressed cry, pleurisy; the "quack of the duck" cry, post pharyngeal abscess; the sudden and long continued cry, with every evidence of pain, earache or colic. And so we might go on indefinitely.—Dr. Phillips in Healthy Home.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Dishcloths should be boiled with soda once or twice a week.

Salt sprinkled on any substance that is burning on a stove will stop the smoke and smell.

Add borax to the water in which the dish towels are washed and it will aid in making them white and soft.

If housewives would remember to put a towel, folded several times, in the bottom of the dishpan there would be less broken thin glasses.

A cupful of vinegar placed in an open basin on the stove while cabbage, cauliflower, onions or fish are cooking will permeate the kitchen with its aroma and do away with unpleasant odors.

Empty pasteboard cracker boxes and the clean white wooden boxes that chocolate comes in, which are lined with paraffin paper, are excellent to bake sponge cake in. They will not burn, and the paper prevents them sticking.

Woman's Narrow Horizon.

A government employer of many women clerks has declared that not one in twenty reads the papers or knows anything of geography or contemporary events, says Success Magazine. "Ask them if the Panama canal is to be at sea level or not, and they will stare as if you were talking Chinese," he complained. "They may read the horrors in the papers, but they skip everything of value." He had his finger flatly on one of woman's chief defects—the lack of broad, impersonal interests. The average girl's horizon is bounded on the north by her clothes, on the south by her social relations, on the east by her private hopes and on the west by her income—four solid walls that shut out very thoroughly the world's light and movement. She can never go far in any but mechanical work until she has climbed out into wider horizons, and she will be at the world's mercy until she opens her mind by an interest in what happens outside her circle of acquaintance.

Old Papers.

Save washing and dusters by using old newspapers for cleaning. They are excellent for window polishers, first rate for scouring tinware and are as good as a brush for polishing a stove. The prudent woman will always keep a good pad of newspaper at hand and use it for wiping up grease or water spilled on the gas or coal cooking stove, for it will enable her to keep the stove clean with half the usual trouble.

COCOANUT WARE.

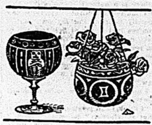
Pretty Ornaments That Can Be Made Out of the Shells.

The next time you buy a cocoanut instead of throwing away the hard shell let it be the nucleus of a set of cocoanut ware, for the ugly, hairy shell may be converted into a beautifully carved vase, drinking cup or flower holder if you follow the directions given below.

The first operation consists of scraping off all the growing fiber from the outside with a piece of broken glass. Be sure to work in the same direction in which the strands run.

After this outer coating is cleared away go carefully over the same surface with your knife until it is symmetrical. Then rub the surface to a perfect smoothness with a piece of sandpaper, wiping away all superfluous dust. Rub beeswax or a candle end over the surface and into the nut with the hands and a piece of old silk (do not use woolly cloth). Continued application results in a fine mahogany colored polish, leaving the nut hard and very smooth.

Saw off the top of the thick end. You must use your own judgment as to how much is to be removed, as that will depend upon what you intend to make—vase, drinking cup or flower holder. Each shape must govern the amount to be taken off.



SAMPLES OF COCOANUT WARE.

The sharp edge of the bowl must be cut off outside and in and then sandpapered and polished with the beeswax. Cut out the contents of the nut and sandpaper the interior; and at last you are ready to display your skill as a wood, or, rather, nut carver.

Take the end of a needle or the end of a compass leg and sketch out your design on the polished outside surface, or, if you are not expert with a pencil, cut from some old magazine an outline picture which pleases you and paste it on the nut in the position you wish your decoration to be. Now take a sharp knife and cut through this picture into the nut, following the outlines of the picture.

As your lines are bound to be more or less wobbly on account of the round surface you have to work on select some design suggestive of Indian work, as the Aztec style of decoration, as shown in the drawing. This does not require any very great art and is very effective.

When you have cut your design out, you may beautify it still more by painting the parts in low relief with white, or, what is better, gold, paint, and the cup is finished except for the holder, which you may obtain for a few cents from any carpenter who owns a wood turning lathe.

A set of half a dozen such pieces of cocoanut ware will more than repay for the work required in making it by the attention it will attract as a beautiful and unique curiosity.

"Program" and "Programme."

Our boys and girls have noticed, of course, that the dropping of the "me" from the word "programme" is becoming more and more general. This is not so much in obedience to the demands of the so called "phonetic reform" as it is a move toward uniformity in spelling words that have the termination "gram." The word comes regularly from the Greek "programma," and really should be "programme," but the advocates of the shorter form say that if we write "diagram," "telegram," "epigram," etc., we might as well write "program," especially as the final "me" is not sounded. But you should not fall into the incorrect pronunciation that many people are guilty of and say "pro-grum." The accent is on the first syllable of course, but the "gram" is distinctly sounded like "am."—Exchange.

Be Polite.

School children are most apt to be guilty of a certain breach of street etiquette. This is the forming of a group on the pavement so that the knot of people interfere with passersby or the walking together three or four abreast, so that the same hindrance is presented. Please try to remember that, while the street is meant for you as much as for any one else, it is meant for any one else as much as for you.

Conundrums.

Why is India ink like a cunning Hottentot? Because it is a deep black.

There is a well known word in the English language, the two first letters of which signify a male, the three first a female, the four first a great man and the whole a great woman. He, her, hero, heroine.

Marie's Accident.

"Now tell me why you cry, Marie."
"I've had an accident," sobbed she.

"Where are your bruises? Dearie me!
What was your accident, Marie?"

"I almost tumbled down," she said,
"And very nearly bumped my head!"
—Della Hart Stone in St. Nicholas.

WOMEN AND CAREERS.

The Change That Has Come In the Last Half Century.

"Once it was difficult, almost impossible, for a girl of breeding to have a career," said Juliet Wilbor Tompkins in Success Magazine. "Think of poor Jane Austen dropping her white sewing hastily over her writing when a guest came in that she might not be called ungenteel! And it is only fifty-seven years since Elizabeth Blackwell, applying for permission to win a medical diploma, was refused by a dozen colleges, one of which added to its refusal the interesting statement that 'it would be unbecoming and immoral to see a woman instructed in the nature and laws of her organism.' Now, in the United States alone, there are seven medical colleges for women besides the men's colleges to which they are admitted, over 7,000 are practicing physicians and surgeons, and the theories for and against such things are being forgotten in the light of their actual work. The same opposition met every new venture. About fifty years ago an Englishman tried to introduce watchmaking among his countrywomen, a delicate and profitable trade in which hundreds of Swiss women were employed, but his initial lecture on the subject was mobbed and broken up by British prejudice, and, though three venturesome souls did try to follow his suggestion and learn the trade, persecution finally obliged them to give it up. Now there are over 4,000 watch and clock makers in the United States, and a woman may learn any trade she pleases without opposition, almost without comment."

THE SIMPLE HOUSE.

How It May Be Achieved In an Easy, Natural Way.

The simple house must not only be simple, but it must be good. Its simplicity is not that of mere bareness. That is something quite different. Simplicity in house design does not mean a mere denuding of ornament or its deliberate omission. It means that the house must be designed in a simple way that is also beautiful. Simplicity of design is based on structural development. In the hands of the skilled designer these structural lines become also lines of beauty. The construction, therefore, becomes beautiful construction, and the simple house is achieved in a natural, beautiful way.

Plainness, severity, commonplaceness, barrenness, must not be confused with simplicity. There must be artistic effort or the house will be completely wanting in external merit. A fussy house will not necessarily be made beautiful by stripping it of its ornament. It may be bettered—at least it will be rid of unnecessary parts. The evil is more deeply rooted than that. It lies in the very bone and sinew of the house, and the remedy, if there can be a remedy, must be applied to the whole structure.

Mere plainness in house building has no positive qualities of excellence. A house that is merely plain and with no other quality has nothing else to recommend it. The simple house, on the other hand, has beauty in its simplicity, a beauty due to its fine lines and to the harmony of all the parts.—American Homes and Gardens.

TOILET TIPS.

Be careful to use only the mildest, blandest, purest, unscented soaps when bathing.

Rose water, eight ounces, and tincture of benzoin, two drams, make one of the best skin tonics and whiteners.

The orange stick is the only nail cleaner necessary. The stick properly pointed will not injure the enamel or the cuticle around the nail.

To have the best possible effect from face creams the surface of the skin must be thoroughly dry. Any moisture will prevent the pores from absorbing the cream.

A 3 per cent solution of boracic acid is invaluable as a bath for tired eyes. It is also exceedingly effective to use as a bath for the face if the skin has become muddy.

Improper bathing—that is, bathing that is only a half portion of a cleansing—will cause the complexion to become muddy and yellow, just as improper and partial laundering will ruin a fine piece of linen.

Dinner Serving.

An Old Beauty Recipe.

An old beauty recipe reads: Take half a teacupful of fine oatmeal and gradually stir it into a pint of boiling water, using a double saucepan for the purpose to prevent any possibility of burning. Let boil till clear looking; then strain through a cloth, boil again and once more strain. To this add enough rose water to make it pour easily and about an ounce of glycerin. This may be perfumed in any way you like and is recommended to rub into the skin to prevent roughness. Bottle and shake well before using.

Retail Merchants Had Good Meeting.

ABLE AND INTERESTING ADDRESS BY MR. JAMES EADIE, EASTERN ORGANIZER.

The retail merchants met last night in the Council Chamber, when Mr. James Eadiw, Eastern organizer of The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, was present and addressed the meeting.

Mr. A. L. Geen, president, occupied the chair. The chairman, in introducing the organizer, said that the association had been making great strides, its growth was marvellous, and there seemed to be great enthusiasm. They were now a great power and a great force, and were united from ocean to ocean.

Mr. Eadie said the Retail Merchants were a live association. During the past year, in this Province, they had exactly doubled their membership, and also doubled the number of their branches. In Ontario they had nearly 130 branches, with a membership of about 9,000, and during this last year they had united with them the Northwest provinces, also Quebec province, with offices in Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg. The storekeepers in the Dominion carried on their shelves no less than $150,000,000 worth of stock. They were the largest taxpayers, their property being in the most valuable part of the towns. Every class of people were organized. This was an age of organization, and it was necessary for the merchants to be in the van of progress. The merchants of to-day had to be up-to-date. They all had many troubles in business. He said there was a strong feeling amongst manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, to get closer and work together. The object of the merchants was not to increase the prices of goods, but that all merchants might be in a better position to protect themselves, and secure proper legislation He referred to the benefits the merchants were likely to receive from the new business tax, as being more equitable, and also to the work of the association as regards trading stamps, coupons and premiums, which were now illegal, through the passing last year of a Bill through the Dominion House. The organizer said that the merchants owed Mr. Porter, M. P. for West Hastings, their thanks for the able assistance given to them on that occasion They were meantime busy with a Pedlars', Hawkers and Transient Traders' bill. It was grossly unfair that merchants should stock their stores, pay large rents, taxes, light and gas, and others be permitted to go from house to house selling goods. He give illustrations of the big prices the people paid pedlars, and the inferior articles they supplied. However, they demanded legislation as regard these. Mr. Eadie also referred to the large quantity of goods coming into every town, from the large departmental stores, and said they did not give employment to any people in, neither did they pay any municipal taxes to these towns, and he maintained people could buy just as cheap from the stores in their own towns and the towns would be all the richer, because the money would be kept in circulation in their midst. They had also a small Bill in before Parliament dealing with small debts. They desired that merchants should be able to proceed against debtors in a much easier and less expensive form, than at present. He also touched on the weights and measures inspection fee, and thought it ought to be abolished. Cheaper railway travelling for the merchants was also advocated, and he complained that the merchants were paying cartage at both ends, and also that, owing to the large amount of Fire insurance, arrangements were being made with the insurance companies to get cheaper rates. They had also been having one of the largest and best Pure Food shows in Toronto for the last three weeks with demonstrations and Government lectures on pure food, which was educative and protective to the public. In closing he referred to the price contract plan, which he stated was to be the plan of the future, between the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer, and the merchants were very favorable to it.

Mr. Eadie, was, on motion of Mr. Clark, druggist, unanimously thanked for his able address, after which the meeting adjourned.

Patrick Lawlor to Be Brought Here.

High County Constable Duffin left to-day for Toronto, with the necessary papers to bring Patrick Lawlor to this city. Lawlor was yesterday, at Toronto, acquitted of complicity with burglaries which occurred recently in that city, but he is believed to be one of the gang which burglarized the post office and a store at Shannonville. There are some parties in the city who claim to be able to identify Lawlor as having been in the city and vicinity at about the time the places were burglarized.

Latest News of the Horror At San Francisco.

FIRE WILL MAKE A CLEAN SWEEP AS FAR AS GOLDEN GATE PARK.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

San Francisco, April 20. — The main fire has reached Octavia street and is going at a fast rate.

At midnight it had started fresh on the south end of the line of fire and was burning fast.

The fire will make a clean sweep as far as Golden Gate Park.

A FEARFUL SCENE.

The ferry buildings present a fearful scene of men, women and children, and the few articles they have tried to save.

They are all here to leave the city by the first boat they can get away on. The roads leading from the ferry north and around the shore of the bay as far as Port Eason are strewn with all sorts of vehicles that have broken down. Baby carriages, wheelbarrows, etc., that would not stand the loads over the roadway have been abandoned, and in some cases with their loads.

San Francisco, April 20.—The report that the famous Cliff House has toppled into the sea cannot be verified and is probably untrue. In the confusion it is impossible to get to the place.

EARTHQUAKE AT HONOLULU.

Cleveland, O., April 20.—Brown & Co., brokers, have received a despatch saying there has been an earthquake at Honolulu.

The shock lasted six minutes, the report says, and but little damage was done.

DAMAGE AT STANFORD UNIVERSITY.

San Francisco, April 20.—A signed statement has been issued by President Jordan, of Leland Stanford University, says that only two lives were lost in the quake there, but great damage was caused to the buildings. The damage will approximate four million dollars. The books, collections and apparatus are not greatly damaged.

SITUATION IS BRIGHTER.

New York, April 20.— A Western Union bulletin, timed 9.45, San Francisco time, states that the flames are yielding to the persistent efforts of the firemen.

It is now thought that the section of the city north of Market St. and west of a point at Octavia and Market Sts., on an irregular line to Nannesse roadway, may be saved.

AID FROM OREGON.

Portland, Oregon, April 20. —The Southern Pacific last night started a special train of 25 cars for San Francisco, carrying 10 physicians, 20 trained nurses and 9,000 pounds of provisions. Twenty-six cars more will start to-day.

Belleville People In San Francisco.

NO WORD HAS BEEN RECEIVED FROM THEM YET, BUT STRONG HOPES ARE ENTERTAINED OF THEIR SAFETY.

A number in this city who have relatives and friends in San Francisco are naturally anxious as to their safety. Owing to the fact that what telegraph lines are in operation there have so far refused private messages, it is impossible at present to communicate with those in San Francisco

One young lady, well known in the city, who was in San Francisco when the disaster occurred is Miss Ethel Mackie, who was cashier in the St. Francis Hotel. This building was not destroyed by the earthquake, but subsequently fell a prey to the flames.

Mr. D. T. Rutledge and wife, with their son and family, were also residents of Frisco, and a report that word had been received from them was erroneous.

Mrs. W. J. Watkin, of this city, has a daughter who resided near San Francisco, if not inside its limits.

Mr. J. B. Wright, a former resident of Prince Edward County, and an uncle of Mr. S. Bongard, of this city, was a merchant in San Francisco, conducting business on Main street.

Mr. James G. Chown, elder brother of Mr W. W. Chown, of this city, is (or was) a resident of San Francisco, being proprietor of the Hotel Greystone, 66 Geary St. Mr. James G. Chown went to San Francisco in 1876, but came home on a visit about five years ago. Mr. W. W. Chown has, so far, received no word from his brother, but is naturally very anxious to do so. Mr. James G. Chown's hotel is in all probability destroyed by the fire which swept over the stricken city.

In reply to a question this afternoon, the managers of both the telegraph offices here stated that no private messages of any kind from San Francisco or any points around it, had been received here since the earthquake. This should settle the question of messages having been received from people in the stricken city It is to be regretted that people will allow their imagination to run riot in such grave matters as this.

FRISCO FIRE MAY WIPE THEM OUT.

INSURANCE COMPANIES CANNOT STAND THIS GREAT BLOW.

Montreal, April 19.—Grave concern is expressed by the managers of the various fire insurance companies businesses in Canada as to the result of the San Francisco disaster. They are nearly all here at the annual meeting of the Underwriters' association. The opinion is generally expressed by them that most all the larger companies will be seriously affected, while some of the smaller ones will be entirely wiped out.

"It looks as though this would be a harder blow to the insurance world than even the Baltimore fire," said Secretary Hadrill, of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, this morning. "We have not any great details yet, but from such advices as we have received it is evident that the loss will run into hundreds of millions. Practically all the large companies doing business in Canada are also doing business in the States, and by the either direct or re-insurance will certainly in many instances be heavily affected by the disaster. While last year was an unusually good one for insurance companies generally, there is not the slightest doubt that the heavy losses in this San Francisco affair will put a stop to any idea of reducing rates. I don't think it will stiffen them, but there will be no reduction now."

This view was concurred in by a group of insurance men who were present.

Says the Disaster Was Long Expected.

Madison, Wis., April 19. — President Charles R. Van Hise, of the University of Wisconsin, one of the best known geologists in the country, formerly of the United States Geological Survey, says a disaster at San Francisco has long been expected by scientists. In a signed statement he saus;

"Scientists have known for many years that San Francisco is dangerously located and would probably sooner or later be subject to severe shocks.

"The fear has been repeatedly expressed that San Francisco would be the first to show the effect of an earthquake upon steel structures, for it has been well understood that San Francisco has the most dangerous location with reference to earthquakes of any large city in the United States."

Mr. Fargey's Funeral.

The remains of the late Mr. Peter Fargey, of Thurlow, were to-day taken to West Huntingdon for interment. Services at the family residence, 2nd concession of Thurlow, were conducted by the Rev. A. H. Notes From the Docks.

There is considerable activity about the docks just now, despite the fact that the prospects at present are not bright for a good season for a certain class of vessels. This is owing to the fact that the coal strike is on and there will not be much doing for a while in this branch of shipping.

The schooners Clara and New Dominion are also laden with ice, which will be taken to U. S. ports. They will sail within a few days.

The steamer Aletha was the first steamer to arrive here this season.

The work of fitting out the Government dredge Sir Richard and the scows is still going on. Considerable repairs have been made.

The schooner Two Brothers left to-day for Fair Haven, with a load of ice.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"FABIO ROMANI."

"Fabio Romani" that forever romantic success, and the apex in the remarkably brilliant literary career of that gifted authoress, Marie Corelli, will be the attraction at the Carman to-morrow night. Seldom, if ever, has a dramatized novel reached anything approaching the wonderful and lasting success accorded this romantic masterpiece. A complete and magnificent scenic outfit is carried, the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius being described as a most remarkable effect in modern stage craft. A splendid company of players are employed in the cast, including that admirable romantic actor, Mr. John B. Arthur.

"THE CONVICT'S DAUGHTER."

One of the most novel, interesting and mirth-producing plays which it has been Belleville theatre-goers' good fortune to witness will be the popular and successful melodrama, "The Convict's Daughter," the great mechanical, electrical and scenic masterpiece, endowed this year with many new and surprising features, which will be the attraction at the Carman on Wednesday next, April 25th. The plot is too well know to call for detailed description, and at this time it is sufficient to say that the startling realistic scenes, the introduction of side-splitting comedy, and the beautiful stage settings are all that the modern theatre-goer could reasonably wish for. The cast is large and composed entirely of competent people, which, taken all in all, makes this production one of the strongest ever seen here.

Moved to Toronto,

A despatch from Brantford in giving an account of the closing meeting of a month's campaign in that city by the Revs. Crossley and Hunter, states that Mr. Hunter announced that on the first of May they would move from St. Thomas to Toronto, as they found it would be more central for their work. They have resided in St .Thomas for eighteen years.

THE SCILLY ISLANDS.

They Have but Three Seasons—Spring, Summer and Autumn.

The climate of the Scilly islands is the most equable in Great Britain. It ranges on an average from 40 degrees to 60 degrees. On the coldest day it is warm and on the hottest it is cool. There are only three seasons in Scilly of four months each—spring, summer and autumn. When the autumn ends spring commences. There is no great height in the islands. The highest land in Bryher is only 133 feet above sea level, although the telegraph tower built on St. Mary's reaches a height of 158 feet, but the rock scenery of the entire group of these islands is remarkable. There are rocks fantastic, jagged, peaked, toothed, serrated; rocks resembling living creatures and others suggestive of primeval vastness and uncouthness; some grandly castleated, others

Like a great lion's cheek teeth.

Those on the peninsula of Penninis, especially if they are seen in mist, Menawar (pronounced man-of-war), the Maiden Bower, Mincario, Shipman's Head, the Haycocks at Annet and many others are strikingly grand. The curious resemblance to primeval animal forms has given rise to many of the names of these rocks and certainly many are

Like a great sea beast, crawled forth to sun itself, while there are "elephants' tusks," "monks' cowls," "pipers' holes," "giants' castles," "pulpit rocks," etc.—London Spectator.

HAIR AND COLOR.

Red Is Much Nearer Allied to Black Than to Blond.

The color of the hair, says the Grand Magazine, is usually transmitted from parents to child. This is especially true when both parents have the same complexion. Instances, however, are not uncommon where children have hair black as ebony, while the hair of both parents is a burning red. Instead of disproving the theory that a child takes after its parents, so far as the color of the hair is concerned, this fact, it has now been ascertained, is all in favor of the doctrine. Red hair, in fact, is by its structure and composition much nearer to black hair than to blond.

Very often if the hair of a very dark complexioned person be examined attentively a few quite red hairs will be detected in the mass. On the other hand, it would be time wasted to seek for black hairs in the locks of a fair person. Similarly it is not infrequent to notice children whose hair, red at birth, becomes as they grow older quite dark. When, too, after some serious illness, the production of the coloring pigment of the hair falls off, black hair becomes not blond, but red. Fair hair, which to a casual eye appears to have much more affinity to red hair than to black, is, on the contrary, quite distinct.

Valued Religious Relics.

The collection of religious relics to be seen in the church of the Corsican village of Sisco is undoubtedly unique. The inhabitants of this pretty little place are exceedingly devout and very simple, which probably accounts for the possession of such a remarkable collection. A writer in L'Independence Belge gives the following list of the principal items: The horn used by Moses to call together the children of Israel while in the desert, a tuft of that red hair which was the pride of Esau and the despair of Jacob, a piece of the nail of the little toe of the left foot—the statement is very precise—of Enoch, the patriarch; the bib worn by the infant Jesus, the curb and crupper of the ass that took the holy family into Egypt and several relics of various saints.

Two Laymen Have Been Popes.

The canon law does not prescribe that the pope must be a cardinal or even a cleric. Nevertheless since the election of Urban VI. in 1378 the successful candidates have belonged to the members of the sacred college, although as late as 1758 a noncardinal was voted for several times. At least two laymen—John XIX. (1024) and Adrian V. (1276)—have occupied the papal throne, and there is today nothing to prevent laymen from being created cardinals, although they are not entitled to vote in the conclave unless they can produce a special permit from the late pope.

The Freaks of Fate.

Here is a unique memorial notice from a Georgia exchange:

"Once he was nearly swallowed by an earthquake and shortly afterward was blown nearly a quarter of a mile by a hurricane, but he triumphed over all these afflictions, only to be kicked out of life by a mule that had a mortgage on it and was blind in one eye."

McINTOSH BROS.

BY SATURDAY SAN FRANCISCO WILL BE ASH HEAP

Southern Pacific Hospital, the San Francisco Hospital, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Buildings were blown up all around them.

Chinatown, at noon yesterday, was a furnace, and the denizens of that quarter earlier in the day had their simple possessions bundled for departure. On the farther western side, the flames cut a wide path to Vanness avenue, but there, owing to the width of that thoroughfare, and to the additional fact that there was a weak water supply in the mains, it was hoped to check the ruin at this line.

Suffering From Thirst.

Yesterday was bright and warm. The sun beat down on the tired workers and rescuers. There is scarcely any water to relieve the thirst of the suffering. The dead, in many instances, are lying in the streets among the ruins.

The authorities are doing all in their power to remove the bodies in order that an epidemic may be prevented. It has been necessary repeatedly to move the injured from places where they sought refuge, where the fire kept increasing with alarming rapidity.

"Water!" is the incessant cry of the firemen and the people—one wants it to fight, the others to drink, but there is only a scant drinking supply.

A NATIONAL CALAMITY.

President Roosevelt Appeals to the Nation For Assistance.

Washington, April 20.—President Roosevelt yesterday issued a proclamation in which he said:

"In the face of so terrible and appalling a national calamity as that which has befallen San Francisco, the outpouring of the nation's aid should, as far as possible, be entrusted to the American Red Cross, the national organization best fitted to undertake such relief work.

"I appeal to the people of the United States, to all cities, all chambers of commerce, boards of trade, relief committees, and individuals, to express their sympathy and tender their aid by contributions to the American National Red Cross. They can be sent to Washington to be forwarded by telegraph from Washington to the Red Cross agents and officers in California.

$1,000,000 From Nation.

The Senate resolution appropriating $50,000 for the relief of the San Francisco earthquake sufferers was amended by the House committee on appropriations, the amount being increased to $1,000,000.

New York Responds.

New York, April 20.—Mayor McClellan last night issued a proclamation appointing a representative committee of relief, which will organize to-day.

The Pennsylvania and Erie Railways and Wells, Fargo & Co. have offered to ship supplies free of charge. The Western Union Telegraph Co. will handle all relief messages free.

Rockefeller's Gift.

Yesterday's big subscription list was headed by John D. Rockefeller with a contribution of $100,000. The United Railways Investment Co. subscribed $75,000; M. Guggenheim Sons contributed $50,000; the Carnegie Hero Fund and J P. Morgan Co. $25,000. The New York Exchange Brokers contributed $85,000, in addition to large individual subscriptions.

Generous Assistance.

San Francisco, April 20.—Hundreds of cities in the United States have appraised Mayor Schmitz that they are securing subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers from the earthquake and fire. Many cities are now rushing tons of supplies by train and boat to this city. Railroads generally have announced that they will carry relief supplies free. The committee of safety contributed $65,000 at once.

Mayor Schmitz has announced that the water company has promised a supply of water in the Mission section to-day.

A Toronto Contribution.

Toronto, April 20.—Commissioner Coombes for the Salvation Army in Toronto yesterday sent $150 to the general relief fund in San Francisco.

An Ottawa Grant

Ottawa, April 20.—The municipality, on motion of Ald. Grant, has wired $100 to the City of San Francisco.

EARTHQUAKE IN INDIANA.

Miners Suffer From Earth's Tremors—There Was One Fatality.

Calumet, Mich., April 20.—An earthquake shock, which was felt distinctly throughout Hancock, Ind., was most pronounced in the Quincy mine, killing Timothy Leary and injured four others while working one mile below the earth's surface in that property yesterday. In numerous instances buildings rocked, chimneys fell and dishes rattled, terrifying the citizens. Many miners on the day shift refused to go below again.

OTHER PLACES AFFECTED.

Santa Rosa in Ruins—10,000 Homeless Men, Women and Children Watch Destruction of Their Homes.

San Francisco, April 20, via Oakland.—Reports from the interior are most alarming. Santa Rosa, one of the prettiest cities of the State, in the prosperous County of Sonoma, is a total wreck. There are 10,000 homeless men, women and children huddled together. The loss of life is not to be estimated. It will probably reach the thousands. The citizens deserted their homes. Not even their household goods were taken. They made for the fields and hills to watch the destruction of one of the most beautiful cities of the west.

Many Other Places Destroyed.

Messengers bring the saddest tidings of the destruction of Healdsburg, Geiserville, Cloverdale, Nopland and Ukiah. This report takes in the country as far north as Mendocino and Lake Counties and as far west as the Pacific Ocean. In every case the loss of life and property is as shocking as here.

Town of Gilroy in Ruins.

Gilroy, Cal., April 20.—The little town of Gilroy is in ruins as a result of the earthquake. Practically every building of importance in the city was seriously damaged or utterly ruined by the shock. As far as known no lives were lost.

Brawley Wiped Out.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 20.—Reports from Brawley, a small town on the Southern Pacific, 120 miles south of Los Angeles, state that the town was practically wiped out by the earthquake of Wednesday. This is the only town in Southern California known to have suffered from the shock. So far as known there were no fatalities. Brawley is about two years old, and had a population of about 500.

ONTARIO'S SYMPATHY.

Legislature Sends Resolution of Sympathy to San Francisco.

Toronto, April 20.—Moved by Hon. Premier Whitney, seconded by Hon. G. W. Ross, that the warm and earnest sympathy of this House be tendered to the people of San Francisco, and other localities in California in the terrible visitation which they have suffered and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the Clerk of the House to the Mayor of San Francisco.—Resolution adopted by Ontario Legislature on Thursday.

CAN'T HANDLE MESSAGES.

Telegraph Companies Will Take Them Only at Sender's Risk.

The C. P. R. and G. N. W. Telegraph Companies, together with American telegraphic concerns, have decided to only accept messages for San Francisco at the sender's risk. The uncertainties of the messages going through and the scarcity of wires demand this. Word comes that there are over 3,000 telegrams awaiting despatch from San Francisco to points east.

A Canadian Among Dead.

Toronto, April 20.—Dr. J. S. Stinson, who is one of the dead, was a native of Brantford, Ont., where his parents, R. C. and Mrs. Stinson, at present live, as well as a brother, H. C. Stinson, the well-known horseman. Dr. Stinson was 35 years of age. He graduated as silver medalist from Trinity about 14 years ago. He practiced in Hamilton for a time and went to San Francisco in 1895.

Mrs. Kenny, wife of James Kenny, managing director of the Western Fire Insurance Co., and their daughter, were staying in San Francisco with Dr. Stinson Mr. Kenny as received no word.

MURDER WITH AN AXE.

Aged Maniac Farm Hand Kills His Working Comrade.

Lindsay, April 20.—An insane man's sudden frenzy of anger has resulted in a murder near Kirkfield.

Two men named Miller and Dillon were in the employ of a farmer named John McNulty, who lives about four miles north of the village. At an early hour Wednesday morning McNulty gave the men directions to cut wood near the house. He then went to the barn to feed his cattle, and when he returned to the house later he found Dillon, who showed him the dead body of Miller, who had a terrible wound in his chest, caused by an axe, lying on the ground.

"Why did you do it?" asked the horrified farmer of Dillon, but the latter, who appeared dazed and stupid, made no reply and walked into the house and laid down.

He was shortly afterwards arrested by a county constable on the information of McNulty.

The only motive that can be assigned for this terrible crime is anger on the part of Dillon, who thought that Miller intended to get him out of his job

It was but a short time ago that Dillon was brought before a magistrate on a charge of insanity, but, owing to the lack of evidence necessary to commit him to an asylum, he was liberated. Dillon is a man of about 50 years of age.

FATALITIES AT COBOURG.

Collapse of Framework Kills One Man, Badly Injures Second.

Cobourg, April 20.—The body of Jas. Kearns was found in the creek running about a mile back of the town yesterday. He was a man about seventy years of age. It is supposed Kearns slipped off the culvert.

While removing the frame of the Cobourg rink last evening, a serious accident occurred, which resulted in the death of one man and perhaps fatal injury to another. Edward Terry and Norman Purser were engaged in pulling a rope fastened to one of the girders, when the whole structure collapsed instantly killing Terry and breaking Purser's shoulder besides injuring him internally. Coroner Elliott has ordered an inquest.

Senator Lougheed to Lead.

Ottawa, April 20.—Senator Lougheed of Calgary has been chosen by his fellow Conservatives to succeed Sir Mackenzie Bowell as leader of the Opposition in the Senate.

Young Woman Found Dead.

Toronto, April 20.—Madge McNicholl, who came from near Galt, was found dead in her apartments, 118 Shuter street, yesterday at noon. She had been employed as a bookkeeper for the Singer Manufacturing Co., and had left there on Wednesday afternoon complaining of being ill. Coroner Orr is investigating.

Fire at Omemee.

Omemee, April 20.—The Bradburn House was discovered to be on fire yesterday morning at 4 o'clock. Inmates had to flee in their night clothes. Houses across the street were in danger, but the fire was confined to the hotel building. Loss $6,000; insured.

Too Loyal For That.

Buffalo, April 20.—Malcolm Allen, a Canadian, who applied for American naturalization here yesterday, declined to foreswear allegiance to King Edward and was rejected.

Drowned in Sewer Hole.

Petrolea, April 20.—The two-year-old son of John Hollingshead, Jr., was drowned by falling into an open sewer-hole yesterday.

THE UNGALLANT HOUSE

Denies Votes to Women in Parliamentary Elections.

Only Eight M. P. P.'s Voted For the Bill—Nurses' Bill Was Discussed and Took Up Considerable of the Time of the House—Will Be Considered Again and Likely to Be Amended.

Toronto, April 20.—Once again was the familiar bill of Mr. Smith (Peel) to give widows and spinsters qualified to vote in municipal elections the right to vote in Parliamentary contests, given its quietus in the Legislature yesterday, being snowed under on division. After some debate, the vote was taken. It was defeated by 66 to 8. The ayes were Auld, Hislop, Smith (Peel), Thompson (Wentworth), Currie, McMullen, Racine, McDougall.

The competition of prison labor with free labor was discussed on Mr. Hanna's motion to ratify contracts with E. C. Taylor for the manufacture of woodenware at the Central Prison.

Hon. Mr. Willoughby, in moving, as chairman of the special committee that dealt with the nurses' bill, that the graduate bill be held over as some important bodies had asked to be heard drew some words of criticism from Mr. Crawford and Mr. Gamey. In reply to these dissentient members, the Premier said there should be no delay, but that Dr. Willoughby was to be commended for wishing to allow other bodies to be heard. The bill was held over to hear the deputations.

At six o'clock Premier Whitney moved, seconded by Mr. Ross, the sympathy of the Legislature for the people of San Francisco.

Mr. Graham asked the Attorney-General if a promise had been given to President Phillips of the York Loan that he would not be prosecuted if certain assets were handed over.

Mr. Foy said negotiations had been in progress and the department had promised that if restitution were made due consideration would be given, but no promise of immunity had been given.

Third Readings.

The following bills were read a third time:

Respecting the Town of Galt (Pattinson); respecting the Sao Paulo Tramway Co. (Crawford).

Hon. Dr. Reaume withdrew his bill respecting colonization roads. It would be remembered next year, he said.

Principle Accepted.

At the evening session the nurses' bill was again taken up. Mr. Harcourt desired to know the intention of the House.

After some further discussion, the Premier said it was the intention of the Government to allow the bill to go through if it was the wish of the House. He did not see why the committee could not rise and report progress, and then it could be decided later to send it back to the special committee. Since he had come into the House he had been handed a list of objections to the bill.

Finally, on the suggestions of Mr. Harcourt, the committee accepted clause one of the bill and then rose. This ensures further consideration at a later period.

RESTITUTION.

Phillips Turns Over $106,000 to York Loan Co. Liquidators—Committed For Trial—Out on Bail.

Toronto, April 20.—Within two minutes after Joseph Phillips signed an order turning over $50,000 in stock in the Toronto Life to the liquidators of the York Loan, he was committed to trial by Magistrate Denison.

Later in the evening he was allowed bail under two sureties of $2,500 each furnished by Andrew M. Hobberlin and John Hudson and himself in $5,000.

Among the shares turned over to the liquidators were those held in the names of Burt, the Hudsons, Joan McCann and Mrs. Sauter. It leaves the Hudson girls with only sixty shares of Toronto Life stock in their possession. These were actually purchased with cash. Burt also turned in the amount of the overwriting commission given him by Phillips and invested in Toronto Life stock.

Another of the turnovers made by Phillips were The National Monthly, and The Canadian Monthly. The Liszt Piano Co. has been in the hands of the liquidators for the past week.

The value of the Toronto Life stock is placed at $50,000, The National Monthly, $6,500, and the Liszt Piano Co. $50,000, making a total of $106,000 turned over by Phillips for the benefit of the shareholders in the York Loan.

Phillips was photographed and the Bertillion measurements taken.

Magistrate R. E. Kingsford was present at the jail last night when Phillips was allowed out under bonds to appear on May 8, when the sessions begin, or whenever called upon.

Went on a Drunk With $1,700.

Detroit, April 20.—Robert J. Tilley, a young farmer from Essex, Ont., reported at police headquarters yesterday that he was robbed Wednesday night of seventeen hundred dollars cash, the proceeds of the sale of his farm Wednesday. Tilley says he went on a "drunk" with a man he knew and a man he didn't know.

Long Terms For Safe Blowers.

Toronto, April 20.—The safe-blowers which, for upwards of two years have menaced Toronto and Canada were sentenced yesterday. The magistrate considered that Bennett was the leader of the gang and sent him down for ten years. James Hunter and John Crosby were sent down for eight years each.

Another Circus Man Dead.

New York, April 20.—William H. Gardner, a show man and associate for many years of the late James A. Bailey, died of pneumonia yesterday. Mr. Gardner was the son of the famous old circus clown, Dan Gardner.

Fatal Fall.

Checked at Last Fire Under Control

One Quarter of San Francisco May Have Been Saved.

Mayor Schmitz and His Assistants Are Bending Every Effort to Avert Famine and Suffering From the 200,000 People Camped in Golden Gate Park—To This End They Smash in Stores and Seize Supplies—Law-Breakers Shot.

"To the citizens of San Francisco: The fire is now under control and all danger is passed. The only fear is that other fires may start should the people build fires in their stoves, and I therefore warn all citizens not to build fires in their homes until the chimneys have been inspected and repaired properly. All citizens are urged to discontinuance the building of fires. I congratulate the citizens of San Francisco upon the fortitude they have displayed and I urge upon you the necessity of aiding the authorities in the work of relieving the destitute and suffering. For the relief of those persons who are encamped in the various sections of the city, everything possible is being done. In Golden Gate Park, where there are approximately 200,000 homeless persons, relief stations have been established. The Spring Valley Water Co. has informed me that the mission district will be supplied with water this afternoon, between 10 and 12 million gallons daily being available. Lake Merceed will be taken by the federal troops."

City Will Be Restored.

Mayor Schmitz sent a telegram to President Roosevelt, saying:

"General contributions of $1,000,000 from the Federal Government for relief of the destitute persons received and deeply appreciated. The people overwhelmed by your generosity. All of this money will be used for relief purposes. Property owners determined to rebuild as soon as fire ceases. City will immediately proceed to provide capital for the purpose of reconstructing public buildings, schools, jails, the hospitals, sewers and salt and fresh water systems. The people hope that the Federal Government will at once provide ample appropriations to rebuild all Federal buildings on a scale befitting the new San Francisco. We are determined to restore to the nation its chief port on the Pacific."

To Avert Famine.

The grave question is: "How soon will an adequately supply of food arrive from outside points to avert famine and destitution? There is little food in San Francisco outside of what little each person possesses, and this cannot last more than a few days. San Francisco geographically is an isolated city. Its nearest neighbor on the south is Los Angeles, 500 miles away. To the north is Portland, nearly 800 miles distant, and its nearest sister in the great east is Salt Lake City, 1,000 miles away. These cities and all of the less populated nearer towns are making sacrifices for the destitute here, but it is to the big cities of the nation that San Francisco looks with anxiety for relief."

Mayor Schmitz looked weary yesterday, but was energetically at work at his desk, though he had had little or no sleep. A policeman reported that two grocery stores in the neighborhood were closed, although the clerks were present. "Smash the stores open," ordered the mayor, "and guard them."

Seizing Supplies.

The seizure of supplies coming in on the trains by the relief committee has been authorized by the mayor. The relief committee yesterday seized a carload of flour containing 810 sacks. A carload of ice also was seized for the hospitals. A carload of potatoes also was taken.

Livermore sent in a wagon load of butter yesterday. Winters also has notified the committee that there is a carload of hams, butter and eggs on its way here from that locality. Other cities are sending supplies. At present the supply stations is emptied as fast as goods are received.

Sixty carloads of provisions, clothing and other supplies for the San Francisco sufferers left Los Angeles yesterday and last night. Supplies are piled high at Fort Depots, people bringing offerings in endless procession. The Santa Fe Railroad sent a trainload of provisions with instructions to take on additional carloads of supplies along the way to San Francisco.

Quarter of City Saved.

At 2 p. m. it was positively stated that the fire was under control with the probability that one-quarter of the city lying west of Franklin street and known as the western addition, northward to the Presidio, will be saved. The stand made at Vanness avenue generally was successful, the flames crossing that avenue to the west in only a few places. Two men were shot and killed yesterday morning. Policeman Flood, on entering his home, encountered a stranger, who attacked him. Flood shot him dead.

Killing Law-Breakers.

Special Policeman Snyder killed a man, but the details are not known.

Fourteen men were killed Thursday night by soldiers guarding the mint, and Policeman Jos. M. Myers was bayonetted by a national guardsman over a dispute as to authority. The men at the mint were killed for attempting robbery.

Recovering the Dead.

From a three-storey lodging house at 50th and Minna street, which collapsed Wednesday morning, more than 75 bodies were taken out yesterday. There are 50 other dead bodies in sight in the ruins. This building was one of the first to take fire on 50th street. At least 100 persons were killed in the Cosmopolitan on 49th street.

Many persons dropped dead yesterday of heat and suffocation.

More than 150 persons are reported dead in the Brunswick Hotel, 7th and Mission streets.

Citizens Forced to Dig Graves.

Portsmouth square yesterday became for a time a public morgue. Twenty or thirty corpses were laid upon the trodden grass in the absence of more suitable accommodations. Out at the Presidio soldiers pressed into service all men who came near and forced them to aid in burying the dead. So thick were the corpses piled up that they were becoming a menace, and early in the day the order was issued to bury them at any cost. The soldiers were needed for other work, so, at the point of rifles, the citizens were compelled to take to the work of burying. Some objected at first, but the troops stood no trifling, and every man who came in reach was forced to work at least one hour. Rich men, unused to physical exertion, labored by the side of working men, digging trenches in which to bury the dead.

A Miraculous Escape.

Eleven postal clerks, all alive, were taken from the debris of the postoffice yesterday. All at first were thought to be dead, but it was found that although they were buried among the stones every one was alive. They had been for three days without food or water. All the mail was saved.

Why So Much Mystery About This "Trading Company?"

It came out a year or two ago that the Laurier Government were paying five dollars per head on immigrants coming from European slums, while one dollar and seventy-five cents was the limit given in assistance for the better class of immigrants from the Mother Country. Why this was done was a matter of serious inquiry. The bonus system as thus applied seemed to be on a wrong basis. If there was any class more worthy than another to be encouraged by this form of help to settle in Canada, it was thought the men and women of England, Ireland and Scotland belonged to it. Yet they were discriminated against to the extent described, the people picked up anywhere among the dregs of continental Europe, were given the preference. It was impossible, says a contemporary, that such a system should go on without the reason being explained to the taxpayers of Canada who paid the bonus.

The question being asked in Parliament last session it was explained in general and distant terms that the North Atlantic Trading Co. had the contract on that basis, and the Government had to bow to their terms. But who are in this company, that are not known apart from the immigration contract? This is the question to which the Committee of Agriculture in Parliament has been trying in vain. Mr. J. A. Smart, the former Deputy Minister of Interior, who left the department to engage with a land company in the Northwest, which had had some extensive dealings with the department, was called to throw light on the subject. It was in his regime that the contract was made. But Mr. Smart has steadily and persistently declined to answer any question bearing on the identity of the North Atlantic Trading Company. That is a governmental mystery to which Parliament and the country are denied a clue.

The company in question in three years prior to June 30, 1904, was paid $194,340 by the Dominion Government for directing immigrants to Canada, at $5 per head. The account of the corporation, as paid last year, is in the following terms:

"North Atlantic Trading Company—Bonuses, three years to June 30, 1904, 32,055 settlers, at £1; advertising—six months to Dec. 31, 1901, $1,216.66; 2 1-2 years to June 30, 1904, at $3,650; exchange of remittances, $63.66; advances on account of bonuses and literature, $25,014 00. Total, $194,340.98."

The contract, it seems, is for ten years. The payments for the year 1905 were on a much larger scale than prior to June 30, 1904. It is a most pertinent inquiry, who compose the company. They have no vessels, and apparently no other business than is implied in this contract with the Government.

Mr. Smart, who must know all about the matter, refuses to reveal the name of any one connected with the North Atlantic Trading Company. In this position he is sustained by the Liberals on the committee. The Conservatives wished his answer, or rather his refusal to give an answer, reported to the House of Commons. But the proposal was voted down by 33 to 22. Subsequently, Mr. Smart stated that he did not know who the directors were, or who composed the company that has been drawing such large sums from the Government.

Under the contract the company is bound to spend $15,000 yearly on advertising, but the accounts shows that in three years prior to June 30, 1904, the company got $25,014 of advances "on account of bonuses and literature," outside of the $5 per head bonus, so it looks as though its advertising bill came as an extra allowance.

Is the inquiry to stop here? Is there no process known to Parliament whereby the public can get to the heart of the mystery?

Mr. Vandewater is Ill In Peterborough.

The Peterboro Examiner has this piece of news in connection with Mr. Maurice Vanderwater, who sang in two of our city churches last Sunday: "Mr. Maurice Vanderwater, of the staff of the Conservatory of Music, was taken to the Nicholls Hospital this morning, ill. It is feared that he may have to face an attack of typhoid fever, the symptoms seeming to point to that disease."

The case of that young lad Nelson, who, at the Picton Assizes, was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to four years in Kingston penitentiary, the penalty being inflicted for recklessness in the use of a rifle, shows plainly that something cannot be done too soon to prohibit the use of firearms by minors. In this case one person is dead and another goes to penitentiary. It was not even charged that there was intent to kill or even do bodily injury. It was the result of pure recklessness. The sentence should be a warning to all lads who have access to firearms.

THE PROFESSION OF FAITH.
(Catholic Register.)

Some few weeks ago we challenged an abjuration which, it was claimed by the Star and the News, had been made by the Princess Ena on the occasion of her reception into the church. We were right. A friend wrote to the bishop who had received the royal convert. In his answer His Lordship says: "The Princess made no such abjuration; she simply made the profession of faith contained in the Creed of Pius IV." It remains for these journals to correct their misleading, calumniating and bigotry-rousing statements. The bishop prudently remarks that papers printing such things do not want truth "their only aim is to throw mud at the Catholic church."

The friends of the forest may be gratified by the cessation of a great drain upon timber through the cessation of its use as crossties for railways. With an average of 2,800 to the mile, American roads consume 60,000,000 ties per annum. As the yield is two ties to the tree, 30,000,000 trees are consumed annually for this purpose. The average life of a wood tie is eight years. The steel tie is now coming into use. They weigh thirteen to the ton, and cost $2 apiece. But their life is twenty-five years, so that in the end they cost no more than a wood tie that has to be relaid three times in that period. To replace wood with steel on American railways would require 60,000,000 tons of steel, without counting in the electric cable, and elevated horse street roads of the country.

"One Interested" writes: A meeting of all baseball lovers of the city is called for Tuesday night next at 8 o'clock, in the parlors of the Y.M.C.A. It is to be hoped a large number of enthusiasts will attend, so as to determine whether we will have a Belleville team or not this season. We have plenty of material in the city, and no doubt during the Wednesday afternoon holidays we could have plenty of exciting baseball games, not only with local teams, but with outside teams as well. Let everybody who can attend this meeting.

A Life Insurance Company may be judged by what it DOES NOT DO as well as by what it DOES DO. As illustrating the things which the management of does NOT do, attention is invited to the following:

(1) This Company does NOT write foreign business: it does NOT seek business outside British North America and Newfoundland.

(2) It does NOT invest in stocks or in foreign securities of any kind; all its securities are legitimate, first class and productive.

(3) It does NOT deal in Real Estate and does NOT own palatial branch office buildings.

Unsolicited Testimony.

Here is the unsolicited testimony of Mrs. C. A. Martin, of Granville, N.Y., concerning Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women. We have her consent to publish her letter. It reads as follows:

I feel that I should tell you what wonders Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets have done for me. I had been running down, getting thin in flesh, and losing appetite for the past year, and though doctor's advice was sought and different remedies were used, there seemed to be no improvement. At length a friend who had received great benefit from Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets, advised me to try this remedy. I did so. In less than a week I began to see good effects. My appetite returned, my nerves began to get steady, my aches and pains began to leave me. I commenced to take on flesh, and I felt that I was being rapidly restored to health. At this moment I feel I am a new woman.

We want you to notice that the above letter proves our claims for Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets in two particulars.

First, that they will restore health after other remedies and even physicians have failed. Mrs. Martin had tried both.

Second, that improvement begins at once. Mrs. Martin saw good effects within a week.

If you are suffering from a run-down condition, or any weakness peculiar to your sex, you, too, can be made well and strong by these tablets.

Take them one week and note the improvement in your feelings and general health.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets Make Healthy Women.

Alleged "Hold Up" Story Viewed With Suspicion

Between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock last night a police officer heard cries for help coming from a gangway on Front street. He investigated and found a man named W. Tofts, who alleged he had been set upon by four men who attempted to rob him. A companion named Jos. Ryan was with Tofts. As both were under the influence of liquor they were locked up. This morning they were both allowed to go. There was, it is alleged, nothing in Tofts' story that he had been "held up," as whatever valuables he owned were found upon him.

IT IS FOR LADIES, TOO.

They Can Stop Their Hair Falling Out With Herpicide.

Ladies who have thin hair and whose hair is falling out, can prevent the hair falling out, and thicken the growth, with Newbro's Herpicide. Besides, Herpicide is one of the most agreeable hair dressings there is. Herpicide kills the dandruff germ that eats the hair off at the root. After the germ is destroyed, the root will shoot up, and the hair grow long as ever. Even a sample will convince any lady that Newbro's Herpicide is an indispensable toilet requisite. It contains no oil or grease. it will not stain or dye. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Meeting of Officers of the 49th Regiment.

The annual meeting of the officers of the 49th Regiment, Hastings Rifles, was held in Marmora on Good Friday, and was in point of attendance and interest one of the best meetings ever held. Lt.-Col. J. R. Orr, of Madoc, presided.

There were present;

Major J. W. Arnott, of Trenton; Surgeon-Major Dr. H. H. Alger, of Stirling, and Major-Paymaster Thos. McKee, of Stirling; Capt. A. Bywater, and Lt. W. B. Ostrom, of No. 6 Co., Trenton; Capt. W. G. Ketcheson, of Wallbridge; and Lt. J. A. Nugent, Frankford, of No. 3 Co.; Lts. G. Hawley and Fred G. Ketcheson, Belleville, of No. 1 Co.; Capt. C. M. Wallbridge, Madoc, of No. 4 Co.; Capt. D. Green and Lt. W. L. Howson, Stirling, of No. 2 Co.; Capt. W. H. Ketcheson, Belleville, of No. 4 Co.; Lts. Dr. J. MacLean, Bancroft, and Jas. Spurr, L'Amable, of No. 7 Co.; Lts. A. M. Louttit and H. Wiggins, Marmora, of No. 8 Co.

The usual committees were appointed, preparations made for camp and other routine business transacted.

At ten o'clock in the evening business was brought to a close and a banquet was held at Hotel Royal. Besides the officers there were the following guests; Dr. Mackechnie, J. W. Pearce, M.P.P., and Rendol Snell, of Marmora, and J. A. Lomb, of Cordova.

After a very enjoyable feast, Col. Orr proposed the toasts and a couple of hours passed pleasantly by in speech-making and songs.

The officers expressed a good deal of pleasure with their meeting in Marmora and the Marmora guests were fully as enthusiastic in their expressions of pleasure on having the officers meet here.

Next meeting will be held at Trenton.

The York County Loan

HOW MATTERS STAND AT PRESENT IN CONNECTION WITH MR. JOSEPH PHILLIPS, EX-PRESIDENT OF THE DEFUNCT COMPANY.

Toronto, April 20.—Attaining his liberty for the first time in three weeks, the menace of civil and criminal prosecution gone, and himself retained at unnamed compensation by the liquidators to assist them—such in brief is the position of Joseph Phillips this morning. This change in his state was made at the expense of his relinquishing shares valued at about $65,000 in the Toronto Life, and inducing his former employes and associates in business to take a similar step.

A close friend of Phillips to-day cast some light on the process of the negotiations which were at one point almost finally dropped by both parties

Just before Phillips was briefly committed for trial yesterday afternoon, he signed over his shares in the Toronto Life to the liquidators. The rest of the holders of Toronto Life stock against whom the interim injunctions had been secured had agreed formerly to take this step.

The action tends to rehabilitate the assets of the Toronto Life Company, in which it is said policies at the rate of $500 a week were lapsing. It gives a better value, not only to the shares turned over, but to $28,000 worth of the stock owned outright by the York Loan Company.

All the shares of Toronto Life Insurance Company stock in dispute have been handed over, and the pending actions will, therefore, be discontinued immediately. The parties interested, Messrs. Phillips and Burt, the Misses Hudson, Joan McCann and Mrs. Souter, have, in all, handed over about 1,500 shares of stock, upon which the sum of, approximately, $50,000 has been paid. The principal parties have also released all their claims against the York County Loan & Savings Company and allied companies, and a transfer to the liquidator has been agreed upon of the assets of the National Monthly and Canadian Home, and securities for the sum of $6,500 have also been made over to the liquidator. As a part of the arrangement the Liszt Piano Company has for some days been in the hands of the liquidators. The assets of this company are estimated as being worth in the neighborhood of $50,000.

About three minutes' time was consumed by Magistrate Denison in committing Phillips for trial. When this was done J. E. Jones, his counsel, hurried off to ask Judge Winchester for bail. Meantime Phillips had been taken back to jail, so that when the judge concluded to allow bail Sergeant Duncan sent special officers to the jail, who conveyed Phillips to his home at 190 Wright avenue. There Magistrate Kingsford finished the formalities, taking two sureties of $2,500 each, the bondsmen being John W. Hudson and A. M. Hebberlin.

It is understood that the Crown Attorney, in agreeing to a settlement of the case, has the sanction of the Attorney-General in the matter. Mr. Curry has written to the Attorney-General stating that the settlement is satisfactory to himself and requesting the Attorney-General to consider whether the ends of justice have not been sufficiently served by the restitution. He points out that the money turned over represents the bulk of that alleged to be wrongfully taken from shareholders.

The assets thus secured include all the stock traceable to Phillips, valued at $65,000. The Misses Hudson retained between them 60 shares purchased with their own money. E. J. Burt turned over a lump sum in cash in settlement of the claim the liquidators have against the property on Yonge street, alleged to have been purchased from proceeds of over-riding commissions on York Loan and Liszt Piano business.

In answer to a question by Mr. Graham, member for Brockville, Hon Mr Foy stated yesterday in the House that due consideration would be given as to the future course to be pursued with regard to Phillips.

The project of restitution originated with the counsel for Phillips, J. E. Jones. When the latter first broached the subject to Phillips the latter was very indignant and practically accused Mr. Jones of attempting to betray his interests. When asked about the case this morning, Mr. Jones said;

"If I have acted wisely in permitting the accused to take the course he did, subsequent events will no doubt show, and nothing that I can say for newspaper publication can be of any service to my client, and would only be derogatory to the dignity of my profession. Whatever course others may pursue, I am unalterably opposed to display by newspapers items prompted by counsel in pending cases.'

"The Attorney-General can be relied upon by us all to live up to the high ideals of the chief executive of the criminal department of this province without any interference by counsel for accused, and whatever his ultimate decision may be, we may all rest assured that he will do what he thinks not only just to the accused, but in the best interests of the community. The public has entirely lost sight of the fact that the accused has never yet had an opportunity of vindicating his position upon the full evidence being adduced and proper explanations made, and the matter is one entirely for the civil and not for the criminal courts."

A close friend of Phillips, who has followed the course of the proceedings from day to day, made the following statement this morning:

"I am told that the hitch in the negotiations was caused not by Phillips and his counsel, but by the Crown Attorney. The latter entered into the spirit of the settlement, and then when he was practically sure that the negotiations would not fall through, he stated that in addition to giving up his possessions Phillips would get seven years in jail

"When this was told Phillips the latter was indignant, and said, 'He is mistaken if he thinks I am fool enough to turn over all my money and be branded as a criminal also, I will fight.'

"When the Crown Attorney made known his attitude to Mr. Jones, the latter told him in effect 'to go to blazes' and continue the prosecution.'

Phillips has been given the use of his home, rent free, by the liquidators until October.

In the Legislature yesterday, in answer to Mr. Graham, of Brockville, who called the attention of the Attorney-General to the fact that newspaper comment seemed to be in the direction of allowing Joseph Phillips, the defaulting manager of the York County Loan, to go free if certain moneys were turned over to the liquidators, Hon. J. J. Foy said his department had been communicated with. Negotiations had been entered into by the legal representatives in the case whereby they sought to have Phillips turn over certain moneys held by him to the liquidators of the York Loan Company. All that he, as Attorney-General, was able to say was that if Phillips made complete restitution the fact would doubtless be considered. He had made no promise and had held out no encouragement. that the department would in any way interfere on Phillips' behalf.

It is better to be bald and rich than it is to be bald without being rich.

THERE are many kinds of flour sold. Some are made from spring wheat and some from winter wheat.

What you ought to know is which wheat makes the best flour, and why.

Winter wheat is put into the ground in the fall, grows a few inches, then gives up to the snow. When the snow melts it grows again, ripening in July. It matures slowly, is soft and very starchy.

Spring wheat is sown in late April or early May, and ripens in August. It matures rapidly and is therefore strong. It's a flinty, translucent wheat, rich in gluten and containing nearly twice as much real nutriment as the winter wheat.

Royal Household Flour

is made entirely from the hard, nutritious spring wheat, carefully selected from all the wheat of this kind grown in Canada.

Royal Household is fine, light and pure—milled by the most improved methods——in a mill as cleanly as your own kitchen.

Ask your grocer for Ogilvie's Royal Household—just enough to try. He may charge you a few cents more than you are used to paying, but you will forget that when you see the results in your bread and pastry.

THE BAD LITTLE BOY.

(Detroit Free Press.)

The bad little boy has fallen asleep:
Oh, a bad little boy was he!
His toys he has carelessly thrown in a heap—
He was naughty as naughty could be,
He disobeyed mother and ran out to play
On the street with the other bad boys,
Worn out and weary at close of the day
He has fallen asleep with his toys

The bad little boy wouldn't do as she told,
For he has a will of his own;
And the room where he plays is a sight to behold,
The room she shut him alone.
"If you don't be good, I'll tell papa," said she,
As she left him and shut fast the door,
"Tell him!" the bad little boy said, and he Kicked his toys all over the floor.

So I went in to punish the bad little boy,
For a bad little boy was he;
But somehow I thought how I used to annoy
When I was as bad as could be.
And I thought of the many times mother had said
She would tell of my obstinate way
And how she'd forgive me and take me to bed
When I fell asleep at my play.

And I knew that that bad little boy was like me,
With his temper and obstinate tricks;
As he slept there I thought that's how I used to be
When I was a youngster of six.
So I took up the bad little boy in my arms
And carried him up to his rest;
And I thought that of all life's wonderful charms
A bad little boy is the best.

A considerable portion of the postmen of France are on strike for the eight-hour day and a recognition of their union. The Government is standing out stiffly against the demand and was sustained by a vote of 166 to 86 in the Chamber of Deputies. The army is being used to prevent the crippling of the postal service, and there is not much chance for the effort of the striking postmen to succeed under such circumstances.

Adirondack.

The word "Adirondack" comes to us from the language of the Mohawks. With them it was Ha-de-ron-dack and meant wood eaters. This term was applied in derision to a few members of a once powerful branch of the Algonquins, who were defeated by the Iroquois and forced to seek refuge in a fastness of the mountains. They were in great distress, and it is said they sent messengers to their victors asking them to make no further war upon them, as they were reduced to the necessity of eating roots and the bark of trees. A few of them finally escaped to the north, and others were captured and held in slavery by the Mohawks.

Dress Economy.

I never realized how well a woman can dress with a small income till I made the acquaintance of one with a streak of practical economy in her makeup. Being a careful person, she wears her clothing slowly, but each season, with the aid of a seamstress and a first class fashion magazine, she makes slight changes in all her clothing, only enough to give them up to date touches. Whatever new garments she needs are purchased with an eye to future usefulness as well as present fashions. And she is always beautifully attired. I happen to know that she spends very little money.—Woman Correspondent in Minneapolis Tribune.

A SWINDLE AND A FRAUD

Hon. G. E. Foster So Denounces North Atlantic Trading Co.

Declares It to Be a Siftonian "Houseless, Homeless, Headless Monstrosity"—Got $5 a Head For Every Person "Who Arrived In Canada" From An Aggregate Population of 240,000,000—Hon. Mr. Oliver Announces Notice of Cancellation of Contract.

Ottawa, April 21.—In the House yesterday Mr. McIntyre (South Perth) addressed the House on the general issue involved in the salary grab, and he was followed by Mr. Miller (South Grey).

Mr. Borden thought the discussion was premature. He was anxious to have the bills introduced by Mr. Maclean (South York), and Mr. Wilson (Lennox and Addington) put to their second reading. He urged that the matter be taken up next week.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he regretted that private members had not deferred to the Government's undoubted right to deal with this question. Public opinion would justify the fullest possible discussion at an early date.

At the evening session Mr. Galliher (Kootenay) resumed the debate upon the second reading of Mr. Fitzpatrick's bill concerning the payment of his indemnity to a member prevented from attending sessions of the House through illness. He urged that a per diem of $15 be paid to members in traveling to and from the capital. Mr. Fitzpatrick thought that a per diem of $8 should be sufficient.

That Trading Company.

Upon motion to go into supply, Hon. Geo. E. Foster brought up the subject of the North Atlantic Trading Co.

"This transaction," he said, "bears every birth mark of a Siftonian child. The defiance of Parliament; the contempt of the Cabinet; the lavish extravagance which accompanied it, were truly Siftonian. In 1899 Mr. Smart (the deputy minister), a true Siftonian, visited in London W. T. R. Preston, another Siftonian. They hatched and formed this conspiracy."

Mr. Foster then read the correspondence between the company and Mr. Preston. It provided for bonusing immigrants, and was to run for five years. Mr. Preston stated that he was acting by the direction and under the authority of Mr. Sifton, the then Minister of the Interior.

This contract was kept a secret from Parliament, and from the Cabinet until May 31, 1902. At that time Mr. Sifton applied to the Governor-in-Council and obtained authority to make a second contract, binding the Government of Canada. This contract was dated back to January of that year. It provided for a bonus of $5 per head upon all immigrants of the agricultural or domestic servant class from various countries named, comprising about all of Europe, excepting France and Italy. This contract was to run until Jan. 1, 1912, but terminable upon two years notice. On Nov. 24, 1904, the contract was extended so as to run until Jan. 1, 1915."

Easy Money.

None of these negotiations or agreements were brought to the attention of Parliament, although, said Mr. Foster, they filched from the public treasury more than a million dollars. The bonus is paid upon each and every person "who arrived in Canada" from any one of the countries named. It was immaterial what the company did or did not do towards suggesting or inducing this immigration. For every immigrant from these countries with an aggregate population of 240,000,000 people, the trading company levied a toll of five dollars per head. Last year this company drew $88,000.

"This contract was made for this Government by Mr. Smart, deputy minister of the interior. Is it any wonder that the contract favored the company when we find this same deputy minister to-day the manager of the company?"

He declared the company to be a swindle and a fraud from A to Z. "It is a houseless, homeless, headless monstrosity."

Mr. Oliver In Defence.

Hon. Mr. Oliver, Minister of the Interior, deprecated Mr. Foster's attack upon Mr. Sifton. "He is not in his seat," said Mr. Oliver.

"He never is," shouted several members, amid general applause and laughter.

The Minister defended the general policy of immigration, pursued by the Liberal Government. He claimed that since 1882, there had been bonuses paid for immigrants at so much a head. The contract with the North Atlantic Trading Co. only followed an established policy.

In reply to an enquiry from Mr. Borden, the Minister stated that he had not the faintest idea who composed the North Atlantic Co. He neither knew nor cared who composed it. He charged that many members of the Opposition held stock in the C. P. R., and many others were dabbling daily in C. P. R. at the ticker, although their votes in the House were quite important to that corporation, and affected the value of stock

Amid cheers from the Opposition, Mr. Oliver, at last admitted that the Government had given notice to the North Atlantic Trading Co. that the contract must be cancelled. A cable was sent to that effect on the 14th inst.

Canada Evidence Act.

In committee the House discussed amendments to the Canada Evidence Act. The bill as drafted by the Minister of Justice disqualifies either husband or wife from testifying for their own in criminal cases. Mr. Borden thought such witnesses should be competent, but not compellable. Mr. MacDonald (Picton) supported Mr. Borden. The bill was reported.

The House restored the annual traveling allowances of $500 to the district judges of Ontario.

Not What Was Ordered.

Ottawa, April 21.—At the commission appointed to investigate the fallen tower yesterday morning, Mr. Ewart, chief architect, testified that the work was not carried out in accordance with specifications. The inside and outside walls were not properly bonded.

that I need fear no more for the present—at least from the captain.

"Very well," said I.

"I am glad you agree with me," he remarked. "It is a saving of dignity."

I said no more, but whipped up the horse and left him, with a mocking bow, which he returned gravely, and the last I saw of him was his bulky form leaning upon the gun and assiduously following me with his dull and fishy eyes.

I put up the horse at the Swan and hurried to the station, barely in time to catch the London train. I took my ticket hastily and, rushing down the platform, cast about me precipitately for a first class carriage. The guard had retired to the back part of the train and stood impatiently, flag in hand. I came upon two compartments of the class I wished and gave a hurried glance into each. The one appeared empty, but the other already contained two or three travelers. This latter, however, was labeled "Smoking," and for a second or two I wavered in the balance until a sharp "Now, then, sir!" from the guard finally whipped up my decision. I opened the door of the smoking carriage, but as I did so a man rudely stumbled against me, and I fell against the next compartment, the door of which had just been opened by a third person. In the flurry of the moment I merely remember getting back my clutch upon the handle, and the next instant I was in the smoking carriage, somewhat hot and angry. Out of the window by which I sat I saw in the tail of my eye the two men stepping swiftly into the next compartment, and something vaguely troubled my senses.

I settled into the cushions as the train drew out of the station and looked about at my companions. Then my mind returned to the landscape, which was now passing pretty swiftly. It struck me in a flash what was exercising my mind. A squint—that was it! Mrs. Main had described the intruder of the morning as a man with a "squint—funny-like." And the man who had got into the next carriage was a man with a squint. The coincidence was only remarkable because I was in a veritable net of suspicion. And when I examined the particulars it was his companion who had jostled me—I might, to be thoroughly suspicious, say shoved me. Why had I been shoved? Perhaps it was an accident, and the two men had no relation to each other, nor the second man with the squint to Mrs. Main's friend. But, on the other hand, that shove came near sending me through the open doorway of the next carriage, and but for my own obstinacy I might now be seated in the seclusion of that carriage with my two neighbors in an express that did not stop for forty miles.

At Paddington I took a cab. I could see the man with the squint nowhere, and I looked for him pretty sharply. His companion's face I had not seen, and should not, of course, recognize again. It was quite possible that they had been passengers to an intermediate station only, in which case, as I conceived, I had been using my imagination in vain. It was by this time a little after 6, and, as the dead season had fully set in, the streets in the west end were bare of carriages, but a concourse of people still streamed along the pavements—the tide of life ran, to all appearance, as populous as ever. When I reached my chambers in the Temple I made a more suitable toilet for the town, and, that completed, found my watch stood at 7:30. The night was rapidly descending, and already the elms in the gardens of the court were enveloped in the somber shadows of evening. As I stood peering out of the window I was struck roughly into another mood by the apparition of a face on the pavement below. It came suddenly into the lamplight and vanished in the next instant, but I had recognized that horrid squint in the flash. I drew away sharply and considered. I will confess the discovery chagrined me and set the pulses throbbing in my body. There could be no doubt that the fellow had tracked me here and was watching for me to come out. Here again was the hand of my unscrupulous enemy, striking at me 300 miles away and in the heart of London. But I must needs come to a determination promptly. I saw at once that my plans must be relaid. These men were after the piece of parchment I had in my pocket. I began to feel desperate. I felt the pocketbook under my hand. I certainly could not think of leaving it, as I had intended, in my rooms, for if I knew anything of these gentry I should return to find the place rifled. There was little they would stick at, as I had had proof. I made up my mind to try for Sheppard. It was possible that he was in town, and in any case I would not leave the document off my person. In the meantime I was feeling extremely hungry and was resolved to make a meal. It was certain the scoundrels would not assail me in the open.

I recognized that horrid squint.

I scrutinized the court as I came out, but naturally the spies were not likely to show themselves. Then I drove to the Cafe Royal and enjoyed an excellent dinner. From where I sat in the dining room I had a view through an open door of the great hall beyond, in which the representatives of a dozen nationalities drank and chattered and played their dominos. Halfway through my meal I looked up, and there was my friend unobtrusively sipping a glass of vermuth right opposite the doorway. It was plain that I was followed still, as I had suspected would be the case. To lose sight of me on the chance that I had bestowed what they wanted in my rooms was not a piece of their policy. I suppose the room would keep. I had a good view of the fellow, and as I leisurely drank my wine I watched him. Clearly I was to have an adventure for my pains, and the first thing was to run Sheppard to earth.

When I got out into the street I was conscious that the man was behind me, and, turning quickly, I confronted him. My action was so abrupt that it took him by surprise, but he took off his hat politely and with a "Pardon, sir!" in a slightly foreign accent, avoided the collision that had been imminent. I jumped into a cab and drove straight to Sheppard's rooms in Down street. As luck would have it, he was out, but it was a relief to find that he was in town. According to the maid, he was to be back in the morning. In considerable disappointment I ran down the stairs and banged the front door, and there was my man across the roadway.

I confess that I began for the first time to have the feeling of being hunted. I strode over to him.

"What the devil do you want?" I asked angrily.

"Sir!" said he and looked up at me as if in surprise.

"What the devil do you want?" I repeated.

There was a slight pause, and with my hand in my pocket I ostentatiously cocked the revolver. The faint click caught his ear.

"I am desirous to walk about the street, sir," he said softly. "I have made up my mind to see London by night. It is var' beautiful."

"Very well," thought I, for it was plainly of no use to deal with the rascal. "You may walk as much as you like. I am for a cab."

And into a cab again I jumped. "Drive—west—anywhere," said I at last to the questioning cabman. "I'll direct you."

I had this dilemma now before me—that I dared not go back to my rooms. The risk was too extravagant. And the question as to where I was to pass the night became important, as it was now past 11. Of course I could go to a hotel, where I should be comparatively safe, but I had no fancy to spend the long hours of darkness awake and on my guard on the chance that this scoundrel would make an attempt on my room. No. I must be rid of him first. As the cab drove off I peeped through the little window at the back and saw my squinting friend in conversation with another man, no doubt the second of the gang.

The cab passed through Knightsbridge and toward Kensington, and then I turned the driver through the park for Bayswater. Presently I was aware of a rattling behind and looking out through my spy hole again perceived a second cab close upon us.

"Very well," said I to myself. "You shall have your wish. A stern chase is a long chase."

I fancy my cabman must have thought me near upon a lunatic. I chopped and changed his directions a dozen times, and during the next two hours we visited quite half of the metropolis.

You will doubtless dub me a fool in that I didn't forthwith take the shelter of the law and put myself under safe custody. But I had two reasons against that—the one, that I had a sort of informal bargain with Sercombe not to bring the authorities into this feud, but to fight out a private war; the other, that I would see these scoundrels in the infernal regions before I surrendered to them. And when you come to think of it, to call in the police for help in the distinctly illegal job which occupied me would hardly be in taste. So there was nothing for it but the road, and the road it was for the next two hours and more. By that time my cab horse, a fine upstanding chestnut, had fairly run himself down, and so I hoped had my pursuers' cab. But of this I could not be certain, and, in any case, it was not their object to provoke an open fracas. As I imagined, they merely sought to run me to earth somewhere. And it was obvious by now that I could not drive about in cabs all night.

Somewhere between 1 and 2 I found myself again in Kensington, or, rather, in that region of respectable, desolate and gloomy houses lying about Gloucester road. The chase had to end somehow. We drove up a road dimly lighted and narrow. I suppose my cabman must have been almost as weary as I, and probably more sleepy. At any rate, I had ceased to guide him for some time. He had taken the initiative himself, constituting himself, I conceive, the guardian of this harmless lunatic. At all events, it was soon plain that we had entered a cul-de-sac. The situation pricked my resolution to the proper point of action. As it fell out, a flare of gas streamed from the fan lights in a large and commodious house near the bottom of the road, seeming to show that the inmates had not yet retired, and, acting on my resolution in a second, I stopped the man and jumped out before the door. As I did so the second cab also came to a pause. My cab turned slowly round and stopped abreast of his fellow. I would swear I saw the two figures alight. God knows what the cabmen made of it all. I pulled at the bell, but for a time could get no answer. But at last, and in response to a louder peal than usual, the door was opened, and there confronted me a tall, slight man something near my own age in evening dress.

"Who the devil may you be?" says he, surveying me from top to toe with a puzzled look.

"Sir," said I, "this is no place upon your doorstep to explain to you. But I am in immediate need of a kindly hand, and if you will have the goodness to bear with me and allow me two minutes in your private room I make no doubt that I can satisfy you."

"Faith," said he, smiling rather foolishly, "if it is a hand you want, you must needs look for one steadier than mine."

And, true enough, there he was swaying somewhat unsteadily upon his legs and presenting me a face flushed with the use of liquor. But this was no moment for parleying, and I pressed my point promptly.

"Then, pray, let me shut the door for you," said I, stepping in forthwith. And without more ado I closed the great door with a bang.

He led the way docilely enough into a neighboring room and, turning up the gas, faced me. "This is all very well," says he more soberly. "But I have still to learn who the devil you may be."

"My name, sir, is immaterial," I replied. "But it is your services I want in a certain crisis, and if you be a gentleman, as I see you are, I shall have no doubt of the issue."

He stared at me for some moments in silence. "Pray state your case," he said politely and sticking the stump of a cigar in his mouth, but supporting himself upon the table.

"You ask me my name?" I answered. "Well, there is no concealment I would practice on you, and so it is Greatorex, for what use you may care to make of it."

"Mine's Winthorp," he explained—"Lord Winthorp. You may have heard of me recently—corespondent in divorce case, you know."

"The situation is easily settled," said I. "I have something of value upon me, and I have been chased by two rascals in a cab. The light was burning in your house, and so I took the liberty of ask'ng your assistance to evade them."

"Gentlemen," said he, "here is another guest."

"Quite right," says the young fool, taking the cigar from his mouth, "quite right. Stolen goods?" he asked comically.

"My lord," said I, with a smile, "if it were, do you think a thief like myself would confess it?"

He broke out laughing and without any more ado beckoned me to follow and walked in his uncertain gait across the hall and toward a farther room, from which issued a great noise of talk and laughter. Flinging the door open, he strode in.

"Gentlemen," said he, "here is another guest to join us. Pray charge your glasses."

CHILDHOOD'S PERILS

The so-called soothing medicines contain poisonous opiates that deaden and stupify, but never cure the little ailments of childhood. Baby's Own Tablets are guaranteed to contain no opiate, they act on the stomach and bowels and thus remove the cause of nearly all the ills that afflict little ones. In this way they bring natural, healthy sleep, and the child wakes up bright and well. Mrs. A. Weeks, Vernon, B.C., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets and can cheerfully say that I have found them all you claim for them." These Tablets are good for children of all ages from birth onward. JESUS THE SINNERS' FRIEND—GOLDEN TEXT IS; "THY FAITH HATH SAVED THEE; GO IN PEACE."

HISTORICAL SETTING.

Time—Summer of A.D. 28.

Place—In some town of Galilee, perhaps Capernaum.

John the Baptist in prison at Macherus.

Jesus in the midst of the Second Year of His ministry.

The message of John the Baptist (Luke 7: 18-35). The report of the resurrection miracle at Nain, and of Christ's other miracles in Galilee, spreading to Judea and Perea, reached John the Baptist in his prison at Castle Macherus, beyond the Jordan. John's reproof of Herod's crimes had brought his imprisonment upon him, and now the great prophet was evidently discouraged. His life seemed a failure. Still in his prime, he faced death, and the quiet teacher to whom he had pointed as the Messiah, with his handful of humble followers, seemed so different from the mighty conqueror who was to subdue all things to himself! But the news of the great miracles aroused new hope, and John sent to Jesus two of his faithful disciples, asking, "Art thou he that cometh, or look we for another?" Christ's answer was to continue before them preaching the gospel and working many miracles of healing.

Christ did not upbraid John, but when the messengers had departed he praised him as the greatest of men; adding, however, that the least man who enjoyed the full light and privileges of the kingdom of God, which was then being preached was greater than he.

Continuing, Christ contrasted John's ministry, severe and ascetic, with his own, "eating and drinking, a friend of publicans and sinners." And yet with neither of them were the scribes and Pharisees pleased. This saying leads Luke to relate a conspicuous instance of the Lord's friendship for sinners—our present lesson.

TWO TYPES OF SINNERS.

First type—Simon the Pharisee.

36. And one of the Pharisees, Simon by name. He was probably one of the better class of Pharisees, partially open to conviction, and yet showing the taint of Phariseeism by refusing to honor Jesus publicly with the rites accorded illustrious guests, and by despising utterly the poor woman who was a sinner.

Illustration. Simon's attitude is well illustrated by a story told in the Bustan of the famous Persian poet, Saadi. "Jesus, while on earth, was once entertained in the cell of a dervish, or monk, of eminent reputation for sanctity. In the same city dwelt a youth sunk in every sin, 'whose heart was so black that Satan himself shrank from it in horror.' This last presently appeared before the cell of the monk, and, as if smitten by the very presence of the divine prophet, began to lament deeply the sin and misery of his past life, and, shedding abundant tears, to implore pardon and grace. The monk indignantly interrupted him, demanded how he dared to appear in his presence and in that of God's holy prophet; assured him that for him it was in vain to seek forgiveness, and to prove how inexorably he considered his lot was fixed for hell, exclaimed, 'My God, grant me but one thing—that I may stand far from this man on the judgment day.' On this Jesus spoke: 'It shall be even so; the prayer of both is granted. This sinner has sought mercy and grace, and has not sought them in vain. His sins are forgiven; his place shall be in paradise at the last day. But this monk has prayed that he may never stand near this sinner. His prayer, too, is granted; hell shall be his place; for there this sinner shall never come.'"

Desired him. Was asking. The tense implies that the request was repeated. And he went. Jesus was like the sunlight, glad to go wherever he might carry light and purification, and no more receiving defilement from such a course than the sun's rays do. Even so Christ's disciples may go safely wherever they go in his spirit of helpfulness. And sat down to meat. Rather, reclined at table.

Second Type.—The Woman That Was a Sinner.

37. Behold. Her presence created surprise. A woman in the city. Probably Capernaum; perhaps Nain or Magdala. Which was a sinner. A notorious character, as the Greek implies. When she knew that Jesus sat at meat. Her presence there is explained by the Oriental custom of strangers passing in and out of a house during a meal to see and converse with the guests. In the Pharisee's house. A formidable place for one like her to go to; but what will love not dare?

TWO WAYS OF TREATING JESUS

First—The Woman's Way. 37. Brought an alabaster box. Flask. Of ointment. The ointment with which Mary of Bethlehem anointed Jesus' feet was worth 300 pence, Roman silver denarii, worth 15 to 17 cents each, or $50. Equivalent to $300 in our day.

38. And stood at his feet weeping. In gratitude and penitence. Began to wash his feet with tears. Before she can open the cruse her heart opens, and tears rain down so abundantly as to wet his feet, inflicting an indignity when she had meant an honor.

And did wipe them with the hairs of her head. With a touch, she looses the hair, which it was shameful to let down in public, and, with the ingenuity and abasement of love, makes it a towel. And kissed his feet. She rained kisses upon them. The tense of this and the following verbs shows that the actions were continued and repeated, as though she could not desist.

And anointed them with the ointment. This was the one act she had come of set purpose to do; all the rest was done impulsively under the rush of feeling.

Second—The Pharisee's Way. Contrast it with the woman's way of treating Jesus. 44. I entered into thine house. As an invited guest, to whom the host should have shown at least the common courtesies. Thou gavest me no water for my feet. In Palestine "every one on coming in takes off his sandals or slippers and leaves them at the door, socks or stockings being unknown. Servants stand behind the couches, and placing a wide, shallow basin on the ground, pour water over it on the feet of the guests. To omit this courtesy would be to imply that the visitor was one of very inferior rank.

45. Thou gavest me no kiss. To receive a guest at the present day without kissing him on either cheek as he enters, is a marked sign of contempt, or at least a claim to a much higher social position.

46. My head with oil thou didst anoint. This also was an ordinary token of respect.

A MIRROR FOR TWO SOULS.

39. The Pharisee . . . spake within himself. Not daring to utter his thought aloud, but very likely proclaiming it in his sneering countenance. This man, if he were a prophet. The Pharisee could not understand how Jesus could perceive the woman's character and yet allow her to defile him with a touch.

40. Jesus answering the unspoken thought, and so proving his prophetic insight. I have somewhat to say unto thee. The Greek emphasizes "to thee." Master. Greek, "teacher"; so we say schoolmaster.

The parable that follows sprung from the common life of the people, who were rever lending and borrowing.

41. There was a certain creditor. Rather, money-lender. Which had two debtors. The creditor is Christ, the two debtors are Simon and the woman. The one owed five hundred pence. A denarius then was the day's wages of a laborer, so that this sum equalled in our money at least $500. The other fifty. One-tenth as much. "The former sum represents the enormous amount of sins to which this sinful woman pleaded guilty, and which Jesus had pardoned; the latter, the few infractions of the law for which the Pharisee reproached himself."

42. And when they had nothing to pay. And told the creditor so, is implied. He frankly forgave them both. As readily the large debt as the small; thus the ocean of God's love covers a mountain as easily as a molehill. Which of them will love him most? Not of necessity, but probably.

43. I suppose the air of languid indifference with which Simon gave his judgment, as if the case supposed were too insignificant to awaken any interest in his mind, shows that he had no thought of its having a reference to himself. He, to whom he forgave most. Not because he had sinned most—in that case sin would be an advantage, which it never is—but because he was most conscious of his debt and most relieved at pardon from it.

TWIN GRACES AND BLESSINGS.

Jesus courteously refrains from making direct application of the parable to Simon, leaving that to the Pharisee's conscience; but he applies it boldly to the woman.

47. Wherefore. Because her actions prove her true repentance. Her sins, which are many, are forgiven, as you may see from the evident fact that she loved much, and has been proving this love by the deeds you have witnessed, while you, Simon, to whom little is forgiven, show this by loving and honoring me little.

48 Thy sins are forgiven. Christ has been talking with Simon, and in large, philosophic terms which the woman might not understand. He would send her away with the comfort of this plain, direct assurance.

49. Who is this that forgiveth sins? Notice that Christ, so quick to answer Simon's evil thought of the woman, pays no attention to this evil thought of himself, as if he were a blasphemer.

50 The woman had exhibited two beautiful graces, humility and love. She possessed two great blessings, faith and peace. Thy faith hath saved thee. This saying is an indirect answer to the cavil of v. 49. Go in peace. She was saved not only from the past, from her sin and its penalty, but for the future, for a life of peace.

THE HEART OF THE LESSON.

1. Christ wants and deserves our very best. Not only the first fruits of our earthly goods, but the best of our thoughts, the freshest strength of our days, the choicest of our words, a generous share of our time.

2 The condemnation of sinners carries with it the condemnation of ourselves. Nothing is more unchristianlike than scorn of one who has fallen

Illustration. There is a legend of a hard-hearted, selfish woman who, after death, went to the place of lost souls. A dear friend of hers died soon after, and, not finding her in heaven, after long petitioning gained permission to try to bring her up from hell. A radiant angel led her down, down, down into the blackness, until they came to the place of lost souls and found her friend. The woman gladly laid hold of the angel, who lifted her up easily, but many others, as many as twelve, laid hold of her and were lifted also, without difficulty. But the selfish woman feared that they would hold her back, so one by one she shook them off and got rid of the last one just as they reached the pearly gate. Then the angel let the selfish woman go, and with a terrible cry she sank back into hell. If she had brought only one with her, she might have entered heaven.

3. Christ has forgiveness ready for all kinds of sinners. He was as willing to forgive the Pharisee his pride as the woman her impurity.

Illustration. A little child asked his mother if he could say what he liked to God. "Yes," said she. Then he prayed; "Dear God, love me when I'm naughty." That is precisely the prayer that God likes best to hear, and to answer.

4. Christ wants us to show our love to him. There is no better way of showing it than to tell others about Christ and his love for them.

PROMPT CONNECTIONS.

There is one feature of the wonderful service over The Lake Shore Railway that particularly appeals to those who travel much. The schedule is so arranged that connections, where any are necessary, are made promptly and long waits and delays are avoided. This, taken in connection with the luxurious trains, perfect personal service, highest speed, safety and punctuality has made the Lake Shore the most popular line in America. Careful travellers see that their tickets read "Via Buffalo and the Lake Shore Railway." For full information concerning rates, routes and service address J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N.Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, Ohio, or W. J. Lynch, Passenger Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

When you are all done but finishing, you are just half done.

If you have time to boast about being worked to death, you have not much to do.

Some people are so unfortunate that their troubles make people laugh instead of cry.

A man who underestimates himself may be tiresome, but he is not a circumstance to the man who brags.

People may disdain a compliment, but they feel a tender little spot in them where it hit and refused to be dislodged.

It is a theory growing in conviction that the man who says a mean thing about another isn't as mean as the man who carries it.

The man who travels over the path behind you wisely looks at your footprints and sees where you could have avoided many a pitfall.

Wedding Bells.

HORTON—LATTA.

A pretty and fashionable home wedding took place in Plainfield at 7.30 o'clock Wednesday evening, at the residence of Mrs. Elizabeth Latta, when her eldest daughter, Miss Minnie Blanche, became the wife of Mr. German G. Horton, a prosperous young farmer of Thurlow. The guests being assembled in the drawing-room, the bride and groom entered to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. (Rev.) Buckler, the bride leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. J. W. Lloyd, and stood under an evergreen arch beautifully festooned with pink roses and white chrysanthemums. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Gilbert Horton, of Actinolite, uncle of the groom, assisted by the Rev. W. H Buckler, of Plainfield. The bride, who was one of Plainfield's most charming and popular young ladies, was attired in a dove-colored bengaline dress, beautifully trimmed with white chiffon pleating, and looked lovely with white chiffon and orange blossoms in her hair. After the solemn and impressive ceremony and the bridal party had received the hearty congratulations of their friends, the company sat down to a sumptuous tea, which was partaken of amid general rejoicing. The gifts to the bride were both numerous and beautiful, and testified to the high esteem in which she was held. The happy couple have the best wishes of all who know them.

RICH MEN HAD TO DIG GRAVES.

CORPSES PILED UP SO FAST IN 'FRISCO THAT EVERYBODY HAD TO ASSIST IN BURYING THEM.

San Francisco, April 20.—The Presidio soldiers pressed into service all men who came near and forced them to aid in burying the dead. So thick were the corpses piled up that they were becoming a menace, and early in the day the order was issued to bury them at any cost. The soldiers were needed for other work, so, at the point of rifles, the citizens were compelled to do the work of burying. Some objected at first, but the troops stood no trifling and every man who came in reach was forced to work at least one hour. Rich men, unused to physical exertion, labored by the side of working men, digging trenches in which to bury the dead. At the present writing many still remain unburied, and the soldiers are still pressing men into service.

Byles on Bills.

Among the humorous memories connected with English judges is one of Justice Byles and his horse. This eminent jurist was well known in his profession for his work on "Bills," and as this gave a fine opportunity for alliteration his associates were accustomed to bestow the name on the horse, which was but a sorry steed. "There goes Byles on Bills," they took pleasure in saying, and as the judge rode out every afternoon they indulged daily in their little joke. But the truth was that the horse had another name, known only to the master and his man, and when a too curious client inquired as to the judge's whereabouts he was told by the servant, with a clear conscience, that "master was out on Business."

Tangled Hair.

Hair that is badly tangled may be combed free without breaking or tearing it by first anointing with a liberal supply of olive oil. Comb slowly from the ends up to the scalp. Continue this treatment once a day for three days, and it will do dry, harsh hair a world of good.

Educational Contest Lists Destroyed By Fire

CONTEST EXTENDED TO July 31st, 1906

Messrs. Armour Limited, Toronto, regret to advise all who have so kindly forwarded lists of names as per the conditions of their Educational Contest, that their building, with its entire contents, was destroyed by fire on the evening of March 19th, and all records of lists they have received, as well as all lists, were destroyed, and we ask that all who had sent in lists previous to this time, mail us duplicates. No metal caps required with duplicate lists. To make up for time lost by the fire, and to give all competitors a fair and equal chance, we have consented to extend the Educational Contest until July 31st, 1906.

We offer $200.00 in gold to those sending in the largest lists of correct words made from the twelve different letters used in spelling the four words

Armour's Extract of Beef

$100.00 in gold will be given as the first prize.

$25.00 in gold will be given as the second prize.

$10.00 in gold will be given as the third prize.

$5.00 in gold will be given to each of the next five.

$2.00 will be given to each of the next twenty.

CONDITIONS

Use only the following 12 letters:—A-R-M-O-U-S E-X-T-C-F-B. No letter to appear in the same word twice.

Only such words may be used as are found in Webster's International Dictionary.

No proper names, foreign words or names of persons, towns or places are to be used.

Words spelled the same, but having different meanings, may be used but once.

All contestants must attach to their lists a metal cap taken from a jar of "Armour's Extract of Beef." Failure to do this puts the list out of competition.

The names of the winners of these prizes will be determined by judges whom we shall appoint.

Write only on one side of the paper. After making out your list, state the number of words it contains, with your full name and address at the top of each piece of paper and mark on the outside of the envelope "Educational Contest Department," and mail to our address as below.

Armour's Extract of Beef is sold by all druggists and grocers. If yours cannot or will not supply you, a small jar will be mailed you, post paid, on receipt of 25 cents in cash or stamps.

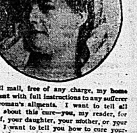
Free to You, My Sister

Free to You and Every Sister Woman Suffering from Woman's Ailments



I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand woman's sufferings. What we women know from experience we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhœa or Whitish Discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial, and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book "WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER," with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young.

To mothers or daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhœa, Green Sickness and painful or irregular menstruation in young ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality, who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address

GEORGE T. WOODLEY, OPPOSITE FOOTBRIDGE

CELEBRATED HIS SILVER JUBILEE.

W. H. HOLDEN, FORMERLY OF THIS CITY, DINED HIS FELLOW-EMPLOYES OF PARKE, DAVIS & CO.

(Detroit Free Press.)

W. H. Holden, superintendent of Parke, Davis & Co., gave a dinner on Wednesday evening at the Fellowcraft Club to fifty or sixty of his fellow-employees in celebration of the close of his twenty-fifth year of service in the house. It was distinctly a Parke, Davis evening and it was a great success. Mr. Holden was toasted liberally and reminiscences of bygone days kept the company together until a late hour.

Three handsome gifts were presented to Mr. Holden during the evening. On behalf of the host's many friends in the house, Frank G. Ryan, in a felicitous speech, gave him a gold watch as a token of regard. Mr. Whelan made the additional presentation of a pair of handsome umbrellas, one for Mr. Holden and the other for Mrs. Holden.

The speakers at the dinner were Frank G. Ryan, vice-president and secretary of Parke, Davis & Co.; George Hargreaves, treasurer; Leon C. Finck, assistant superintendent; James Wilkie, superintendent of the auxiliary departmentts: C. N. Anderson, head of the animal industry department; Charles M. Woodruff, of the legal department; A. J. Oostdyk, chief of the stock department; W. M. Grant, Canadian manager; W. F. Whelan, formerly of Belleville, until recently the manager of the British travellers; Thomas Donnelly, an old friend of Mr. Holden's, formerly of Belleville, and Joseph Helfman, secretary to the general manager.

Naturally enough, the tremendous growth which the plant of Parke, Davis & Co. has experienced in the twenty-five years of Mr. Holden's connection with the house was the theme of many of the speeches. A few of the statements were very interesting. For instance, the travelling force has grown from a dozen men to over 280. The total number of employees, while about 150 twenty-five years ago, is now a little over 2,500.

Six good-sized city blocks are occupied by the various laboratories and offices in Detroit, and, in addition there is a Canadian laboratory across the river in Walkerville, and a European laboratory in London. Ten branches are to be found in the United States and two in Canada, not to mention one each in England, Australia, India, Russia and Japan.

Ed. Note.—Mr. Holden spent his boyhood and youth in this city, residing with his grandfather, the late Merrick Sawyer, Esq., J.P. He married Miss Nellie Jones, youngest daughter of the late Nathan Jones, Esq. Mr. Holden has more than fulfilled the expectancy of many relatives and friends in Belleville, who will rejoice in the well deserved honors conferred on him.

Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, B.A., has been appointed Managing Director of the Belleville Business College. For ten years he has been a member of the faculty as instructor in Commercial Law, and is largely interested in the College. Mr. O'Flynn's co-operation in furthering the interests of Belleville Business College will result no doubt in greater success for that institution than has hitherto been obtained. bt

Aged and Respected Resident Passes Away.

S. M. HERRINGTON.

Mr Stillman M. Herrington, of this city, passed away during the night at the family residence, West Bridge street. For years the deceased had been in ill-health and for some months had been afflicted with blindness. Mr. Herrington was 75 years of age, having been born in Prince Edward County in the year 1831. He followed the occupation of a farmer until 1882, when he moved into the city and has since resided here. He was a man who was well known and liked in the community. Since his advent in the city deceased had been a member of Holloway St. Methodist church. In politics he was a Liberal. Mrs. Herrington died some ten years ago. The surviving members of the family are two sons, Walter S., who is a K.C., of Napanee, and Dr. Charles, of San Francisco, and one daughter, Miss Norah, at home. The remains will be taken to Albury, P. E. Co., for interment.

THE ALPINE CLUB.

Rod and Gun in Canada Made the Official Organ.

The Free Press of Winnipeg says that at the meeting of the Alpine Club of Canada held in that city a few days ago, and at which there were delegates from all parts of Canada, as far east as Halifax and as far west as Vancouver, Rod and Gun in Canada, the pioneer sportsman and tourist magazine, published at Woodstock, Ont., by W. J. Taylor, was made the official organ of the club.

FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late Stillman Herrington will take place from his late residence, Bridge St west, on Monday, the 23rd inst., at 2 p.m., to Albury cemetery. Services at 1.30 p.m. Please omit flowers.

THAT BURGLARY IN SHANNONVILLE

OTHER PRISONERS BESIDES LAWLOR MAY BE TRIED FOR CONNECTION WITH IT.

Toronto, April 20.—Patrick Lawlor was again remanded in the Police Court until Monday morning, to await the arrival of the high constable of Hastings county.

The charge against him for breaking into Barclay's mills will be dropped, and he will be handed over to be tried for safe-breaking in Shannonville.

Although the police believe him to be connected with the Barclay burglary and the one at Borthwick's bakery, they think the Shannonville case will be stronger and more likely to be proved.

Sergeant Detective Duncan received a 'phone message from the high constable of Hastings county, at Belleville, stating he would come down to Toronto for Patrick Lawlor, who is wanted at Shannonville for a safe-breaking in that place.

The high constable for Addington county will also likely ask for him when the Hastings county people are through with him, as he is wanted there in connection with the breaking into a store at Newburgh and stealing several pairs of Blucher boots.

Crosby and Bennett are also likely to be taken from Kingston penitentiary to answer the same charges as Lawlor, as the police claim the three of them were connected with the burglaries and safe-breakings in these places.

Sheriff Mowat said this morning he did not know when Bennett, Hunter and Crosby would be taken down to the penitentiary.

Special precautions are to be taken on the way to Kingston, and the men will be well guarded. Sheriff Mowat said that, although he had not heard officially that Bennett would attempt suicide, yet he had heard it unofficially.

It has been the rule to give the prisoners a dinner at an hotel before taking them into the penitentiary, but if it is done this time, all three men will be carefully watched to see that nothing happens.

PATSY LAWLOR ALMOST ESCAPED.

Toronto, April 21.—(Special.)—Patsy Lawlor, the desperado who is to be taken to Belleville to stand his trial on the charge of burglary at Shannonville, almost succeeded in making his escape yesterday.

He was put in the prison van, handcuffed to another prisoner, but on the way to the jail managed to slip his handcuffs.

When he got out of the van in the jail yard a policeman standing near noticed the handcuff dangling and seized Lawlor.

The latter put up a stiff fight but to no purpose.

This morning he appeared in the police court and was handed over to County Constable Duffin, of Belleville, who was advised to manacle and shackle his prisoner.

Y.M.C.A. MEETING NOT A SUCCESS.

WORK MAY CEASE IN BELLEVILLE UNLESS MORE INTEREST IS SHOWN BY CITIZENS.

A meeting to consider matters in connection with Y.M.C.A. work in this city, and more especially the advisability of discontinuing the work, was called for last evening. The attendance was limited, showing, as the President expressed it, that there was but little interest apparently taken in this important branch of Christian work in Belleville. Nothing definite was done last night, but something of a decided nature will be done at the next meeting of the Board, which will be held early next month.

It is not improbable that the rooms will be closed up for some months at least, unless a more active interest is taken in the work by the citizens generally.

Subscriptions to the Muskoka Hospital.

Mr. G. L. Jennings, Field Secretary, is at present working in the interests of the local branch, in their endeavor to raise $300, to endow a bed for poor patients from Belleville. He reports the work progressing nicely and much interest being taken, as the work is such as appeals to all those who sympathize with poor sufferers. The subscription list to date for this year is:

DEAD ARE BEING BURIED IN TRENCHES — WATER FAMINE WILL BE PREVENTED.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Washington, April 21. — General Funston wires the War department, from San Francisco that all the city east of Vanness Ave. will be destroyed. It will be impossible at once to establish proper sanitary conditions

Much sickness must necessarily be expected. If the west now standing remains intact, there are many good buildings that can be used as hospitals.

The Spring Valley water people believe they can deliver from ten million to twelve million gallons daily.

This with other sources will prevent a water famine.

BURYING DEAD BODIES IN TRENCHES.

New York, April 21.—The Western Union Telegraph Co. received the following from its office, foot of Market St., San Francisco, early to-day;

"The fire is still burning around the wharves. The ferry building is safe. It is still difficult to estimate the number of dead, as bodies are scattered all over the city. They are burying them in trenches and putting fifteen bodies in a ditch.

LICENSES FOR NORTH HASTINGS.

OLD LICENSES ALL RENEWED, BUT SOME HAVE TO MAKE REPAIRS.

The License Board of North Hastings held their annual meeting at Marmora on Tuesday. All members were present.

There were two items of considerable interest, viz. the application for a new license at Coe Hill and for a third hotel for Marmora. Mr. Geo. Hamilton, after a hard fight over local option in Wollaston, succeeded in getting a large petition asking that he be granted a license, which the board granted.

Mr. P. J. Anderson, who runs a shop in Marmora, asked for a transfer to a hotel to be built on Wm. Flynn's property, known as the old Pringle Hotel site. Mr. P. J. Anderson had a largely signed petition, but there was considerable feeling against the move, as the two hotels had spent large sums in improving their properties in 1905 with the understanding that there would be but two hotels. As the population by the last revised assessment roll was only 585 the board hadn't power to grant a third license and the matter dropped.

Messrs. Dan Smith and Jas. Moore, of Maynooth, and John Quinn, of Marmora, were given permits for three months until repairs are completed.

TAVERN LICENSES GRANTED.

Ald. Paterson Suffers A Double Affliction.

Within a week Ald. Paterson and other relatives of this city have been doubly afflicted, owing to the death of his brother, on the 13th inst., and last evening the aged mother passed away at Toronto. Mrs. Paterson, who was over 80 years of age, was in her usual health until a few days ago, when she suffered a stroke, which caused death. The deceased was born in the County of Meath, Ireland, but came to this country in early life. For over half a century she had resided in the Queen City. Mrs. Paterson was an estimable lady, respected by all who knew her. She was a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church. The surviving members of the family are Ald. Paterson, of this city, and three daughters, Mrs. F. Robson, of Oshawa; Mrs. Mary Fox and Miss Bella, of Toronto.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"FABIO ROMANI" TO-NIGHT.

A notable event in this season's theatrics will be the forthcoming presentation here of "Fabio Romani," that remarkable and permanent success, which is a dramatization of Marie Corelli's world-read novel, "The Vendetta." The piece, which is in four acts, receives an adequate and careful production, while the cast, headed by John B. Arthur, is composed exclusively of players of national repute. It has been said of Fabio Romani" that in its record-making run of the past twelve years it has been witnessed by more people than any similar attraction. "Fabio Romani" will be at the Carman opera house to-night.

"THE CONVICT'S DAUGHTER."

One of the stellar attractions of the season will be "The Convict's Daughter," a new, original, sensational melodrama by J. A. Fraser, jr. It is described as a play of intense heart interest and containing uncommon scenic realism, as well as life-like characters. The escape of an innocent convict on a freight train is a thrilling scene. The company is a large and capable one. The play is booked at the Carman on Wednesday evening, April 25th, and lovers of melodrama cannot afford to miss it.

Fined $2.50 and Costs For Stabbing Father.

George Cameron, charged with wounding his father with a knife, was before Police Magistrate Jarman on Thursday morning last, says the Bancroft Times. Mr. F. Mullett, J. P., also occupied a seat on the bench. The prisoner was defended by Mr. Wm. Farnham. Three witnesses were examined, but the evidence was rather conflicting.

Mr. Cameron, sr., suffered from a lapse of memory and could not remember anything about what took place on the morning in question when he received three wounds in his arms. He lost a great deal of blood at the time, and this probably accounts for his loss of memory.

Under the circumstances the Magistrate did not feel inclined to deal harshly with the accused and he was fined $2.50 and costs.

Popular sympathy appeared to be with the boy.

Second Stroke.

Tweed News: While walking home from church on Sunday evening, 8th inst., Mr. John Maynes, of Fuller, was suddenly afflicted with a stroke of paralysis. He fell heavily to the ground and as soon as he regained consciousness was assisted home. He has considerably improved since and is now able to be around. This is the second time that Mr. Maynes has been similarly afflicted.

High Constable of Quebec

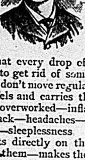
After Suffering For 10 Years With Pain In The Back He Was Completely Cured By "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" cures diseased and irritated kidneys when all other treatment fails.

The proof that "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest kidney cure known to science is demonstrated by these tablets removing all pain in the back—making the kidneys healthy—and curing chronic constipation.

ST. HYACINTHE, P.Q., June 10th, 1905.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the great good which "Fruit-a-tives" have done me. I was a constant sufferer from severe constipation and severe pain in the back for the last ten years. I tried many kinds of pills and tablets and physician's medicines but the relief was only temporary. Not long ago I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and now I am entirely well, no pain, no constipation and my stomach and bowels act naturally. I cannot say enough in praise of "Fruit-a-tives"—they are a grand medicine, mild as fruit in their action and easy to take.



(Signed)

H. MARCHESSAULT,

High Constable

Do you know that every drop of blood in your body goes to the kidneys to get rid of some of the impurities?

When the bowels don't move regularly, the blood takes up poisons in the bowels and carries them to the kidneys. Then the kidneys get overworked—inflamed. Then comes the pain in the back—headaches—constant desire to urinate—nervousness—sleeplessness.

"Fruit-a-tives acts directly on the Kidneys—cleans, heals and strengthens them—makes the liver give up more bile to move the bowels regularly—and stimulates the glands of the skin to increased action. These rid the system of all poisons and every trace of Kidney Disease disappears.

Fruit-a-tives have cured hundreds of cases of Kidney Disease by stimulating and healing the Kidneys.

Samaria Stopped His Drinking

A London Lady cures her husband permanently of the drink habit and without his knowledge.

"How glad I am that I overcame my hesitation about writing you for a Free Sample of Samaria. At that time my husband was drinking very hard, and I was in despair. The effect of your treatment was immediate, and now our home is entirely free from the Drink Curse. I gave my husband the tablets in his tea, and he never knew. As the taste for liquor left him, his general health improved and is now splendid—many, many thanks. I will be glad if you will tell others of my experience.

Messages are stacked yards high in all the telegraph offices waiting to be sent throughout the world.

Back to Work.

Construction companies have opened employment offices, and last night hundreds of survivors have been employed to be sent immediately to the quarries that there may be no lack of building and repair material. Already many of the buildings damaged by the earthquake of Wednesday are being repaired, and activity of a healthy and reassuring sort is noted.

50,000 Camp at Presidio.

At the Presidio military reservation, where probably 50,000 persons are camped, affairs are conducted with military precision. Water was plentiful and rations were dealt out all day long. The refugees stand patiently in line, and there is not a murmur. This characteristic is observable all over the city. The people are brave and patient, and the wonderful order preserved by them has been of great assistance.

$100,000 FROM CANADA.

Hon. Mr. Fielding Makes Announcement in the Commons.

Ottawa, April 21.—In the House of Commons, yesterday, Hon. Mr. Fielding, referring to the disaster at San Francisco, announced that he would present a message from the Governor-General, recommending an appropriation of $100,000.

Mr. Borden said, that in the presence of this awful calamity, there must be no division and no delay. The Opposition would cordially join hands with the Government in carrying out the recommendation. The Premier and others spoke sympathetically and His Excellency's message was received by the House standing, and agreed to.

At London, England, the U. S. Ambassador last evening presided over a gathering of 500 Americans in the Hotel Cecil and $125,000 was subscribed. A British subscription will be opened.

At New York yesterday over $1,000,000 was subscribed, $3,000,000 will be raised.

The Salvation Army will take up a three-days' street collection in all the cities.

The Barnum and Bailey Circus will send out 100 wagons to collect supplies.

E. H. Harriman, on behalf of his railway interests, authorizes the expenditure of $200,000 on relief work.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce has contributed $25,000.

Massachusetts' Share.

Boston, April 21.—The State House of Representatives yesterday voted an appropriation of $100,000 for the relief of the stricken people of San Francisco. A resolution to contribute half a million dollars to the earthquake sufferers of California was adopted at a meeting of representative citizens.

Army Feeds Refugees.

Washington, April 21.—Orders have been issued to army officers to purchase at Los Angeles immediately 200,000 rations, and at Seattle 300,000 rations, and hurry them to San Francisco.

DAMAGE OVER STATE.

Nineteen Were Killed At San Jose and Nine At Santa Clara.

San Jose, April 21.—Nineteen persons were killed here by the earthquake of Wednesday, and the entire business quarter was wrecked. The damage is estimated at $5,000,000.

One hundred and ten persons were killed and seventy were injured, mostly patients at Agnew's Insane Asylum. The asylum was ruined. A company of militia is in charge of the city.

The total loss in Santa Clara is $500,000, with nine dead.

At Gilroy, $500,000 damage; none dead.

At Hollister, one man killed, $100,000 damage.

Hundred Dead At Santa Rosa.

"Sacramento, Cal., April 21.—Following last evening from operator in Santa Rosa: From South street to Depot, from California northwest to postoffice, utter ruin; also Main street, from Medicine to Fifth. Fifty dead and expect to take fifty more out of ruins."

Treasury Officials Lost.

Washington, April 21.—The treasury department has so far failed to locate the assistant treasurer or deputy at San Francisco, and grave fears are entertained that they have lost their lives.

$4,000,000 Loss At Stanford.

Sacramento, Cal., April 21.—President Jordan, in an address to the students after the shock, asked them to remain at Stanford and help clear the debris. He said that the university did not depend entirely upon its buildings. The damage at the university approximates $4,000,000."

Eleven Dead In Landslides.

Oakland, Cal., April 21.—A landslide on Loma Prieta mountain, buried nine men alive in their camps at the Hinckley Creek Mill, of the Loma Prieta Lumber Co. Another fatal landslide occurred at Deer Creek mill, where two men were caught in their cabins and killed.

Suffer From Similar Cause.

Berlin, April 21.—Prof. Matteucci, director of the royal observatory on Mount Vesuvius, answering an enquiry of the Lokal Anzieger telegraphs that the eruption of Mount Vesuvius and the California earthquake supply confirmation of the general belief that volcanoes and earthquakes are diverse effects of one cause.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Car Conductor Fatally Injured While Entering Barns.

Preston, April 21.—B. Jenkins, the oldest conductor on the Galt, Preston & Hespeler Street Railway, and a popular official with his associates and the traveling public, met with an accident at the company's car barns here Thursday night from the effects of which he died at the Galt Hospital yesterday afternoon.

Jenkins was running his car into the barns after the last trip and jumped too near the door, which was open. The moving car pushed him forward and rolled him along the floor through a space of 7 inches, crushing his body in a terrible manner and breaking many bones.

DEBATE LOCAL OPTION

Legislature Continues the Term to Three Years.

Three-Fifths Majority Clause Educes a Lively Debate In Assembly — Other Slight Amendments to the Liquor Act Were Passed, and the House Passes to the Consideration of Hoyle's Companies' Prospectus Bill.

Toronto, April 21.—The debate of yesterday afternoon in the Legislature centred around the proviso for local option voting clauses of the liquor license bill.

Hon. Mr. Hanna, in first taking up the act, explained that the definition of a tavern was enlarged, and every regulation must be published in The Ontario Gazette.

Mr. MacKay thought in the case of a bartender removing to another city his license should go with him.

There was pointed out an amendment allowing employment of extra bartenders for cases of emergency, but limiting the time to two days in a month.

It was stated that the bill would not come into effect in respect to determining population by the last enumeration of assessors till Jan. 1, 1907.

Fees to Be Charged.

On the section referring to license duties being reached a new division was inserted. Towns having a population of less than 5,000, and more than 2,000, will pay a license fee of $350. Towns having population of 2,000 or less will pay $250, while the same fee applies to incorporated villages.

It was pointed out in the large cities the shop license was less than the tavern license, while in villages the reverse was the case.

Mr. Graham said he had been informed that some of the municipalities would receive less money under the new scale of duties, but Mr. Hanna pointed out that the next section would cure that, the power being given municipalities to increase the duties.

There will be no change with regard to the sale of liquor to guests at hotels. The clauses in the new act were struck out, and the old act stands.

Penalty Clauses Struck Out.

The first four penalty clauses were stricken out. Mr. Hanna explained that when the section was drawn it was intended to bring in the Consolidated Liquor Act this session. Although the bill had been drafted it would be held over.

The Government takes the power to issue wholesale licenses, but not in local option municipalities.

Regarding the cancellation of licenses after three convictions in two years, this is made to read three years. The section providing that a conviction since May 1, 1905, shall be counted as one of the convictions was stricken out.

Hamilton's Grievance.

Mr. Carscallen objected on behalf of Hamilton's liquor shopkeepers to their being asked to pay the same license fee of $700 as hotel proprietors. Their chances for a revenue weren't half as great he contended, and suggested a $525 fee. Mr. Hanna said the proposition was an entirely new one but was willing to have it considered later.

Mr. MacKay argued that in small places liquor shop licenses were too high by comparison, and Dr. Lackner agreed that they were in the case of incorporated villages. He thought liquor dealers shouldn't in fairness to competitors be allowed to carry other lines, such as groceries.

Mr. Gamey took a critical view of the taking away from municipalities of control over the traffic. He didn't know whether the step was a right one, but agreed that it was proper for unorganized districts.

Dr. Lackner claimed that the treatment of Berlin in classing it as a city and calling for a $500 license for hotels and shops was "quite unfair." He claimed Berlin should be classed as a town. "It will be considered," promised Mr. Hanna.

Local Option Debated.

The local option section brought out a lively tilt. Mr. MacKay protested against the three-fifths requirement. It was minority rule—a mechanical balancing of the law at the expense of logic. He went on to say that forty-one men could prevent the law going into force against fifty-nine men, and after it was brought into effect forty-one men against fifty-nine could prevent it being repealed.

The Premier interrupted to say that there was just as good reason why the settled expression of public opinion should not be disturbed after the passing of the act as before it.

Mr. Hanna quoted British authority for the 60 per cent. provision. It was not the minority ruling the majority. The securing of 60 per cent. of the polled vote for a bylaw usually meant 35 per cent. of the possible vote. On the first Ontario plebiscite 62 1-2 per cent. of the polled vote was given in its favor. On the Dominion plebiscite 57 per cent. was in favor, and on the referendum there was a favorable vote of 66 per cent. He argued that before such a change is brought about there should be an unmistakeable sentiment in favor of the measure.

Mr. MacKay asked if the three-fifths majority would be required where a bare majority had carried the bylaw.

Mr. Hanna said a bare majority was required in such cases.

Mr. Preston of Brant argued that local option was not on all fours with provincial or Dominion prohibition. In the Dominion the proposal was to force prohibition on a large section of the people who are stoutly opposed to it. If local option has been found to be inoperative a bare majority should be sufficient to repeal it. There was not a state in the Union where more than a majority was required.

As It Is In Nova Scotia.

Mr. Hanna replied that the temperance people of Nova Scotia required more than a bare majority to repeal prohibition. There the situation was reversed, the whole province being under prohibition, the municipalities having the option of going back to licenses. In Halifax a three-fifths vote was necessary to carry local option, and in the rest of the province two-thirds.

Mr. Hislop of Huron said in Nova Scotia temperance sentiment was not so far advanced as in Ontario.

"Why Nova Scotia is under prohibition," suggested Mr. Downey and others.

"That don't affect my argument," observed Mr. Hislop amid laughter.

Mr. Hislop claimed that if a simple majority vote was wrong, a three-fifths majority was equally wrong. He suggested that it be optional with municipal councils to pass the bylaws prescribed by the Government.

Mr. Ross' Comparison.

Mr. Ross asserted that the present system worked satisfactorily, and that there was no real complaint about it. He referred to the referendum taken, and to the Government, which was willing to act upon it, having been followed by a Government which had secured the support of many temperance people by pledging itself to restrict the operation of the traffic. Last year 106 municipalities had passed local option and 289 places had been closed, whereas under the three-fifths vote only fifty-six would have been carried, closing down 118.

"Why alter that which has been proven to be a success?" he asked.

Where was there any demand for it? Not a petition had been presented for it, and he thought that if the bill became law the three-fifths clause would be repealed.

Mr. Ross said that Mr. Stratton had informed him that it was easier to enforce the law in local option than in licensed communities.

"Then why didn't he do it?" asked Mr. Hanna.

To Protect Shareholders.

On the third reading of Mr. Hoyles' bill respecting prospectuses, Mr. MacKay renewed his objection to the clause declaring that all subscriptions for stock should be deemed to be induced by the prospectus.

The Provincial Secretary said this change had been made to protect shareholders.

Mr. MacKay also suggested that no subscription induced by verbal representations should be binding on the subscriber unless he shall have received a copy of the prospectus.

It was agreed that Mr. MacKay and the Provincial Secretary should get together and frame a clause to cover the point.

The following private bills were read a second time:

To incorporate the Bell Telephone Memorial Association (Preston, Brant); to confirm bylaw 640 of the Town of Sarnia (Montgomery); to incorporate the Port Elgin Spur Line (Bowman).

On Mr. McCowan's bill respecting cemetery companies being up for a second reading Mr. Graham asked for information. Hon. Dr Pyne suggested that the bill be sent to the legal committee, and this was done.

TEAS ARE THE BEST

Government is Firm.

Several officials of the Grand Trunk Railway were in consultation with the Government recently in regard to the railway's request to be allowed to erect and conduct licensed hotels in Algonquin Park, says The Toronto Globe. It will be remembered that such a request was emphatically refused by the Government some time ago, on the ground that it would be unwise to alter in any way the law forbidding the sale of liquor in the park. The Globe understands that this attitude was firmly maintained by the Government at the conference. The G. T. R. officials were again informed that the company could rent sites, under certain conditions, for the erection of two hotels if they decided on building two, but that they would not be licensed to sell liquors, and must be run on strictly temperance lines.

The impression was gathered that the company will accept this decision of the Government, and commence to build almost immediately one hotel in the park, under the conditions laid down. The company expects to carry many tourists to the park this summer.

Gigantic Block of Coal.

A feat unparalleled in mining in Nova Scotia, if not in Canada, was accomplished on a recent Saturday in the Emery seam of reserve colliery by mining a block of coal 120 feet long, 5 1-3 feet wide and 4 2-3 feet high, was taken out intact without the use of powder. It weighed over 134 tons.

Power Promoter Killed.

Syracuse, April 23.—Robert E. Drake of this city, a member of the directors of the Niagara, Lockport & Ontario Power Co., was struck and instantly killed Saturday night by an eastbound New York Central train at the Lyons depot. Mr. Drake, who was 45 years of age, is survived by his wife.

Queue Costs Him His Life.

Glace Bay, N. S., April 23.—Charlie Wah, a Chinese laundryman, was found Saturday morning in his laundry, hanging by the neck from a rope. Having cut off his queue some time ago, local Chinamen would have nothing to do with him or his affairs, and this led to his suicide.

Victim of Wreck.

Southampton, April 23.—The body of a woman was found on the beach Saturday near Stokes Bay, about 30 miles north of here. It is supposed to be that of Mrs. Harry Laflamme, cook on the steamer Kalyuga, which was lost with all hands off this shore last fall.

The Estimates Vary Greatly.

Hundreds Are Said to Have Died In Hotel Collapse.

One Estimate of San Francisco's Loss of Life From Wednesday's Earthquake Is That 300 Persons Died In One Rooming House, and That But Few Inmates Were Rescued From Ruins Of 800 Room Hotel - Two Hundred Bodies Cremated.

San Francisco, April 22.—The announcement is made that the fire is out and that only smoking embers remain. The condition of the homeless and shelterless persons encamped throughout the city is remarkably good and offers of substantial assistance are being received from cities in all sections of the United States. The grand total of all moneys subscribed to date is $4,154,000.

The engineering department of the United States army, having in charge the construction of temporary buildings in Golden Gate Park for the housing of the homeless, reported yesterday that eight buildings 150 feet long 18 feet wide and 13 feet high will be finished to-day. These buildings will be cut into compartments large enough to furnish sleeping room for a family, and each compartment will have an entrance from the outside. Lumber is being delivered at the park in large quantities and 125 carpenters are at work on temporary buildings.

The vaults of the treasurer, the auditor and the tax collector are intact. There is something like $6,500,000 in the vaults of the city treasury.

The relief committee announced yesterday that the citizens no longer will be hindered going through the streets and no passes will be necessary.

Celebration of Mass.

On the steps of the shattered churches and on the green slopes of the parks and the cemeteries, the people of San Francisco assembled yesterday at the usual hours of religious service. Grateful for the opportunity of expressing thanks for their preservation and anxious for words of cheer and comfort to carry them through future trials, the people assembled yesterday in even larger numbers than is customary.

There was no distinction as to sect or denomination, the gatherings including as a rule a large percentage of the families camping or residing in the vicinity. Catholic clergymen celebrated masses in the Jewish cemetery and every creed knelt with bowed head while the services were in progress. On the steps of St. Mary's Cathedral and on the upheaved pavement of Golden Gate avenue, overlooking the blackened waste that commenced just across the street, Archbishop Montgomery celebrated mass at 8 o'clock.

The service was attended by thousands covering the church steps and extending up and down the street in either direction.

No Suffering.

The committee having in charge the relief of the hungry reports that every homeless person here is being cared for and that there is no suffering on the score of either food or drink within the city. Within a few hours an ample supply of milk will be assured.

Health Measures.

Only 30 patients are quartered in the territory that comprises park emergency hospital. Considering that over 500 injured persons received attention at the park since Wednesday morning, this is regarded by the physicians as very promising. Over 1,000 physicians and attendants are serving in the park at present.

Water In Plenty.

Experts of the Spring Valley Water Co., who have been engaged in making a thorough examination of the mains and reservoirs of the system, have reported that the company has in its reservoirs enough water to supply the city at the regular rate of 50,000,000 gallons a day for a period of 600 days.

Street cars were running on Fillmore street yesterday, and appeared to have plenty of power. The service was free. The cars on Sutter and Pacific avenue probably will be run by horses.

Five children were born last night in the hospitals that have been established at Golden Gate Park, making eighteen births in this park. Eight babes have been born in Buena Vista Park.

Will Occupy Houses.

Hundreds of houses in the unburned districts have been deserted by their occupants, who either have fled from the city or are camped in the parks. These, with 1,000 vacant homes and flats, and all public buildings, will be used for housing the homeless.

Gen. Funston, Mayor Schmitz and Gov. Pardee met in conference at Gen. Funston's headquarters at Fort Mason yesterday, and had a thorough understanding as to the relief measures and the policing of the city. It was decided to divide the city into three districts, one under the federal troops, one under the state troops, and the other under the police.

The Dead Are Hundreds.

That the number of dead will run into several hundred is becoming apparent now. However, eastern people need to have little solicitude for their friends who were here as tourists at the time of the earthquake. It may be safely asserted that few, if any, such persons have been killed or injured. The casualties, with few exceptions, were confined to the occupants of cheap lodging houses.

The caving in of the Royal lodging house, at 40th and Minna streets, cost about 125 lives.

The collapsing of the Portland House, 60th street, between Mission and Market, entombed 60 persons. Many of these were saved before the fire reached the spot.

The large five-storey Brunswick rooming house with its 300 rooms filled with guests at 60th and Howard streets, collapsed and fire started amid the ruins five minutes later. It is estimated that over 300 persons lost their lives there.

Part of the large Cosmopolitan House, 5th and Mission streets, collapsed at the first tremble. Many of the sleepers were buried in the ruins and others escaped in their night clothes.

At 777 Mission street the Wilson House, with its four storeys and 800 rooms, fell to the ground a mass of ruins. Few of the inmates were rescued.

The Denver House on lower Third street fared the same, and none may ever know how many were killed.

Two hundred bodies found in the Potrero district, south of Shannon street, near the Union Iron Works, were cremated at the Six Mile House yesterday by order of Coroner Walsh.

At noon yesterday reports were made by the deputies sent out by the health officers of the finding of 200 bodies in various parts of the city. Few have been identified. The bodies were buried in various places, and the graves numbered.

'Frisco Will Be Rebuilt.

Many of the most substantial business men and property owners here already are in consultations with the architects. While the work of clearing away the debris goes forward, a corps of draughtsmen will be busily occupied preparing plans for new buildings.

Why Do They Leave Ontario?

One of the mysteries of the day is, why so many of its well-to-do citizens are leaving Ontario. A contemporary notices that farewell parties, addresses and presentations to young men and women leaving for the west are very numerous. These tokens bespeak a worthy class of people, not drones, incapables or ne'er-do-wells. They are among the best the country produces.

Why do they leave a portion of the Dominion so well favored as Ontario! They cannot expect to make haste more quickly in the Northwest except at the sacrifice of good prospects and many personal comforts enjoyed in this province. If they advance in wealth in the new land, it may be at the price of privation to which their class in the older settled provinces are strangers. All the same they yield to the "going fever," and the spirit of unrest, which is not an affair of class, but adheres to the young in every sphere of life. Some achieve their desires, others after a season of turmoil and unsatisfied ambition, are well pleased to return to where they started from.

The experience, however, is good for them, though they fail to reach the goal that appeared so luminous and full of promise. Their mental horizon is enlarged, and their conceptions of life broadened in beneficial ways. Moreover these outgoers from Ontario are not lost to Canada. Their allegiance is not transferred to another flag. If the Northwest had not been found out and opened up they might have drifted southward in search of the grand elixir, and to swell a population which, man for man, is no better off, if as well.

But it is curious to reflect that a land so rich in every element of potential wealth, as Ontario is, where the soil is fertile and its products are near to the most profitable markets, where mines are opening up the promise of enormous wealth, should be forsaken by the flower of its population for what may prove only the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow. The mystery is that the hardy industrious and enterprising do not appreciate to a greater extent than is seen, the opportunities which lie inviting right here in older Ontario, where, as Prof. Barr lately remarked at an agricultural meeting, dairy farming is better than gold mining, but where dairy farming is only a part of the business yielding good profit to the habit of thrift.

Here comes another injustice to this long-suffering city. Paddy Lawlor, alleged safe-cracker and burglar, is to be tried here for an offence committed in Shannonville. The festive Patrick himself hails from Toronto. But the trial will take place here, and pious moralists, like the funny man of the Hamilton Spec., will hold up their hands in horror and say "My! My! What a tough place Belleville is!" It is very discouraging, when one considers that, for her size and weight, Belleville is about the most moral and well-behaved little city in Canada.

There can be no doubt that King's Edward's acceptance of the invitation to visit Canada would cause an immense amount of gratification in this extremely loyal Dominion. One can just imagine the "doings" there would be in honor of Good King Ned the Peacemaker. But it hardly seems likely that His Majesty will see his way clear to accept, more's the pity. The experience which he would have to pass through in Canada would tax all the energies and physique of a young man, and the King has passed out of the ranks of the young men and into the class with whom it is a duty to nurse their strength. No one need be greatly disappointed, therefore, if the loyal and sincere invitation brings back a gracious message telling Canadians that what they desire is not practicable. Should circumstances permit of a visit of King Edward and Queen Alexandra to the Dominion, they can count on a welcome such as this continent has not seen, and more than British subjects would share in it. King Edward, as the Montreal Gazette well points out, has filled a great station with even more of the tact and capacity than his career of Prince of Wales had given reason to expect. When he goes abroad, whether to France, or Spain, or Italy or Germany, he is received as a friend among friends, and because he is what he is the work of the men who have charge of the Empire's affairs abroad is made easier and the way of peace smoother. There is no part of the British dominions where he would not be sure of the most loyal of welcomes, and in no part could the welcome be warmer or more heartfelt than in Canada.

The Conservatives in the Senate, says the Montreal Gazette, have done well in selecting Mr. Lougheed as their leader, in succession to the retired veteran, Sir Mackenzie Bowell. He is in the prime of middle age, capable, energetic and respected. Political divisions are not always as much thought of in the Senate as in the House of Commons, and measures are judged more on their merits than on their probable vote-getting efforts. There is much, however, that an Opposition leader can do, both for legislation and his party: and this it can be expected Mr. Lougheed will do, and do effectively.

It is intimated in Toronto despatches that because Joseph Phillips has yielded up some of his property to the York Loan Company liquidators the criminal proceedings against him will be dropped. The hope is rightly expressed in many thoughtful papers that there is no justification for such report. Such action would be about the worst thing that could happen for the respect the public is expected to have for the administration of justice. It would be rightly regarded as the compounding of a felony in connection with a case every feature of which constitutes a demand that justice shall be done, and that quickly.

Rev. C. H. Emerson, of the Baptist church, last night preached on "The San Francisco Calamity." His remarks, which are reported in another column, will repay an attentive perusal. Rev. It seems a fair question to ask, "If San Francisco was destroyed because of the sins of her people, how many cities in this old world can count on passing this night in safety?

In towns across the bay from San Francisco, the master bakers have met and fixed the price of bread at five cents a loaf, with the understanding that they will refuse to sell to retailers who attempt to charge famine prices. President Roosevelt has intimated "in courteous words, but quite firmly, that the United States can take care of the problem in San Francisco, and will not need aid from abroad." That's the talk. It will be gratifying to all friends of the great Republic to see that he proposes to do so without outside aid.

Our esteemed correspondent, "Civic Improvement," surely touches on a timely topic in recommending swift action in connection with the unsightly gore at the junction of Mill St. and the Canifton road. The Intelligencer has often talked to the public with tears in its eyes about that same old eyesore. Let us hope that the efforts of "Civic Improvement" may be successful, and that, ere long, that unsightly wilderness may be turned into a veritable thing of beauty.

A New Parish Hall For St. Thomas' Church

On Saturday night the Sunday School Teachers of St. Thomas' church gave a reception to the congregation, which was well attended, and most enjoyable.

Rev. Mr. Beamish presided, and made an excellent speech. He explained the object of the gathering, namely, to lay before the people the great need of a suitable parish building, with a properly equipped Sunday school guild rooms, chapel, library, kitchen, and all things necessary for parish work.

His Lordship Bishop Mills then addressed the meeting, giving his hearty approbation to the scheme.

Encouraging addresses were also given by Mr. Williams, Mr. Hungerford and Mr. Nyland.

A short programme of piano and vocal music, excellently rendered by Mr. Spooner, Mr. Holloway, the Misses Ackerill, Milburn and Sills, contributed to the pleasure of the evening, after which refreshments were served to all present.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

They Cheered and Sang The National Anthem

Prince Arthur of Connaught, as per schedule, arrived at the Belleville station on Saturday evening. The Royal train came in from the east and stayed five minutes. A goodly crowd was present, and ringing cheers were very much in evidence. The youthful Prince bowed his acknowledgments from the rear platform of his car, and seemed gratified with the reception accorded him. The Salvation Army band, which was at the station en route to Napanee, to fill an engagement, played some pleasing selections, and handed out God Save the King in really first-class style as the Royal train was pulling out. Led by Mr. S. Burrows, the crowd cheered with great warmth as the train moved away, the Royal visitor, hat in hand, bowing and smiling in response. It was a pleasing little function, all the more gratifying on account of its being entirely spontaneous.

Painful Accident to Mrs. Thomas Ritchie

On Saturday evening Mrs. Thomas Ritchie met with an accident which might easily have resulted more seriously than it did. She fell down a number of steps of a stairway in the house and was rendered unconscious for some time. The lady fortunately was not seriously hurt, no bones being broken.

That Unsightly Gore.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—None of us have forgotten what a splendid success was made of the "Belleville Old Boys' Reunion" last year by the organized effort and public spirit of the men of the city. Would it not be a grand idea if some of those same energetic citizens were to take in hand, in the same spirit, one or two public improvements in the city? Say the well-known and disreputable "gore" at the junction of the Station and Canifton Roads, and the swimming baths. Is there any doubt that these undertakings would then be successfully and quickly carried out?

The Council is doing what it can as to the "gore" by trying to get it filled up, but it is slow work done in this way. For the credit of our town let us as quickly as possible get this public dump and eyesore transformed into a thing of beauty, a green and restful park of which we might all be proud, and which would be the admiration of the travelling public, whose comments in the past have been free and uncomplimentary.

I have been told that it would be "the work of years" to fill up the gore. Is it necessary for park purposes that it should be filled up? May there not be other ways of meeting the difficulty? If the place is swampy, would it be feasible to excavate in the middle and drain into a central pond, which would add immensely to the beauty and attractiveness of a park.

Suppose the matter were taken up, a public meeting called, an association formed, and a fund raised for this purpose. Capital lantern slides are to be rented, showing very graphically the "before and after" of improvement work. These cover a variety of subjects, and are said to be most effective. They are accompanied by typewritten lectures or descriptions to be used in connection.

A club of ladies, which has recently been formed, with the object of doing what they can to beautify the home surroundings and the city generally, would be a willing and useful auxiliary at a later stage of the work. The neighborhood about the gore would surely take an active interest in the scheme.

Is there not enough public spirit and municipal pride to take up this project and carry it through with the energy and enthusiasm shown in the carrying out of the "Old Boys' Reunion."

Mrs. Sarah Spence Died In Hospital Of Cancer.

Mrs. Sarah Spence died on Saturday afternoon at the hospital here, from cancer of the stomach. Deceased, who was 32 years of age, was a resident of Marmora village. Some four weeks ago she was brought to the city, but nothing could be done to save her life. Mrs. Spence was a member of the Methodist church. The remains, after being taken to the undertaking establishment of Sills & Consaul, and prepared for burial, were this morning sent to Marmora.

Reciprocity.

Washington Post: We hear a heap about South American trade. John Quincy Adams pestered himself about it before James G. Blain was born, and Mr. Blaine dreamed about it, spoke about it, wrote about it, and twice accepted office of Secretary of State on account of it. But it is a comparatively unimportant thing — this South American trade. A judicious and equitable reciprocity convention with Canada would be worth more to our people than all the trade of Brazil with all the world. Our trade with Great Britain and her dependencies is stupendous, more than 50 per cent. of our local trade with foreigners. It would be better for us to nurse and enlarge this trade, so easy of expansion, than to go off yonder to Brazil to create a trade that does not now exist, and will not until the babe of to-day shall become an old man. • • • With becoming humility, we venture to observe that Secretary Root should change his course and make for Ottawa, where there is an immense trade awaiting a square deal between neighbors, which our standpat brethren must some time be sent to.

COLD KILLS THE GERM.

Lieut. Perry Says There Are No Bald Heads in the Arctic Region.

The people who come back from Klondike testify to the fact that no native bald heads are there. The evidence is that the cold climate kills the germs that eat the hair off at the root. Lieut. Perry, who went to the Arctic Regions, gives the same evidence. Newbro's Herpicide has the same effect as the cold climate. It kills the germ that eats the hair off at the roots, and the hair grows again. Herpicide is the first hair remedy built upon the principle of destroying the germ that eats the hair off. Its phenomenal sale demonstrates the correctness of the scalp germ theory. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Mr. Harry Coon Was an Apt and Clever Pupil.

One of the staff of the High School, speaking of Mr. Harry Coon, of this city, whose success at Queen's was noted in this paper on Saturday, said

"We of the High School are justly proud of him for many reasons. First, he was a model student when attending the High School, and set an example that might well be imitated by students generally. Next, it was from the High School that he graduated, winning the Chancellor's prize, a scholarship of $200. His career at Queen's University has been remarkable. First-class honors in all his subjects in every year of his course and finally, though competing with Seniors, carrying off the highest honors in the gift of the University, the gold medal, together with the degree of M. A. Few young men of 20 years of age can point to such a brilliant record, and I venture to predict that his future will not be less brilliant than his past."

ULCER OF THE STOMACH.

INSIDIOUS NATURE OF THE DISEASE — HOW TO RECOGNIZE AND CURE IT.

Ulcer of the stomach may exist for years without very marked symptoms excepting those caused by indigestion.

In good health, the stomach resists the action of the gastric juices, but when weakened, the membrane is badly nourished and the digestive fluids act upon it as well as upon the food, keeping up until perforation of the stomach occurs. In advanced cases of ulcer of the stomach there is much discomfort after eating, with a constant gnawing sensation between meals, pain from the pit of the stomach back to the shoulder blade.

At the first symptoms of indigestion, treatment should at once be started with Mi-o-na. This is a scientific remedy adapted specifically to one purpose, the cure of stomach troubles

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

KITCHEN WALLS.

If You Can't Have Tiles, Use Enamel Over Oil Paint.

If tiles are out of the question it remains to get the next best thing. Oil paint is the only available wall covering for a kitchen and should be finished with a coat of enamel. The kitchen walls will require washing quite as much and almost as frequently as the floor. White tiles make the finest possible covering, not only because they show dirt, but because they can be easily cleaned. This requirement must be met with any other substitute, and this, to a considerable extent, is given in a very good way by oil paint finished with enamel. Some kitchen designers have recommended several successive coats of oil mixed with varnish, a method that is said to give excellent results and doubtless does so. It gives the walls a somewhat dark tone, while with paint a lighter shade may be used. Whatever color is selected it should not be chosen because it conceals dirt. No room accumulates dust and dirt as rapidly as the kitchen, partly because in the summer the windows are generally open all day, admitting clouds of outside dust; partly because of the unavoidable dust from the range, and partly because more or less dirt is produced in the cooking operations. The housekeeper who imagines her kitchen clean because she sees no dirt on her walls is a most sadly deluded person. If the walls are so dark as to show no dirt, one may be assured the dirt is there, and it is likely to remain there until it becomes so offensive that a complete renovation of the room is necessary. — American Homes and Gardens.

WOMEN WHO TOIL.

The Choice Between Factory Work and Domestic Service.

We had the other day the report of two ladies whom a benevolent curiosity had led to explore factory life in disguise. The life seemed neither refined nor attractive. The labor must be intensely monotonous and dull. The only bright features appear to be dress and flirtation. Nothing can possibly be learned in the factory which could be of the slightest service to a wife or mother. To the consequent discomfort of a home may probably be set down many of the cases of wife desertion, an offense which appears to be on the increase. The same probably would be found to be sometimes the source of wife beating.

But, then, it must be owned the factory girl has independence after factory hours; limited, though dull and monotonous work, her Sunday to herself. She has companionship, which where only one servant is kept is lacking and which no doubt is often a cause of restlessness. She has the sentimental satisfaction of calling nobody master or mistress, though a master she really has, and a stern one. We cannot wonder that the factory in competition with domestic service has its attractions, inconvenient as the effect may be.—Goldwin Smith in Independent.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Alum water for burns or cuts is a quick and pleasant remedy. Keep a bottle on the medicine shelf.

Onion juice is good for the croup. Stew onions with sugar and a very little water until it forms a sirup. Strain and give a tablespoonful at a dose.

To inhale steam from a bowl of boiling water is very good for a sore throat. The sufferer should lean over the steam, drawing it in both throat and nostrils.

A New York woman recommends a novel remedy for cinder in the eye—namely, a loop of horsehair run up under the lid. Of course the hair should be thoroughly sterilized before being used.

To make a poultice antiseptic will keep a part free from gangrene and similar complications. Dissolve in the boiling water with which the poultice is made as much boric acid as it will take up.

Blending Perfumes.

The blending of perfumes will be found delightful for sachet bags. The two odors that mix most perfectly are violet and heliotrope, and the addition of a little sandalwood to these will produce an exquisite odor that will baffle those who smell it as to the identity. White rose and heliotrope blend very sweetly, and lilac and violet make a dainty combination. A little sandalwood or orris root added to almost any combination of odors will increase the pungency and make the result more lasting. Carnation is a delightful and spicy odor in itself, but the addition of white rose makes it sweeter and a little daintier. A number of odors combined in various ways and scattered through one's effects in tiny sachet bags or envelopes will produce an odor that is altogether fascinating, delicate and difficult of detection.

Dressing Sisters Alike.

A well known writer, when giving her views upon the question of sisters dressing alike, very practically said: "I consider that, as a rule, sisters should be dressed alike. For one thing, it saves a great deal of trouble to the mother if one choice of cloth will make all the girls' dresses and one way of making will do. Besides, there is much economy in this. The material will cut better, and there will be far less waste than if each child had different goods, with a pattern which would probably have to be all made up one way."

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE CONVICT'S DAUGHTER."

The poet says: "A rose under any other name would smell as sweet"—and possibly that powerful melodramatic play, "The Convict's Daughter," under any other title would please as well and pack the theatre nightly. But there is a doubt.. And in that doubt lies the safety of the rose, for it will continue to rank first among the many flowers of the world. This is equally true of "The Convict's Daughter." The amusement loving public will have a chance to pass on the merits of "The Convict's Daughter" at the Carman on Wednesday evening next. Come and see the pretty southern home of Col. Gould, the old hut at the quarries, and the daring sensational escape of "Weary Willie" on the top of a fast moving freight train.

"THE HOLY CITY."

This will undoubtedly be the strongest drama that will visit Belleville this season, and the play lovers in general will appreciate the efforts of Manager Carman, that enable him to give them such a theatrical treat. This production is branded a success by both the press and clergy. It is a difficult matter to tell which character is most appreciated. One moment the audience is held spell bound by the deep feeling of the character of "John the Baptist," in the next by the clever work in the difficult role of the loving but vengeful "Salome." The bold and noble declaration of "Marius," the realistic portrayal of a mother's love by "Elizabeth," or the childlike innocence and penitence of the outcast, "Mary Magdalene." The costumes and scenery are spectacular and attractive, and the transformation scene, the resurrection, and the gates of the New Jerusalem are beautiful in the extreme. This wonderful drama will be produced at the Carman on Friday evening, April 27

THE LADIES OF ST. JAMES'.

(Austin Dobson.)

The ladies of St. James'
  Go swinging to the play;
Their footmen run before them
  With a 'Stand by! Clear the way!'
But Phyllida, my Phyllida!
  She takes her buckled shoon,
When we go out a-courtin'
  Beneath the harvest moon.

The ladies of St. James'
  Wear satin on their heels;
They sit all night at omb[illegible]
  With candle-[illegible]
But Phyllida, my Phyllida,
  She dons her russet gown,
And runs to gather May dew
  Before the world is down.

The ladies of St. James'
  They are so fine and fair,
You'd think a box of essences
  Was broken in the air;
But Phyllida, my Phyllida,
  The breath of health and furze,
When breezes blow at morning,
  Is not so fresh as hers.

The ladies of St. James'
  They're painted to the eyes;
Their white it stays forever,
  Their red it never dies;
But Phyllida, my Phyllida,
  Her color comes and goes!
It trembles to a lily,
  It wavers to a rose.

The ladies of St. James'
  You scarce can understand
The half of all their speeches,
  Their phrases are so grand;
But Phyllida, my Phyllida,
  Her shy and simple words
Are clear as after raindrops
  The music of the birds.

The ladies of St. James'
  They have their fits and freaks;
They smile on you for seconds,
  They frown on you for weeks;
But Phyllida, my Phyllida,
  Come either storm or shine,
From Shrovetide unto Shrovetide
  Is always true—and mine.

But Phyllida, my Phyllida!
  I care not how they heap
The hearts of all St. James'
  And give to me to keep;
I care not whose the beauties
  Of all the world may be,
For Phyllida, my Phyllida,
  Is all the world to me!

BREACH OF PROMISE.

(Hamilton Times.)

We are all poor, miserable sinners, but some are more contemptible than others. When a fellow "goes" with a girl for a considerable length of time, leading her to believe that she is "it," and then casts her aside because some one with perhaps a prettier face or longer purse crosses his path, I put him down as a fit mate for the chap who "boots" his wife after he does marry her. The thing who thus cheats a young woman after he has monopolized some years of the time when she might have been looking out for herself in some other direction, certainly deserves all that he gets. There was a pathetic touch of human nature in the case tried at Brampton this week—and I am not passing upon the merits of that particular case—when the girl, unable longer to put up with the taunts of the opposing counsel, walked over to the man she was prosecuting for breach of faith, and appealingly exclaimed, "Oh, Will, can you allow that man to talk like that to me, when you know it is not true, and when you should be protecting me?" Whatever "Will" felt, that brief speech must have touched a soft spot in the hearts of all who heard it. So woman-like and so natural. I am not surprised that the young lady was awarded damages. May she have better luck next time.

A DIFFERENCE IN LUNGS.

In the Edinburgh University three human lungs lie side by side. One is of an Eskimo and is snow white. In life, this would be ruddy with rich blood. Another is that of a coal-miner and is black. The other is of a town dweller and is a dirty slate gray, as are the lungs of most city residents. That's why consumption thrives in cities.

One reason why Scott's Emulsion does so much to keep down consumption is because it helps to keep the lungs clean and supplies them with rich, red blood. It makes the lungs germ-resisting. If the body is run down and health is at a low ebb Scott's Emulsion will build it up quickly and permanently.

PINEAPPLES.

The Way They Grow and How the Plants Reproduce.

Pineapples do not grow on trees. Imagine a plant four feet in extreme height from the ground to the tip of leaves. A single stalk at the surface, but dividing at once into swordlike blades or leaves, fifteen in number, from the center of which appears a stiff, upright stem, at the top of which is the fruit. This stem is short, and the crown of the fruit when fully grown is a foot or more below the points of the leaves. At the end of a year and a half from planting each plant produces a single fruit, even as a cabbage plant produces a single head. But the pineapple does not die after fruiting once. Down on the stem below the fruit and among the long, narrow leaves a sucker appears. If allowed to remain this will soon become the head of the plant, and within another year it will yield another fruit. This process may go on for a term of years. In the meantime, however, other suckers will make their appearance.

These are broken off, and when stuck into the ground they put out roots and become other plants. Thus a single pineapple plant may produce a dozen or more others while it is yielding fruit from year to year.

Our First Coins.

The first coins really deserving the name of United States coinage were struck off as "pattern pieces" by Benjamin Dudley at the instigation of Robert Morris and were laid before congress in 1783 as specimens of what the coinage should be. They were a "mark" and a "quint" and thus described: The "mark"—obverse: an eye, the center of a glory, 13 points cross equidistant a circle of as many stars. The "quint" is similar in design, the value on reverse being noted.

Cure For Hypochondria.

A young lady of Cardiff who fancied she was ailing went to the surgery of the family doctor and commenced the interview with, "Doctor, I'm dying." "Oh, indeed, I can recommend a very respectable undertaker," blandly responded the doctor. She felt quite well after that.

Our Surroundings.

Even the strongest of us are not beyond the reach of our environment. No matter how independent, strong willed and determined our nature, we are constantly being modified by our surroundings.

Everything Returned.

"Are you beginning to get any returns from your literary work?"

"Yes, indeed. I'm not getting anything else."

Oh, what men dare do, what men may do, what men daily do, not knowing what they do!—Shakespeare.

THROAT EXERCISES.

Evils That Come From Misuse of the Vocal Organs.

The chronic sore throat is not infrequently produced by the misuse of the vocal organs. Very often that unruly little member, the tongue, is accountable for the difficulty, as it is for a great many other troubles in this transitory life. Many people have a habit when talking of pushing the tongue so far back against the delicate membranes that line the throat that irritation more or less painful is caused, and if it continues any length of time ulcers will form, and so will a doctor's bill.

Control of the tongue is excellent in all senses of the word. Physically this organ may be managed by depressing it into a hollow at a point three-quarters of an inch back of where the tip of it comes when in a natural position in the mouth and at the same time singing very light head tones. This exercise requires some patience at first, but the habit of keeping the tongue down is soon acquired. In speaking or singing it should not be allowed to hoop up and fill the mouth, thus interfering with the free passage of the tones of the voice from the throat to the front of the mouth, where they should strike and then escape clear as a bell. This hooping up of the tongue in the mouth is the cause of much of the indistinct and slovenly utterances to which we are too often obliged to listen.

In many people we notice the line from the point of the chin to the neck is in the form of a right angle. In a shapely throat this line forms a curve, just as a canary's does when the small yellow artist is warbling his carols.

To develop the throat and make this angle a curve stand before a mirror so that you may watch the throat swell out. Now thrust your tongue out as far as it will go, then draw it back quickly and forcibly, at the same time bringing it downward in the mouth as far as you can. Place your thumb and forefinger against the larynx (commonly called the Adam's apple), and if you are making the right movement you will feel the larynx pass downward. For a week or two make the movements lightly. After that time put as much force into it as you can. The exercise should be practiced for a few minutes several times a day to insure rapid and good results.

To fill up the hollows of the neck stand correctly and then slowly fill the lungs with air without elevating your shoulders. As the air is forced upward into the throat hold it there a few seconds and then expel slowly. This exercise is best performed soon after rising in the morning and before retiring at night.

His Advantage.

First Man—How do you do? Second Man—Beg pardon, but you have the advantage of me. First Man—Yes; I guess I have. We were engaged to the same girl, but you married her.

The taste of beauty and the relish of what is decent, just and amiable perfect the character of the gentleman and the philosopher.—Shaftesbury.

Time and Eternity.

The stream of time never runs dry, and the ocean of eternity will forever send its mighty surges mountain high against the bank of time's little stream, sweeping with each receding billow over its expansive bosom the frail human craft from the shore of time, with earth's happiness, human affection, toil, trials, tears and sin, to the eternal shore of celestial beauty and bliss. Oh, mighty ocean of eternity, your wonderful anthem of life and death brings eternal woe and condemnation to him who is untrue to himself and his divine pilot, but to the trusting, faithful man it sings of endless felicity in the presence of time who has redeemed his people from the bondage of sin and has swept them through the pearly gates.

The Wonderful Diatom.

One of the most wonderful things in vegetable life is a beautiful and minute class of seaweeds called diatoms. They belong to the seaweed family, yet they may be found by the thousands in any roadside ditch, fresh or salt water lake or even in cisterns, wells, springs, etc. Most species of plants are made up of an infinite number of little cells, but with the diatom it is otherwise. Each representative of this wonderful family of plants is formed of but a single cell and this so minute that it would require 2,500 of the most common form, laid end to end, to make a string an inch in length. Some species of diatoms have the power of independent motion, and on that account were for some time believed to be animals.

Candy and the Flag.

The following is accredited to the late Senator Hoar: At a Fourth of July celebration in a Canadian town where both English and American guests were assembled the flags of the two countries were used in decorations. A frivolous young English girl, loyal to the queen, but with no love for the stars and stripes, exclaimed: "Oh, what a silly looking thing the American flag is! It suggests nothing but checkerberry candy." "Yes," replied Senator Hoar, "the kind of candy that has made everybody sick who ever tried to lick it."

Charity.

Charity is a universal duty which it is in every man's power sometimes to practice, since every degree of assistance given to another upon proper motives is an act of charity, and there is scarcely any man in such a state of imbecility as that he may not, on some occasions, benefit his neighbor.—Johnson.

THE BLUEFISH BRIGADE.

What Happens When the Blues Make a Charge Upon Menhaden.

"When menhaden or herring are driven upon the beach by bluefish, as they often are, so that they can be carried off by the cart load," said a fisherman, "there is very seldom found among them one of their pursuers, and if one is found it is likely to be a fish that is diseased or that has been hurt in some way. The bluefish follows to the very verge of the water, but there it stops, and it is so powerful and alert a swimmer that, close as it is, it still easily keeps clear of the land. The menhaden or herring are no mean swimmers. They could come as close and keep off the shore as easily as the bluefish do, but not when the bluefish are after them. Then they are like men pursued to the edge of a precipice. It is almost certain death to jump, but they must do that or turn and take the chances of breaking through the pursuing line.

"When the bluefish—there may be 3,000 or 4,000 of them together—sight a school of menhaden, they go for it like a brigade of heavy cavalry, cutting and slashing, snapping and biting right and left. The menhaden are simply overborne by superior weight, and there is nothing for them to do but flee. If they are driven toward the shore, the land is to them what the precipice would be to the man. They must take it or they must turn and try to fight their way through. Many do turn and try to swim under or over or around the savage bluefish, and some escape in this way, and some are snapped up, and some are maimed and then cast ashore, and many of them, crowding together, are so closely pressed that they are practically forced ashore.

"Sometimes fish that are not cast up very far flop down into the water again. A high wave may set some free. A fish thus liberated may find its fins so damaged that it can't swim, and it is cast up again. Weakened by its rough experience, it may fall a prey to some of the bluefish yet lingering offshore. It may escape."

SERIES OF SHIPWRECKS.

The Most Singular Chain of Marine Accidents on Record.

The most singular series of shipwrecks on record began with the loss of the English merchantman Mermaid, which was driven on the rocks of Torres strait in October, 1829. The officers and crew clung to the shattered vessel, which was held fast upon a sunken ledge, until, a few minutes before the doomed ship went to pieces, a passing frigate picked them up.

The Swiftsure, as the latter craft was called, resumed her northward course, to be foundered in a terrific gale three days later.

Her combined crews were saved by the warship Governor Ready, en voyage to India, May 18, 1830. The last named, overtaken by a storm, was stranded on a barren coast, her three crews to a man succeeding in reaching the shore.

After staying a week on the inhospitable island they were taken off by the revenue cutter Comet, which a few days later sprang a leak and sank in spite of all efforts to save her.

Fortunately a rescue ship was again on hand, the four crews being saved by the Jupiter.

Even then, however, the chain of disasters was not broken, for the Jupiter just as she was entering the harbor of Port Raffia turned turtle and went down with scarcely a moment's warning. Her crews barely escaped with their lives, to be picked up by boat sent to their aid.

Thus the crew of the Mermaid was wrecked five times in one voyage, that of the Swiftsure four times, of the Governor Ready three times and the Comet twice.

The rescues had been purely accidental in every case, none of the ships having been sailing as a consort or even to the same port.

Though the weather had been tempestuous and the escapes barely made, not a life had been lost.

Safe.

In a mediaeval German tale it says that the parish council of a small village met one evening to discuss certain improvements in the water supply. In this debate the town's one watchman entered the room quietly, placed in a corner his lantern and spear and sat down to listen to the argument. Suddenly a councilman turned to him fiercely.

"Fritz," he cried, "what are you doing here? Who is to watch that nothing is stolen in the village?"

Fritz, with an easy smile, answered: "Who is there to steal anything? We are all here?"

An Odd House.

One of the best known houses in Northamptonshire, England, was designed to represent the days, weeks and quarters of the year. It has four wings, facing the four quarters of the heavens, to represent the four quarters of the year; 365 windows, one for each day; fifty-two chimneys, one for each week, and seven entrances, to represent the seven days of the week.

Pretension.

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

Half a dozen young gentlemen were spread about the huge room, some at a card table, and a generous row of bottles testified to the dominant occupation of the evening. A vacuous but hearty laugh greeted this.

"I must explain to you, gentlemen," continued my host, lighting another cigar, "that Mr.—Mr. What's-his—this gentleman is engaged in the perilous task of escaping from a hostile armament outside. And it is our duty, I need not say, as English gentlemen to rescue him."

A wild hooray from the party was the salutation with which this sentiment was met.

"The officers of the law, gentlemen," continued my host, pouring out a glass of spirit with an unsteady hand, "are even now at our gates, preparing to batter down the portcullis. Gentlemen, if I ask you to stand by us, shall I ask in vain?"

A unanimous negative, shouted at the ceiling, greeted his question. As a slight silence ensued I thought it my time to venture for myself.

"In the circumstances, gentlemen"—said I suavely.

"Circumstances be hanged!" interrupted Lord Winthorp. "While I have a humble roof over my head the needy and the criminal shall never want shelter."

An interval of silence ensued, which one of his companions chose to break on his own account by starting up and shouting:

"Let us go and break up the foe, Johnny."

"Gentlemen," said I, raising my voice above the din, for we should never reach the end at this rate, "the so called foe is unworthy of your steel. I only ask permission to go forth by a back way and leave you to the pleasant recreation I have so rudely interrupted."

"Let him stay and take a hand," said some one, and a chorus of assent went up.

"Gentlemen," said I, with great politeness, "I should be charmed to join you in your game but that it must be apparent to you that I am playing a bigger game tonight. The cards are all against me, and I must use all my wits. Lord Winthorp, is there a back way from your house?"

The young nobleman roused himself. "My servants tell me," said he, "that there is a garden at the back of the house, but I wouldn't swear to it. However, if you like to try, we'll light the way."

But this was not to my taste, for I was in no humor to attract my pursuers by this drunken concourse with lights.

"I think," I said, "that your silent prayers would serve me better. And if you will show me the garden I will make shift for myself. And be assured," said I, with great ceremony, "that it will remain one of the red letter days in my life to have met so courteous a host as Lord Winthorp and so genial a company as the present."

The garden was black and silent when the door closed upon me. I listened for a few minutes, but could hear no sound save that of laughter from the house. Then I scrambled among the bushes at the back of the house and presently came upon a high wall. Climbing to the top of this with difficulty, I looked down upon a road, and, lowering myself softly, I dropped upon the footpath. Right and left no one was visible, with which fact, much enheartened, I walked briskly away. I suppose I had gone about a mile among the maze of roads when I at last happened upon a hansom and drove to a hotel. No sign of my enemy was visible, and for all I knew or cared they were still watching outside Lord Winthorp's windows.

CHAPTER VIII.

NOW that I had given my pursuers the slip I was confident that I should not be at further trouble with them for the present, for once I and my parcel were out of their sight for any space of time there could be little doubt in their minds that I would accept the chance to dispose of it. But, as a matter of fact, I did nothing of the kind. The document would be of little use deposited in some London safe. It might be of considerable value down at the castle. I still hugged my secret in my pocket and, hugging it, set out next morning to find Sheppard. I caught him upon his return about midday and opened the situation to him over lunch. It did me good to see his eyes sparkle at the recitation.

"Why, this is the seventeenth century at least, Ned," said he in his excitement. "A treasure, buccaneers and a high handed, murderous gang! Do I stand on my head or my heels?" And he smacked his thigh in sheer joyousness.

"This is well enough," I replied, "but you forget that it is no child's play. This is mighty serious, if I have a notion of the men, and we must face the case pretty brazenly and boldly if we decide to go forward."

He sprang from his chair. "My dear fellow, you amaze me," said he. "You talk in this dubious way about going forward, with an adventure like this ahead! If you cock a white feather, my good Ned, I will take the place off your hands and carry on the game on my own account. That's my feeling."

"So far, good," said I. "I wanted to be quite open with you, and, as for that, between you and me I have every intention of sticking to it. But this is the least part of the matter. We can make up our minds to go on, but what is going on?"

Sheppard picked up a time table. "Imprimis," said he, "to catch the 3:45 train to Raymond. If you'll drive straight to your rooms I'll meet you at Paddington."

When I got to the station he was as good as his word, and, stimulated by his high spirits, I entered busily into possible plans, in which occupation we passed most of the journey.

The twenty-four hours had passed uneventfully at the castle, but I found Montgomery on the watch and very eager. He had armed himself with a shotgun, which he dragged about with him very ostentatiously, and indeed I had some ado to prevent him sitting down to dinner with it. Sheppard had been informed of his presence, and the two promised to be capital friends. Sheppard always had a way direct to the heart of new acquaintances and, with his indomitable gayety and his impulsive energy, was exceedingly attractive to Montgomery. I myself was used with sincere respect, tempered by a little awe; but the boy showed immediate signs of a positive affection for Sheppard.

That evening we held a council of war. And, first, Montgomery must be initiated into the mystery. The bare facts took away his breath and inspired him apparently more with a desire for bloodshed than for the treasure itself.

Montgomery on the watch.

"I can tell you this, Mr. Sheppard, that if I sight either of the scoundrels within shooting range I'll empty both barrels into them on the off chance. And of that I'll give 'em warning."

"Bravo!" said Sheppard, slapping him on the back and smiling his pleasant smile. "You're the man for my money, old cock!"

"And now," I resumed, "we are brought front to front with affairs. We have half the paper. How are we to get possession of the other?"

"It is plain enough," said Sheppard, "that one of those fellows, Sercombe or Hood, has it—Hood for choice, and a pretty scoundrel he must be, from all you say of him. You must introduce me to your friend Hood. I have a fancy for Hood."

As it fell out he had an earlier chance of the acquaintance than either of us anticipated. Shortly after breakfast on the following morning the maid brought me word that Captain Sercombe was in the library and begged to see me.

"Here is a pretty piece of impudence," said Sheppard, smiling. "Confound the man, but I like him! By all means let us have him up."

He looked at me. "Not at all," said I, "but since there is nothing to steal in the library save some hundreds of musty volumes, let him wait upon our pleasure."

"And my toe," growled Montgomery, assuming a ferocious expression.

"No, no, my dear lad," said Sheppard, with his gentle and insinuating smile. "You are too forward, too precocious in your arguments. Let us bag the captain, whom, I confess, I am dying to see well basted, but let it be by more diplomatic processes."

"Very well, come on," said I, rising, for, to say the truth, I was curious to know the man's business with me. We descended in file into the library. Sercombe, who was staring out of the window and curling his mustache with an air of abstraction, turned rapidly and, putting his heels together, gave me a military bow.

"Ah, here is my young friend of the claret!" he exclaimed lightly, nodding briefly to Montgomery, who fixed a stolid and somewhat glowering glance upon him. Then his eye fell on Sheppard, whom he observed with dispassionate curiosity.

"I was in hopes to have met you alone, Mr. Greatorex," with a little hesitation showing in his voice.

"These are my friends," said I, "from whom I have no secrets."

"Allow me to introduce myself," said Sheppard politely, stepping forward, "since Mr. Greatorex has overlooked the formality. Reginald Sheppard, Captain Sercombe—a gentleman, as I hope, but of no occupation and a vast deal of ambition, who is proud to make the acquaintance of so notorious a free companion as yourself."

Sercombe stared, somewhat discomposed by this deliverance, but, recovering himself, smiled genially. "The pride, sir, is on my side to encounter so pleasant a gentleman." Then he looked at me. "I take it, Mr. Greatorex, that I may state my business here."

"By all means," I answered curtly, "and the sooner the better."

"To be brief, Mr. Greatorex," he said, "I have come to strike a bargain with you. I will confess that so far you have outmaneuvered us. I will go so far as to say that I thought I had you cornered yesterday. Yesterday morning I would not have put 2 crowns upon your appearance in the race. But you have sharp eyes, sir, and you are a sharper man than I had reckoned. But, upon the other hand, where do you stand? I ask you to consider that. And what price do you put on your chances? You have, I should guess, about as much chance to lay your hands on what you want as I have. Is that so?"

"I am not here to discuss my chances with you, but to listen to you, sir," said I. "What have you to say?"

He made a slight grimace, delivering it instinctively to Sheppard, and went on: "Well, I suppose what you have to say will keep. What I have won't, if we are either of us to get any further. We stand upon equal terms now, Mr. Greatorex, as you will see, but those terms are impracticable. You have only one half of a secret, and we have the other, and it will take a cleverer man than you to find our half, as I make no doubt you also have yours in pretty safe hiding. I don't reckon to hunt London for a piece of paper. But this brings me to my point. Let us show our hands. Let me see what you have in yours, and I give you the word of a gentleman you shall see all mine."

He paused and interrogated me a moment silently.

"Since the captain gives his word as a gentleman," put in Sheppard's suave voice, "I think we stand on safe ground. For my part I am quite willing to give mine as a burglar."

Sercombe flashed a glance of annoyance at him.

"Will you be more explicit?" said I.

"I thought you took me," said he. "It's plain enough. Let us piece the document together, read it and start fair on the knowledge. That places us again on equal terms, only with this difference, that the best man wins. Whereas now a man may be Satan himself, and fail till the crack of doom."

Sheppard threw an eager glance at me, and I read assent in it. Nor was I indisposed to agree to the proposal, odd and unexpected as it came and involving us, as I foresaw, in all the outrages of actual warfare. Yet upon so pregnant a proposition I dared not make up my mind on the instant, and I suppose the man saw this, for, turning, he moved to the windows again and looked out upon the lawns, humming to himself. Ere he had turned again and faced me with his question in his eyes I had made up my mind.

"I agree," I said.

Sheppard whistled softly and, as if imitating the captain, leaned forth upon the window. A light of satisfaction played in Sercombe's gray-green eyes for an instant. As for Montgomery, I do not suppose that he had any clear notion of what it was all about.

"Then," said Sercombe, "the sooner the better, and what time better than today?"

"I agree to today," I replied.

"Good! And now there remain only the place and time," said he.

"I have no wish to have my head broken," said I bluffly, "or to be mistaken for a hare, and so I say the castle. If you grant that, you may fix your own time."

"I was in hopes," he said, smiling, for he took no offense at my plainness of speech, "that we might have settled the matter over a little dinner. Hood, an excellent host, I find, is anxious to show you what the Woodman can do when he spreads himself. And a full stomach, warmed with wine, is better for business, as my young friend here knows. But you shall have it your own way."

"By all means let it be a dinner," said Sheppard, suddenly springing up from his seat. "Mr. Greatorex, I am sure, would be loath to rob you of your pleasure, Captain Sercombe, and in his name I make bold to offer you the hospitality of the castle."

I started in amazement and opened my mouth to refuse, but was saved the trouble by the captain's answer. He was a good deal disconcerted.

"I fear," said he, "that the hospitality would be reluctant on Mr. Greatorex's part."

"Not at all," said I graciously. "A distinguished soldier like Captain Sercombe is always welcome to my house."

He hesitated, and then, coloring slightly, "I am not alone," said he.

Sheppard shot me a glance of triumph, as who would say, "I thought we should corner him."

"No doubt Mr. Greatorex would gladly entertain the other gentleman," he suggested.

The captain looked at him, and a grin spread slowly over his features. "No," he said; "but, with Mr. Greatorex's permission, the other gentleman shall entertain us."

"I fancy," he continued, smiling, "that Hood is not a stranger to the castle ways, and he makes a good waiter."

The idea tickled me. "Let us have Hood by all means," I said. "I had an excellent character for him from Mr. Kesteven."

"I will bring Hood," said the captain gravely and, taking up his hat, made to go.

The dinner was set for 7 o'clock, and I fancy that all three looked forward to it with considerable expectation. Sercombe arrived punctual to the hour, and a little later I entered the morning room to meet him. He sat in a chair, lounging very cozily, a light overcoat covering his evening dress, and by his side stood Hood, also in the orthodox costume and looking, as I could not help noticing, uncommonly spruce and servant-like.

"I am here, Mr. Greatorex, to the moment," said Sercombe in his leisurely voice, "and I go bail that I have brought you an invaluable ally. With your permission, Hood will now retire to the kitchen."

The innkeeper insensibly straightened himself, standing to attention like a graven image, and I signed my assent.

"This is entirely your affair, Captain Sercombe," said I, "and you may do what you like with your own property." I turned to Hood. "You will find Mrs. Main in the servants' hall," I said.

With his gliding, serpentine tread, Hood made a motion of respect and vanished. Sercombe stared after him, meditating, and gnawed his mustache with a frown, which seemed to me to indicate a certain touch of perplexity. But he brightened at once and talked very freely and in his old manner till dinner was served. The interior significance of our dinner party would not have been visible to a stranger. For the main part, that preliminary skirmish was occupied by conversation the most distant from the subject we all had at heart. It was Sercombe himself who set the example of reserve, and we followed meekly enough. When I say reserve I am thinking only of one particular point, for heaven knows that his talk was sufficiently frank upon other topics. As I had occasion to take note now and subsequently, the man was by nature framed for a good talker, and, although he had every prejudice against him, and started, so to speak, with a great handicap, he soon wore down the feelings with which we embarked upon the entertainment. And it was not until we had broached a sort of good fellowship and the evening was far spent that anything happened to mar our growing harmony.

It fell out thus: Sercombe himself had just concluded an amusing narrative of his experiences among the brigands of Calabria, and Sheppard resumed the conversation with an adventure of his own. The evening had fallen dark and cloudy, and amid the starlike candles that illumined the room the dark figure of Hood moved noiselessly and constantly. I had heard this story of Sheppard's, which, indeed, was not very exciting, and my mind, swaying from its polite duty, rested unconsciously upon the new innkeeper. As I watched him I saw the two men exchange glances—an interrogating look upon Sercombe's part, a baffling and inscrutable look from Hood. There followed an instant's pause, and then the man approached the master with the pretext of a dish. Sercombe spoke low and across his shoulder, nervously exploring the contents of the dish with a spoon. Hood said nothing and, raising his eyes, softly fixed them upon me at the other end of the table. For a moment we regarded each other luminously, and then his glance fell politely away. Sercombe still whispered and, I thought, with a growing anxiety. It was time for me to interfere.

By his side stood Hood.

"Captain Sercombe," I cried sharply, breaking upon the tail of Sheppard's yarn, "these communications are not included in the compact."

The captain started, and his face reddened deeper, but he was always a cool hand.

"I must ask you to remember, Mr. Greatorex," said he suavely, "that I am your guest."

"That is true," said Sheppard, nodding his head.

Sercombe looked at me with some asperity.

"I think, sir," said he, "that in the circumstances you will see that you have overstepped the privileges of gentlemen."

"The word is hardly in the case. I think we are agreed that it is as thieves we meet," interjected Sheppard smoothly.

"You are right, Captain Sercombe," I answered, being in my turn in command of myself, "and I offer you my apology for the rudeness, but I am at least the master of my own servants, and Hood shall keep his distance and not hang about annoying my guests." With which I ordered him forthwith to the window, a command which he hastened to obey almost by anticipation.

I must say that this unpleasant episode at once changed the atmosphere of the room. On the whole, I did not regret this, as I conceived that we had perhaps reached the proper term of our familiarity with Sercombe. It was strange to see the instant revolution in our mutual attitudes. Whether Sercombe himself had been as easy as he had previously seemed, or whether he had acted a part for our benefit, I cannot say, but it is certain that now he was charged with anxiety. Now and again his eyes, puffed and bloodshot, flickered uneasily on Hood, where the man stood in his corner, a memorial of black sobriety, and his demeanor was carefully under restraint. The situation became a little disagreeable, and I thought the time had arrived to end it.

"Captain Sercombe," I said, quite formally, "I fancy our dinner, such as it is, is over, and if you will take no more wine perhaps we had better get to business."

"Certainly, sir," said the captain cheerfully and draining his glass. "I am at your service."

I looked at Hood. "It is time now," said I, "that we were alone." And I waited to see the man move.

A quick exchange of glances took place between them, and then the innkeeper turned his back on us and busied himself with the plates upon the sideboard.

Sercombe colored angrily and was visibly disconcerted. "I beg your pardon, sir," said he, with a slight stammer, "but I have already had the honor of informing you that I am not alone in this matter."

"Really," said Sheppard gently, "I do not think we can invite our servants to discuss this matter with us."

Sercombe bit his lip, and after a glance at Hood, who still kept his attitude, "I understand your feeling, gentlemen," he replied, "and, in fact, I sympathize with it. But"—

He hesitated, and I began to perceive for the first time how far he was involved with the other and to what extent he was under his control. It was evident that he was chagrined by his position.

"Leave the room, Hood," said I, not that I had any certain intention that he should quit us, but rather out of curiosity as to what would ensue. The issue surprised me. Hood turned obediently on his heel and made for the door. As it closed upon him Sercombe turned to us and broke out with embarrassment:

"You are right, gentlemen. I agree with you. These things are better managed between gentlemen. But"—His perplexities struggled in evidence upon his face, yet he had an uncommon gift of recovering himself, which I had had occasion already to admire, and I was to admire him still more at this moment. "You will perceive, Mr. Greatorex," he said abruptly, but with a sudden suavity of voice, "that, as you have just pronounced, we have concluded our friendly dinner, and it is to business that we turn. I take it, therefore, that we are no longer here in the capacity of hosts and guests."

"True," said I.

"Then," he exclaimed triumphantly, "Hood, I take it, is no longer a servant?"

"Captain Sercombe is right," said Sheppard promptly, turning to me, "and, by your leave, Ned, I will ring and have him up."

"I accept your theory," I answered. "Let us have him up, certainly."

Sheppard rose and when the man returned ushered him with some ceremony to the table. "A chair for Mr. Hood," he said. "Where will you sit, Mr. Hood—by the captain? That's right. Please make yourself comfortable. We have just enjoyed an excellent dinner very well served, Mr. Hood, but I fear you are too late. Montgomery, a glass of wine for Mr. Hood. Business is business, and I never conduct a piece without the usual sherry."

If this elaborate irony disturbed Sercombe, as it seemed to do, it had no effect upon Hood.

"Thank you, sir. I will stand, sir. No wine, thank you, sir." Such was his brief reception of the courtesies.

He assumed a place at the back of the captain, commanding a view of the table. Sercombe spread his hands upon the table.

"Gentlemen, let us show our cards," he said.

There was a momentary silence, and then I was conscious of a slight bustle of excitement that stirred the room into sound. Sheppard looked at me, and Montgomery's gaze was riveted upon the captain. Sheppard coughed gently and sipped his wine.

"That is a very proper demand, Captain Sercombe," I said, "seeing that it is what we are here for, but I hardly yet see my way clear to table all my tricks. Let us understand one another better."

The captain did not color, as he might well have colored under this implicit distrust. As I have said, he was singular in the partial hold he kept upon his gentility. Instead he laughed, but somewhat awkwardly.

"I see," he answered and looked down at his hands, appearing to consider. He lifted a big and somewhat clumsy hand and scratched his swollen cheek, smoothing a long wisp of red hair across his naked crown. "I cannot pretend to misunderstand you," he declared at last and shot a glance aside at Hood, who had fallen slightly away from the table and stood intently watching the scene. "But I think it is somewhat unnecessary, Mr. Greatorex," he said, again very awkwardly, and he laughed shortly, and again his eyes flew to Hood, directing at him, as it seemed to me in that light, a glance of warning, of appeal, even of fear.

"No doubt," said I in return, "but you must remember that I have already had experience of your possibilities. But come; we shall get no further unless we can strike a compromise. If you will produce your fragment of the document"—

"You assume that I have it," he broke in, with his discordant laugh. "You are taking a good deal for granted."

"I assume nothing," said I. "Do not let us bandy words."

Sercombe lifted the decanter which stood at his elbow and filled his glass

MINE DUST EXPLOSION

Costs at Least 22 Lives at Trinidad, Colorado.

Fortunately Only a Small Proportion of Miners Were in the Shaft—Seventeen Miners, Working 700 Feet From Entrance of the Mine, Escaped Through Another Opening—Among the Dead Is the Fire Boss.

Trinidad, Col., April 23.—As the result of a dust explosion in a mine of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., 40 miles west of Trinidad, yesterday, 22 miners are known to be dead and one is missing.

There were 40 men in the mine at the time of the explosion. Seventeen miners who were working 700 feet from the entrance escaped through another opening. The explosion occurred in rooms 3 and 4 near the main entrance, and was the result of a windy shot which ignited the dust. An order for 25 coffins has been received by a local undertaker here. Many bodies were taken out during the afternoon. The mine was not badly damaged and work can be resumed in a couple of days.

The mine employed 180 men. Miners from adjacent camps are assisting the rescuers. General Superintendent Robert O'Neil left here at noon and is directing the rescue. Among the dead is James E. Reed, fire boss. Most of the others are Italians and Japanese.

Will Fix Boundary.

Washington, April 23.—Secretary of State Root and Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, the British Ambassador, Saturday signed a treaty providing for the actual physical location of the northern boundary of Alaska, as agreed on in former treaties. The forty-first meridian was agreed upon as the boundary, but a portion of this meridian had not actually been located, and the treaty signed Saturday provides for the fixing of these unlocated parts.

Four Die In Fire.

New York, April 23.—Four lives were lost yesterday in a fire which swept away a stable and a row of three-storey frame flat houses, Coney Island, and nearly thirty families were rendered homeless.

MOST PEOPLE COWARDS

FEW LIKE HORATIO NELSON, WHO KNEW NOT FEAR'S MEANING.

"SKELETON IN THE CLOSET"

Rev. Dr. Talmage Tells How to Get Rid of Hidden Trouble—Men Ought Always to Remember That Their Secret Sins Are Not Hidden in the Light of God's Countenance — The Unrepented Fault.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1906, by Frederick Diver, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 22.—How to get rid of the "skeleton in the closet," to overcome the hidden trouble, the unrepented fault, is the subject of the sermon to-day, the text chosen being Psalm xc, 8, "Our secret sins in the light of thy countenance."

Most men are born cowards. They were as babies rocked in the cradle of fear. As boys they always by night disliked to travel the road which leads to the bridge over which Tam o' Shanter was chased by the hobgoblins. "Of course we do not believe in ghosts," once said a great English evangelist, "but most of us feel squeamish when, alone, we have to walk past a silent country graveyard in the dark hours about midnight." And most of us are afraid of the valley of the shadow of death when, like the Psalmist of old, we look at it in the dim vista of the future, although, like him, we know it is nothing but a black shadow." Of course there may be men born, like Horatio Nelson, who never know what the name of fear means. But if such men exist they are very few and far between. They are almost as scarce as clover tops growing in a January snow bank or as diamonds imbedded in a vein of copper ore.

The members of the human race do not dwell all the time in the City of Courage. They nearly all live for a little while, at least once a year, in the City of Timidity. They more often cry and tremble before the imaginary dangers which threaten them than they suffer from the wounds inflicted by mortal foe. The legend is told that one day a traveler met the Black Plague journeying to the famous eastern capital of Bagdad. "Where are you going?" asked the eastern pilgrim. "To Bagdad," was the answer, "to kill 5,000 people." A few weeks later, so goes the legend, the same traveler met the Black Plague on the same road, but now returning from Bagdad and going home. "Why," said this traveler, "did you not do as you said you intended to do? You said you were going to Bagdad to kill 5,000 people. From the awful reports I hear coming from that doomed region you have killed 50,000 people instead of 5,000. "Ah," answered the Black Plague, with a gleeful, fiendish grin, 'I have kept my word. I killed only 5,000 people on account of my fatal touch, but the other 45,000 people who also died perished of fear. They killed themselves. I had nothing to do with it." Yes, the old legend is right. A great many plagues stalk through this land, destroying their victims everywhere, but the dead that lie in their tracks are not all slain by those swinging scythes. Most people are born natural cowards. More people die from fear than ever die from the ravages of disease.

This assumption is almost a self evident fact or an axiom. Now, as most of us are cowards in more ways than one, the greatest check on wrongdoing in this world is the fear of future punishment. The would-be murderer is afraid to shoot his victim for fear he will be executed; the young clerk who is getting into the habit of betting upon the races is afraid to risk any of his employer's money for fear he will be found out and sent to jail; the women or the men who would like to violate the seventh commandment often are afraid to do it for fear the newspaper reporters will get upon their track and the whole scandal will be published in the daily newspapers, and then they will be ostracized from all decent associations, but if a man could sin without being found out or the sinner not be brought to judgment then where there are now two sins there would be twenty and where men err once now they might do wrong ten times over. That means, of course, if our sins would never be brought to trial.

Now, as I was thinking along this line the other day my eyes were scanning the Nineteenth Psalm of David. Suddenly my attention was attracted to these words: "Our secret sins in the light of thy countenance." "What," I said to myself—"can it be that there are sins so secret, so completely hidden, that our most intimate friends do not know of them, sins that God knows and sees and that our consciences convict us of?" I do not now refer to the open sins, the faults that the world takes note of, but are there not others hidden away in the inmost recesses of the heart that will one day be set in the penetrating light of God's countenance? Let us examine ourselves this morning as in God's presence.

Let me, in the first place, speak about the sin of robbing God of those hours of sacred devotion in which we should hold secret communion with him, those hours of secret prayer and Bible reading which are so essential for our own spiritual life. You know that in that discourse on prayer in which our Lord describes that exercise he commands us to pray in secret as well as to pray openly. In Matthew we read, "When thou prayest enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door pray to thy Father who is in secret, and thy Father who is in secret shall reward thee openly. But, though God commands us to have our secret hours of holy communion with him and though the Christian world thinks that we, as professing Christians, have those sacred hours, yet how often do we steal away from God these hours which should be devoted to him. In other words, we want to try to do spiritual work and win spiritual conquests without first making the necessary spiritual preparation for our own souls.

We are in exactly the same position in a spiritual sense as is the young man in a temporal sense who wishes to leave the well beaten paths of work and take a short cut up the mountain of fame. Here, for instance, is the young man. He wishes to be a lawyer. He goes to an old lawyer and says: "Judge, I would like to be a lawyer. What shall I do?" "What do you know, my boy?" is the natural question. "Oh," says the young man, "I have only been to school a few years and studied the common branches." "Then," says the old lawyer, "what I would do is to go back to school. Study, study, study! Fit yourself for college. Then go through the law school. Sharpen your weapons first before you go into battle." "Unnecessary," answers the young man. "What is the good of spending the next ten years of my life in rummaging through musty tomes? I do not care what the Roman law was. What I wish to know is what is the law of to-day." So the young man refuses to sit at the feet of the wise Gamaliels of the great law schools. He goes at once into a law office. He is coached along and stumbles along, and in a couple of years, an undeveloped boy, or, rather, an immature man, he is admitted to the bar. He is like a cripple with two wooden crutches and one good leg trying to win a race in the Olympian games against the finest athletes of all Greece. He is like an old Chinese junk, with its long banks of oars and antiquated javelins, going forth to naval conflict with the armor plated cruisers of the modern navy. Thus with us. We want to do God's work. We desire to win God's victories. But we are not willing to make our necessary spiritual preparations for the same. We are not willing to do what God commands us to do. We are not willing to regularly and systematically hold certain hours of each day sacred for prayer and for secret communion with God.

Sometimes it is religious work itself that monopolizes the time. I remember a dear classmate of mine who as a theological student was asked to preach in a little church near to where I used to preach as a student. This church was not able to support a regular pastor. It was way back in the country. So when it got a man to preach for a Sunday it worked him as hard as some people drive a horse which they hire from the livery stable for a day. They wanted to get the full worth of their money. Thus they got this young man up early to lead the Sunday school and teach a Bible class. Then he conducted a morning service; then after a hurried dinner they drove him back into the mountains, where he had another Sunday school to lead and another sermon to preach and a Christian Endeavor society to address; then they ran him back to the main church again, where he had a Young People's society meeting at which to speak and then another sermon to preach. In other words, from early morning until 10 o'clock at night he was speaking or working all the time. I met him next day and said, "Well, Howard, how did you get on?" "Get on," he answered. "Why, I had so much to do that when I crawled into bed that night I was completely fagged out. I was so tired that I could not even say my prayers. I just said, 'O Lord, I have been praying so much for other people that I am just too tired to pray for myself!'" I laughed. But for years and years that picture of that tired boy has always been before me. Ah, I say to myself, how often we get so tired with meeting the many engagements of life that we do not take the needed hours for prayer, for Bible reading and for communion with God for our own souls!

Next to our neglect of secret prayer and quiet Bible reading I believe our greatest secret sin is our unwillingness to bravely and firmly go forth to advocate the causes of right which are on the unpopular side. We see blatant sins stalking around everywhere, but because those sins are well dressed or the perpetrators of those sins are influential men and women in the community in which we live we close our mouth and say nothing. We are afraid to antagonize them and those men and women who are their powerful supporters.

The man who dares to attack sin that is strongly intrenched is liable to be assailed in character and person. His friends come to him and say: "Let it alone. You will make enemies who can ruin you." Have you never had such advice given to you? If you have not you have been all your life a "trimmer," a hedger, a politic man. You have not come forth boldly and decisively and attacked wrong wherever you have seen it lift its hideous head.

The world looks upon you as an honest man. Are you honest? I mean, in the higher sense of the word, are you honest with yourself? The city in which you live is in a death grapple with the saloon or, as is Los Angeles, with an infamous gambling corporation. Dare you lift up your voice in protest? "Oh, no," you answer; "if I did those men would boycott me, and they are my customers. They buy lots of goods at my store." In your silence are you not before God committing a secret sin? For years and years in our northern states there were hundreds upon hundreds of ministers who were afraid to speak upon the slavery question, because if they did they knew they would split their congregations in twain. When my father as a young man was called to the city of Philadelphia just before the war the padlock of silence was upon many ministers' lips. After my father had been there a few weeks he preached an abolition sermon. That afternoon thirty of his most prominent families took their hymn books out of their racks and walked out of the church and never came back. Tell me, are you ready to defy the sin of your friends as well as the sin of your enemies, or are you going to be numbered among the "trimmers," the hedgers, the politic men, who dare not be "in the right with two or three?" If you do thus, the world may say you are honest, but in the sight of God you are guilty of a black, heinous secret sin. You are guilty of the sin of cowardice, the sin of not being an out and out disciple of Jesus Christ.

But we must not stop here. In this catalogue of secret sins we must name the malformed offspring of our minds call "evil thought." By this name I do not means those "evil thoughts" which some of us are willing to voice in public, but I do mean those carnal thoughts, those licentious thoughts, those revengeful and brutal thoughts, those debasing thoughts, which some of us at times, to a greater or less degree, are ready to foster and let live in our hearts.

When there are born into the nursery of the brain licentious thoughts, revengeful thoughts, brutal and accursed thoughts, thoughts which come to us from reading bad books or going with improper companions, or evil thoughts which came to us we know not from whence, then we shield these thoughts. We are foolish enough to suppose that because the world does not know about them we are safe. Ah, no, my friends! Though the world may not see a man's evil thoughts, yet God sees them. "And as a man thinketh in his heart so is he in the sight of God." "For God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." Beware how you trifle with those bad thoughts—those evil thoughts. By the grace of God crush them out of your life as you would mash the poisonous fang of a deadly adder under your heel. God will condemn you not for what you do, but also for what you think in the inmost recesses of your mind. O God, make us pure in mind as well as pure in deed!

But there are still two other clauses of secret sins to which I would call your attention. One of them is the sin of covetousness. The other is the sin of selfish indifference to the misery and wants of others. Now, this sin of covetousness is such a repellent sin in God's sight that he wrote a whole commandment against it. This commandment was not put in the words of a general statement, but went into specific detail. Let me read to you the command as it was given to Moses on a table of stone: "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass nor anything that is thy neighbor's." But, though God in these vehement words has hurled his denunciations against covetousness, yet there are many people who almost every hour of every day of their lives are guilty of this secret sin. They never walk along the streets or see a fine home but they keep saying to themselves, "I wish I lived in a house like that; I wish I could ride in a carriage like that; I wish I might be able to dress like that; I wish I might have a servant to wait upon me like that." And all their lives, instead of thanking God for his mercies some men and women are in secret rebellion against God because he has not done as much for them as he has done for some one else. Now, my friends, I firmly believe that this sin of covetousness is one of the most infamous and repellent of all sins in God's sight. And yet it is a sin which to-day thousands of us are practicing in secret. Our neighbors do not know we are casting lustful eyes upon their possessions, but God knows, and God will condemn us unless we cease to practice this infamy.

But the second secret sin is like the first. The same evil characteristic which makes a person wander around the streets saying, "I wish I could have my neighbor's house, my neighbor's wife, my neighbor's man-servant and his maid-servant," is the same evil characteristic which makes a person ignore the calls for help which are being spoken to him on every hand. Therefore, though the hands for succor are being stretched forth toward these people, they act as did the priest and the Levite when they saw the poor bleeding traveler of the good Samaritan parable. They pass by on the other side and do nothing. Now, some people do not believe this assertion is true, but it is, nevertheless.

And, my friends, if we refuse to help those who are in financial trouble, how much more sinful are we in refusing to help those who are in spiritual trouble. The world looks at us as good, respectable church members. Are we? Down in the deep recesses of your own hearts, are we? Have we done anything during the past year to win at least one soul to Christ? O God, forgive our spiritual indifference and selfishness! When we appear before thy judgment throne, may we be able to show an honest desire and an honest zeal to save thy wandering prodigals even as thou hast forgiven our sins and brought us back into the gospel fold.

Thus to-day I would have the searchlight of the Holy Spirit turned on to our lives so that in God's sight we should examine ourselves as we truly are. Are you ready to be cleansed of your secret sins? Are you ready to say: "O God, purify my life! O God, cleanse thou me from secret faults! O God, make me clean every whit! O God, thou great reader of thoughts, may I live and think and plan and work only for thee!" If thou art not ready to say this, then thou canst never be saved by grace, for the Bible says, "God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing whether it be evil." To-day I lift up for inspection the records of your secret sins. May God, by the power of Christ's blood, blot out that debasing and condemnatory past and give us a glorious and radiant future, with no secret sin to mar the white pages of the book of life

Why Swimming Beginners Fail.

You try hard to keep your mouth closed, but the water somehow will find a way into your mouth and nostrils. A beginner always draws in his breath just at the moment he strikes out. This insures the getting his mouth and nostrils full of water at once, and a collapse is inevitable. If you will remember to take breath between the strokes all will be well. Quite naturally, when you draw your knees outward for the kick, you will inhale, and just as surely as your feet are thrust from you will you expel the air from your lungs. Knowledge on the management of the breath will come with practice and can only be acquired in that one way.

Tact.

Tact is born with some men and women, like the supple, delicate fingers of the artist's hand, and those who have it use their gift instinctively. It is not measured alike to those who have it. Men possess it in different degrees, while others again are wanting in it altogether. It is the outcome of intellectual and temperamental qualifications and implies the possession of clear perceptions, quick imagination and delicate sensibilities. It is these that give the tactful person his subtle intuition of another's mental processes and modes of feeling and in the same moment exactly the right method of dealing with these.

MRS. V. E. BLAND.

She Has Become a Highly Successful Agriculturist.

Mrs. Virginia E. Bland, widow of Richard Parks Bland, "Silver Dick," for a quarter of a century a Missouri representative in the lower house of congress and a beloved national figure, has become one of the most successful agriculturists and horticulturists in the country.

Her farm near Lebanon, Mo., to which she gives her personal attention, is a model and for its acreage produces more than any similar tract in the country. She has solved the question of the "small farm," and the results obtained have been wonderful.

Mrs. Bland has succeeded the old methods of a quarter of a century ago with up to date ideas, many of them her own, and has introduced innovations which have brought astounding crops.

The farm is but eighty acres, but every inch of these is utilized to the highest possible advantage. More than half of the acreage is devoted to an apple orchard, and the fame of its product is almost national. Her entire income is from her farm, and it is so handsome that she spends three months of the year in St. Louis, where she is a prominent national figure. The other nine months of the year she spends on her farm, supervising every detail of production. How well she does this may be judged from the fact that its products were awarded a silver and a bronze medal by the international jury at the Louisiana Purchase exposition.

MRS. VIRGINIA E. BLAND.

Mrs. Bland took up agriculture over twenty-eight years ago, when Mr. Bland purchased the farm at Lebanon, but during the life of Mr. Bland very little profit was made on the land. According to Mrs. Bland, her husband often said, "Congressman Bland's money is paying for Farmer Bland's farm."

Mrs. Bland took charge personally in 1899, after the death of Mr. Bland, and has since made it a commercial proposition, while at the same time securing much pleasure out of it.—St. Louis Republic.

Are You Tired?

There is too much tiredness in the world, especially among business women.

Half the day's work has to be done by force of the will, since there is not force of body enough to carry the work through.

Most women accept this as unavoidable. To be tired is normal, whether one has charge of a baby or a typewriter. To tell them nature intended back and burden to be in due proportions does not help matters. They are too tired to theorize.

To get up fresh and cheery in the morning, do our duties vigorously, with energy to spare for a song and a smile and lie down in the happy, wholesome weariness of a well spent day, that surely was the original plan for our days.

Are we never to get back to it?

Some say the way lies through gymnasiums; others hunt for don't worry clubs and good resolutions. Still others seek it by simplifying the daily duties and throwing off the world's comparative standards.

And the last are nearer to reaching the goal than any of the others.—Philadelphia Press.

Don't Bother the Maid.

One thing the young mistress managing one or more servants for the first time needs to understand is that the maid does not like to be interfered with. The woman who does the cooking and kitchen work likes to be told exactly what she is to do and then permitted to go ahead and do it. It handicaps her work and ruffles her temper to have the mistress change her mind a dozen times, revoke her orders and constantly run out into the kitchen to make new suggestions, nor does she like to have her duties doled out to her in small portions, like a child's tasks. Unless she knows her work in its entirety she cannot plan it with system, as a competent maid wishes to do, so if you are a young housewife, just beginning, have your own plans well defined, give them clearly in the morning, then do not change them nor "fluster" your maid by interfering, but simply see that she understands your directions and follows them out to the best of her ability.

Bathing House Strategy.

In one household where no race suicide theories find support the problem of inducing the younger children to take to the tub without creating the impression in the minds of the neighbors that the children's society should interfere has been solved.

The youngest child, a boy of four, yelled vigorously whenever he was put into the tub. The nurse was about to give notice when the head of the house brought home a package one evening.

At the hours of the bath he produced a number of celluloid toys, a couple of torpedo boats, a swan, an Indian canoe and two other objects, and the youngster was permitted to play with them in the tub. Now he submits to the usual soaping and scrubbing without a whimper, and as a reward is permitted to sit in the tub and sail the boats for ten minutes after the business part of the bath has been concluded.

The toys are given to him at no other time. Now the bathing hour is the quietest of the day.—Exchange.

Wearing of Earrings.

The idea that piercing the ears has beneficial effect on weak eyes may be dismissed at once as a popular superstition, and the woman who submits to the process should first be sure that earrings will suit her style. If she decides that they will, then the form of her earrings has still to be considered. A tall woman can wear longer earrings than a short one, and at the present time there are so many tall women in society that long earrings may appear to be more generally liked. Americans have a great fancy for them, but Parisians are fond of change. Just now pearls and diamonds are most worn, but some women have a fancy for odd earrings—a black or pink pearl in one ear and a white one in the other. Small, studlike earrings of precious stones are in favor at the moment.

Gas Range Saucepans.

The tricornered saucepans, three of which just fit over the gas burner, are much sought after. Each one holds six pints, and the three use no more gas than does a single saucepan. One of the most popular sets is the combination cereal, custard and poached egg cooker. The big bottom pan is fitted with an inside rim that will support either the pan for the cereal or the rack to hold the custard or the poached egg receptacles. There are half a dozen egg cups and the same number of custard cups. The resourceful housewife finds many uses for the small cups in this day of ramekins and molds.—New York Globe.

Old Furniture.

Pieces of furniture that are undesirable in design, finish or covering and yet cannot be discarded from motives of economy may be entirely hidden and rendered quite attractive by slip covers of pretty material. Cretonne of good color and design is good, printed linen in a tapestry pattern and coloring makes a very pleasing cover and linen taffeta, while higher priced than either of the other two, in flowered designs or self toned stripes or figures is so attractive for either summer or winter that it well repays the additional cost.

Mustard.

Delicious mustard is made by first slicing an onion in a bowl and covering it with vinegar. Let this stand forty-eight hours, when pour off the vinegar into another bowl, add a little red pepper, salt, sugar and enough dry mustard to thicken to a cream. The proportions should be a teaspoonful of the pepper and salt and twice that of sugar, but tastes differ somewhat as to the quantity of sweet used.—New York Post.

Dried Fruits.

Soak all evaporated fruits over night, but only in water to cover. Too much makes them watery. All such fruits are the better for being first placed in cold water to cover for a couple of hours, then well scrubbed with one of the small brushes that come for that purpose and cost 2 cents before placing them in the water in which they are to remain all night.

Old Felt Hats.

Old felt hats may be utilized very successfully in polishing furniture or varnished floors. To make a polisher get a soft, worn, long handled brush, make a good thick pad of odd pieces of woolen material and cover with an old felt hat. Nail this, or, better still, tie on with stout cord to the handle of the brush. With this one can polish stained boards with little trouble.

The Eyebrows.

Make a strong brew of sage tea, straining through muslin, and to a pint of liquid add a tablespoonful of alcohol. Apply this to the eyebrows to darken them. It is entirely harmless and gives the eyebrows a more natural color than pencils or dyes.

Soap Sachets.

It is an excellent plan to use delicately scented soaps as sachet bags. One can purchase soaps of almost any perfume, and two or three of these in a drawer of lingeries will be much more lasting than sachet powder.

Rubber gloves should not be worn at night. They can do no good and can injure the skin. Kid gloves, with the tips of the fingers cut off to give air, are excellent. They must be large size.

Garters hinder the circulation of the blood. They retard due development of the leg and frequently are responsible for too prominent kneecaps.

Cologne dropped on a handkerchief and held under the eyes will remove the dark lines that come from fatigue.

Books will keep better if exposed to the air than when shut in a bookcase.

BATHING AT HOME.

A Medical Recipe For Obtaining the Best Results.

The finest method of bathing at home by which one can attain the best results in keeping the body in a clean, healthful condition can be taken in the following manner: First, it is necessary to facilitate the thorough cleansing of the thousands of small pores in the body to open those pores by means of heat (sweating). If one has the advantage of one of the small cabinet baths that are on the market it will supply the best means of producing perspiration; otherwise lying in a tub of warm water and gradually getting it as hot as can be borne and lying in that for a period of from five to ten minutes will produce the same result. Have a five pound bag of ordinary table salt, and, after placing the salt in a pitcher of suitable size, moisten the salt with hot water, enough to wet it through. Stand in tub and give the body a thorough rubbing with the salt.

This operation should take not less than twenty minutes to rub the entire body. The salt removes the dead cuticle that is being constantly pushed off from the body by the new cuticle forming and which cannot be removed by soap. It also produces an active circulation of blood throughout the entire body. The salt is also a fine thing for the scalp and should be rubbed into the hair and scalp at least once a week. After giving the body a thorough rubbing it is necessary to cool off properly, thereby closing the pores and eliminating all possibility of taking cold after the bath. Lie in the tub and turn the cold water on gradually, and let the water in the tub get as cold as possible, then dry off with a rough towel.

If this method of bathing is practiced once or twice a week it will keep the body in a thoroughly clean and healthful condition.—Medical Talk For the Home.

THE HOUSE TOOLS.

A Way to Have Them Always Handy In the Kitchen.

"My husband," says a correspondent of Good Housekeeping, "has found a convenient disposal of tools in common use to be a board about 1½ by 2 feet, with a shelf above and a small drawer at each end of the shelf. Nails driven into the board hold the tools, and a surprising number may be fitted into place upon it. I made a canton flannel case for his bits, much like a knife and spoon case. This is placed upon the shelf, while nails and screws fill the drawers. The whole is screwed into a convenient space upon the kitchen wall. When needed each tool is at hand and is easily replaced."

HANDY TOOL SHELF.

To the "Stage Struck" Girl.

A young girl who thinks of adopting the stage as a means of livelihood must consider many things. The most important of these is—herself. Strangely enough, this will prove more difficult than it appears to be at first glance. Introspection is not easy; it is sometimes very unpleasant. There is, moreover, no definite method by which an aspirant may learn whether or not she has dramatic ability. She must not simply think that she has; she must know it. A "stage struck" girl should never allow herself to enter the profession until she has conquered what may be simply impulse. To discover afterward that her inspiration was based merely on desire and not on self knowledge is a serious thing, and the realization often comes when it is too late to turn back. To such a one the future will loom up ominously; years filled with dissatisfaction and hard work will come, and no great success will be achieved. At last hope will die. —Sarah Bernhardt in Success Magazine.

Decorated Laundry Benches.

Since laundry benches (dignified to the name of settees) have been demonstrated to be decorative and at the same time eminently practical they have become almost a regulation part of the furnishing of a den or studio. Some of them are made with backs which, as the true laundry bench does, pull over to turn the settee into a table. But the most artistic ones are made with immovable backs, some of them great, high affairs—so high, apparently, that they turn over into a little shelf, ready to hold a vase or two or any of the other artistic bits with which den or studio is pretty sure to be loaded down. Long cushions, made with square edges, like morris chair cushions, and thickly padded, are the most luxurious of the many ways of making that hard seat comfortable. Even then there should be pillows piled up on it in an inviting heap.

How to Look Well.

No woman really need be plain. Exquisite neatness and chic attire will make any one charming. "There are many women in France," says an observer, "who in England or America would be called plain, but who are commonly spoken of as la belle Mme. A. or B. They have no beauty whatever beyond that of their own making. In France the idea of a plain girl would be laughed at. Yet Frenchwomen are not, as a rule, what is called beautiful. They only know the value of a sweet expression and a little taste in dress."

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Confirmation at St. Thomas.

The Lord Bishop of Ontario held confirmation in St. Thomas' Church yesterday morning at eleven o'clock. The attendance was very large, the sacred edifice being crowded with worshippers. The service was a choral celebration of the Holy Communion with sermon and the confirmation office. The Bishop was in splendid form and preached with great vigor, earnestness and power. He preached a very eloquent discourse, concluding with a direct application to the confirmees. The Rector presented a good class of forty, including many adults, which has been the yearly average since his coming to the parish. The Lord Bishop was very much pleased with the services and their ordering and rendition, which he declared to be unsurpassed in his experience in the diocese. The choir rendered the Easter anthem, "Now is Christ Risen," by Allen, during the offertory, in a very effective manner. The confirmation class consisted of 12 males and 28 females. A number from the Deaf and Dumb Institute were confirmed and the service was interpreted to them by Mrs. A. G. Terrill. His Lordship, previous to the laying on of hands, preached an appropriate sermon, taking for his text two passages of scripture, namely, Isaiah, 44th chapter and 22nd verse, and Isaiah, 43rd chapter and 25th verse:

"I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy sins; return unto me; for I have redeemed thee.

"I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake and will not remember thy sins."

In his opening remarks His Lordship referred to the passages he had selected as being gospel truths enunciated by the prophet. Each of the verses had a particular meaning. Mankind was rebellious against God, who was our Father and our King, and also the best friend we had. Through sin man had degraded himself and fallen away from the path of virtue, but God, as the prophet stated, would blot out our transgressions and sins. By sin we are separated from God, a great gulf is between us and the Heavenly Father. But God proposed to do and did do what we could not do for ourselves. He gave His only Son to die that we, through His death, might have our sins removed and have eternal life. The sacrifice on Calvary was for our sins. By the incarnation of the Son of God, a teacher was provided who will make known to us our needs and will guide us step by step until we are brought into that rest that remaineth for all that are true. It is our privilege to be the possessor of this inestimable blessing of having our sins forgiven. Not only have we inherited sin, but all have sinned. If we say we have no sin we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us. God sets a value upon us on account of the relationship which exists between Him and us. This fact is recognized, for God says that we are precious in His sight, are precious because we are His handiwork. He calls His own children by name. He knows where they are and what they need, and like a good shepherd, He is prepared to minister to our needs. God would have us understand that we belong to Him. In the text have we not a beautiful picture of God's intentions towards us? A record is being kept of our acts and words; they are in the memory of the all-seeing and all-judging God. Every influence, word and act of ours will go on until they meet us in God's eternity. Only the hand of God can blot out our sins. Our sins are not heaven-born, but earth-born, something of our own making, but as the dark clouds, which are earth-born, can be scattered and dispelled, and the beautiful sunshine appear, so can our sins be scattered by God, so that nothing will intervene between God and us. God requests us to return to Him; to take Jesus as our guide, who is the author and finisher of our faith. We must return to Him by the ordinance of grace.

His Lordship, just before concluding his discourse, addressed himself more particularly to those who were about to be confirmed, impressing upon them the importance of the step they were taking. The rite of confirmation was apostolic. Whilst it was a simple ordinance it was a God-given ordinance. Whilst His ordinances were all simple, of what significance they were! They must wait upon God and He would renew their strength. If they confessed their sins God had promised that He would forgive their sins and cleanse them from all unrighteousness. The devil would no doubt tempt them, but they must have faith in Christ; He would assist them and bring them off more than conquerors.

At the conclusion of the sermon the candidates were presented to the Bishop, who confirmed them by the laying on of hands.

Holloway Street.

At the morning service the pastor, Rev. R. H. Leitch, officiated. In the evening Rev. J. R. Real, of Napanee, a former pastor of the church, preached to a large congregation. His discourse was intently listened to and much appreciated. The subject was in reference to the closing hours of the life of the apostle, St. Paul. The text was from 2nd Timothy, 4th chapter, 6th, 7th and 8th verses. During the service Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Gordon rendered, feelingly, a duet entitled, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say."

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

Good congregations were the rule at the above church yesterday. At the morning service the Rector, Rev. A. M. Hubly, preached on "Atonement and Redemption," showing that Jesus Christ had made an atonement for the sins of the human race, and was the only one able to intercede between man and the Almighty. At the evening service the sermon was on "The Choice of Life." During the offertory Miss Pearl Thompson sang, very sweetly, a solo, with chorus by the choir, entitled "Cross and Crown."

Baptist.

Pastor Emerson preached at both services. Evening subject, "The San Francisco Calamity." Text, Deut. 33-27:

"The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath thee are the everlasting arms."

To what cause, said the preacher, are we to ascribe this terrible disaster? Some people contended it was a judgment from God, because of the exceeding sinfulness of the city. This position is an untenable one, according to scripture. There are two great laws in operation in nature, a moral and a natural law, and this calamity was from natural causes. What those causes were no man has ever yet been able to determine. The preacher believed that the day would shortly come when science would be able to fathom the cause of such calamities. How insignificant man's achievement seemed when crumbled into dust by the mighty earthquake. Science regarded God as an impersonal force. If God were not a personal being, who, then, controlled these natural forces? The forces of nature were powerful, but the force of love is ten thousand times greater. These calamities teach us that "a man's life constitute not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." We measure our lives by false standards, for worldly possessions are as bubbles. God blows his breath upon them and they are gone. These dispensations also teach us the uncertainty of things. God has come to some people in this calamity and set at naught all their plans for the future. He has come to some who were so busy with worldly affairs that they took no thought of eternal things. Were God to call us thus suddenly, are we ready for the call? The question is asked, why does an all-wise and all-powerful God allow these calamities to fall? The question is unanswerable. These things, however, serve a two-fold purpose. To some they serve as punishment for wrongdoing, to others they are chastisement, making us more like our Master. The great message these calamities bring is the word "Repent." We may not be called upon to pass through such an ordeal as this, but we should heed these solemn warnings and prepare to meet God. If we have Christ in our hearts we are prepared for any circumstance in life. We are in health to-day and gone to-morrow. The one thought he wished to leave with the congregation was simply this; "Prepare to meet thy God." The choir sang an anthem entitled "I will come unto you," in a pleasing way.

John Street.

"Our Father, which Art in Heaven," was the subject discussed last evening by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, being the beginning of a series of sermons on the Lord's Prayer.

During the service Mr. Cameron rendered a solo entitled "My Light and My Salvation," and also took the solo part in the anthem entitled, "Our God is Love."

Christ Church.

The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, officiated at both the services. In the evening the subject of "The Resurrection" was discussed. The text was from 1st Corinthians, 6th chapter and 14th verse:

"And God hath both raised up the Lord and will also raise up us by His own power."

During the service the choir rendered an anthem entitled, "The Conquering King," solos being taken by Miss Hilda Bell and Mr. "Ned" Henthorn. Miss Upton, of Montreal, sang a solo, "Nearer My God to Thee," with fine effect. At the morning service Miss L. Holton sang a solo entitled "Hallelujah," in excellent voice.

Bridge Street.

Rev. J. R. Real, of Napanee, preached in the morning to a large congregation and his discourse was very acceptable. In the evening Rev. R. H. Leitch occupied the pulpit. His text was from Amos, 7th chapter, 7th and 8th verses.

During the evening service a quartette composed of Misses Wilson and Vermilyea and Messrs. J. T. Burns and C. H. Vermilyea, rendered a fine selection.

Tabernacle.

"Walking by the Rule" was the pastor's subject at the morning service and the text was from Philippians, 3rd chapter, 16th verse:

"Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing."

In the anthem, "Awake, O Sleeping Heart," Miss Stork sang the solo part, and, with Mr. G. Clute, rendered a duet entitled, "My Father Knows."

Other Church Notes.

Miss Katie Bawden, in magnificent voice, sang "O Salutaris" at Vespers in St. Michael's last night. Those who heard her were profuse in their expressions of delight.

Fire Again Rages In San Francisco.

REPORT FROM OAKLAND SAYS ANOTHER CONFLAGRATION HAS BROKEN OUT.—EARTHQUAKE SHOCK IN OREGON.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Oakland, Cal., April 23.—A report reached here from San Francisco at midnight that a brisk fire is burning in South San Francisco. The fire can easily be seen from here a distance of eight miles. It is believed that the fire broke out afresh from smouldering embers that could not be subdued on account of the lack of water.

SEVEN SQUARE MILES BURNED.

San Francisco, April 23.—The area of the burned district is seven square miles. Property owners had an opportunity yesterday to inspect some of their holdings and in a measure to ascertain what damage had been done. The new modern steel buildings were found almost intact. The steel frames were in perfect plumb and apparently as strong as ever.

P. LAWLOR HAD "DARBIES" ON.

CASE OF ALLEGED SHANNONVILLE BURGLAR HAS BEEN ENLARGED FOR A WEEK.

On Saturday evening High County Constable Duffin arrived in the city from Toronto, having in charge Patrick Lawlor, whom he brought from the Queen City. The officer of the law had taken every precaution to prevent this alleged desperate burglar from making his escape whilst in transit to the city. Shackles were about his legs and a pair of handcuffs encircled his wrists. Lawlor was driven from the station direct to the county jail and lodged behind the bars.

This morning a large number were at the police court in anticipation of seeing Lawlor and hearing his trial. They were doubly disappointed, as he was not brought into court and his trial was not proceeded with. County Attorney Anderson asked for a remand of the case for one week, and this was granted by the Magistrate.

TWO MONTHS IN THE COUNTY JAIL

SENTENCE METED OUT TO ALEX. ROBERTSON FOR STEALING FROM ALBION HOTEL.

Thomas Aunger, hostler at the Albion Hotel, reported to the police yesterday that a black coat and vest, and a silver watch had been taken from his room in the hotel. Suspicion of theft pointed to two parties who were about the hotel on Saturday evening and Sunday morning, and Officer Hayes, in company with Aunger, visited Point Ann in the afternoon. The result was that the missing articles were recovered, being in a large valise which contained clothing belonging to two young men named Alexander Robertson and Frank Robinson. They were both placed under arrest and brought to the city and locked up.

At the police court this morning they pleaded not guilty. From the evidence of Frank Robinson it was evident that he was not implicated, and he was discharged. Robertson contended that on Friday evening he bought the coat and vest from a stranger giving him $1.25 for them. He also stated that he found the watch in the pocket of the vest after he bought the goods. He was unable to tell who the party was from whom he made the purchase.

Aunger, in his evidence, stated the articles were in his room on Friday night and he did not miss them until yesterday, when he desired to put them on.

The Magistrate said that the circumstances of the transaction were against Robertson and he would have to find him guilty. A sentence of two months in jail was imposed.

PHILLIPS WILL BE UP FOR TRIAL.

CROWN ATTORNEY CURRY DENIES ALL RUMORS TO THE CONTRARY — YORK LOAN LIQUIDATOR SATISFIED.

Toronto, April 23.—"The rumors that there will be no further prosecution of Phillips are without foundation," said Crown Attorney Curry to the press. "I am confident that Phillips will come up for trial at the September Sessions."

Here is the text of the letter which was signed by Mr. Curry and sent to the Attorney-General. It is understood that the form of the letter was settled by Mr. Home Smith, of the National Trust Co., Mr. J. E. Jones, and Crown Attorney Curry, at a conference held last Monday;

"April 16, 1906.

"Dear Sir, re Phillips—

"I beg to inform you that the Police Court proceedings have enabled the liquidator to make a most satisfactory settlement with the accused whereby he and his associates transfer the assets in dispute to the liquidator. He should be able and has promised, to render every assistance in his power to the liquidator in settling the complicated affairs of the York Loan and allied companies.

"I, therefore, take the liberty of asking you to consider whether the ends of justice and the interests of the shareholders have not already been sufficiently served by what has been accomplished, and would recommend that the prisoner's conduct in handing over the assets be taken into account when the matter comes up again.

"In handing over the assets the prisoner claims that he always regarded himself as a trustee, and had always hoped and believed that by means of the allied companies he would eventually enable all the shareholders of the York Loan to withdraw without loss, and he claims further that the unavoidable real estate, which is said by the liquidator to be worth over one million dollars, defeated his plans.

"I am of opinion that the great bulk of the money alleged to have been wrongfully taken by the above settlement found its way back to the liquidator of the York County Loan Company, and this has been accomplished without litigation in the civil courts and without the delay and expense incident thereto. Indeed, the delay might have destroyed the value of the assets secured by this timely settlement which the prisoner himself has facilitated and rendered possible."

Jewish Rite Performed In City Yesterday.

An interesting Jewish ceremony took place in this city yesterday morning, at the home of Mr. J. Samuels, Wharf St., when the rite of circumcision was performed on his infant son, the ceremony being conducted, with all the usages of the Jewish church, by Rev. Rabbi Abderkowitz, of the Elm Street Synagogue, Toronto. In addition to the relatives, a number of invited guests were present, who observed with interest the solemn ceremony which dates back to the time of Moses. A rich feast was partaken of at the conclusion of the ceremony.

ESTIMATES OF DEAD THEY VARY GREATLY

Practically every bank in San Francisco will be rebuilt. H. P. There is going to be a new city, and I am going to do all I can to make is the greatest city in the world."

One of the problems facing the relief committees on both sides of the bay is the sheltering of the Chinese. They are without homes and without prospects of securing any. They can get no land. Terrible Strain Tells.

The terrible strain of the last few days is beginning to tell on the people. The reaction has come, and suspense over missing relatives and friends is causing illness and in some cases insanity.

At Central avenue and Oak street a man became insane and attempted to kill his wife with a cleaver. He had to be arrested to prevent him from injuring himself or family.

Dead Less Than 300.

Washington, April 23.—The loss of life at San Francisco is estimated at less than 300 in a telegram addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury by Superintendent of the Mint Leach.

Mayor's Proclamation.

Mayor Schmitz has issued the following proclamation, which citizens are instructed to observe:

"Do not be afraid of famine. There will be abundance of food supplied. Do not use any water except for drinking and cooking purposes. Do not light any fires in houses, stoves or fire-places. Do not use any house closets under any circumstances, but dig earth closets in yards or vacant lots, using if possible, chloride of lime, or some other disinfectant. This is of the greatest importance, and the water supply is only sufficient for drinking and cooking. Do not allow any garbage to remain on the premises, bury it immediately. Pestilence can only be avoided by complying with these regulations.

"You are particularly requested not to enter any business house or dwelling except your own, as you may be mistaken for one of the looters and shot on sight, as the orders are not to arrest but shoot down anyone caught stealing."

POLICE STOP VESSELS.

Many Tons of Food Thus Received For the Stricken City.

San Francisco, April 23.—For two days and nights a squad of police has been performing patrol duty in Golden Gate Strait. Two lieutenants and eight men, aboard the tug Sea Rover, Friday night, prevented the departure of several vessels from the harbor, for the reason that they carried food. All vessels were stopped and compelled to drop anchor in the stream or return to the dock, where the food was unloaded and turned over to the authorities. On Thursday a similar detail of police succeeded in saving for San Francisco many tons of food that would otherwise have been carries to cities up and down the coast.

Nelson Raises Funds.

Nelson, B. C., April 23.—Mayor Gillette and a committee of citizens today raised about $1,800 for the relief of San Francisco by public subscription.

Peterboro is Prompt.

Peterboro, April 23.—In response to a telegram from Vancouver to Mayor Best asking the city to send aid to the sufferers in San Francisco, a special meeting of the city council decided to forward sixty cases of Quaker Oats, and the American Cereal Co.'s agent in Vancouver has been wired to ship the goods at once. Their value is about $200.

How New York Helps.

New York, April 23.—One hundred wagons glittering with gilt and enamel, the property of Barnum & Bailey's circus, started Saturday from Washington Park, Brooklyn, on the most remarkable invasion of New York ever recorded in its municipal history. All of the wagons bore signs announcing that immediate contributions would be received along the route traversed of all non-perishable articles which might be sent to San Francisco at once. Everybody on the route gave everything they could spare for suffering strangers.

Sympathy Acknowledged.

Ottawa, April 23.—The following telegram has been received at Rideau Hall:

Washington, D. C., April 21.—Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, Ottawa:

I thank you for the kind message of sympathy, which I assure you I deeply appreciate. Signed, Theo. Roosevelt.

Relief Reaches $11,500,000.

New York, April 23.—It was estimated last night that the fund rapidly is nearing the enormous total of $10,000,000, and will have passed that figure by Monday, when Congress, it is announced, will add $1,500,000 to the $1,000,000 already appropriated.

'QUAKE, THE LEVELLER.

Santa Rosa in Ruins and Laborer and Millionaire on an Equality—100 Dead in the Town.

Santa Rosa, Cal., April 23.—The list of known dead now totals fifty-eight, and it is believed that 100 is a conservative estimate of the fatalities here. Five bodies were recovered yesterday from the wreckage. The entire business section is in ruins, and practically every residence is damaged, fifteen or twenty being badly wrecked. The damage to residences was caused principally by the sinking of foundations.

The brick and stone business blocks, together with the public buildings, were all thrown flat. The court house, hall of records, the Occidental and the Santa Rosa Hotels, the Athaeneum Theatre, the new Masonic temple, Oddfellows' block, all the banks—everything—went, and in all the city not one brick or stone building is standing, except the California & North Western Depot. It is almost impossible for an outsider to realize the situation as it actually exists here. The completeness of the devastation is really the redeeming feature, for it puts all upon exactly the same basis, commercially speaking.

All on a Level.

Bankers and millionaires are going about with only the few dollars they happened to have in their pockets when the crash came, and are little better off than the laborers who are digging through the debris. Money practically has no value here now, for there is no place to spend it. Almost everyone here is sleeping out of doors, being afraid to enter their homes, except for a short while at a time, until repairs have been made. There are plenty of provisions. Some have been supplied by other towns, and much has been brought in from the surrounding country. Before the fire gained headway, several grocery stores were emptied of their contents in anticipation of what might follow.

Another Town Demolished.

Berkeley, Cal., April 23.—A private letter received Saturday by Postmaster Schmidt brings the information that Fort Bragg, one of the principal lumbering towns of Mendocino County, was almost totally destroyed as a result of a fire following Wednesday's earthquake.

The bank and other brick buildings were levelled by the tremors. But one person of the 5,000 inhabitants was killed, but scores were injured.

Relief expeditions at once were sent to Fort Bragg from surrounding towns and villages, and the people of the ruined area are being cared for.

Felt 'Quake in Vessel.

Astoria, Ore., April 23.—The steamer Alliance, which arrived yesterday from Eureka, reports that the Point Arena lighthouse was destroyed by the earthquake. The vessel, while off Eureka Wednesday morning, was severely shaken. The captain thought the vessel had struck bottom, but after makings soundings, found that she was in 12 fathoms of water. The captain changed his course to westward.

"Moses Oates" is Dead.

Toronto, April 23.—Death removed Saturday morning in the General Hospital J. Gorden Mowat, who, under the pen-name of "Moses Oates," was at one time a well-known figure in literary and journalistic circles in Toronto. Many years ago Mr. Mowat owned the Galt Reformer. In the early nineties he founded a publication called The Lake Magazine, which only ran for about ten issues. Failure in that venture, however, did not discourage him, for he made arrangements for the publication of The Canadian Magazine, the first issue of which was brought out in March 1893. Mr. Mowat was its editor for two and a half years.

Two Tragic Deaths.

Sarnia, April 23.—Carpenter Wesley Stauffer, who was in jail here, had an attack of heart failure Saturday, and died in the hospital during the night.

Renford Johnston, 24 years old, formerly bartender at the Northern Hotel here, was found dead in the stable hayrack there yesterday. He probably fell from the hay-loft. Dr. Bradley will hold an inquest.

BRITISH BRIEFS.

England's first representative parliament assembled in 1265.

Caesar conquered Britain in the year 55 B. C. The Roman occupation continued nearly 500 years, or until 410 A. D.

In 1679 was passed the habeas corpus act, which, along with the right of trial by jury, is the great bulwark of Anglo-Saxon liberty.

The great plague was introduced into London in 1664 by bales of cotton imported from Holland; 100,000 persons succumbed to the disease in one year.

Cromwell's long parliament assembled in 1640; Charles I. was beheaded Jan. 30, 1646, and Cromwell became lord protector in 1653. In 1660 the Stuarts were restored to the throne.

Westminster abbey, where the kings and queens of Great Britain are crowned, was originally a Benedictine monastery. It was founded by Sebert, king of the East Saxons, about 616.

Ballooning As a Sport.

A French lawyer whose sport is ballooning thinks it a mild, safe and comparatively inexpensive diversion. He has made sixty ascents without injury to himself. A well made balloon will last ten years—longer than an automobile—and will cost only from $400 to $1,000. Its upkeep is confined to the cost of the gas and the return journeys by train after a trip. "In keeping with the amount of pleasure to be had out of the sport," says this enthusiastic aeronaut, "I know of no other which may be compared with it at the price."

Many a tongue shakes out its master's undoing.—Shakespeare.

BUILDINGS STRETCH WRITHE LIKE SNAKE

Vivid Description by Participant in San Francisco Horror.

Timbers Groaned, the Grinding, Creaking Sound, Then Came the Roaring Street, and Always, Says a Refugee, In Front of the Panic-Stricken Men and Women Was a Wall of Flame—In Front of the Fire Always Walked the Soldiers—Streets Rocked.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 23.—Most thrilling of all stories yet related of adventures in stricken San Francisco during the days of horror and nights of terror is that of a party of four, two women and two men, who arrived here after having spent a night and the greater portion of two days on the hills about Golden Gate park.

This party was composed of Mrs. Francis Winter, Miss Bessie Marley, Dr. Ernest W. Fleming, and Oliver Posey, all of this city.

All were guests at the Palace Tuesday night, but the party was formed in the streets of San Francisco Wednesday morning after the second shock had made the Palace untenable. They were strangers until then.

To a reporter Dr. Fleming told of his adventures.

"I was sleeping in a room on the third floor of the hotel," said Dr. Fleming, "when the first shock occurred. An earthquake in San Francisco was no new sensation to me. I was there in 1868, when a boy of 10 years old, when the first great earthquake came. But that was a gentle rocking of a cradle to the one of Wednesday.

Buildings Creak and Groan.

"I awoke to the groaning of timbers, the grinding, creaking sound, then came the roaring street. Plastering and wall decorations fell. The sensation was as if the buildings were stretching and writhing like a snake. The darkness was intense. Shrieks of women, higher, shriller than that of the creaking timbers cut the air. I tumbled from the bed and crawled, scrambling toward the door. The twisting and writhing appeared to increase. The air was oppressive. I seemed to be saying to myself, will it never, never stop? I wrenched the lock, the door of the room swung back against my shoulder. Just then the building seemed to breathe, stagger, and right itself.

"But I fled from that building as from a falling wall. I could not believe that it could endure such a shock and still stand.

"The next I remember I was standing in the street laughing at the unholy appearance of half a hundred men clad in pajamas and less.

"The women were in their night robes; they made a better appearance than the men.

"The street was a rainbow of colors in the early morning light. There was every stripe and hue of raiment never intended to be seen outside the boudoir.

"I looked at a man at my side; he was laughing at me. Then for the first time I became aware that I was in pajamas myself. I turned and fled back to my room.

Fires Began to Appear.

"There I dressed, packed my grip, and hastened back to the street. All the big buildings on Market street, toward the ferry were standing, but I marked four separate fires. The fronts of the small buildings had fallen out into the streets and at some places the debris had broken through the sidewalk into cellars.

"I noticed two women near me. They were apparently without escort. One said to the other, 'What wouldn't I give to be back in Los Angeles again.'

"That awakened a kindred feeling and I proffered my assistance. I put my overcoat on the stone steps of a building and told them to sit there.

"In less than two minutes those steps appeared to pitch everything forward, to be flying at me. The groaning and writhing started afresh.

"But I was just stunned. I stood there in the street with debris falling about me. It seemed the natural thing for the tops of buildings to careen over and for fronts to fall out. I do not even recall that the women screamed.

"The street gave a convulsive shudder and the buildings somehow righted themselves again. I thought they had crashed together above my head.

All Clad in Street Clothes.

"The two women arose and started to walk. I followed in a kind of aimless sort of way. The street was filled with moving things again. The rainbow raiment had disappeared, and all were clad in street clothes. Everyone was walking, but there was no confusion. We did not even seem in a hurry. Down Market street the flames were growing brighter.

"We walked with our luggage to the St. Francis. Fires were burning down toward the ferry, but the fire department had turned it. We had faith in the fire department.

"Soon I became aware that squads of soldiers were patrolling the streets. It appeared perfectly natural. I do not think I wondered why they were there.

"Men and women were all about us. We looked at each other and talked, even tried lamely to joke, but every few minutes a convulsive quiver swept through the city. The others seemed to be shivering.

"I noticed that the eyes of the men and women were rolling restlessly. Their tones were pitched high. It seemed to grate on my nerves. Then I fell to wondering whether I was talking shrilly too.

"I went to a grocery without a front and bought a few supplies that would make a cold lunch. The grocer did not even overcharge me. He was particular to give me the right change.

Fire Peril Grows.

"The soldiers came and told us to move on. It seemed the natural thing to do. By this time the fire was creeping dangerously close. We would have walked to the ferry. We tried it on a score of street, but that wall of fire was always there. It seemed to creep across in front of us.

"And in front of the fire always walked the soldiers. A number of times I hired express wagons. We would ride for a few blocks and get out on the sidewalk. In not a single instance were we charged more than a reasonable price for the ride.

"Once we loitered until the soldiers came up. A rough fellow, who had been standing by my side, tried to dart through the line. He looked like a beach comber.

"A young lieutenant caught him by the coat. 'Here!' he called to his men. 'Shoot this man.'

"I hurried on, without looking back. I don't remember that I heard a shot fired. But at the time it seemed so trivial a matter that I did not pay much attention."

Worse Than Inferno.

One of the women said: "San Francisco after the earthquake and during the fire? Did you ever see the picture of hell which hangs in the Santa Barbara mission? It was something like that, only a thousand times worse."

Fire Chief Dead.

San Francisco, April 23.—Chief D. J. Sullivan of San Francisco's fire department, died yesterday from the effects of injuries received on the morning of the earthquake.

Shot to Save Suffering.

Los Angeles, April 23.—"The most terrible thing I saw during the San Francisco fire," said E. Call Brown, mining engineer and geologist, "was the futile struggle of a policeman and others to rescue a man who was pinned down in burning wreckage. The helpless man watched the flames approach in silence till the fire began burning his feet. Then he begged to be killed. The officer took his name and address and shot him through the head."

Shot by Sentry.

A son of T. P. Riordan, a real estate dealer, was shot and killed yesterday a few feet from his residence. Young Riordan was on his way home and had a bottle of whiskey in his coat pocket. A soldier on duty ordered him to stop and throw the whisky away, and when Riordan refused the soldier immediately shot him dead.

A workman employed at the Gerson tannery was on his way home yesterday morning when halted by a sentry. The workman explained that his wife was dying and tried to pass. The sentry shot at him, but missed, and the workman ran back into the tannery.

Chinese Were Excited.

Chas. C. Lanferweiler of Fort Dodge, Ia., who was at the Grand Hotel, says: "I passed through Chinatown just as a shock came, and all Chinatown was in the streets gesticulating, crying, running around and acting like a lot of monkeys. If left to themselves, I know they must all have perished. The authorities drove them up the hill and out of range of the fire. Superstition mastered them, and all sorts of gods were produced from all sorts of pockets and joss paper was scattered along the way."

Scots Guards Punished.

Aldershot, Eng., April 23.—The decision of the War Office in the case of the officers of the first battalion of Scots Guards, charged with the ragging of Second Lieut. Kennedy of the regiment, because he was unable to meet certain regimental expenses, promulgated Saturday, relieved Lieut.-Col. Cuthbert of his command. Adjutant-Capt. R. J. Stracey received a light sentence, and four lieutenants charged with connection with the affair lose a year's seniority. Lieut. Clark-Kennedy has left the regiment.

Bondsman Hudson Dead.

Toronto, April 23.—John W. Hudson, 179 Ossington avenue, died suddenly at his residence yesterday morning. Deceased was in the employ of the Dominion Government at the custom house for a great many years. He was the father of Georgina and Lillian Hudson, who figure largely in the York Loan investigation, now going on. At the time of his death he was one of the bondsmen for Jos. Phillips.

Paymaster Shot Dead.

Port Henry, N. Y., April 23.—D. C. Rosenberry, paymaster of the Witherbee, Sherman & Co. mine, was shot and killed Saturday at Minaville, while carrying the pay to the employes at the Fisher Hill mine. The alleged assassin, a man named Brown, escaped to the hills and now is pursued by a posse of 500 men.

Strikers and Troops Clash.

Valcennies, France, April 23.—A sanguinary encounter occurred Saturday between 5,000 striking miners from Denain and a detachment of troops detailed to prevent the miners from interfering with non-strikers. Many officers, soldiers and strikers were severely wounded.

Riots at Lens.

Lens, France, April 23.—There was further rioting here Saturday. The strikers erected barricades, destroyed the railroad and pulled down the telegraph and telephone wires. Four army officers were wounded during the charges, which the troops made against the rioters.

Grain Elevator Burned.

Beeton, April 23.—G. T. Somers & Co., elevator, with 3,000 to 5,000 bushels of grain, was burned yesterday morning about 1 o'clock.

Caught at His Own Game.

They were drummers, and had landed in a rural hotel far from any place of entertainment.

It was agreed to spend a pleasant hour asking each other questions, but should anyone ask a question he could not answer himself he had to stand a supper to the company.

A bullying fellow proposed that the new man, the novice on the road, should begin.

"Very well," said the novice. "You've all seen the hole that a squirrel makes in the ground?"

"Yes," replied the drummers, in chorus.

"You have possibly observed there is never any earth at the mouth of it?"

"Yes."

"Do you know why?" proceeded the novice. "No."

"Well, it is this. The squirrel, in digging his hole, commences at the bottom and scrapes all the earth inside."

"Ah, my man," said the bullying one, "but how does he get at the bottom to begin?"

"That's a question of your own asking,' said the novice. "Better answer it or—pay for the supper."

He paid. The novice is called "novice" no longer.

Universal Postal Congress.

Rome, April 24.—It is understood that the universal postal congress has given votes to Australia, New Zealand, the Transvaal Colony and the Orange River Colony; a deliberative vote to Ethiopia, and a consultative vote to China. The next meeting of the Congress will be held in 1911 in Australia. A reduction of the international letter rate is not likely, but it is probable that the proposition that the maximum of weight be increased to 20 grams (5-7 of an ounce), will be accepted.

Oldest Britisher Dead.

London, April 24.—The death was announced in County Tyrone, Ireland, yesterday, of George Fletcher, the oldest British subject, so far as known. He was 113 years old. King Edward recently presented Fletcher with a gold snuffbox.

Copenhagen, April 24.—News reached here yesterday that two Danish trawlers, with forty men on board, foundered recently in a gale off the coast of Iceland. A third boat, with a crew of thirty, is also believed to have been lost.

The House Electrified.

Halifax, N. S., April 24.—The house of Daniel Mooney, at Milton, Queen's County, was torn to pieces by an electrical storm on Saturday night and several other houses in the vicinity damaged.

San Francisco, April 24.—The new San Francisco that will rise from the ashes of the old city was in its first stages yesterday of rebuilding. After five days of confusion and almost superhuman effort on the part of the citizens of California's metropolis in the great task of sheltering, feeding and otherwise caring for the homeless thousands, complete order has been established and attention turned to the future.

Throughout the great business quarter, where the devastation by fire was most complete, dangerous walls were razed, buildings that had not been disintegrated by fire were inspected with a view of re-occupancy, and ground was cleared for the immediate construction of buildings in which to resume business at the earliest possible time.

Fed by System.

Homeless persons were fed yesterday in a systematic manner. At the stations food and drink, comprising bread, prepared meats and canned goods, milk and a limited amount of hot coffee and even fruit were served to all those who applied. About 1,500 tons of food are moved daily from the waterfront.

General health conditions are satisfactory. While the number of cases at the various hospitals has increased each day, sickness is mostly due to exposure and worry. The most encouraging feature is the absence of anything like contagion or an epidemic of disease of any nature whatever.

Gen. A. W. Greely yesterday took command of the federal troops at this post, superseding Gen. Frederick Funston, who will act under Greely's orders.

Law Courts Grind Again.

Legal business will be resumed today. All the superior judges will open their twelve departments in the Jewish synagogue, California and Webster streets. Criminal cases will have precedence.

Brutally Shot by Patrol.

Major H. C. Tilden, a prominent commission merchant of this city, a member of Gov. Pardee's staff and one of the foremost workers of the general relief committee, was shot and, almost instantly killed in his automobile early yesterday at 22nd and Guerrero streets, while returning from Menlo Park. He was shot by men supposed to be members of the citizens' patrol. A friend of the challenger was cut in the face by a bullet and R. G. Seaman, acting lieutenant of the Second Company of the Signal Corps, was struck by a spent bullet. He suffered no injury. Tilden was one of the foremost workers in the general relief work. The Red Cross flag was displayed on his car. Seaman claims the guard began shooting without warning or challenge and continued firing after the car had passed them. Several policemen came running up and arrested three of the men who did the shooting. The men were in khaki uniform."

Scant Mercy For Fiends.

The soldiers on guard in Golden Gate Park, where most of the refugees are encamped, shot and killed a number of men who had been attacking women. No mercy is shown these brutes. In every case they were shot down without parley. A terrible example was made of one of these fiends. Two guards, attracted by the piercing screams of a young girl, caught the man and between them led him to a shrubbery. There, with bayonets ready to run him through they compelled him to dig a grave. That grave he knew was his own. As he finished each of the soldiers brought his rifle to his shoulder and fired. The man stumbled forward into the grave, shot twice through the heart. He was buried on the spot and a wooden tablet placed there to warn others of a like fate. All night long marauders skulked about the business portion of the city.

Sightseers Not Wanted.

The following telegram from J. C. Stubbs, traffic director of the Southern Pacific Railway, who is in San Francisco, was sent yesterday to Assistant Traffic Director N. C. McCormick in Chicago:

"Please ask the press generally to advise all people generally not to try to reach San Francisco. Outsiders not allowed to land here. They would only add to the congestion."

Drenching Rain Adds to Misery.

A drenching rain fell upon San Francisco Sunday night. From midnight until 3 o'clock it poured and drizzled at intervals, while a high wind added a melancholy accompaniment whistling and sighing about the ruins of the buildings in the burned districts. Five days ago when the fire catastrophe was in its infancy this downpour would have been regarded as a mercy and a godsend. Yesterday morning it could be regarded in no other light than as an additional calamity. It meant indescribable suffering to the tens of thousands of persons camped upon the naked hills, and in the parks and open places. The downpour has aggravated the already unsanitary condition of the camps, and will doubtless add great numbers to those already crowding the regular and temporary hospitals of the city.

After several hours of clear weather there was another precipitation at 6 a. m., and again at 9 o'clock the fall was resumed and continued at intervals throughout the day.

Of individual instances of suffering, the number is legion.

Relief is For the Chinese.

Washington, April 24.—President Roosevelt sent the following letter to Secretary of State Taft yesterday:

"Sir,—According to the newspaper reports the suffering and destitution are peculiarly great among the Chinese I need hardly say that the Red Cross work must be done wholly without regard to persons and just as much for Chinese as for any others. Please wire Dr. Devine at once to see that this is done. Will it not be well also to wire to Gen. Funston to the same effect. I know nothing of the matter beyond what appears in the daily press.

(Signed) "Theodore Roosevelt."

NOTES FROM MANY SOURCES.

Seismographs in the Imperial University show that the San Francisco earthquake reached Japan in 11 minutes.

A carload of flour, ground in the Regina Roller Mills and grown on Regina Plains, was sent forward from Regina as a gift of the city.

The area of the burnt district is fifteen square miles.

Funds have been started at the various Australian capitals in aid of the sufferers by the San Francisco earthquake. Premier Seddon, on behalf of New Zealand, has offered $25,000.

Both Ottawa and Toronto observatories recorded Sunday's earthquake shocks in Oregon.

Winnipeg Council on Saturday appropriated $10,000 to the fund, of which $5,000 was wired at once. About $500 in private subscription have been made.

Deceiving the People.

Great were the controversies regarding the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme during the last Dominion election. The course advised by the Opposition of a railway to be owned by the people was rejected. It is more than likely that before many years have passed that the remaining provinces will regret that they did not follow Ontario's example, refuse to give the Laurier Government a majority, and thus prevent a deceit being practiced upon the people.

The main contention as to the railway was as to its cost. Now the time has come to judge about some of this. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with all the information which a Government can—or ought to—secure, stated in the House that the road between Winnipeg and Moncton would be built for $28,000 a mile; the Opposition, without such sources of information, said that it would at least be $40,000 a mile; now the first contract has been let by the Government for $54,000 a mile!

What would any plain business man think of another, with every facility open for obtaining prices of material, etc., who calmly sent in a bill for nearly double? It is time that people aroused themselves to what is going on at Ottawa. Is it reasonable to suppose that a country, young, rich and prosperous even as Canada is, can stand year by year such gross stupidity and mismanagement as this? The total cost, flauntingly and wantonly given by the Government was $69,160,000; the total cost under the contract will be $133,380,000, or nearly double. Even supposing that some portions of the road cost a little less than $54,000 a mile, there are other expenses to be incurred, bridges, steel rails, sidings, stations and all betterments.

That "Tainted" Money and Its Future Uses.

The final disposition of the money impounded at the Gamey inquiry is probably the last echo of that famous case, which had so important an influence in the general elections of 1905. The amount, $2,000, is given for charitable purposes. The newspaper organ of Hon. G. W. Ross remarks that the familiar question, "Where did the money come from?" has never been satisfactorily answered. Well, as the London Free Press points out, that is a matter of opinion. Most people, however, have come to believe that it came from the source so definitely and minutely described by the member for Manitoulin in his various statements both before the court and on public platforms. He said it came to him as the result of a corrupt overture made to him in the first place by "Cap." Sullivan on behalf of the Ross Government, and, secondly, through interviews which he had with Mr. Aylesworth, solicitor of the Ross Government, and other accredited agents. It was given to purchase his vote as a legislator to keep the Ross faction in power. Where the agents of Ross found the money is the only mystery attaching to it in the public mind. But that does not matter. Whether they took it out of the treasury which they controlled and fought so desperately to hold on to, or obtained it as the result of toll levied on the officials and grafters who were bled for the political fund, is neither here nor there. What was of importance to know at the time was the use to which, the money was being put. And long ere this most people have been convinced that it was used precisely in the way Mr. Gamey described, namely, as an attempted bribe for a vote, which did not come off. That question has therefore been answered quite satisfactorily to the people of Ontario. The Ross organ in Toronto discusses the morality of accepting this "tainted money" which has been allotted for charity. It says "the money is certainly tainted. • • in the use its owner sought to make of it." Quite so. That was the view taken by the member for Manitoulin when he received it from the owner or purveyor, and forthwith told about the political filth with which the Ross agents had besmirched it.

Some people are wondering why certain of the schools did not hoist their flags in honor of St. George's day yesterday. As a prominent member of the great firm of John, Sandy and Pat, the Englishman's day should be honored. So should all the other national saints' days. What are the flags for, if not to fling to the breeze on nighdays and holidays?

And that reminds us: In the swift land across the line, flags are flying on most of the public buildings every day in the year. Why should that not be done here? A flagstaff without a flag looks like a vacant house. It has a forlorn air. The Union Jack should float from all public flagstaffs every day during the good old summer time. It brightens things up and let's visitors see that we are alive.

The Globe's Ottawa correspondent says there is general sincere regret at the retirement from the position of Conservative leader, in the Senate of Sir Mackenzie Bowell who for nearly forty years has been the fearless and honest servant of the people. His rugged eloquence, his unswerving integrity, his blunt advocacy of what he deemed to be right, the correspondents adds, are qualities which have caused Sir Mackenzie to be held in high esteem.

Does evangelism pay. It sometimes appears to pay the evangelizer, at all events. The net results of Crossley and Hunter's revival campaign of five weeks in Brantford were one thousand converts, receipts over $1,000, and expenditure $400. The two revivalists received something over $300 each for the five weeks' work.

Discussing this, the Hamilton Times says: "How were these two men able to do in five weeks what all the Christian forces and all the ministers in Brantford were unable to do in five years? Possibly the solution of the question is to be found in the explanation that others sowed the seed and the revivalists reaped the harvest."

• • •

A Brantford paper tells us that "the evangelists were brief and to the point." Certainly they set a fine example to their brother ministers in that respect. But is it not just possible that evangelists who obtain such "results" use methods which ministers who stay in one place for years either could not or would not use?

Dr. Wild again sees the end of the world coming. The good old doctor has been seeing such things all his life, but he's here yet.

Residents in the neighborhood of the Corby park are considerably incensed at the action of Ald. Knox in erecting a large and by no means sightly building there, which the aforesaid residents complain is not only entirely unnecessary but liable, in the end, to become a public nuisance, particularly offensive to those who reside in close proximity to the park.

Surely Ald. Knox did not get his plan for that building from the landscape architect who was in this city lately! What does the Civic Improvement Society think of this latest stroke of genius?

• • •

But hold. Perhaps the worthy alderman means the building for a dog pound. Anyhow, he is being pretty well pounded (figuratively, of course) by people who live near the Corby park.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE CONVICT'S DAUGHTER." TO-MORROW NIGHT.

An original melodrama of absorbing interest, "The Convict's Daughter," will be offered at the Carman to-morrow night. It portrays phases of human nature that are encountered every day. Stupendous scenic features, sensational realism and heart interest are its dominant elements. Five acts are required to develop the story. The first is a Southern homestead; the second, Col. Gould's drawing room; the third, a shabby home in the quarries; the fourth, a jail, and the fifth is a repetition of the first scene. The principal characters are true to southern life. J. A. Fraser, jun., the author, has placed these characters naturally and arranged life-like scenes from beginning to end. The play is strongly cast and magnificently produced.

"THE HOLY CITY."

The advertised engagement of Clarence Bennett's great play is well worthy of the attention it excites. Men will ever differ in opinions, but truth is acknowledged even when convictions regret its brilliant uses. It is difficult to conceive of anything but good coming from performances of "The Holy City;" hardened sinners cannot dispute its facts, humble sinners will accept its teachings and sanctined saints may gain instead of losing, if they absorb the play from the rising of the curtain until it closes to view the artist-author's dramatic and picturesque story of Jerusalem, its people, its sorrows and its joys. The second season of this remarkable drama is great in its achievements. Manager Carman should be thanked for securing the splendid tragedy and company for his theatre next Friday evening.

Dr. Wild Thinks the World's End is Coming

Toronto, April 23—The San Francisco horror is read by Dr. Wild as a heaven-sent warning of the approaching end of all things, even as he has interpreted the Mount Pelee eruption and the outcome of the Russo-Japanese struggle.

"It simply shows that Providence is getting ready in Nature, and giving us proper warning of the great earthquake to come during the battle of Armageddon," he said.

Dr. Wild remarked that while in charge of the Plymouth Congregational church in Los Angeles, a few years ago, he felt the unpleasant sensations of earthquakes on two occasions.

"The natural impulse of everybody is to flee from the houses into the streets," he said, in recounting his first experience. The rocking and shaking of a chandelier over his head was the first noticeable sign, then the floor appeared to quiver and tremble. The shocks came with sharp distinctness, and the wall of the room was rent across diagonally. The second time he felt a visitation of the sensation was different, there being a steady, continuous tremor, causing a feeling of vertigo, such as might be experienced on a sea voyage

Itching Piles

If you are acquainted with anyone who is troubled with this distressing ailment, you can do him no greater favor than to tell him to try Chamberlain's Salve. It gives instant relief. This salve also cures sore nipples, tetter and salt rheum. Price 25 cents to be had at R. Templeton's drug store

The Tinsel Maker of Delhi.

Here is an artist's pretty description of a tinsel maker in Delhi, India: "The silken thread from a ball under the worker's feet as he squats on the ground runs over the hook and is attached to the spindle. One rapid sweep of the latter along the worker's thigh sets it going and both the slender, supple hands are free, one for the thread, one for the reel of tinsel, which in a flash shoots upward to arm's length coiled like a snake about the spinning thread. The sunlight and the gold tinsel together flash up the yellow silken thread, seeming to set it on fire."

Coughing.

"There is nothing so irritable to a cough as a cough." Constant coughing is precisely like scratching a wound on the outside of the body. So long as it is continued the wound will not heal. Let a person when tempted to cough draw a long breath and hold it until it warms and soothes every air cell, and benefit will soon be received from this process. The explanation simply is that the nitrogen which is thus refined acts as an anodyne to the mucous membrane, allaying the desire to cough and giving the throat and lungs a chance to heal.

Niagara Outdone.

A Scotchman was taken by an American friend to visit Niagara falls. Already his feelings as a patriot had been a little frosted by the persistent blowing of his conductor on the greatness of things American. "Did you ever behold anything so wonderful as that?" asked the guide. "Aye, man, at Peebles I saw a peacock wi' a wudden leg," was the unexpected reply.

An Improbable Story.

Diogenes, lantern in hand, entered the village drug store.

"Say, have you anything that will cure a cold?" he asked.

"No, sir, I have not," answered the pill compiler.

"Give me your hand," exclaimed Diogenes, dropping his lantern. "I have at last found an honest man."

Comforting.

"George, did you know that I was going to marry your sister?"

"Well, I heard her say so, but she's had that idea about so many other fellows that I didn't feel sure about it till you told me."

Pleasant All Around.

Mr. Facetious (having his portrait painted)—I suppose you want me to look pleasant? Artist—Yes, and pay in advance. Mr. Facetious—What's that for? Artist—Oh, so that I can look pleasant too.

Letters In England Not Private.

You cannot regard any letter you may send through the post as being private. The government has a legal right to open any letter or parcel passing through the post and is also entitled, of course, to use any information thus obtained in furtherance of the interests of the law. At one time the official and secret opening of "private" letters was of such common occurrence that postoffice employees were sent to France to take lessons from an expert in the art of opening and resealing letters. In 1812 the postmasters of Manchester, Nottingham and Glasgow were instructed to "open all such letters as should appear to be of a suspicious nature and likely to convey seditious information," and so recently as fifty years ago there was an agitation to deprive the government of the right to open letters passing through the post. The agitation failed, however, so that your letters are still liable to be opened, and the law would be on the side of the official opener.—London Answers.

Snake Hunting With Noses.

When the Australian aborigine is pushed and can find no other game, he catches snakes for food. With his wonderful brown eyes he can see the faintest trail where a snake has zigzagged through the dry moss and leaves. At nighttime his broad nostrils take up the chase, and, stooping down among the bushes, with a tough forked stick in his hand to support him, he follows the track as unerringly as a bloodhound. When he runs a snake to earth, if he cannot surprise it in the open and kill it by a sudden blow of his stick, he squats over its hole, making a low hissing or whistling sound with his lips. Soon the snake puts its head out of the hole and peers round. In an instant the forked stick descends and fixes it to the ground by the neck, and the black fellow, seizing it behind the head, so that it cannot bite him, drags it out of the hole and either twists its head off or pounds it on the ground till its back is broken.

Humanity and Machinery.

Machinery is the cornerstone of modern society, the very foundation on which law, science, ethics, the arts, even the state itself, rests. It is so new that we do not yet know its poetry. We do not yet understand. Only two generations have lived beside the highway of steam; only one has seen the Bessemer converter transform the blacksmith into the master builder of ships and towers. The sewing machine, the far speaker, the typewriter, are common things of today, accepted as a matter of daily convenience, and yet are they teachers of the people. Machines that come close to our lives and homes insensibly teach truth, precision, the adjustment of universal laws to human needs, respect for that wise American idea that labor saved is labor released for higher and nobler toil. The machine is the head master of the high school of the race.—Reader Magazine.

At a French Wedding.

A wedding feast is an important ceremony in France among all classes of society. Even among the very poorest of the Parisians a wedding banquet is the occasion for a reckless expenditure of money in the purchase of wine and viands. In Brittany a wedding is even a more gorgeous affair than in Paris. At a recent wedding ceremony in Brittany the guests numbered 1,200, and three bullocks were slaughtered to provide them with meat. Wine was consumed in large quantities, and in addition forty barrels of cider was consumed.

The Currant.

The currant of commerce is said to be one of the most nutritious forms of food, a pound of the little berries from Greece containing more than three times as much actual nourishment as the same weight of lean beef. "Currants," says one authority, "should really be eaten every day. They contain all the beneficial properties of the apple, but in greater proportion." The most important fact connected with them is that they supply the body with muscle building and nerve sustaining material in a form ready for speedy digestion and assimilation.

Lion of Babylon.

One of the oldest and at the same time most interesting bits of pictorial work which have been preserved from antiquity is that of the lion of Babylon, and so careful was the workmanship that even after the lapse of several thousand years not only the outline, but the color, is very distinct. The figure was used very generally for decorative purposes in ancient Babylon.

Childhood.

Man begins life helpless. The babe is in paroxysms of fear the moment its nurse leaves it alone, and it comes so slowly to any power of self protection that mothers say the salvation of life and health of a young child is a perpetual miracle.—Emerson.

How It Was.

The Magnate—Do you mean to say, sir, that you will charge me $1,000 for this operation if I live and $2,000 if I die? How is that? Great Surgeon—If you die it will be so much easier to collect from the estate.

Caustic.

"And you are ready to forgive your daughter for eloping with me, sir?"

"Yes, I'll treat her kindly. The poor girl will be sufficiently punished in having you for a husband."

Paradoxical.

Brown—Walking down this steep hill is pretty trying, isn't it? Green—It is, indeed; it i regular uphill work.

MANAGING SERVANTS.

The Lesson That One Woman's Experience Taught Her.

My experience has taught just this: Our servants are not our equals in point of education. Then let the educated mind be high in authority. No system can be strong where there is not a good leader. Let our servants feel and see that we know just as much about their work as they themselves do. To do this we must look into things carefully, for no woman ignorant of the ins and outs of a house can control her maid. Any mind will always respond to the superiority of knowledge. It is not necessary to parade this knowledge. But if Mary knows that by coming to her mistress she will be helped out of any difficulty she respects that mistress.

Yet, while we are above our servants in the management of our homes, the mistress and maid are equals under the laws of our land. The mistress who is wise will not pry into the private affairs of her maid. We cannot and do not demand all her time. A ten hour day seems to me impracticable, for housework in its nature does not admit of a ten hour day unless we can resolve it into specialties. That may work well where there is more than one maid, but to the average American housekeeper it would mean great deprivation.

The real, true, earnest spirit of leadership always counts. There is no humiliation in prompt obedience. By strength I do not mean a show of bossism, but a quiet, just, earnest spirit that will impress others with a desire to do good work.—Good Housekeeping.

HOUSE OR HOME?

There Is a Great Deal of Difference Between the Two.

My dear mother, how do you do? I beg leave respectfully to ask whether you are a homekeeper or a housekeeper.

The two do not always go together. Many a good housekeeper is a poor, very poor, homekeeper, as is proved by the haste her children manifest about getting out of the house. Many a poor housekeeper is a good homekeeper, as is proved by the willingness of the fledgelings to linger in the nest. The home is more than the house by all the difference between the value of flesh and blood and souls and that of wood and stone and bric-a-brac. Bright faces are better than shining stoves or glass or furniture; pure souls than exquisite raiment. Putting first things first goes a long way toward making home "a little heaven on earth."

When mother's face shines with interest and enthusiasm, when it is calm with love's deep purposes, the simplest home is more beautiful than a palace where love is not. The home that has books and games and music, even if they sometimes adorn (?) the floor instead of a closet shelf, a home in which father and mother join with the children in home work and study and play and entertaining mates and chums—this is the home in which children may longest be kept and influenced and guided.—Mother's Magazine.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Apple pie is delicious with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.

When cooking rabbit always remove the kidney fat and the flavor of the meat will be greatly improved.

Bananas fried in the fat remaining in the pan in which sausages have been fried make a very appetizing dish to serve with the sausages.

Slices of fried bread or ordinary toast spread with anchovy paste are delicious if covered with scrambled eggs. This is a very nice supper dish.

If in whipping cream the amount of cream is limited add the white of an egg, which will increase the quantity without hurting the flavor and will make it whip much quicker.

Stewed prunes, pitted, spiced to taste with vinegar, cinnamon and cloves, sweetened and cooked to the right consistency, make a delicious spiced sauce to serve with chicken, turkey or veal.

How to Drift Apart.

It is his wife—almost always his wife—to whom a man owes his reputation, and considering that a man's success depends upon his reputation it does look as if his wife might be a little more careful of it. Of course women say that they never talk about their husbands to anybody but their mothers and their dearest friends, whom they can trust, says Dorothy Dix in the Philadelphia Bulletin. As for thrashing over John's faults with mother, that way lies permanent alienation of the affection, for seen through mother's spectacles a husband's tiniest weakness looms up as big as an elephant. Moreover, after having taken a stand on a pedestal before mother as a persecuted wife it is almost impossible to climb down and off and forgive hubby as you would like to.

A Torn Belt.

The danger from a belt torn out by books and eyes is that the cloth of the skirt may yield to the strain and make an ugly tear. It should be mended as soon as possible after the necessity for it is discovered. Slip a bit of heavy canvas in between the double thickness of the belt at the point where it is torn; mend and sew the hooks on through it. It is hardly likely to tear out again. But a better way, if you have time, is to replace the belt entirely. For this there is nothing better than the flat, strong silk belting which is coming into favor so definitely for all sorts of tailor made belts. It makes a strong, flat belt, with none of the bulkiness about it anywhere which so often characterizes belts made of a double fold of lining, strengthened at the ends.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

THE TWISTING SNAKE.

A Cardboard Toy That Is Easily Made and Operated.

Here is a paper toy for nimble fingers to make. It is called the twisted snake—at least that's what our grandfathers used to call it years ago.

To make it, cut a circular piece of cardboard about four inches across, mark off the dotted lines, as in Fig. 1, with a pencil, and cut along them with a sharp scissors. Fasten a knitting needle or a stiff wire that looks like one to some kind of a standard that will hold it steady. Perhaps mother will give you some very thin wire hairpins for this stand. Carefully press a little dent or socket in the cardboard near the end of the tail (o in Fig. 2), and rest the spiral on the knitting needle. Place the snake on the radiator, the register or the stove, and see the hot air make him wiggle and twist.—New York Herald.

FIG. 2

THE TWISTING SNAKE.

ORIGIN OF MOTHER GOOSE.

She Was a Mythical Old Frenchwoman, a Story Teller.

The earliest date at which Mother Goose, says the Dial, appears as the author of children's stories is 1697, when Charles Perrault, a distinguished French litterateur, published in Paris a little book of tales which he had during that and the preceding year contributed to a magazine known as the Recueil, printed at The Hague. This book has a frontispiece in which is pictured an old woman telling stories to a family group by the fireside, while in the background are the words in large characters, "Contes de ma Mere l'Oye" ("Tales of My Mother Goose"). These tales were eight in number, consisting of the following: "Little Red Riding Hood," "The Sisters Who Dropped From Their Mouths Diamonds and Toads," "Bluebeard," "The Sleeping Beauty," "Puss In Boots," "Cinderella," "Riquet With the Tuft" and "Tom Thumb," or "Little Thumb" (Petit Poucet), as he is here called. "Riquet With the Tuft" is the only one of the collection which seems not to have maintained its popularity in English and American collections.

It is thus clear that Mother Goose was of French extraction and of at least respectable antiquity. But thus far nothing has been heard of her "Melodies." She began her existence as the raconteur of fairy tales, not as the nursery poetess.

Volcanic Eruptions.

The ancient Romans worshiped volcanoes as the god of fire. From this god's name our word volcano comes. There are three classes of volcanoes—active, intermittently active and extinct. There is a volcano called Stromboli in the Mediterranean which is one of the active class. Its fiery glow makes a beacon light for the sailors. Examples of the second class are Etna and Vesuvius. These volcanoes are like chimneys through which the powerful gases that are in the earth escape. If these gases could not find some outlet it might mean total destruction to the layer of the earth on which we live.

It is not definitely known how many volcanoes there are, but the number of them is supposed to be more than 300. Two-thirds of that number are on islands. About 114 of these are in America.

Sleepers That Slip and Sleep.

Here is a string of sentences which may be used as stimulating mental gymnastics when we leave the "Land of Nod." A sleeper runs on sleepers, and in this sleeper on sleepers sleepers sleep. As this sleeper carries its sleepers over the sleepers that are under the sleeper, a slack sleeper slips. This jars the sleeper and its sleepers, so that they slip and no longer sleep.

The Lion's Mouth.

The use of the lion's mouth as the vent of a fountain is quite common, so much so that it cannot possibly be considered accidental. As a matter of fact the custom came to us from the Egyptians, who adopted it because the annual inundation of the Nile takes place when the sun is in the constellation Leo, the lion. The allusion is too obvious to need pointing out.

The Persian Zoo.

Did you ever see a two headed cat,
With five legs that are black and blue,
And horns like a cow and elephants ears
And neck like a mutton stew?

Did you ever see a mouse with wings,
Its tail like a kangaroo,
Its nose like a couple of scrambled eggs?
I often have—haven't you?

Just lie on the floor near a Persian rug,
And the figures that stare at you
Are the strangest animals ever seen
Either in or out of the zoo.

HE'S AN ORATOR.

When Jim gits up to make a speech,
I tell you what, you're sure to hear him,
He'll whoop an' holler, yell an' screech,
No other talker can come near him.
It ain't no milk-an'-water stuff
Jest whispered to you, like some fellers;
It's allus hot an' strong enough,
An', as I said, he fairly belters.

He don't pretend to be perlite
When speakin' of the other party,
It's no kid-glove, silkstockin' fight
He makes; he lams 'em good an' hearty—
Jest talks right out an' takes the cask;
He ain't none of your careful hinters,
But shakes his fist an' pounds the desk
An' stamps the platform into splinters.

I like to hear ol' Jim orate,
You bet he sets the eagle screamin'
He'll wake you up an' set you straight
If you've been layin' back an' dreamin'.
He may not talk a lick o' sense,
His logic you can't always foller,
But, all the same, ol' Jim's immense,
It's worth your while to hear him holler.

The London, England, Medical Times complains that there are too many doctors. The Medical Register for 1906 contains 39,060 names, which is 56? more than in 1905, and 12,500 more than 20 years ago.

If not absolutely sweltering in heat, London was very near it during last week, and several cases of heat apoplexy, two having resulted in death, are reported at the hospitals. Thirty men out of 170 of the First Battalion of the Buffs regiment were bowled over by the heat during a seventeen mile march on Thursday—and had to be conveyed to hospital in ambulance wagons.

Mark Twain, at a dinner in New York, was attacking Christian Science in his whimsical way. "I only know of one convert to Christian Science," he said, "with whom I can feel any sympathy at all. I despise this man, but at the same time I can understand him. He came to me one day and told me he had become a Christian Scientist. 'What? No more doctors?' said I. 'No more doctors. No more medicine,' he said firmly. I was pained and grieved. I thought his mind must be going. He told me casually, as he was putting on his coat, that his mother-in-law had been taken seriously ill at his home a few days before."

The city publicity idea is taking hold in earnest all over Canada. The latest example is given by Regina, the population of which is about 5,000. The Board of Trade of that city has decided to employ a publicity commissioner, to raise $5,000 from the citizens for the current year's expenditure, and to ask the City Council, which is understood to be quite willing, to raise another $5,000. Regina, therefore, commits itself to spending $10,000 in the next year for the establishment of a publicity department, in order to attract capital to the city.

The most celebrated historic earthquake is certainly that appalling event which occurred at Lisbon on November 1, 1755. Within eight minutes the whole city was reduced to ruins and 50,000 inhabitants were swallowed up. Perhaps the most awe-inspiring event was the disappearance without leaving a trace behind it of the great Lisbon pier, with its crowd of terror-stricken fugitives, who had flown to it for safety. The earthquake also did incalculable damage at Coembra, Oporto, Malaga, Fez, in Morocco, where thousands of people perished, and at the Madeira Islands. According to Humboldt, a noted student of seismic disturbances, it extended over an area equal to about one-eleventh of the earth's suface.

PIANO EXPERIMENTS.

Playing by Sweeping the Strings With a Feather.

Open wide your piano so that the wires are exposed. Over the wires place sheets of music, and when you strike a tone you will find that it has a rattling sound. If now you play a tune in the same manner, with the sheets of music still lying on the strings, it will sound as if the instrument were a banjo. Anyhow, it is a good imitation.

Now remove the music sheets and press down gently, but firmly, the keys belonging to any cord. Take the simple cord C. E. G. for example. The keys must be pressed down without sounding them and held down while some one gently brushes the strings with a feather or a straw. The effect will be as if the cord were played far away and is heard by you as very soft tones.

Change the cord, always pressing down the keys without sounding them, while the feather still sweeps the strings lightly. In this way you may modulate or play a slow piece, and the effect will be very beautiful, indeed, as if heard from a great distance.

The reason of this is that ordinarily a damper rests against each string, but when the corresponding key is struck or pressed down the damper is raised. In sweeping the strings with the feather, lightly, only the strings that are undampered sound, the others being held mute by the dampers, but if the touch of the feather is too heavy even the other strings may sound, so your care must be in making a light and delicate touch.

Now press down a key gently and hold it. Strike very hard the octave above this key, but do not hold it after striking the tone. When the wire of the tone struck has been sufficiently dampered, so that it does not sound so loud, the pressed down key will be heard to "sing" clearly, even though it was not struck. This is because every note struck is composed of several notes, being in reality a cord in itself, and each note contained in that cord causes the corresponding note in the keyboard to vibrate, or "sing," in sympathy if held down in like manner.

The other notes that will sound under these conditions will always be the fifth above the octave, the second octave and the third and fifth above that, and these tones that sound are called "overtones."

For illustration, if C in the lower part of the piano be struck, any or all of the notes that follow will sound if their keys are first pressed and held down.

Not For Strangers.

"What in the world does that mean?" asked the traveler through a sparsely settled region on the cape. "There's no such place on my road map."

The man whom he addressed first took a leisurely survey of the traveler and his horse and then turned his eyes toward the weather beaten sign which bore the single word "Tolpim."

"That ain't a name," he said, with dignity; "it's jest an indication. It means, 'To Long Pond one mile.'

"It's plain enough to folks from near by that's hunting for the pond, and we don't reckon on strangers taking much interest."—Youth's Companion.

Such a Waste!

"I wonder," said the man of a statistical turn, "I wonder how much powder is destroyed daily in useless salutes?"

"There must be a lot," said the frivolous girl, "but I suppose women will go on kissing each other just the same."

Historic Toronto Relics.

The old drinking fountain presented to Toronto by the late Angus Morrison, once mayor of Toronto, which has been a familiar object on West Market street for many years, will be removed to a location on Front street, between the two market buildings. The Toronto chapter of the Ontario Society of Architects protested against the proposal to demolish the slowly-decaying belfry on St. Lawrence Market. The members of the chapter expressed the opinion that the historic interest and architectural beauty of the belfry should protect it from the hand of the destroyer. The property committee has recommended that $1,600 be expended in repairing the tower.

A Morning Dip.

A dip and a scrub every morning in a shallow bath—that is, in a foot or more of tepid water—is very refreshing and can be readily borne by almost any one but a confirmed invalid. If at the finish one can do so without absolute suffering, it is well to dash a few handfuls of cold water over the face, neck and shoulders, then to rub dry vigorously with soft towels.

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

with a hand that shook. He drained it at a draft and turned to Hood. The innkeeper glided to his chair, and something passed from hand to hand. Sercombe put the torn fragment upon the table before him. He looked at me, as if inviting me to a similar demonstration. We were to proceed by moves, then.

"I have [illegible] evidence that this is the document," I objected.

"Nor I, in your case," he retorted.

"Very well," I assented. "We will take it point by point, but I fear we shall find it a tedious job."

I drew the paper from my pocket and laid it before me. At the other end of the table I could see Sercombe's green eyes bulging in his head as they fastened upon the white thing under my hand. His mouth dropped, and a portion of the glow receded from his face. Montgomery stared. A tense feeling stiffened the attention of all. I felt my heart throb in the silence, and then suddenly there was a sharp exclamation from Sheppard, and the next moment I was conscious of a clatter and two figures struggling beside me. The affair lasted but a few seconds, and then Hood was hurled deftly back against the window, and Sheppard flung upon the floor with a crash a long Spanish dagger.

A hush fell on the room. Sercombe turned pale, and his eyes shifted uneasily. Had it been murder that was intended? If so, I could have sworn that Sercombe was no party to it.

"It appears that we can't do quite without the law," said Sheppard, placing his heel upon the weapon. Hood, breathing deeply, remained in the shadows of the window.

"What does this mean?" I asked.

Hood, black and lean, but immovable as to feature, stepped from his corner. "I beg your pardon, sir," he explained, "but I suppose the gentleman objects to my wearing it. It isn't a pretty weapon, sir, exactly, but I have found it useful, sir. I thought there would be no objection. Mr. Greatorex, sir, more especially as the gentleman here carries a revolver." He indicated Montgomery, who grew red and stammered:

"I beg your pardon. Awfully sorry. I—I—here it is," and extracting a Colt from under his waistcoat he threw it on the table in front of me.

Sheppard and I exchanged glances.

"Come, sir," said Sercombe's voice, rising in an imperative key, "but this remarkable scene requires an explanation. Why may not Mr. Hood wear what weapon he likes?"

"Was there anything?" I asked of Sheppard in a whisper.

He frowned in embarrassment. "To have waited for anything would have been too late," he answered in the same tone. "I had to forestall. I guessed, but I'll swear I guessed right. I can't prove it. I caught the gleam." Then he turned quickly from me and picking up the dagger offered it to Hood. "I am sorry for this misunderstanding, Mr. Hood," he said sweetly. "If I had stopped to think I should have known that a man like yourself would only carry a weapon for some good purpose. But I am a creature of impulse, full of mistakes, but of a warm heart below all, and I offer you the dagger back in token of my trust in you," with which he sat himself down in his seat and ostentatiously played with Montgomery's revolver for the rest of the interview.

"Come, come. That is well said and well ended," said the captain genially, and he was evidently very much relieved at the conclusion of this scene. "And now, Mr. Greatorex, and to show that it is not both sides that are so unnecessarily suspicious, if you will be so good as to take this paper from me I will trust you to read out the whole document."

This proposal, coming on the top of what had happened between us, astounded us all, as you may suppose. But Sercombe was rarely at a loss for some amazing movement, and he knew well enough that he was perfectly safe with me, whereas he was also aware that I knew I was absolutely unsafe with him. Therefore he assumed a golden air of courtesy and lofty faith, as between gentlemen. But these reflections are not to the point, for there was I, with the two parts of the precious document in my hands and four pairs of bright eyes burning upon my face with their eager interrogation. You may conjecture my emotions and the way my pulse ran. I spread the paper I had received from Sercombe upon the other, smoothed it with the back of a knife and, forthwith deciphering the following composition, read it slowly aloud to the company:

"I, Sir Ralph Vyvian, being now in my thirtieth year and upon the eve of exile through the malicious treachery of friends, this 15th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1646, do hereby, as follows hereunder, give and proclaim to all or any of my descendants, lawfully begotten, or their heirs, the ensuing information. It being in the twentieth year of the reign of our beloved sovereign his gracious majesty and in the fifth of the lamentable and abominable strife with the disloyal houses, I was besieged in Ivor castle by one Colonel Morgan, attached to the army of the houses and more particularly to the notorious traitor Sir Thomas Fairfax. I held this castle for the king for three days and three nights, but upon the fourth day, this said 15th day of April, through the accursed act of traitors, the enemy hath gained entrance by the towers and even now is pressing upon the garrison. And thus I set down these several facts here upon the instant of the final essay—to wit, that I, being the custodian of divers cases of treasure, gold pieces, jewels and the like, destined for his majesty's uses, having taken counsel with my steward and my friend Sir John Clunes, have concealed this great treasure in a privy place within the castle precincts and do hereby deposit this said writing also in a secret hiding place. And to whomsoever of my descendants or their lawful heirs this shall fall, in the event of my death or exile, I charge them to deliver the same unto his gracious majesty King Charles or unto his heirs, the sovereign kings of this realm, as a dutiful subject, being held in trust for that purpose.

"And here is how ye shall find the treasure: If ye will descend by the stairway in the guard room within the northern tower ye will find a gallery among the donjons of the basement. Keep upon this, feeling upon the walls, until ye shall touch the corner where the castle turneth to the south"—

Now I paused for a moment, for here the document which Sercombe had given me was ended. I cast a glance at the others as I laid it aside and took up the other portion. Sercombe's face was appalling in its marks of greed. The vulture shone from Hood's eyes. I resumed:

"Turning this corner, it is necessary to proceed upon the western side of the castle for the space of thirty footsteps, and at the close thereof to pause and survey the walls. If ye will then determine a height of five feet from the footway, there will be hereupon disclosed a small knobbe, the which revolving will give access to a large cupboard within the wall. Observe diligently upon the back of the cupboard and where the oaken lining adjoins the stone. Here will be a spring, the which pushing, a doorway shall open behind the cupboard, and ye shall find entrance to an interior vault. A flight of stairway leadeth"—

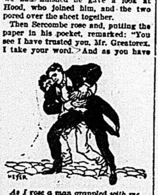
At this point, as you will remember, the document grew illegible and nothing but the blur of faint characters was discernible. But we had all that was necessary in that explicit narrative of the dead Cavalier, and in proof of this up jumped the captain, his green eyes shining with emotion, and—

"You will give me a copy of that, sir?" he asked sharply.

I nodded.

"You are welcome," I said. "If you will write I will dictate." And forthwith, pen and paper being fetched, we proceeded upon the odd task. When we had finished he gave a look at Hood, who joined him, and the two pored over the sheet together.

Then Sercombe rose and, putting the paper in his pocket, remarked: "You see I have trusted you, Mr. Greatorex. I take your word. And as you have now the whole document of the late Mr. Kesteven in your possession I wish you joy of it."



As I rose a man grappled with me.

"There is one word more," said I sternly. "The man who stole this piece of paper from its owner is morally guilty of his death."

"Pish!" he exclaimed lightly. "We can't make an omelet without breaking eggs, Mr. Greatorex. And now I must reluctantly wish you goodby. I owe you an excellent dinner, and if fortune favors me I shall look forward to returning it. There is no need to part on bad terms."

He held out his hand, but ere I could accept or refuse it Sheppard sprang forward. "Allow me, captain," he said.

"Ah," smiled Sercombe, in no way abashed by my hesitation, "it is a pity you and I are not cast for companions, Mr. Sheppard."

"At least," said Sheppard, "as scoundrels we can respect each other."

Sercombe broke out laughing, and with one glance at Hood, in which, as I thought, he appeared to offer a question, he marched out of the room. The innkeeper followed, and Sheppard went after them, full of geniality to the last and calling for Captain Sercombe's cloak. Out of the window I saw them pass under the dim light of the oil lamp before the doorway, and Sheppard was still ushering them across the courtyard to the gateway of the castle.

Suddenly I heard my name called in a loud voice, and Montgomery started to his feet and threw open the window. This gave upon the courtyard from the northerly side of the castle. In an instant I recognized the cry of Sheppard, piercing shrilly through the noise and clatter of a struggle. Shouting to Montgomery to follow me, I dashed out of the room and down the staircase, almost falling upon the slippery cobble of the courtyard in my haste. As I rose a man grappled with me; but, being now strung to fighting pitch by my excited anticipations, I flung him heavily to the stones, where he lay inert, and I leaped over his body to the assistance of Sheppard.

CHAPTER IX.

YOU will remember, if I have been explicit enough, that the entrance to the castle lay across the drawbridge and by way of a great stone archway running through the width of the easterly wing. This passage, which was not more than ten feet across, was in effect a vault twenty feet high and thirty feet long. It was here that the noise attracted me, and into this narrow channel I ran, breaking tumultuously upon the aggregated knot of men that seemed to struggle in the uncertain light. Stars illumined the sky very faintly, but in that passage the gloom was heavy, and I could perceive very little. As I was casting about, tossing among the swaying bodies, I saw immediately to my right the fair head of Sheppard rise, struck with the evening glow from without. Forthwith I dashed the body nearest me to the ground and with my fist dislodged another man in front of me. Then I heard Sercombe's voice raised in angry remonstrance. I gathered nothing, neither words nor sense, from it, but, occupied merely with the physical lust of battle, drove right through the press of the melee to Sheppard. It seemed to me then that there were dozens of people crowded within these narrow walls, but I believe, as a matter of fact, that there were only some eight of us. Sheppard rose and fell and rose again.

"Ned! Ned!" he called, and at the sound, plunging upon human bodies, I lurched and went under. A stampede of feet seemed to rush over me. I felt battered and bruised; the wind was all out of my lungs; but, slowly edging on my stomach toward the wall, I drew out of the press. As I did so I heard a great dull noise, thud, thud, intervening upon the sounds of the struggle, and presently, my eyes being now accustomed to the darkness, I caught sight of Montgomery's tall form, his arms uplifted and wielding a heavy bar of iron.

"Bravo!" I cried and, struggling to my feet, pushed toward him.

"Turn, you fools! Curse you, turn!" said Sercombe's voice.

I was conscious then of white teeth and a grotesque screw neck that rose up before me, and even while I put up my hands to choke it I felt the warm sting of a knife in my shoulder blade. By some magical thought, dawning at the moment, I recalled Montgomery's revolver, which I carried in my breast pocket, and, producing it, fired at the bestial form before me. There was a sharp cry, the enemy appeared to recoil, and then Montgomery's flail descended in a pitiless shower of blows. Of Sheppard there was no sign.

Seeing that the affray was turning in our favor, I sprang to the side, and, opening a small doorway in the southerly drum tower, rushed up the stairs. It was fortunate that I had made so complete a study of the castle. I found the crank I wanted and turned the wheel, putting forward all the strength I had in my muscles. Slowly the mighty portcullis descended, shrieking as it fell, but this, as I had hoped, following upon the report of my revolver, and accompanied as it was with Montgomery's continuous and powerful blows, proved the turning point for our enemies. As the groaning gate descended there were cries uttered in a foreign tongue, and a rush ensued for the gateway. Leaving the machine to revolve by its own impetus, I flew down into the archway. Sercombe stood in the light expostulating. Montgomery's weapon stretched some one flat upon the stones as I entered, and the man crawled off. I fired another chamber of the revolver aimlessly, and the flash lit up the passage while the sound reverberated dully from the groined vault. The portcullis fell lower and Sercombe was driven across the drawbridge by his retreating allies.

"Dead or living, they shall have him," said some one in my ear, and I beheld Sheppard, his face smeared with blood, dragging a body in his arms. Together we thrust it forth, and it lay halfway across the threshold. The portcullis dropped inexorably and was now within a foot of the ground. The man lay under the range of its iron spikes. The wheels creaked above, and the distance shortened. Montgomery ran forward and shoved the body outward. But it still hung halfway. And then Sercombe came rapidly back and, stooping, by a swift movement drew the inanimate form from beneath the iron spikes of the drawbridge. He said no word, but merely glanced at us as we stood behind the grille.

As Sercombe's figure faded blackly into the night I turned and peered into the gloom of the archway where my companion stood.

Sheppard struck a match, and the tiny flame cast a precarious light upon the three of us. Two streaks of blood crossed Sheppard's forehead.

"First blood and first honors," he said.

Montgomery breathed like a blacksmith.

"It was a mean trick," he observed.

An acute pain struck suddenly through my shoulder. "The foreigners use their knives aptly," I remarked.

"They do that," said Montgomery fiercely. "One devil has pierced my stomach through."

"Let us go back to the house," I said and, setting the example, turned. Sheppard's light went out, and as the flame vanished the blue-black darkness fell like a pall again. We walked back into the castle.

"What about this wound, Montgomery?" I asked anxiously.

The boy stood up straight, his well cut face severe and immobile.

"It's no wound," he rejoined. "A pin prick."

"Oh, well, let us see," I said carelessly.

He stripped off his shirt and coat, and a great red bulging spot met my eye below the breast. Sheppard put his fingers on it.

"That wants a bandage," he said, and, meeting my eye—"no, there's nothing much in it. A nasty place, but merely superficial."

"We'll have old Toms over tomorrow," I said.

"The doctor?" queried Sheppard. "But what about"—

"Oh, I dare say we can compose some sort of lie. Besides, as a medical man, our confidences are sacred."

"That's true," said Sheppard, and a little silence fell between us. "Well," he resumed presently, "can we sleep, do you think?"

"I think we are likely to have a lively night," I answered. "And for me, I am in no mood for bed."

"Nor I," declared Montgomery.

"Very good," says Sheppard. "Then what about this treasure?"

"Precisely what I was thinking," I said.

"Let us see the papers," said he.

"Oh, I have them burning in my mind," I answered. "And if all are agreeable, we may take a lantern. They won't trouble us just yet."

Montgomery wrenched at the knob.

But just at that moment came a knock at the door, and Mrs. Main showed in the open doorway, wearing a face of alarm.

"Mr. Montgomery's pistol went off by accident," said Sheppard promptly. Mrs. Main apologized and retired.

"I think we shall have to square the old lady or get rid of her," I observed.

"Leave that to me," says Sheppard cheerfully.

"Well, come along," said I, and, seizing the lantern, I stepped out into the courtyard and made for the entrance to the northerly drum tower.

Sheppard broke a jest or two at the entrance as we stumbled up the stairs, but once we were in the passage and had descended into the basement a deep silence enveloped us. The corridor rang with our feet, and the great slabs of stones were damp, to be felt even through our boots. As we proceeded on the way I noticed that now and then a narrow passage branched off to the right, and on each occasion, at the farther end, I caught the soft glow of the external lights of the night. From this I gathered that the chambers we were passing (whatever was the use to which they had been put) were cut off by exiguous channels to the outer wall of the castle and breasted by gratings upon the moat. One of these passages we explored, and by peering through the grating, set with heavy iron bars, we were able to perceive that the floor of the sepulchral corridor was buried some feet below the level of the moat itself, for the gratings stood high above our heads and were only reached by climbing. I assumed that they stood just above the proper level of the water.

We were now, we judged, upon the western face of the castle—that is to say, upon the back parts which looked upon the park of trees and the brook behind, where the hill (or pitch, as it was called) rose in a thicket to its uttermost summit. We had twice turned at right angles and, pausing, consulted the document once again for the sake of certainty. We had now to proceed some thirty paces. Suddenly I stopped.

"The wall," said Sheppard, who had the paper by heart as well as myself, and forthwith set to fingering upon the right hand.

"There is no doorway here," he observed in a low voice, "and yet this should be a chamber such as we have passed already."

"Five feet from the ground," I said in equally low tones; "that is what it says."

"Is it here?" he whispered.

Sheppard gave vent to an exclamation. "Got it," he said sharply. "Throw the light this way."

I moved the lantern forward, and sure enough there under Sheppard's hand stood out a round iron knob or handle in the huge masonry.

"Press," said I.

"No; turn," said he.

Nothing ensued upon his action. "Let Montgomery try," I suggested.

The boy stepped forward and wrenched at the knob.

"It's stiff with rust of centuries, but it's set in iron," said Sheppard. "We shall want oil."

"Oil be hanged!" said Montgomery. "I'll do this or die."

He swung, doubling on himself, and the veins jumped in his forehead.

"You will move your wound," I protested. Montgomery said nothing, but renewed his exertions, and with a creak the knob turned and a gap grew in the wall.

"Hurrah!" said Sheppard, his voice ricochetting down the musty corridor.

"Hush!" I enjoined. "Pull it open." The two tore back the cupboard door, and my lantern flashed on an appalling space of blackness.

"There is nothing here," said Montgomery.

"We're not finished, you duffer," said Sheppard eagerly. "Feel along the back wall. Here, let me. Oh, the devil! I'm too short!"

Thrusting the lantern into Sheppard's hands, I sprang at the wall, and with a leap seated myself on the floor of the cupboard.

"The back is wooden," I said. My fingers ran swiftly across the oaken surface and presently stopped. "The lantern," I called to him.

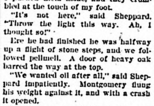
Sheppard let the lantern fall in his excitement, and in a moment we were plunged in darkness. At the same time there arose a sound on the grim silence of the corridor. I drew in my breath, and I think every one did the same. I felt rather than heard Montgomery fumbling with his revolver. Ten, twenty, thirty seconds passed, and then Sheppard struck a match.

"It's the infernal wind," he exclaimed.

The light flared in his face as he relit the lantern, and I noticed that it was wild and burning. With tremulous fingers he handed me the lantern, and the light shone on a bit of steel I held under my thumb. I pressed, and with a jerk the oaken screen fell back. I put out a hand and encountered nothing.

"I'm going through," I said in a whisper. "Follow me. I'll leave the lantern here. Heaven knows what we shall find."

I let myself softly down below, and my feet struck the stone of the floor once more. Sheppard and Montgomery followed. We cast the light about us. We were in a dungeon closed within absolutely blank walls. In the corner some rags and paper lay heaped. I pushed them aside, and they crumbled at the touch of my foot.



The treasure was there before our greedy faces.

"It's not here," said Sheppard. "Throw the light this way. Ah, I thought so!"

Ere he had finished he was halfway up a flight of stone steps, and we followed pellmell. A door of heavy oak barred the way at the top.

"We wanted oil after all," said Sheppard impatiently. Montgomery flung his weight against it, and with a crash it opened.

Montgomery, overbalanced with his effort, staggered and fell upon the threshold, but Sheppard, who was next to him, paid no attention and, turning, looked at me. The light made no way upon the great darkness.

"Do you know where we are?" whispered Sheppard. "This is below the keep. Shall we go in?"

"Certainly," I said, "get Montgomery up." He pulled the lad to his feet, and slowly we shoved back the huge creaking door.

The chamber into which we were now come was small and square and, like that below, barred by solid masonry and unrelieved by window or grating. I found later by calculation that this must be in the very heart of the keep itself and so wholly disparted from the rest of the castle that the noise of ordnance would scarce have penetrated its deep and dismal recesses. My eyes were drawn as by a magnet to the farther corner of the barren cell, in which I could perceive some formidable shadows wavering beneath the dull, uncertain light of my lantern.

Sheppard also had descried them and, plunging forward with a cry, flung himself upon his knees.

"They are here right enough," he called. And at his words Montgomery and I approached him. I held the light above his head, throwing the faint beams across his shoulder. There were three large oaken cases standing upon legs and simply carved upon the face. The dust lay deep on them, as upon the floor of that interior dungeon. Sheppard brushed the dust away and seized the lock. The hinge fell back to his touch, and slowly he lifted the massive lid.

The light shone still upon dark shadows, but, stooping a little lower, I thrust it into the mouth of the aperture, and our noses hung over the sides of the box together.

The treasure was there for certain. There it lay spread before our greedy faces, the gold and the silver and the precious stones that had been destined to save one king from death and another from exile. I let the pieces slip through my fingers—guineas, moidores, circlets of gold and silver, amulets and all the material gems of the market.

"How much is there?" asked Montgomery.

Sheppard seemed to ponder, measuring rudely with his finger and computing the superficial area of the boxes.

"No one can say offhand," said he, "for there are the jewels, for one thing, among which are rubies. Now, rubies of that size"—and he pounced upon one—"are worth little short of a thousand pounds."

Slaves to Rheumatism

Freed by "Fruit-a-tives"

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Rheumatism and Rheumatic pains by removing the poisons which cause the disease. Rheumatism means poisoned blood. Too much urea or tissue waste is retained in the blood, owing to defective action of the bowels, kidneys or skin. The retained urea becomes uric acid, which inflames nerves and joints and thus rheumatism is produced.

MRS. F. H. DENNIS, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., writes as follows: "I think 'Fruit-a-tives' are fine. I am using them for rheumatism, and have not felt it since I started to take them."

Fruit-a-tives or Fruit Liver Tablets.

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Rheumatism by greatly stimulating the action of the liver, kidneys and skin. "Fruit-a-tives" make each of these vital organs do its share of nature's work properly. "Fruit-a-tives" rid the system of excessive urea and uric acid—and so purify and enrich the blood and build up the general health, that there can be no rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices, concentrated and combined by our discovered process, which makes them much more powerful medicinally. Then tonics and internal antiseptics are added and the whole compressed into tablets.

If your druggist does not have them, don't take substitutes. Sent prepaid on receipt of price—50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50.

SPOTLESS SERVICE.

Service over the Lake Shore Railway may well be called spotless service. Throughout this entire system there is a noteworthy lack of dust and dirt. Sparkling linen and white-clad waiters greet the traveller in the dining cars, and this "spick and span" appearance extends throughout the train. One steps down at a journey's end over the Lake Shore as clean as when he boarded the train. Cleanliness is but one feature that has made The Lake Shore the most popular road in America. Others are its luxurious coaches, absolute safety, highest speed and punctuality. Tell the agent to have your ticket read "Via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway," and write for information concerning rates and routes to J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N.Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, Ohio, or W. J. Lynch, Pass'gr Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

FARM AND FIRESIDE

Useful Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

THE INCUBATOR.

Mr. Chas. Grasley reports as follows: I placed my incubator in a well ventilated room up-stairs. My machine is a No. 3, and I placed 220 eggs in it. At the sixth day I tested and removed all infertile eggs. I commenced airing them and turning them on the second day. After I tested them, I aired the eggs twice a day. About seven o'clock in the morning, I carefully removed the eggs from the machine, laying them on a stand I had prepared, being extremely careful not to jar them. If the room was chilly and cold I spread a thin woolen blanket over the eggs to prevent a sudden change of temperature, for I believe that the eggs may become chilled before they are properly aired. After they had been aired sufficiently, I took a soft woollen cloth, dipped it in lukewarm water and drew it over the eggs. Having removed a couple of rows from one end of the frame, I rolled the balance to that end from which they were taken and replaced the eggs removed at the other end, while I repeated drawing the wet cloth over them again, thus thoroughly wetting erican fruit in size, shape and color, this once a day after the sixth day.

If the room is quite cold as it sometimes is at the first of the season, you can use the water quite warm. Now to be sure that you are not using too much moisture this way, dip your fingers in the water and touch them on the eggs, and if your fingers stick to the eggs in the manner similar to which your lips will stick to a new clay pipe, then continue to use the cloth, and if this sticky feeling is not so prominent just sprinkle them with quite warm water.

I made it a habit to cool the eggs, for a long time. During the last batch I left my eggs out three hours at a time, but of course the room was very warm. One thing everybody should avoid is using the incubator in a room where a draft strikes the eggs while airing them.

AGRICULTURAL ITEMS.

New Chinese Fruits.

The persimmon, which is highly esteemed in China, is thought to be less astringent than the American persimmon. It grows large and is a good keeper. It is asserted that probably the best all-round fruit in China is the pomelo. This resembles the American fruit in size, shape and color, but is sweeter and has less of the bitter quality, while the flesh is more perfectly separated into sections, as in the case of oranges. It has better keeping qualities than the orange and is strongly recommended to American horticulturists.

Gin Pills Will Cure Your Sick Kidneys
OR MONEY REFUNDED.
Don't you want to be rid of that nagging, biting, torturing pain across the back and through the kidneys? Don't you want to sleep through the night without being disturbed by the sick kidneys? Don't you want to feel well and be well? Here's the way:
"I suffered from pain and stiffness in the back. Sharp pains would catch me unexpectedly, which were sometimes so severe as to produce fainting spells. Rheumatism followed, and the sharp pains were so severe that I had to take to the bed for several months. I started to take Gin Pills, and in five days I was up and around the house. My pains are gone now, and I have not had a return of the old trouble since. And Gin Pills gave me the first painless passage of urine I have had in two years.

Special Cold Storage Results.

At Milan, Italy, lily of the valley bulbs are placed in cold storage in May. They are drawn out and forced, according to the needs of trade. After withdrawal they produce flowers in about fifteen days. The usual period of forcing is from October to January. Lilacs are also kept in cold storage and withdrawn for forcing toward the end of October. They may be withdrawn, however, at any other time of year. Other plants retarded in cold storage to be withdrawn when needed are asparagus, strawberries, azaleas, rhododendrons, spiraea, etc. In this establishment ripe cherries put in cold storage in June will keep till August; temperature not stated. At Cologne, grapes on the stem maintained at a temperature of zero kept in prime condition for four months. At Hamburg lily of the valley was kept at a temperature of 6 degrees below zero.

Raising Wool From Rabbits.

One of the strangest of modern industries is that carried on in the Jura district of France. It consists in taking the fur from live rabbits and weaving it into a textile fabric, which makes the warmest kind of clothing material known. The species of rabbits which furnish the raw material for the manufacturing process is the Angora rabbit. Every three months the rabbit sheds his fur, and several days before this takes place the operator rubs it with his hands, which removes the long silken hairs by gentle friction. The skin being in a condition technically known as "ripe," the fur comes off easily and without the slightest pain to the subject. In fact, "bunny" appears to enjoy it, lying quietly in the lap of the operator.

Yes, said an elderly farmer in reply to some laughing remark, "I am setting out apple trees and am doing it for my grandchildren. I figure that every good tree rightly started is worth one dollar and that every year it increases seventy-five cents to one dollar in value according to rate of growth. Some of us would be better off if we had been favored with that kind of a grandfather.

The Farm Flock.

I have 450 "biddies" at the present time, but they are not all profitable; 150 are laying, the rest are pullets of later hatch which will soon come to laying. At present the layers are paying the food bill of the whole, and I am hoping to make a dollar when I get under way.

I think there is money in the business if you go at it right. You can't throw dough at them, however. You must treat them well, not scare them, but use them carefully. Last year I had 125 and they paid pretty big, considerably more than their bills, and I went in this season for quite a flock. I throw a forkful of hay in and it is gone in no time. At noon I give cracked corn and shorts, with a mash of meal and shorts at night. They are doing first class. They have coal ashes for dusting, shells always before them, and water twice a day.

Those Old Hens.

"Why is it," said Mrs. Stubbs to her husband, "that you persist in keeping hens after they are 2 years old? Certainly it does not pay!"

"Well," rejoined Stubbs, "perhaps not; but you see, my dear, I hate to kill what I have taken so much pains to raise."

"Well," continued Mrs. Stubbs, "we have 87 fowls, not half of them pullets, yet of the 16 to 23 eggs you daily receive, nine-tenths should be credited to the pullets; and as business is done for profit, please do get rid of those older fowls."

"No. I'll sweep up some of the grass seeds in the horse barn, increase the meat ration, pound up some fresh bones and see if they will not respond with eggs," persisted Stubbs.

"Well, be a dunce if you like," laughed madam, "but my own old fowls will be promptly sold or eaten," And, as usual, madam had the last word.

THE HORSE.

Treatment of Shying

Young horses which are being, or have just been, broken in are very generally apt to shy more or less at various objects and sights until they have become thoroughly familiar with and used to the road or street.

Nor is it in any way surprising that they should shy more or less frequently in these circumstances, seeing that they are unfamiliar with many things they meet. Such natural nervousness gradually but quickly wears off, as a rule, and the shying ceases. No importance need, therefore, be attached to this form of shying in a young horse, as it is but natural and quite temporary in character only.

There is, however, a right and a wrong way of treating this kind of shying. The right way is to be gentle to the young animal when it shies, to allay its nervousness by speaking to it quietly. If it will not pass an object or shows much fear of it, the young horse should be coaxed to it with patience, so that the animal may have the opportunity of familiarizing itself with it and of smelling at it. Once having done this, and being convinced that its fears are groundless, the young horse will no longer evince any fear of it, and the next time will probably take very little notice of it.

Patience and kindness are all that is needed under these conditions. Unfortunately, but too frequently, the horses are punished with the whip, jabbed in the mouth with the bit, and roughly spoken to, being forced past the object by sheer rough treatment, the result being that its temper is upset, and that increased trouble is experienced next time it shies at something of which it is afraid or which is unfamiliar to it. Such treatment is eminently calculated to spoil the young animal, being apt either to cow it or to rouse its temper and obstinacy. In some cases, young horses actually become confirmed and bad shyers in consequence of such wrong and senseless treatment.

BREEDERS' NOTES.

Small breeders who have from one to a half dozen good brood mares are now studying the various stallion cards for the purpose of making up their minds with that horses to mate their mares next year.

It is more difficult to produce quality than size but it pays better to do so.

Keep a lump of rock salt within reach of every animal of the horse kind.

Clean all the oats, chaff and dust from the mangers at least once a day. A horse does not enjoy eating from a dirty manger any more than does a fastidious man from a filthy plate, a dirty knife and fork and a soiled tablecloth.

Horses should be watered at least three times every day. The man who goes to the stable, waters his horses and gives them a light feed the last thing every night before he retires, always has round, sleek, good-looking animals.

The man who is not a good judge of horses and has no love for them, but is a judge of cows and likes dairying, will be much more likely to make money in dairying than in raising horses. But the man who has a natural fondness for horses and is a good judge of horse stock will derive both pleasure and profit in breeding good horse stock, provided he starts right, keeps his sails properly trimmed and sells when he gets a fair offer, so as to prevent his stock from accumulating and becoming a burden.

DOMESTIC HINTS.

Sunshine Pudding.

Dissolve five scant spoonfuls of gelatine in 2 1-2 cups of boiling water and strain. Beat the whites of four eggs with two full cups of granulated sugar, then beat with the gelatine for fifteen or twenty minutes; add a teaspoonful of cold water, a little vanilla, and set away to harden slightly. Very delicious.

Sweet Potato Croquettes.

Mash some boiled sweet potatoes, season them highly with salt and pepper, and add to every pint of the vegetable one egg yolk and a very small piece of butter. Form into croquettes, roll each in egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat.

The world is full of people who are in constant misery from the racking pains of rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago and kindred diseases. They would give any money to get relief, but having tried various remedies and been disappointed they have become discouraged and sceptical of all remedies. Does this describe your case? If it does, let us tell you that there is a cure for your trouble, a remedy that will not disappoint you. It is Tuck's Rheumatic Bone Oil. It never disappoints. As its name implies, it goes straight to the bone, or joint, the seat of the disease, scatters the poisonous acid, relaxes the stiffened joints, allays the inflammation and effects a sure and speedy cure. It gives comfort where there was misery, a fact for which we have hundreds of letters from those who have been sufferers. This oil is for internal and external use and while it is a great and never-failing remedy for rheumatism, lame back, etc., it is also good for other kinds of inflammation, such as croup, bronchitis and quinsy. It is the most remarkable remedy of the age and should be in every home! Sold by all medicine dealers at 50c a bottle or sent by mail prepaid by The Tuck Bone Oil Co., Limited, Smith's Falls. Money returned if not satisfied.
FROM MISERY TO COMFORT.

CHANGING SENTIMENT.
Oliver Goldsmith's "Deserted Village.
Goldsmith in his "Deserted Village," spoke of a certain chapel where those who "went to scoff, remained to pray." So in life one often laughs at what he does not understand and later, when he does understand, his laugh turns to praise. There were some who doubted the merits of Newbro's "Herpicide," the scalp germicide and hair-dressing, but since they tried it, they are now among its best friends and strongest endorsers. Herpicide kills the germ that eats the hair off at the roots, and the hair then grows again. As a hair dressing it is incomparable. Try it. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Danbury Eggs.

To every well beaten egg add three tablespoonfuls of milk and a teaspoonful of sifted flour. Mix carefully and saute them in a hot pan, stirring them occasionally as you would scrambled eggs.

Parsnip Balls.

Boil the parsnips in salted water until tender; mash and season well, with butter, pepper and salt; add a little flour and three well beaten eggs; form into small balls and fry in hot lard.

Spaghetti with Tomato.

Put a handful of spaghetti in boiling, salted water, cover, and allow it to cook until tender; then drain and return to the kettle; add one and one-half cupfuls of tomato sauce, one-half cupful of grated cheese, a little paprika and two tablespoonfuls of butter. When the sauce is nearly absorbed by the spaghetti it is ready to serve.

Fried Chicken.

Cut two chickens and season with salt and cayenne, then roll in flour and fry in hot lard. Remove from the lard, drain and pour over them a sauce made by boiling together one cupful of cream, one-half cupful of butter. Garnish with parsley and sprinkle finely minced parsley over the chickens.

Dainty Currant Rolls.

Beat two eggs, add a small cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and flour to make sufficiently stiff. Lastly, stir in a cupful of currants.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

One of the women who knows recommends glycerine for removing tea stains that are such enemies to fine table linen. But it must be rubbed in before boiling has set its seal on the stain, or it may not be efficacious. After the glycerine has been applied wash it all out in tepid water, and the discoloration will come out with it, so this authority says.

Don't forget that a spoonful of sugar in mashed turnips or succotash adds much.

Wet tea leaves, hot or cold, are recommended as a cheap and convenient remedy for burns. They should be covered with a strip of cotton or linen, and kept on for one or two hours.

People who believe that the times are out of joint and that the breaking down of the ancient lines of demarcation between the masculine and feminine spheres is largely responsible for this melancholy circumstance may derive some consolation from the fact that the guilty sex is again taking to the innocuous and time honored feminine occupation of needlework. Home made millinery was all the rage during the summer, home made corset covers were among the most popular and acceptable of Christmas presents, and every other woman economizes her dress allowance by making her own blouses.

If you make baking powder fried cakes without cream, you may keep them soft and moist if you place them in a jar at once and cover.

In preparing raw onions, pour boiling water over them after they are sliced, and let them stand an instant. Then pour on cold water, drain and add sugar, salt and weak vinegar. These are very palatable and not nearly so strong as when untreated.

In a severe case of earache, before medical aid arrives, the following will often give relief: Put a soft bread and milk poultice into the ear and lay over it a bag of camomile flowers (dried), wrung out in hot water. The warmth and moisture gives a great relief and the patient is thereby often soothed to sleep which is of much importance.

It has been demonstrated that when apples are dipped in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of salt in one gallon of water, after they are pared and sliced for evaporation, they retain their natural color, and are better in quality than fruit which has been subjected to sulphur fumes, though not as white and clear as when sulphur is used.

When soot gets scattered on carpets, sprinkle liberally with salt before sweeping, and not a trace of black will remain.

Rub spots on furniture that have turned white from heat or damp with camphor to restore the original color.

Common baking soda will polish silver beautifully. Rub with flannel as a finishing touch.

A clever housekeeper has discovered that potatoes may be baked inside the furnace door in half the time required to bake them in the oven. But if the fire is very hot they need careful watching.

THE VETERINARIAN.

Answers to Correspondents.

Worms.—What can I do with mare? She has worms. I have given her all kinds of worm powder, ashes and tobacco, and I cannot get her fat. I curry her every time she is driven; she has but little to do.—W.D.R. (Give the mare a ball as follows and repeat ten days later: Powdered Barbadoes aloes, 6 dr.; powdered gentian, 2 dr.; sufficient quantity syrup; mix and make into a ball. Feed bran mashes for three weeks and walk mare 20 minutes the day after the ball is given, but do not drive her for two days. Have her teeth put in order. Give her the following drench about four days after the ball and repeat next day: Spirits of turpentine, 4 oz.; linseed oil, 6 oz.; mix. After this feed worm and tonic powder.

Lump on Udder.—I bought a large black Holstein cow, drove her about 10 miles; she slipped on the ice several times, and when I came to milk her I found a lump the size of half a hen's egg on the lower part of the udder. It is hard; when one holds it between the fingers it seems to beat as regularly as the heart. The man I got her of says it was not there before. I wish to know if there is any help for her. She has four quarts of feed; is giving six quarts of milk per day; due to freshen soon. (It may or may not be a new thing. If it developed recently, the prospects for its removal are better. Rub a little of the following liniment on the enlargement once a day: Tincture of iodine, 3 oz.; tincture of aconite root, 1 oz.; powdered iodide of potass, 2 dr.; alcohol, 2 oz.; mix. Give a pound of epsom salts. Do not feed any corn meal for a month.)

NOT A PATENT MEDICINE.
HYOMEI A SCIENTIFIC TREATMENT FOR CATARRH BY BREATHING MEDICATED AIR.
Breathed through the pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, Hyomei destroys all catarrhal germs in the air passages of the throat and nose, soothes and heals the irritated mucous membrane and effectually drives from the system all traces of catarrhal poison.
No one should confound Hyomei with the patent medicines that are advertised as catarrhal cures. It is as superior to them all as the diamond is more valuable than cheap glass.
The complete Hyomei outfit, consisting of a neat pocket inhaler, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei, costs but $1.00, and extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents, making it the most economical method of curing catarrh, as well as the most reliable.
If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price. Write to-day for consultation blank that will entitle you to services of our medical department without charge The R. T. Booth Company.

The Largest Newspaper.

The largest newspaper ever published in this or any other country was the Illuminated Quadruple Constellation, which was issued in New York city on July 4, 1859. It was a 28,000 edition and was sold at 50 cents per copy. The size of the page of this sheet was 70 by 100 inches, or almost forty-nine square feet. It was an eight page paper, thirteen columns to the page, or a total of 104 columns, each forty-eight inches in length. It was illustrated with good portraits of President Buchanan, Edward Everett, Henry Ward Beecher, N. P. Banks, E. H. Chapin, Horace Greeley, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Alexander von Humboldt, James G. Bennett and several others. The paper contained thirty-six different poems entire, one of them having as many as sixty-four eight line verses. Among other articles of special note was the celebrated "Moon Hoax," published in 1835. It required the work of forty persons ten hours per day for eight weeks to "get out" this mammoth paper.

Origin of "Stationer."

According to Pierre de Blois, the title "stationer" was applied to one class of bookseller long before the seventeenth century, though that may have been the period when it came to refer to any seller of books. He distinguishes between the librarii and the stationarii, who had both become so numerous in Paris in 1259 that certain regulations had to be made for their control. The former were agents for the sale and loan of manuscripts, a large sum of money being deposited when a manuscript was lent, while the latter, allowed to have stations or stalls in the markets, were sellers and copiers of manuscripts. At the time he wrote there were twenty-nine brokers and stationers in Paris, not a very dangerous number, one would think, considering that Paris from the twelfth to the fifteenth century was considered the chief seat of learning.—London Standard.

Wished It Was Saturday Night.

One of our best known manufacturers, whose business for years has been done by traveling salesmen, made up his mind to call personally upon his New York city trade as an excuse to get to New York, a place he had not visited in twenty years. The gorgeousness of the hotels made a great impression upon him. The best was none too good, as he has plenty of money, and he is not afraid to spend it when away from home, so he put up at one of the palatial hostelries and had a suit of rooms. When he returned he told his friends of the magnificence of the place, the fine furniture, the beautiful decorations and the finely appointed bathroom. "Why," he said, "the floor was tiled, the walls were tiled away up to the ceiling, the tub was porcelain, there were plenty of towels, hot and cold running water, and—and—by gosh, I only wished it was Saturday night!"

Singing For Nothing a Year.

Writing of the trials and tribulations of American singers who go to Europe to gain recognition, Mildred Aldrich in the Theater Magazine says:

"To most singers who have sought recognition abroad there is but one drawback to the European career. It is not love of home that lures them back to the United States. It is money. It looks fine to put 'de l'opera' or 'de l'Opera Comique' on one's visiting card, as is the habit in Europe, but there is another side to it. Many a debutante has sung at the Opera Comique for nothing, some have paid, and some have had the magnificent salary of 200 francs a month (just shy of $40). One of the most prominent debutantes at the opera saw 5,000 francs paid over for her debut, and one woman who was there two years as a regular member of the troupe earned 6,000 francs a year ($25 a week), and she was considered favored. Cities like Bordeaux often get debutantes at 300 francs ($60) a month, and in theaters of that sort singers provide their own costumes, so it is small wonder that, having got one's education, one wants to earn money in the United States."

He Was In Such a Hurry.

A man who has resided in Cairo told this tale as an illustration of the dilatory ways of Arabian trades people:

"A certain gentleman ordered a swing to be erected in his garden for the use of his little boy, aged six. He waited and waited, but the swing never arrived. In due course of time that boy grew up to man's estate and became himself the father of a little boy. When his son was six years old he remembered how his own father had ordered a swing to be made for him. So he called on the tradesman, who lived at his gate, and asked him to send up the swing that had been ordered twenty years before. The man agreed to do so. The little boy becoming impatient after three weeks, his father called again and remonstrated with the Arabian as to his dilatoriness. The indignant tradesman replied that he could not really undertake to serve any one who was in such a fearful hurry."

How to Use Brains.

A head man in a manufactory was watching a drayman tugging at a heavy case one day. The drayman's face was red, and the muscles of his neck were bulging. The overseer, says a writer in the Baltimore Sun, thought it was the right moment to offer practical assistance.

"Wait a minute there," he said. "Let me show you how easy it is when you use a little brain with your muscle." And he grabbed a hook, stuck it into the case, gave a yank and went sprawling into the gutter under the dray. He got up, looked at the hook and said, "Confound it, the handle comes off!"

"Yes, sir," said the drayman respectfully. "My brain told me that, and I didn't use it."

A Lucky Circumstance.

In the house of commons no incident is greeted with more hearty laughter than that of a member who, after an eloquent oration, plumps down on his silk hat on the bench behind him. A young member who had just made his maiden speech sat upon his new silk hat. There were roars of laughter. An Irish member immediately arose and gravely said, "Mr. Speaker, permit me to congratulate the honorable gentleman upon the happy circumstance that when he sat on his hat his head was not in it!" This remark upset the dignity of the house, and the speaker called "Order, order," amid roars of laughter.

Safe For a Short Distance.

A young man who is blessed with a Scotch kinsman need never fear that he will be allowed to hold too high an opinion of himself.

"What do you think of my project to study law?" asked young Witherby of his great-uncle, Hobert Donaldson, a person whom he was desirous to propitiate.

"I should call it a vera harmless amusement," said Mr. Donaldson dryly after a comprehensive survey of the young man's fatuous face and gay attire, "if not carried too far."

Honesty.

Let honesty be as the breath of thy soul and never forget to have a penny when all thy expenses are enumerated and paid; then shall thou reach the point of happiness, and independence shall be thy shield and buckler, thy helmet and crown; then shall thy soul walk upright, nor stoop to the silken wretch because he hath riches, nor pocket an abuse because the hand which offers it wears a ring set with diamonds.—Franklin.

Queer Justice.

Prison Visitor—My friend, you ought not to complain. You are here to satisfy the demands of justice. Prisoner—Not much I am. For months my creditors kept urging me to raise money and then when I raised a check they put me in jail. I'm blamed if I can see how you call that justice.

Public Speakers.

There are only two kinds of speakers. The first is the man who is making a good speech and won't finish. The second is the man who is making a bad speech and can't finish. The latter is the longer.

The Original Lobbyist.

The lobbyist was a conspicuous part of the first government established by Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden. He was a serpent.

Experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn at no other and scarcely at that.—Franklin.

The First Man.

About the middle of the seventeenth century Isaac de la Peyrere, in an odd little volume entitled "The Pre-Adamites," attempted to prove that there were two creations of men—the first on the sixth day of the week of creation, when "God created man male and female." The rabbis interpret the above passage of holy writ as meaning that the first race of human beings were creatures in which both sexes were united in the same individual. According to De la Peyrere, Adam was the result of the second creation, the "male and female" being having been the progenitor of the gentiles, Adam the father of the Jews. A great many people fell in with the views of De la Peyrere, and he was the lion of the hour. His followers were called "Pre-Adamites," and they increased in numbers rapidly until finally the movement became so strong that the founder of the sect was compelled to go to Rome and abjure his doctrine at the feet of Pope Alexander VII.

Savages and Snuff.

The habit of snuff taking has been confirmed among savage tribes for ages past. In South Africa it is used among Swazis, Basutos and Matabeles. Every Zulu today, even in towns, carries a little square box suspended around his neck by a piece of string or gut, and the snuff spoon (for they do not indulge in the homely "pinch"), carved out of sheep's bone, often ornamented with intricate geometrical designs and for convenience carried hanging downward through a slit in the lobe of the ear. The Zulu regards the lobe of his ear as a useful receptable for various small articles he meets with. The umfaan, or house boy, universally met with in Natal, has a penchant for safety pins, which have to be carefully hidden from his sharp eyes. Even then he is usually to be seen, after going through the rooms, with a string of these pins suspended from each ear until they reach his shoulders.

Neckties as Railway Signals.

"Red neckties are always worn by foreign brakemen and conductors. Ever notice it?" said a railroader.

"No. Why is it?"

"As a safety device," was the reply. "These red neckties that flash upon your gaze on the railroads of Italy, France, Germany and England are not a sign that the people have a gay taste, but that they are cautious and prudent.

"The neckties are supplied free by the railroad companies for use as danger signals in emergency. Thus, no matter when or where an accident may happen, there is no need to search or scramble for a red flag, but the brakeman whips off his red necktie and waves it frantically aloft."

Kentucky's Names.

Kentucky is known as the Corn Cracker State from a game bird enjoying the same name which was formerly found in great abundance in most parts of the state. It is also called the Blue Grass State, from the belt of land running through the center, in which this variety of grass grows to great perfection. In the early days of our history it was known as the Dark and Bloody Ground, being so termed by the Indians. It was then a debatable land between the Indians living north of the Ohio and those living in the mountains of Tennessee and Georgia, a sort of battleground for these tribes, which fact gave it the name long before it was settled by the whites.

Planets With Three Suns.

The people inhabiting the planets in the solar system of Gamma have no need of electricity, gas, oil or other kind of artificial light. In those favored worlds they have continuous daylight and probably have no idea of a land like ours which is alternately bathed in sunlight and plunged into darkness. The Gammaneau planets are so situated that as soon as one of their three suns begins to decline another appears in sight. Each of these three suns is of a different color—red, yellow and blue.

Price and Imagination.

Housewives are apt to judge the quality of groceries by the price paid for them. As an illustration of this a grocer tells the following story: "I had two qualities of flour—one fine and the other poor. One day I accidentally sold one for the other. My customers, who paid a high price for the poor quality, said that it had given entire satisfaction, while those who had received the fine flour for a low price complained of it, and a few returned it as unfit for use."

Affection.

Talk not of wasted affection! Affection never was wasted. If it enrich not the heart of another, its waters, returning back to their springs like the rain, shall fill them full of refreshing; that which the fountain sends forth returns again to the fountain.—Longfellow.

His Ancestors.

Jones—So you have succeeded in tracing back my ancestors? What is your fee? Genealogist—One thousand pounds, for keeping quiet about them.—London Tit-Bits.

It Hurt.

"Pa whaled me with a board. Then he said it hurt him worse'n it hurt me."

"And do you think it did?"

"I expect so. He got a big splinter in his thumb."

Heroes in history seem to us poetic because they are there. But if we should tell the simple truth of some of our neighbors it would sound like poetry.—G. W. Curtis.

The Rolling Mills.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AND THE PROCLAMATION BY MAYOR SULMAN.

In another column will be found a proclamation by His Worship Mayor Sulman, calling a public meeting of citizens for Friday evening next, in connection with the proposed rolling mills settlement.

Delighted to find an opportunity available to find out something about the "proposed rolling mills settlement," The Intelligencer called on Mayor Sulman this morning and asked him how matters stood. His Worship explained it in this way. The parties who recently bought the rolling mills did so with the understanding that they be given a clear title, something which the Canadian Iron and Steel Company could not give them, inasmuch as there is owing on the mills taxes to the amount of $3,500. The recent purchase was made on condition that the property, free from debt, be turned over to the new purchasers. In the language of the street, "there is a string" on the purchase money, though it has been paid over.

Now the City Council is "up against" this state of affairs; They are offered half the amount of taxes due, which, they have excellent reason to believe, would be a good settlement. If they accept, the new purchasers will get their title, at once place the mills in first-class shape, and, as soon as possible, begin to operate them. But there is a fly in the ointment, and here it is: The City Council has no legal right to make a settlement or accept any sum less than the full amount of taxes, unless they submit a by-law to the people. If they take upon themselves to accept any such settlement, they may, on the initiative of one citizen, become personally liable for the amount lost by the city through their action.

It will thus be seen that the City Fathers are between Scylia and Charybdis. On the one hand is their desire to see the rolling mills operated, believing it would benefit the city—as it undoubtedly would; on the other hand is their reluctance to place themselves personally liable for any taxes which they may remit, which remission, or non-remission, it would appear, is the rock on which the rolling mills settlement may split.

The Mayor tells us that his idea in calling the public meeting is to have the matter fully explained and discussed; then it is hoped that there may be such a unanimous expression of opinion on the part of those present as will strengthen the hands (and stiffen the backs) of the City Fathers.

Now, to look at this matter dispassionately; it may, in the first place, be asked, would it be fair to ask men who, like the city councillors, give a large amount of their time, gratis, to the transaction of the city's business, to place themselves in a position wherein they are personally liable for money, which may be recovered by process of law? In the second place, would it be fair to assume that the majority of our ratepayers, who have the legal right to be heard by their votes on this question, would consider themselves fairly treated if the matter were supposed to be settled at a so-called public meeting, such meetings, as a rule, as our readers know, being notoriously farcical on account of slim attendance and lack of interest?

The whole thing, to our mind, resolves itself to this; There is only one legal way out of the difficulty, is it not the part of wisdom to follow that way?

We have had lawsuits enough and to spare in the past. Is it wise to court any more?

We think that if a by-law is submitted to the people, it would pass with a big majority—as it should.

Submit the Remission by-law to the people, and settle the matter legally.

Mr. Grass' Rabbits-- Seven Were Stolen.

Mr. D. Grass reported to the police yesterday that seven small white rabbits had been stolen from his premises. The case was placed in the hands of Officer Hayes and later in the day he secured six of the missing "bunnies" and took them to the police station for the time being.

It appears that the rabbits were taken by a boy, who appeared this morning before the magistrate. As the boy is working and Mr. Grass was not disposed to prosecute, a suspended sentence of one month in jail was imposed.

OXFORD LODGE COMMEMORATED ST. GEORGE'S DAY LAST EVENING.

Oxford Lodge, Sons of England, last night celebrated St. George's Day, which is dear to all Englishmen, by holding an at home in the Oddfellows' Hall. There were a large number present and all apparently enjoyed themselves. In the early part of the evening a programme consisting of vocal and instrumental music was carried out, and this proved to be entertaining.

Mr. J. Vickers, past president of Oxford Lodge, occupied the chair and filled that position most acceptably. The programme was as follows; Tableau, "The Maple Leaf," which was very pretty. Vocal solos by Messrs. J. Vickers, J. Hutchinson, Halliwell and Master Harry Fenn. Miss Spratt and Mr. Fred Palos gave recitations, which were enjoyed very much. A quartette composed of Messrs. Sandy Burrows, E. T. Austin, H. Wrightmyer and B. F. Hudson rendered two selections, which delighted the audience. Little Miss Florence Vickers, although but four years of age, rendered selections upon the mouth organ which would have been creditable to one much older in years. Piano solos were given by Prof. Spooner and Miss Edith Fenn. Mr. Roy Walters gave a mandolin solo, with piano accompaniment, the latter being executed by Miss Mills. During the programme some phonograph selections were given by Mr. Geo. Edwards.

At the conclusion of the programme refreshments were served, after which dancing was indulged in for some time. Music was furnished by Miss Chalaupka and Mr. O'Rourke, and Mr. R. H. Ketcheson was right at home as master of ceremonies.

Pleasant Evening At John St. Church.

A pleasing social event took place last evening in the Sunday School rooms of John St. Presbyterian church, in the nature of a banquet, under the auspices of the Young People's Guild. After the very substantial refreshments had been partaken of, toasts were in order. Pleasing songs were rendered by Miss H. Bowsell and Mr. Harry McKay; and Miss Jessie Tuite gave a reading in a pleasing manner.

Following is the list of toasts and the names of those who responded;

A Letter From Mr. George H. Pope.

In the course of a chatty letter received by The Intelligencer to-day from Mr. George H. Pope, Winnipeg, the writer states that his son, Dr. E. L. Pope, has opened an office at 85 Kennedy St., in that city, and has already secured a good practise.

Mr. Pope adds that he was in Battleford a few days ago, and as an instance of the rapid settling of that section of our great Northwest, mentions that 3500 homestead entries were made there on Saturday, April 14. Mr. Pope says that the arrival of The Daily Intelligencer "seems like an old friend coming to the house."

Miss Ula Millard Presented With a Pin

Last evening a large number of the members of the Junior Woman's Auxiliary in connection with Christ Church invaded the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Millard, corner of Victoria avenue and Ann street. The object of their visit was soon apparent when Miss Ula Millard was called upon and presented with a handsome pin. The recipient has for some time been Secretary of the Auxiliary, and is about to leave the city. Miss Millard, in accepting the gift, made a suitable response. A most pleasant time was spent in social intercourse by those, who attended.

The Old Eye Sore.

Belleville, April 24.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer;

Dear Sir,—It is certainly very pleasing to read "Civic Improvement's" letter in your issue of yesterday. If the public would only take up seriously this matter of changing the unsightly gore at Cannifton road and Station street from a general dumping ground into a pretty park it would not be a great while until the park would be an established fact. "Civic Improvement" makes a splendid suggestion when stating that a pond might be left in the centre of the park and save considerable filling in, and I have no doubt that it would be very practicable. I have another suggestion, viz., that the people living in Bleecker and Baldwin Wards use this ground for the disposal of ashes and all yard scrapings all the time from now on, and if this is done the time required for filling in this hole will be materially shortened. The Health Inspector, Mr. R. Arnott, could assist in this matter and direct the people to have teamsters leave this material here. Let everybody unite in having the filling-in completed, and, as "Civic Improvement" states, the ladies of the city, who are always ready to lead in all good works, will assist our Chairman of Parks in making this spot a thing of beauty and joy forever, instead of the unsightly spot it now is.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your courtesy in printing this letter, I remain,

Yours faithfully,
L. W. MARSH.

TOOK THE VEIL.

MISS JENNIE ENRIGHT, WHO HAS MANY RELATIVES AND FRIENDS IN THIS CITY, ENTERS A CONVENT IN ROCHESTER.

The Geneva, N.Y., Times says;

A large number from here went to Rochester this morning to be present at the reception of thirty novices into the Order of the Sisters of St. Joseph. The event which marked the final admission of the novices into the sisterhood was held at Nazareth convent at eight o'clock. The service was conducted by Rt. Rev. Bishop Bernard J. McQuaid. Among those who received the veil was Miss Jennie Enright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Enright, of east North street, and the Genevans attending the service included the friends and relatives of Miss Enright.

The Miss Jennie Enright mentioned above is a granddaughter of Mr. Robert Wilson, of this city, and had often visited Belleville, where she made many friends owing to her liveliness and amiability. Miss Enright takes the name of Sister Clara Marie. Nazareth convent, which she entered, is situated on the corner of Jay and Frank Sts., Rochester.

Publicity Campaign.

Brandon, the second city of the Province of Manitoba, has inaugurated an active publicity campaign, and will attempt to bring to the notice of the people of the entire country the distinct advantages of the City of Brandon as a distributing and manufacturing point. Brandon is located in the heart of the richest agricultural section of the province, and in addition has a tributary country west, north and south, which makes it a logical point to establish and maintain institutions which supply the vast agricultural sections with finished product. The city has secured the services of Mr. J. F. Farrow, a well-known advertising and publicity expert, and the prospect for a good steady growth is predicted for this enterprising city.

Safe in Frisco.

Mr. Daniel Vanderwater, of Sidney, received a message on Monday, from his daughter, Miss Katie Vanderwater, in San Francisco, stating that her brother James and herself were safe and well. Miss Vanderwater is a professional nurse and her brother is a printer, whose place of business was on Market St. He has lived in San Francisco for many years. Both have numerous friends in Hastings County, who will be glad to learn of their safety.

RECONSTRUCTION RAIN BRINGS MISERY

At London, England, the San Francisco earthquake relief fund being raised by Americans, is approaching $17,500. Sir Thomas Lipton has cabled to Mayor Schmitz offering to contribute $5,000 to the relief fund.

Massachusetts has raised $400,000 for the fund.

Chicago's second relief train, carrying provisions for the earthquake victims, was ready to leave Monday. The city's cash contributions now amount to over $450,000.

Portland, Ore., April 24.—Western and Southern Oregon were shaken by an earthquake yesterday. The utmost alarm is felt all along the coast. A despatch from Glendale says the shock was so severe that houses rocked, furniture toppled and fell, and china in closets was broken. At Grant's Pass in Southern Oregon, the earth begun to quiver and shake violently shortly after 1 o'clock.

Los Banos, Cal., April 24.—The earthquake destroyed the principal business portion of this town.

Oakland, April 24.—The bodies of eighty-six patients and eleven attendants have been recovered from the ruins of the Agnews' Asylum for the Insane, near Santa Rosa.

Philadelphia, April 24.—Probably the highest price ever paid for California cherries were realized yesterday at a local commission merchant's establishment, when a box of fruit was sold at auction for $2,440. The money was added to the relief fund for the earthquake sufferers. The cherries were the first received here this season from California, and a box of them sold at auction, each cherry being offered for sale singly. The first cherry sold for $105, and the others sold for amounts ranging from $100 down to 50 cents.

New York, April 24.—That the contributions for New York State for the relief of the victims of the great catastrophe on the Pacific Coast will exceed $3,500,000 is now assured. The City of Buffalo appropriated the sum of $50,000 and not a city or town in the state has failed to add its quota for relief.

TRAINING SHIP FOUNDERS.

35 Belgian Cadets and Officers Die in Bay of Biscay.

London, April 24.—The Count de Smet de Naeyer, a full-rigged sailing ship used by the Belgian Government for the training of officers for the Government service, foundered in the Bay of Biscay April 18, with a loss of thirty-five lives, including the captain and the officers commanding the cadets. The cadets included the sons of many prominent Belgians. Twenty-six survivors of the wreck were rescued by the bark Dunkerque.

It is difficult to get precise details of the disaster, owing to the Dunkerque, which was proceeding to Hamburg, refusing any information or the names of the survivors, and also declining an invitation to land the survivors at Dover.

Crown Attorney Curry Resigns.

Toronto, April 24.—Mr. J. W. Curry K. C., Crown Attorney for Toronto, yesterday sent his resignation to Attorney-General Foy, asking that it take effect May 1, and to be allowed salary till Nov. 1. He purposes devoting his time from now on to a land and fruit concern. Mr. Curry was called to the bar in 1881, and he was made Crown Attorney in 1893. He was the prosecutor in the recent York Loan investigation.

Capt. Clark Blown Up.

Parry Sound, April 24.—By an explosion of an acetylene gas buoy in the ship channel, ten miles from here, Capt. Arthur Clark was killed and blown to pieces Sunday night. The tug Pilot, from which the work of charging the buoy was being done, was so badly damaged that she sunk before reaching shore. All the rest of the crew escaped uninjured.

Two Men Badly Hurt.

Ottawa, April 24.—Some steel trusses laid on concrete piers, but not yet fastened in position at the Fat Stock Show building, being erected by the city at the exhibition grounds, fell yesterday afternoon. Samuel Stephen of Montreal and Joseph Cyr, Ottawa, are badly injured. Three others sustained injuries.

Child Falls Into Cistern.

Preston, April 24.—An accident occurred here last night, by which the 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Buehler lost her life. The child's mother was carrying a couple of pailsful of water from the cistern, and while in the house the child wandered to the cistern, fell in and was drowned.

Veteran Reporter Drowned.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., April 24.—Thomas R. Harvey, a veteran mariner, reporter and proprieter of Harvey's Marine Bureau, of this place, accidentally fell overboard from the steamer Goodyear, near Thunder Bay light, Lake Huron, and was drowned.

CANADA AND GERMANY

British Preference Blamed For Their Trade Differences.

Mover For Correspondance Says Nothing Is Gained by British Preference —Minister of Finance Claims It Is Purely a Family Affair, and Minister Paterson Says German Market Is Not of Any Importance.

Ottawa, April 24.—In the House yesterday, Donald McIntyre, the newly-elected member from Strathcona, Alberta, was presented by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Frank Oliver and took his seat.

Mr. Monk introduced his bill respecting industrial and co-operative societies, a measure which he designed to promote and facilitate the co-operative movement among the farmers and industrial classes of Canada.

In answer to Mr. Borden, Hon. Mr. Oliver denied the report that the Itay and Bronson concession had been cancelled, but intimated that all of the hydraulic concessions in the Yukon might be dealt with very soon.

Condemned the Government.

Mr. Armstrong (East Lambton) moved for copies of all correspondence since 1896 between the Government of Canada and the German or British Governments respecting the tariffs of Germany and Canada. He condemned the Government as careless and indifferent to the interests of the farmer in not cultivating trade with Germany. It has been growing gradually less. In 1893 Germany placed a high tariff against Canada, amounting to 100 per cent. Our Government retaliated by placing a surtax of 33 1-3 per cent. upon German imports. The Minister of Agriculture had recently said to a deputation that he had hoped that better trade relations would soon exist, but that if they did not "it would not make any very great difference."

Mr. Armstrong regarded this statement as foolish and irresponsible. On March 1 Germany had put a surtax upon goods from Canada that amounted to prohibition. The apple trade was especially affected.

Nothing was gained by the British preference. Canadian goods sell in England on their merits and not on sentiment, yet it is the British preference that closes to our farmers the ports of Germany.

Mr. Fielding, Minister of Finance, thought the speeches were unwise, if not unpatriotic. Informal negotiations were now in progress between the two countries. He defended the policy of the present Government towards Germany as having been very popular among the people. They appreciated that Germany had penalized goods from Canada because of the British preference. No foreign country had a right to take offence at this; it was purely a family affair.

Curious "Family Affair."

Mr. Borden thought it peculiar if this was purely a "family affair," that England and every colony but Canada escaped the surtax.

Mr. Sproule (East Grey) said that the Liberals had come into power pledged to reduce taxation. They were to give a preference to Great Britain and thereby decrease taxation. What benefit is the British preference to the farmers of Canada? We get in return no benefit beyond that freely given by the mother country to our competitors from the United States.

Mr. Chisholm (East Huron) said that the farmers of Ontario were now driven to depend for their living upon dairy products and fruit. Ultimately they would have to rely upon fruit alone, for in that they need not fear competition from the west. The speaker claimed that the Ontario farmers needed the German market to sell their fruit and, on the other hand required cheap sugar. He favored reciprocity with Germany. Admit their sugar free and they will permit our apples to enter free of duty.

Mr. Paterson, Minister of Customs, claimed that the British preference had been approved by the people in 1900, and the German surtax in 1904. He was in hopes that some arrangement could be made with Germany. In drafting the new tariff this could probably be done. The British preference must be retained, even though we lost the entire German market. It was not a market of any importance at the best.

Mr. Henderson (Halton) said he was Canadian first and British afterwards. The preference simply meant that we took bread out of the mouths of our workingmen to feed the workingmen of England.

Mr. Patterson: Do you favor repealing it?

Mr. Henderson: Yes, if I had the power I would take this one-sided preference off the statute book. It is a jug-handled policy. I favor a mutual preference.

Mr. Schell (Oxford) and Mr. Derbyshire (Brockville) defended the Government, and Mr. Fowler (Kings and Albert) suggested that Mr. Fielding's British loyalty was of recent origin. It had not been long since he tried to carry Nova Scotia into the United States.

Mr. Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, said he felt that withdrawing colonial preference meant the disintegration of the British Empire.

Mr. Bennett (East Simcoe) ridiculed the idea that either the British preference or German surtax cut any figure in the elections of 1900 or 1904.

FRUIT FARM AT JORDAN.

Government Will Accept Land Offered by M. F. Rittenhouse.

Toronto, April 24.—Referring to a despatch from Guelph, Hon. Nelson Monteith said yesterday that an agreement would be entered into with M. F. Rittenhouse, a Chicago millionaire, who is a native of Jordan, Lincoln County, for the taking over of fifty acres of land at Jordan for a provincial experimental fruit farm. Mr. Rittenhouse laid down no conditions, but in addition to the free gift of the land offered to macadamize the road leading to the farm and to supply water from the reservoir constructed for the school garden at a nominal cost.

PRINCE ARTHUR IN TORONTO

H. R. H. Presented With An Engrossed Address by the City—Luncheon at the Hunt Club.

Toronto, April 24.—H. R. H. Prince Arthur of Connaught arrived here yesterday and was met at the Union station by His Honor Lieut.-Governor Mortimer Clark, Hon. J. P. Whitney, Hon. J. J. Foy, Hon. A. J. Matheson, Brig.-Gen. Otter, C. B., Col. Lessard, C. B., Lieut.-Col. Davidson, Lieut.-Col. Denison, Capt. George, Capt. Macdonald, A. D. C., Lieut. Young.

After a short meeting with Lieut.-Governor Clark, Mr. Whitney and Gen. Otter, the prince left the car and smilingly acknowledged the welcome from the crowd by raising his hat. Entering his carriage he was escorted to the City Hall by detachments of Mounted Dragoons and Q. O. R. There was a splendid welcome at the City Hall from the great throng of people which crowded the square and streets.

Mayor Coatsworth read the address of the city, which was engrossed on vellum and bound in book form in red morocco.

H. R. H. the Prince suitably replied. The conclusion of the speech was greeted with hearty cheers, and then followed a reception which lasted a little more than a quarter of an hour.

From the City Hall to Government House, short rest, then luncheon at the Toronto Hunt Club. The day in Toronto was closed with a dinner at Government House.

DEMOCRATS AHEAD.

Odessa's Election Returns Repeat Tale Told Elsewhere.

St. Petersburg, April 24.—Returns of the vote cast in the election held on Sunday swells the tune of Democratic victory. The elections at Odessa were a repetition of those at St. Petersburg and Moscow.

The Constitutional Democrats elected 79 out of 80 electors and again carried Orenburg and Rostov-on-Don, where the Government quashed the first elections.

They also have invaded the Council of the Empire, the university professors choosing a solid block of six Constitutional Democrats. Besides M. Shipoff at Moscow, two other Otobrists councillors were chosen.

Father Gapon Hanged.

London, April 24.—An extraordinary story was published by The Manchester Guardian yesterday from a correspondent in Russia, asserting that Father Gapon was hanged secretly on April 10 by four revolutionists who overheard him admit that he was spying on his former revolutionary colleagues in behalf of the Russian police.

St. Petersburg, April 24.—Friends of Father Gapon claim to have information that the priest has fallen into the hands of the Holy Synod, which condemned him for forsaking the priestly orders to indefinite imprisonment in a monastery.

More Identification.

Montreal, April 24.—Strong evidence was brought out in enquete into the murder of five-year-old Edith May Ahearn yesterday morning. James Maddick, a new witness, positively identified the prisoner, James Hackett, as the man he saw with the little girl about the time of the murder, and several other witnesses identified him as the man they saw going to the woods with the little girl and coming back without her.

Fight For the Capital.

Edmonton, April 24.—The fight for the capital of Alberta has begun in the Legislature, motions having been introduced to locate it at Calgary, Red Deer and Edmonton.

Piles Cured.

Suffering For Years, and Bed-Ridden From Piles, a Contractor of Marion, Indiana, is Cured by Pyramid Pile Cure.

Trial Package Mailed Free to All Who Send Name and Address.

"I was troubled with piles for several years before I would let it be known. But at last they became so severe that I could not walk and I had to take to my bed. I tried everything and anything the doctors prescribed, and took their treatments for a long time. But nothing ever did me any good. I had seen your ad. in different newspapers, so I got a 50-cent box and began using them. From the very first I got quick relief and by the time I was starting on my third box I saw I was cured. I have not been troubled with them since. Now you can use this as you please, because it is genuine. Yours, T. A. Sutton, Stone and Cement Contractor, Marion, Ind."

Instant relief can be gotten by using the marvelous Pyramid Pile Cure. It immediately reduces all congestion and swelling, heals all sores, ulcers and irritated parts.

The moment you start to use it your suffering ends and the cure of your dread disease is in sight.

The Pyramid Pile Cure renders a surgical operation unnecessary. Don't hack to pieces those tender muscles, which must be intact if a satisfactory cure is to be obtained.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is put up in the form of "easy-to-use," specially made, suppositories. They are soothing, painless, instant and certain.

A trial treatment will be sent you at once by mail, in plain, sealed wrapper, without a cent of expense to you, if you send your name and address to Pyramid Drug Co., 3879 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

After you receive the sample, you can get a regular-size package of Pyramid Pile Cure at your druggist's for 50 cents, or if he hasn't it, send us the money and we will send it to you.

MINING BILL TAKEN UP

More Than Half of Its 220 Clauses Have Been Passed.

Hon. Frank Cochrane Showed Familiarity With Every Feature of the New Measure—Messrs. Smyth of Algoma, Smith of the Soo and Gamey of Manitoulin Were the Chief Critics—Nurses' Graduate Bill Sent Back to Special Committee.

Toronto, April 24.—The nurses' bill was sent back to the special committee again, and Premier Whitney said it would reappear in satisfactory shape. The committee will meet on Wednesday morning, when the hospital association will be given a chance to state their objections.

Mr. MacKay's bill dealing with libel actions against newspapers, was read a second time, as were these bills: Respecting the Port Arthur Blast Furnace Co. (Kennedy); to authorize Wm. J. Church to practice as a veterinary surgeon (Tucker); respecting certain sums of money in the hands of the accountant of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Mr. Whitney).

Third Readings.

Four bills were read a third time: To amend the Act for the Improvement of Public Highways (Roaume); respecting agricultural associations (Monteith); to amend the Election Act (Whitney; and respecting county houses of refuge (Eilber).

Mr. Downey's Pharmacy Act was further amended by a proviso that the act shall not come into effect till Aug. 1, 1906.

A supply bill covering the estimates already concurred in was passed by the House.

Bills Introduced.

Hon. Mr. Foy introduced a bill to amend the Devolution of Estates Act.

Hon. Mr. Hanna introduced a bill to amend the Local Drainage Act.

In moving the second reading of his bill for raising money on the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Ontario, Col. Matheson said in this loan, more than in the former, the province would have the assistance of the banks, because though the money will be raised in Canada, it will be spent in Canada. He hoped to get par for the bonds, and in time have the bonds taken up by funds in the courts. The loan would be floated in July. The province had already advanced $1,900,000 out of the consolidated revenue of the province, and it was likely that the money would not be needed till fall.

The New Mining Bill.

The new mining bill, which has over 220 clauses, was the principal topic of discussion in the Legislature in Committee of the Whole yesterday. More than half the clauses were passed, and there was very little criticism. Smith of the Soo, Smyth of Algoma, and Gamey of Manitoulin led the discussion, and the Minister showed a familiarity with every feature of the bill.

Mr. MacKay said the allowing of an inspector to go on a property and order a prospector off would be an injustice. The prospector could say: "This is my money and this is my time, and I object to an inspector coming in after I have spent my money."

"The trouble is," suggested the Premier, "that this is not his property." He argued that the intention was to prevent anyone squatting on property.

Mr. Gamey defended the provision. This was something the Government ought to hold in its hands.

Did Not Encourage the Poor Man.

Mr. Smith (Soo) believed that if a man went on a property and spent $400 or $500 in prospecting, and if another man came along and found valuable mineral, the first man should be compensated for his work. The law was not an encouragement to the poor man.

He also objected to the manner of disposing of the railway right of way, by charging $50,000 as a bonus, thus shutting everybody but the capitalist out.

The Premier said the position of the Sauk member was that the Government should insure every man who ventured into the country in quest of valuable minerals. It did not occur to him that the prospector was enjoying a privilege in being allowed to explore for silver.

Ex-Premier Ross questioned the need of a mining commissioner. Smith of the Soo, however, said this need cause no worry, there would be plenty of work for him.

A Provincial Assayer.

It was not the intention to appoint a second provincial geologist unless the work becomes clogged. A provincial assayer might be needed for the Gillies' limit.

Exception was taken by Mr. Smith to the clause giving the Government power to withdraw mining lands from the market. Mr. Gamey sympathized with this objection, as under the old Government there was a constant abuse of this power, but the present Government and the present Minister were in touch with the people and could be depended upon to do the right thing.

Mr. Smith contended that the settler should get everything on or in the land, and Smyth of Algoma agreed.

Mr. Gamey gave the Government credit for the revision permitting prospecting on timber lands. Under the old Government this clause was applied only when it suited the whim of the Government.

Coal in Ontario.

During the discussion Hon. Frank Cochrane stated that coal had been discovered in Ontario. Later, he said that it was an antharcite deposit, but that further information could not be divulged.

Woman Gets Four Years.

Toronto, April 24.—Jessie Thompson, who for the past 11 years has been an almost constant prisoner in the Kingston Penitentiary, was again sent down yesterday for four years. She pleaded guilty of stealing a purse containing $7 from Mrs. W. C. Barker in Simpson's store on Saturday.

Children Burned to Death.

Coroner Says 1,000 Dead.

His Deputies Have Already Cared For Over 350 Bodies.

Scores of Half-Starved Dogs Found Gnawing and Tearing at Human Bodies Half Buried In the Earthquake and Fire Ruins at San Francisco—Housing 40,000 Refugees—150,000 Already Taken Away From Stricken City.

San Francisco, April 25.—Coroner William Walsh yesterday estimated that the total number of dead will not be less than 1,000. His reports are complete and his estimate is made up from all the data he has been able to collect.

Up to the present time bodies have been buried by the soldiers and the naval militia in open squares near where found. For this reason it is feared that the exact number of dead will never be accurately known. Coroner Walsh reported Monday that his deputies had cared for 350 bodies taken from the ruins, but this number does not include those buried by the police and by the naval militia in the potrero. Thirty-three bodies were taken out at Bay and Polk street yesterday.

Dogs Eat Bodies.

One of the gruesome scenes that has followed the fire was that witnessed on Telegraph and Russian Hills and along the entire north beach front of this city yesterday morning, when scores of half-starved dogs were found eating human bodies. The animals were discovered gnawing and tearing at the corpses half burned in the ruins. Where only a leg or arm protruded the dogs were digging for the rest of the body.

Bluejackets were detailed to cover the sections designated and kill all dogs found in this vicinity. All morning rifle reports could be heard on the hillside and along the beach as the dogs were killed. Men were pressed into service either to bury the carcases of the dogs or throw them into the bay. In a few places smouldering fires were found and there it was possible to cremate the animals.

It was not believed that there were so many dead in the ruins of Telegraph and Russian Hills, until the dogs were found there digging for the bodies. When the dogs have all been run down and slain a further search will be made of these sections to obtain the bodies and bury them as soon as possible.

Housing 10,000 Refugees.

Temporary structures have been erected in Golden Gate Park for the housing of 40,000 persons. This work was begun yesterday morning by the shelter committee and the homeless who have been sleeping out of doors for nearly a week were moved into comfortable quarters. About the same time a supply of blankets and bedding was received and these also have been taken to the park. At present there is little suffering and before a week it is expected that all refugees here will be comfortable.

The committee is sending as many of the refugees as possible to interior points. The seizure begun Monday of all vacant houses in the unburned district, still is underway. Many vacant flats have been taken where the homeless, especially the sick, are housed. Architects have been sent out to examine churches and other buildings, including schoolhouses, with a view of turning them into living rooms for the homeless. Supplies of food are coming in rapidly from outside points and are being centralized in the freight sheds and warehouses still standing.

Major-Gen. Greely, commanding the Pacific division of the army, arrived yesterday. He recommends the bringing of 25,000 additional troops.

150,000 Taken Away.

General Passenger Agent James Horsburg, of the Southern Pacific at Oakland pier, Cal., advises that that road has taken out of San Francisco 150,000, that 50,000 more are still encamped in Golden Gate Park, 25,000 at the Presidio, and 50,000 elsewhere.

Maimed Living In Robbing Dead.

Colorado Springs, Col., April 25.—Passing through here yesterday in a Denver & Rio Grande train, bound for Chicago, where her parents reside, was a San Francisco fugitive who said her name was Miss Logan. She wore a bandage on her left hand and said that while she lay unconscious upon the floor of the lobby of the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco after the earthquake last Wednesday morning, the third finger of her left hand was cut off and she was robbed of rings that she had worn there.

FACTS IN SMALL SPACE.

The Alberta Government has voted $5,000.

The situation is constantly growing more cheerful.

Victoria, B. C., has sent supplies valued at $10,000.

Saskatoon, Sask., has sent a carload of Saskatchewan flour.

The losses to the steel sky scrapers are confined to the contents.

The total amount of the relief fund collected to date is $8,470,370.

All the dangerous walls on Market street, San Francisco, have been dynamited.

The Toronto branch of the Chinese Reform Association will probably send about $500 to aid homeless Chinese.

No trace of Count De La Rocca, the French consul in San Francisco, has yet been found. It is feared that he lost his life in the fire.

Governor Pardoe announces that he will continue to proclaim legal holidays from day to day as long as the financial condition of the state remained unsettled.

About fifty Torontonians left yesterday for San Francisco. The majority were going to find their relatives, while a score were carpenters going to find work in the ruined city.

Mrs. Lottie Matthews and her three children, survivors of the California earthquake, arrived in Toronto Tuesday. Mrs. Matthews gives a vivid description of the horror.

Major-Gen. A. W. Greely, commanding the department of the Pacific, praises Gen. Funston and says that it was due very largely to him that there has been a minimum of violence.

Facilities for feeding the destitute have greatly improved since the arrival Monday of twenty-eight cars from Los Angeles provided with cooking arrangements capable of caring for 150,000 people.

The Spring Valley Water Co. has about 1,000 men at work repairing and replacing broken water mains, and many portions of the residence section are now abundantly supplied with water.

The executive of the I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge of Ontario met yesterday and decided to send $1,000 at once to the Oddfellows in San Francisco, 4,000 of whom are homeless, and to send more money later.

Five thousand blankets were despatched Monday to Oakland by the Massachusetts Association. The committee decided to send eighteen architectural draughtsmen, an engineer, and an architect.

"DON'T KICK THE CORPSE."

Opposition Magnanimous In Face of Government's Backdown on North Atlantic Trading Co. Contract.

Ottawa, April 25.—After the ignominous backdown of the Government Friday night, several members called out "Don't kick the corpse," as F. D. Monk (Jacques Cartier) rose yesterday to reply to the Minister of the Interior. At the time, Mr. Monk appeared to realize that humanity required him to withhold his hand and he contented himself with saying that the announcement which the Minister of the Interior had made reminds me a little of the story told in one of his novels by Charles Dickens. When a witness was asked, "Were you ever kicked down stairs?" he replied: "Never. I was once pushed rudely at the head of the stairs and came down a little faster than usual; that is all." Hence the debate was adjourned without further comment.

Yesterday it was decided to hold a postmortem partly to accommodate Mr. Ross, Liberal (Yale-Cariboo), who insisted that life was not extinct, and protested against the North Atlantic Trading Co. being buried alive. The Opposition seized the opportunity thus afforded them, but when the debate was finished, Mr. Ross protested against premature burial. It is the Government now who want the matter hushed up, but the committee on public accounts has subpoenaed Mr. Preston and the end is not yet.

"Bring In the Government."

When the House convened after recess last night not a single Minister was in his seat.

"Bring in the Government," cried Mr. Taylor (Leeds), the Conservative whip. Some one suggested that the "Government was lost." At 8.15 Hon. Mr. Oliver entered the House amid ironic cheers from the Opposition.

Mr. Northrup resumed his address on the trading company's graft, and was followed by Mr. Bole of Winnipeg, Mr. Perley (Argenteuil) and Mr. Bureau, Liberal (Three Rivers and St. Maurice).

The Lord's Day Act.

The transportation interests appeared yesterday morning before the Lord's Day Act committee in opposition to the strictures which the measure would impose. David McNicholl, vice-president of the C. P. R.; F. H. McGuigan, fourth vice-president of the Grand Trunk; C. W. Spencer, of the Canadian Northern; Mr. Stout, manager of the Dominion Express Co.; Francis King, Kingston, representing the Dominion Marine Association; Mr. Meredith, Montreal, for the shipping federation of Canada, and C. J. Smith of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co., were the speakers. Dr. Black, M. P., urged that a day of rest be established for sanitary reasons. The committee adjourned until to-day.

Supplementary Estimates.

Just before the House adjourned last night Mr. Fielding, Minister of Finance, presented supplementary estimates amounting to $2,845,362.

This brings the total estimates for the year ending June 30, 1906, to about ninety million dollars.

Hon. Mr. Hanna's License Measure.

The License Bill brought in by Hon. Mr. Hanna has withstood the criticism of the Opposition, and will become the law of the Province. Its effect is to make the regulations regarding liquor selling more stringent, and to raise the price of the franchise. In general terms the law will remain as it was.

The local option section requiring 60 per cent. of the polled vote to carry non-license, raised a strong debate on Friday of last week. It is a question, however, if the section goes far enough in order to make local option effective in practice even where this majority is secured. Mr. Hanna observed that "it usually meant 35 per cent. of the possible vote." That is not a large enough majority to secure the aid of those who think to make a "temperance town" by taking away the hotel licenses. There should be a clear majority of the possible vote if the will of the citizens is to be properly felt upon a question of this kind.

Most people, we think, who are fair-minded enough to be able to give an unbiased opinion, will agree with the London Free Press "That a license law strictly carried out in letter and spirit is better for the habits and morals of a community than non-licenses where more than half the people are indifferent. The Hanna bill makes a generous concession to opponents of the traffic in requiring only a vote of 37 per cent. of the whole electorate. It puts a sufficiently sharp weapon in the hands of a people that is noted as the most temperate on the face of the globe. The statistics of 1901 proved that as the consumption of alcoholic liquors was greatest in Belgium, it was the least in Canada of all civilized countries. In Belgium it was 2.81 English gallons per head; in France, 2.72 gallons per head; in Western Australia, 2.27 per head; in Germany, 2.09 per head; the United Kingdom, 2.05, and in the various colonies a gradually lessening rate. Canada stood lowest in the consumption of ardent spirits, namely at .34 of a gallon. Since then there has been no material increase.

"We submit that such statistics give no warrant on moral grounds for the crusade that had been again set on foot against the moneyed interests that are involved in the trade. Why are the most temperate people of the civilized world to be constantly agitated and driven as though they were a nation of drunkards? Is it morality or politics that is at the root of this agitation?

"It is recollected that while the Ross Government remained in power the leaders of the so-called temperance reform movement were easily put off with promises. They were quite satisfied with the notoriously lax administration of the license law as it stood. They knew full well that it was run as a party machine; that men were granted or refused licenses because of their political stripe; that licenses and licensed property were trafficked in on political considerations. Yet Mr. Ross was never very rudely disturbed by the leaders of the prohibition party, who seemed quite satisfied with shift and evasion, when something had to be said.

"Many earnest temperance workers of Conservative leanings were often struck with this phase of the movement, and filled with righteous suspicion that their zeal was being made use of for political ends. How can they be sure that the renewal of the crusade since Ross went out of power is not more with the intent of embarrassing the Whitney Government than to promote the public good? Are they quite satisfied that they are not being led into this "war" upon vested interests less from regard for the public welfare than a set plan to help G. W. Ross back to power?

"It was little less than farcical to see Mr. A. G. Mackay, of all men in the House, rising at Mr. Ross' nod to criticise Mr. Hanna's measure. No man in public life in this country has played fast and loose with the temperance people, and the liquor question, with more brazen hypocrisy, than this man, who got his first start in politics as a superheated prohibitionist.

"Mr. Hanna and the Government, however, are on safe ground in a measure designed to regulate the traffic with strict regard to the public interest rather than in catering to an agitation that is based so largely on injustice to property and vested wealth. The declaration of "war" that has been made upon a legalized business, which has so many millions directly and indirectly invested in it, and which pays so heavily to the general and local rates ought to be met with reason, common sense, and the spirit of justice.

"The 'war' which the alliance has proclaimed means the confiscation of property and the ruin of many men who have honestly put their means in a business which the public service requires. But for ruin wrought by "war" there must be compensation."

WANT AND NEED.

There's a big difference between what a baby wants and what he needs. Deny him the one, give him the other. Most babies need Scott's Emulsion—it's the right thing for a baby. It contains a lot of strength-building qualities that their food may not contain. After a while they get to want it. Why? Because it makes them comfortable. Those dimples and round cheeks mean health and ease. Scott's Emulsion makes children easy; keeps them so, too.

CORLEY MAY BE CROWN ATTORNEY

SAID TO HAVE BEEN SELECTED FOR THAT POSITION IN TORONTO.

Toronto, April 25. — It is reported that announcement will shortly be made of the appointment as Crown Attorney for the city of Toronto of Mr. J. W. Seymour Corley, senior member of the legal firm of Corley, English & Price, this city. The selection, it is said, has been definitely decided upon. Mr. Corley, who resides on Isabella street, this city, is very well known in legal and political circles. He enjoys an extensive law practice, and those who believe he will obtain the position mentioned, claim for him that he has all the attributes essential to success as a Crown Attorney. Mr. Corley is a past President of Ward Three Conservative Association, and Chairman of the South Toronto Conservative Patronage Committee. He has been prominent in the political campaigns in Toronto for years past as a platform speaker and energetic worker.

It is understood that in the future the Crown Attorney for Toronto will be required to drop his private practice and devote his whole time to the work devolving upon the position. With that end in view the salary will be fixed at a higher figure than now. The question of appointing an assistant will probably remain in abeyance for a while.

CANADIANS FOR SAN FRANCISCO,

WILL HELP IN REBUILDING CITY OF THE GOLDEN GATE.

Toronto, April 25.—"We expect that in a few days quite a number of artisans and laborers will be leaving Toronto for San Francisco, to work there during the rebuilding of the city," remarked Mr. A. J. Taylor, Canadian freight and passenger agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, when asked yesterday if many persons were leaving here for the Golden Gate City.

"Inquiries have been made by carpenters, masons and others as to trains and rates through to San Francisco, and there is no doubt a large number will go from here with the hope of getting work where there will be so much to be done."

Otherwise, Mr. Taylor remarked, few persons were leaving here just now for California. Some were going out, he said, but they were mostly people interested in insurance matters.

Representatives of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, and of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroads, all of which have direct passenger business with Los Angeles and San Francisco, also said that the number of persons leaving for the ruined city was not very large since the catastrophe, although some, of course, were going.

It is thought, however, that conditions will become almost normal this week, so far as passenger business to California points is concerned.

The telegraph companies are likewise in a good position again to handle business.

Word was received by the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows for Ontario that 4,000 Oddfellows are without homes in San Francisco. The Executive of the Toronto branch yesterday morning voted $1,000 towards their relief.

The Insurance Company of North America have subscribed $5,000 to the relief fund, and have wired: "Our San Francisco losses will be paid as promptly as they can be adjusted. If the entire city is destroyed our surplus and contingent fund will not be exhausted."

N.S. Orangemen and The Lord's Day Bill.

(Lord's Day Advocate.)

The following telegram was received on March 22nd by the General Secretary from the Grand Orange Lodge of Nova Scotia, signed by J. W. Cumming, Grand Master:

"Grand Orange Lodge of Nova Scotia, in annual session, concur unanimously in endorsing proposed legislation re preservation of Lord's Day. Petitions will be forwarded."

We are glad to receive this expression of the warm support of Eastern Orangemen. We have already forwarded it to Dr. Sproule, M. P., that it may be brought to the notice of Parliament. We may have others to report from other Orange sources ere long. Orangemen have always shown a deep interest in the preservation and due observance of the Lord's Day.

It is gratifying to find Roman Catholics and Protestants co-operating in the interests of the Christian Sabbath. It is one of the few things in which they hold common ground. This co-operation is more marked in the Maritime Provinces than elsewhere in the Dominion. Roman Catholic and Protestant clergymen frequently meet on the Lord's Day Alliance platforms.

Rev. T. Albert Moore, Associate Secretary, addressed a large meeting in historic Louisburg, C.B., which was held in the Orange Hall, kindly given by the Orangemen, and presided over by the local Roman Catholic priest. Before the meeting adjourned a cordial vote of thanks was tendered the speaker for his eloquent address, the Orangemen for the use of their hall, and the priest for kindly and ably presiding over the meeting. In tendering the vote of thanks to Mr. Moore, the priest facetiously remarked that so far as he could recall that was the first time in which his name and that of the Orangemen were coupled in such kindly and complimentary terms.—S.

MANY SCIENTIFIC THEORIES OF QUAKE

SCIENTISTS SEEK ORIGIN OF SAN FRANCISCO DISASTER DENYING CONNECTION WITH VESUVIUS.

London, April 23. — Naturally the chief topic of discussion here, as elsewhere, this week has been the appalling disaster at San Francisco.

Seismographists are propounding various theories as to the cause, opinion being divided as to its connection with Vesuvius. One question asked is, Will the disturbance come Britain-wards? It is suggested that Edinburgh is in the danger zone just as San Francisco is. Certainly the Scottish capital is built upon an extinct volcano. Here are a few of the theories put forward by eminent British seismographists to account for the disaster.

Contraction of the earth's surface, the release of overheated steam in the interior of the earth, the failure of the earth to swing true on its axis owing to the action of sun-spots, a landslip of geological strata.

Most interesting of all is the statement by Prof. Milne, who is considered the most eminent of English seismic experts, and who, at his home in the Isle of Wight, has an instrument which not only tells him whenever an earthquake occurs, but the exact spot on the earth. The instrument consists of an object like a common street lamp-post set upon a pedestal of concrete which is sunk down through the earth to a chalk substrata. This lamp-post is sensitive to every vibration of the earth, and is connected with a needle which passes across a cylinder of paper blackened by being held over an ordinary lamp.

When a disturbance of the earth's surface takes place the lamp-post is shaken, and the connecting wire at once transfers the vibration to the smoked paper. The length of the scratches enables an observer to calculate the extent of the earthquake and its distance away from the recording instrument. Prof. Milne was out golfing at the time of the San Francisco earthquake, but on returning home a glance at the instrument told him that a tremendous upheaval of the earth's crust had taken place. It was the work of a few moments to calculate where it had taken place.

Having developed his photograph records, Prof. Milne was able to discuss the origin of the earthquake, which, he said, was evidently upon land. If it had been sub-oceanic it is probable that there would have been great sea waves. Its origin, therefore, is presumably parallel to the coast at the foot of which lies San Francisco.

This range of hills may be regarded as an addition to the western coast of North America when the Sierra Nevada had been raised up, which occurred after the formation of chalk in England. The site of San Francisco was beneath the ocean. Sediments accumulated until they attained enormous thickness. By horizontal pressure these were buckled up to form the coast range, and the great disturbance which has just taken place indicates this kind of activity is still in operation.

The probability is that these strata have been overbent and have suddenly yielded with a crash, and a great fault or fracture in the earth's crust has been formed. On one side the ground has suddenly fallen, and it was the impact of this on what was beneath which gave rise to the great shakings which have been propagated all over the world and ended so disastrously for San Francisco.

Sir Robert Ball's opinion was asked as to the possible connection of the eruption of Vesuvius and other recent seismic disturbances and the disaster at San Francisco.

"To the popular mind," he said, "the connection would seem obvious, but I do not think they had any direct relation to one another. In this view I am backed up by the opinion of Prof. Milne, who is the greatest living authority on the subject. Had there been any connection I should have looked for some special manifestations in the Sandwich Islands."

HILL SUES GOW.

OUTCOME OF THE DUMMER MANSLAUGHTER CASE.

Peterboro, April 24.—At the Spring Assizes to-day, Mr. Justice Anglin presiding, the case first called was Hill v. Gow, an aftermath of the Dummer tragedy. Robert Hill sues Charles Gow for unstated damages for the death of plaintiff's son, who was killed by a shot fired, it is alleged, by Gow, on August 24 of last year. The case for the plaintiff was presented this afternoon. A feature was new evidence that did not come out at Gow's trial, in which he was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to three months in jail. County Constable Cochrane and Moore swore Gow had admitted to them that on the night of the boy's death he had fired the shots in the direction of the house.

Pale, Listless Girls.

CAN ONLY OBTAIN HEALTH THROUGH NEW, RICH, PURE BLOOD MADE BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

Growing girls—girls in their teens—must have rich, pure blood. Healthy womanhood depends upon the vital change from girlhood to maturity. Every woman should most carefully watch her daughter's health at this critical period. If a girl at this period has headache, if she is pale, thin and languid, it shows that her slender blood supply is being overtaxed. She will always be ailing and may slip into a hopeless decline or consumption if her blood is not built up at once with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The rich, red blood which these pills make bring health and strength to every organ, and make dull, listless languid girls, bright, rosy-cheeked, active and strong. Miss Maggie Donohue, Erinsville, Ont., says: "Before I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was badly run down, and it seemed as though my blood had turned to water. I was very pale, suffered from headaches and palpitation of the heart, and often I would pass sleepless nights. I found nothing to help me until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these have fully restored me and I can truthfully say I never enjoyed better health than I am now doing."

When Dr. Williams' Pink Pills replace bad blood with good blood they strike straight at the root of all common ailments like anaemia, decline, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, skin eruptions, erysipelas, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis, rheumatism, and the special ailments of growing girls and women. Be sure you get the genuine pills with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," printed on the wrapper around each box. Sold by medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Invitation to King Edward VII.

WAS SECONDED BY MR. W. B. NORTHRUP, M.P., OF THIS CITY, IN AN ELOQUENT SPEECH—WHAT HE SAID.

It will be remembered that the House of Commons recently extended an invitation to King Edward to visit Canada, the motion being introduced by Mr. Belcourt, M.P., and seconded by Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P. for East Hastings. The Ottawa Citizen thus reported Mr. Northrup's speech;

Mr. W. B. Northrup, in seconding the address, expressed his sense of pleasure in doing so, because he believed it voiced the feeling of the people of Canada, because he was proud of his King and country and because he believed it was in the best interests of the Empire that an acquaintance happily formed when the Prince of Wales visited Canada nearly half a century ago should be renewed and strengthened by another visit from His Majesty.

When the last dread messenger had summoned our late beloved Queen a feeling of fear had arisen lest there should be a limitation to that widespread influence which she had exerted for the benefit of the whole civilized world. But such had not been the case. The diplomatic ability and humanitarian nature which she had shown had also been evidenced by King Edward the Peacemaker. However green his memory might be of the Canada which he saw fifty years ago he could not form any conception of the great possibilities of this Dominion to-day. (Cheers.)

Mr. Northrup touched upon the great resources of Canada and the wide extent of its area, and also its splendid northern climate. Referring to history he stated that the northern nations had always been the victors in the ultimate struggle of nations. He believed firmly that the same would be the result of events on the American continent. Canada was worthy of its great heritage and Canadian people were justified in asking His Majesty to visit the brightest gem in his Empire. The Canadian people were not one people, but were sprung from many stocks. They were descended from the greatest nations of the world; the honest Englishman; the shrewd Scotchman; the eloquent and witty Irishman; the good and chivalrous Frenchman and the solid German. A short time ago the statesmen of England had despised the colonies. But to-day no statesman in the mother land could more surely or quickly commit political suicide than by advocating the breaking of the colonial tie."

In conclusion Mr. Northrup said: "While I think it is fitting that we should extend this invitation to His Majesty, it does seem to me that in all Canada no more better or fitting place could be found to welcome the Sovereign to this portion of His realms than the classic City of Quebec. We all remember how one September morning, when the British troops having scaled the heights the battle began and raged the livelong day between the French and English. We remember the result. We remember that the Union Jack went up on the battlements of Quebec. We remember well the two illustrious men who shed their lifeblood, and to whose memory there exists to-day a monument in the City of Quebec which stands unique —a monument erected to the memory of these two gallent leaders, sacred on the one side to the memory of Wolfe, the victor, and sacred on the other side to the memory of Montcalm, the vanquished—a symbol of that magnanimity and mutual respect which represent the fabric on which the success of Canada has been built. I think it is most proper that our Sovereign should be met in the shadow of that monument erected to the memory of Wolfe and Montcalm in the City of Quebec, and I have therefore much pleasure in seconding the resolution which I am sure will meet with the unanimous approval of the House." (Cheers.)

Mr. Arthur Watch is Among the Missing.

Many in this city will be sorry to hear that Mr. Arthur Watch, a former resident of this city, is reported among the missing at San Francisco. He was the son of Rev. C. W. Watch, a former pastor of Holloway Street Methodist church, and a fine young man in every sense of the word. He was a bank clerk in San Francisco, where he went from Shelburne, Ont., in which place his father is now located. The sympathy of a host of people will go out to the afflicted family. It is sincerely to be hoped that the missing young man may yet turn up safe and sound.

RECORD PRICE FOR CHERRIES.

BOX OF CALIFORNIA CHERRIES SOLD FOR $2440 — PUT UP AT AUCTION.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 23. — Probably the highest price ever paid for California cherries was realized today at a local commission merchant's establishment, when a box of fruit was sold at auction for $2,440. The money was added to the relief fund for the earthquake sufferers. The cherries were the first received here this season from California, and a box of them was sold at auction each cherry being offered for sale singly. About five hundred commission merchants and others attended the sale. The first cherry sold for $105, and the others sold for amounts ranging from $100 down to 50 cents.

IMPROVED machinery will not, of itself, produce good flour.

You may be an excellent cook, but you cannot produce light, wholesome baking unless the flour you use be the kind that permits such results.

So in the milling; machinery alone cannot produce

Royal Household Flour

out of the wrong kind of wheat any more than you can make the right kind of bread or pastry out of the wrong kind of flour.

Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour is made from hard spring wheat—a wheat that is rich in nutriment, that grinds fine and white, and produces bread and pastry that are wholesome and nourishing as well as light and crisp—it's a flour that begins to be good in the wheat fields, not in the mills.

CHEERFUL CHAP.

Through the world I wander and never shed a tear;
You'll find me always jolly and gay,
Millionaires may worry, financiers may flurry—
I have found the better way.
I am always happy, no matter what I do,
Whether it be right or wrong;
You'll always find me smiling, and the moments whiling
By whistling as I go along.

Never do I worry, though I am in rags,
Never would I change with you,
You may have the money, still the fact is funny
I can be as happy, too.
It isn't any secret; I'm the cuss who makes
A nightmare out of every song,
That's what keeps me cheerful, though it worries you;
I whistle as I go along.

Just whistle as you go along, sonny,
That's the way I always do,
Whistle, whistle, whistle, whistle—
So I keep from feeling blue.
When you're down at heel and your luck is bad,
And life's no more a grand, sweet song,
If you want to make the other folks feel just the same as you,
Just whistle as you go along.

The garrison at Paris is being rapidly strengthened, and it is expected that 60,000 troops will be available here May 1.

In the mining regions there is another camp in which an army corps is ready for eventualities.

The labor organizations do not conceal the fact that it is their intention to make a supreme effort.

Bomb For Ex-President Loubet.

Paris, April 25.—A despatch to The Journal from Montdimar, department of the Brome, yesterday, says that the authorities there found a bomb, to which a burning fuse was attached, on the window sill of the library of former President Loubet's villa, where he and his family are spending their Easter vacation. The fuse was extinguished, and an examination of the bomb, it is stated, showed it to be of an extremely deadly nature.

Gas at 60 Cents.

Montreal, April 25.—At the City Hall yesterday it was stated that the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Co. will not accept the offer of the fire committee for 80 cents gas in 1910, after working a sliding scale until that period, but will make an alternate offer of 60 cent gas in exchange for a 15-year extension of franchise.

A New Cruiser.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., April 25.—The Dominion Government has purchased the steamer Princess from the Steam Navigation Co. of Charlottetown, P. E. I., to replace the La Canadienne in protecting fisheries in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Labrador waters. The latter boat will do survey work.

A Human Salamander.

Some years ago a Spaniard named Martinez gave one of the most extraordinary exhibitions on record. It was at the New Tivoli, in Paris, in the presence of an audience of scientific men, who placed its genuineness beyond doubt. A large oven had been heated by a furnace for several hours. This the Spaniard entered, clothed in flannel trousers and shirt, a large cloak of the same material and a felt sombrero. He sang a song while a fowl was roasted by his side and at the end of fifteen minutes came out again, the temperature registered being between 202 degrees and 312 degrees F., or about 100 degrees above the temperature of boiling water. He entered the oven a second time and ate the fowl which had been roasted beside him. After a short pause he was shut in, lying on a board surrounded by candles. After awhile the audience raised a cry of "Enough!" The door was opened. The oven was found to be full of noxious, suffocating odor of boiling tallow, the sole survival of the candles. The Spaniard came out and after a cold bath was well and strong. His pulse when the door was first opened beat 176 to the minute.

St. Peter's Chair.

Rome itself is spoken of as the chair or throne of St. Peter by some early writers, but the actual episcopal chair which he is believed to have occupied may still be seen in St. Peter's, a worm eaten wooden structure, preserved in a bronze covering, says the London Chronicle. It is from such chairs of episcopal and other authority, of course, that we get the phrase "ex cathedra" and the word "cathedral," an abbreviation of "cathedral church," the church that contains the bishop's cathedra or chair. Some of the uses in old fashioned English of the adjective "cathedral" seem quaint now. "Cathedral dogmatism" meant not the dogmatism of a dean and chapter, but that of any one who spoke with an assumption of authority. A "cathedral beard" was a broad beard of a fashion anciently worn by bishops, and in Johnson's time "cathedral" seems to have been slang for "antique."

How Little Savings Roll Up.

If a parent deposits $1 at the birth of the child and adds at each succeeding anniversary of the birthday a number of dollars equal to the number of years, the amount by the time the son or daughter is twenty-one years old, computed at 4 per cent interest, compounded semiannually, will equal $300. This would be a substantial nest egg to begin life with. The man who deposits only 25 cents a week, drawing 4 per cent, compounded semiannually, will have to his credit at the end of five years $73, at the end of ten years $162, at the end of twenty years $403 and at the end of forty years $1,294. The man who saves $5 a week at this rate would be worth at the end of forty years the snug fortune of $25,888.

Eased His Conscience.

In an ordinary restaurant, according to the London Chronicle, a waiter was surprised at being asked one Friday with Ireland's inimitable smile for "divilled whale." "Is it filleted shark that ye have, thin?" pursued the Irishman on being refused this delicacy. Again receiving a reply in the negative, he tried once more. "Thin ye can bring me some roasted porpoise," he said. The waiter showed signs of becoming restive, and Paddy sank back in his seat and heaved a sigh of contentment. "I'll take some roast beef and vegetables," he said cheerfully, "and sure ye'll not be for saying that I didn't ask ye for fish."

Creeping Salt.

Here is something in the course of natural phenomena that will interest and instruct the little folk if they look into it curiously: Into a tumbler half full of water dissolve just as much common table salt as can be held in solution. Let it stand for a few days and see how the salt creeps out of the water, up the inside of the glass and down the outside—just like a thing of life trying to escape from its environment. And when all the salt is apparently out of prison the water remains as salty as before! It is a pretty demonstration.

Lasting.

"This butter seems strong," said the young husband at their first breakfast at home.

"Yes," she answered. "I talked to the market man about that, and he said it was economy in the end never to buy weak butter. He said that even though this might cost a little more people could get along with less of it, and it would last longer."

Slander.

Slander is a poison which extinguishes charity, both in the slanderer and in the person who listens to it, so that a single calumny may prove fatal to an infinite number of souls, since it kills not only those who circulate it, but also all those who do not reject it.

Comes Easy For the Son.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me, guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kergan, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through my nerves. I was cured mentally, physically and sexually. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

Montgomery gaped and whistled. "Let us make a rough shot and put the box at £50,000. Come; I'll take a bet that it's under the mark."

"Then there are the other two," said I.

"True," said Sheppard. We all looked at one another.

"Come, boys," I said, rising; "let us get out of this. We know our way, and the treasure cannot take itself wings."

Reluctantly they obeyed, and we retraced our steps through the cupboard into the corridor and thence upward through the courtyard and into the living rooms. The dawn was brightening the eastern skies. I pulled out my watch.

"After 3," I said. "You'd better go to bed. There will be nothing happen now."

"Three o'clock!" echoed Sheppard indignantly. "Why, it is the very time for attacks and surprises. No; I'll see it out now."

"Very well," I assented. "We've got to arrange our defense, and as you are all determined not to go to bed we may as well hold a council of war."

"Agreed," said they, and we sat down to the job without further ado. We were agreed to consider 5 in the morning as the break of day for our purposes, and we were hardly exposed to an assault before 8 in the evening. The sky was still luminous at that hour. It was therefore plain that we must set guard upon those intermediate and nocturnal hours. From 8 till 5 was a space of nine hours. That was to determine for us a watch of three. So far we settled the preliminaries of our defenses. But we had now to consider further. The drum towers commanded the slopes of the valley like two tall sentinels, and from the embrasure of the windows a watch might be kept upon the nether parts of the Gwent. But from one so stationed the back of the park and the crown of the hill behind were quite concealed. In this connection it appeared that the keep would best serve us, more particularly as the upper chambers were readily gained from the inhabited wing of the castle, whereas the towers reared their formidable heads in isolation and led only to the corridors of the basement and to the battlements above. It was in the keep, then, that our sentinel must hold his silent watch. The highest chamber in the keep rose immediately above the level of the battlements and was pierced by narrow slits in the masonry. This was a convenient station, or, better still, the roof of the tower, with which a flight of stairs connected the chamber.

We explored the keep thoroughly ere we had settled this point, and by that time it was 4 o'clock.

"Now, you had better go and lie down," said I to the others; "otherwise you will be nodding on your watches tonight. For my part, there is an hour yet to the time of safety, and I take first watch."

Sheppard expostulated with me for what he termed unnecessary precaution, but I held to my point, and presently they left me.

CHAPTER X.

When I descended into the house I had hit upon one line of defense at least, and I at once proceeded to realize it. As I walked from the drawbridge along the moat to the back of the castle I wondered if it was practicable; but, remembering what old Kesteven had said of his predecessor's experiment some forty years before, I had great hopes that the sluices would still work. The brook ran, as you will remember, behind the castle, at a little distance from it, and I found without difficulty the mouth of the conduit which had been formerly used to feed the fosse. I inserted my arm as far as possible, and the space seemed fairly clear, though the earth had crept in and lay along the bottom, grown with grass to the depth of some inches. Still I had no fear that the flow of water would not wash this sediment away, provided always I could get the sluices up. To find these sluices was my next thought. I moved along the turf in the direction in which it seemed that the culvert must run, scrutinizing very carefully every inch of the ground. About three feet from the stream was a noticeable elevation, a grass plot rising in a mound two feet high. Here was obviously what I wanted, and so, taking a spade, I dug with a will and soon had the turf removed and the floor of a stone erection laid bare. It was a good hour's work ere I had cleared the rubbish away sufficiently to free the sluices; then I laid hands on them and pulled vigorously, but fruitlessly. I must plainly have assistance, and accordingly, well enough content with my labors so far, I went back to the house. At breakfast I revealed my scheme, much to the delight of Sheppard, who roundly declared that he would give five years of his life for this adventure. Supported by two enthusiastic assistants, I returned to work, fetching with me a heavy iron bar for use as a lever.

"A little more beef, Montgomery," shouted Sheppard, and himself grew as red as a turkey cock with his efforts. Montgomery flung his heavy body upon the extremity of the bar, and with a crack something came up with a jerk. At the same time I heard below a faint rumbling and rushing as of water.

"We've done it!" I shouted, and ere the words were out of my mouth Sheppard and the other were racing for the moat, whither they presently waved me with wild hands.

The water was pouring from the conduit in a strong stream fully one foot in thickness. That was enough. It would take some hours to fill the moat, but it might take all day so long as we were secured by the fall of night. We left the sluices up and went back.

"The next thing," said I, "is to attack the drawbridge. The portcullis wants oil, but that will do later."

"We'll have the castle a mediaeval fortress in a twinkling," said Sheppard.

The heavy chains of the drawbridge were intact, but the machinery was in a very bad way, and without more ado we set to work upon it. I called my man Williams into requisition, and I think it took the four of us till 6 or 7 o'clock in the evening ere we pronounced ourselves satisfied. After that we had a rehearsal with both portcullis and drawbridge. By this time the moat was swimming with water, which lapped under the shoulders of the bridge. There must have been fully twelve feet of water in the fosse.

"This won't do. We'll have an inundation," said Montgomery, and he let the sluices down. When all was done we surveyed our handiwork and were content. It was now close upon 8 o'clock.

Dinner had been ready for more than half an hour, so we were informed by Mrs. Main, who must have regarded us as lunatics. The clock in the hall struck 8 as we entered.

"Watch time," said I. "Who goes?"

We looked at each other, laughing. "It's my turn," said Sheppard, with a grimace, but I stopped him.

"No; let Montgomery," I said meaningly.

"Right you are," responded Montgomery cheerfully, and, taking his brace of pistols, he vanished along the corridor.

"How's this?" asked Sheppard. "I think the poor boy has earned his dinner."

"Bless you, he shall have his dinner," I answered. "Only the danger is going to be later, and I'd rather Montgomery were asleep in bed than asleep on the tower."

We had arranged that Williams should stay the night in the castle and, imbuing him with the fear of burglars, had armed him with a shotgun in case we should come to the worst. As Sheppard remarked, we could readily tangle the Welshman's brains if he became suspicious, and if his garrulity should bring us the sympathetic assistance of the law I think we could be stupid enough and vague enough to confound his kindly efforts. Mrs. Main was by this time bound to us by iron ties through Sheppard's contrivance, nor do I know to this day exactly how he managed it or in what directions he used his amiable and soothing fictions. The housemaid was Mrs. Main's hireling, and we need scarcely include her in our calculations.

We were now, as I conceived, adequately fortified against a surprise. From 8 o'clock until dawn upon the next morning we should be stretched upon the rack of suspense, but each of us was sturdily resolved to accomplish his duty at all hazards. That an attack would be delivered I had few doubts, but my anxiety lay rather as to the watch in which it would be delivered. I had sent Montgomery to his post early, as it seemed wiser for more responsible heads than his to take the deeper and darker hours of the night. From 8 till 11 his time ran, and yet they might be upon us ere that. He was fed with some sandwiches and cheered with a little wine, while below Sheppard and I waited in a condition of tension.

"Oh, hang it!" exclaimed Sheppard presently, after dinner, "I can't stand this. Let us go and join him."

"You would be much wiser," said I, "to get an hour's sleep."

Sheppard shrugged his shoulders. "It's my turn next, you say, and I'm not used to be awakened in my beauty sleep. It's bad for me. No; I'll go to bed when you relieve me. But I recommend your own advice to yourself."

"And I will take it," I answered. "See that Montgomery gets his supper and goes to bed like a sensible person. I'll be with you at 2 punctually."

I cannot say that I enjoyed a peaceful sleep. Although I was dog tired, partly from the exertion of the day's work and partly because I had had no rest the previous night, I still slumbered very fitfully. Finally I awoke in a fever and, throwing the hot blankets from me, stepped to the open window. My bedroom faced the north, and the cool airs that heralded the dawn wandered over me, reducing the fume and fire of my nerves. Far away some roistering bird was calling, not in his spring notes, but raucous now with the somber beat of autumn. The curtain of the dawn was lifting. It was time for me to relieve Sheppard. My watch marked a quarter to 2. Having dressed, I went down to the great hall and, thrusting the western windows open, looked out. Trees, like great ghosts, invisible, whispered in the night together. The stars glimmered down below, and I recollected suddenly that I was peering into the water of the fosse. The stillness hung so deep that I was possessed of a sudden with a hundred fears. Was Sheppard murdered? And were the castle and its treasure now in the hands of those abominable assassins? I listened for a cry, but there was none, only the gentle wash of the waters against those ancient foundations and the swishing of the leafage on the neighboring trees. The park lay, as one might have fancied, under the imminent hand of death.

I stole upstairs, clambering with a lantern to the keep. Upon the tower a silent figure turned and a low voice spoke.

"Is that you, Ned?"

The sound almost startled me, occurring upon the stillness.

"Any news?" I asked.

"Well, I have two things to communicate. Do you see that tree?"

I peered into the darkness in the direction he had indicated.

"I hear it," I observed doubtfully.

"Well, I've seen it," he retorted.

"Your eyes are better than mine, then," I answered.

"Maybe," said Sheppard cheerfully, "maybe not. But I don't profess to see through a wall. That tree is fifty paces away, and it is an oak, very large and umbrageous."

"I believe you are right," I answered. "I think I recollect it."

"I didn't," he went on. "But I reckon to see by match light as well as any."

I was puzzled. "Match light?" I queried. "You haven't been"—

"Oh, dear, no!" he exclaimed. "My tower has been the central patch of blackness in this black night. Besides, who ever struck a match at night to see by? No; the match was in that same tree I speak of." I was silent. "I presume it didn't strike itself," he continued.

I stole upstairs to the keep.

"Lower your voice," I enjoined.

Sheppard smiled, as I could perceive even in the darkness.

"Oh, I don't see why," he declared. "There's no one there to strike a match now, to the best of my belief."

"How is that?"

"Did you hear no sound?" he asked.

I shook my head, and he patted his shotgun.

"I congratulate you on your soundness of health. I fired about an hour ago, and I fancy the shot did not altogether miss. There followed a still, small noise and after that again pattering feet receding. I think some one has indigestion today in Sercombe's army."

Sheppard shouldered his gun and walked to the northern verge of the parapet. Stooping, he fumbled in the darkness, and the next moment his voice sounded from below my feet. "Follow me, Ned," he called. Groping about with feet and hands, I came upon an open hole in the floor and, inserting my legs cautiously, happened upon the first step in a stone stairway. Diligently stepping down this through sheer blackness, I came out upon Sheppard's heels into what by comparison seemed daylight. The stars glistened in the canopy of heaven. I was out upon the battlements.

"We might have known there was some communication between the keep and the battlement," said Sheppard. "You see the advantage. I've been pacing this walk like a sentinel for the last two hours."

"Can you get right round?"

"I'll show you," he returned and led the way along that lofty roadway. The battlements naturally stretched across the width of the castle, running from wall to wall. The parapet stood some five feet high and was broken with the machicolations of the design. There was ample space, therefore, for twenty men at arms to march abreast along the heights. Sheppard moved lightly, his head just swinging clear of the parapet and the black darkness contained between the shadows of the ramparts. The leaden roof was incumbered with rubbish. Presently Sheppard paused, and there rose quickly before me out of the superincumbent gloom the blacker mass of the drum towers. Feeling his way, Sheppard hit upon an iron ladder connecting with the heights above, and presently we stood upon the topmost pinnacle of the castle and peered from it into the night. The nocturnal mists and blackness of the valley below were slowly shifting. The trees gradually grew black, showing against a vast and gray gloom. Yet there was no light visible in those seething changes of the elements. The night still hung about us.

The southern drum tower looked down upon deeper shadows, and I could not descry the wall below. I turned to my companion for an explanation and smiled at the confusion of my own brain when he answered:

"That's the south, Ned. You know the battlements are in ruins there."

Of course they were, but I was not to be deterred from a complete circuit of the walls by that small fact, and I groped for the ladder.

WHISKY CASE STIRS SCOT.

Magistrate Rules That Patent Still is Not Real Thing.

A long trial was held at a North London Police Court to decide what whisky is. A long array of Scottish and Irish experts were examined and the decision of Magistrate Fordham has stirred especially the Scotch whisky trade to its depths. Fordham decided that while pot still whisky is really whisky, the patent still spirit, of which some blends are largely composed, is not whisky. Fordham, in giving the results of his personal experiences as a judicial whisky taster, said:

"I find that the medicinal properties of patent still whisky are not so great as pot still, and they differ in contents, flavor, and scents.

"Misrepresentation in the Irish and Scotch whiskey trade has greatly increased during the last few years, so much so that as shown in this case the public gets the patent still spirit with a dash of whisky thrown in to give it the name.

"It is time this fraud upon the public in the matter of whisky was stopped, and no doubt, though this has been a costly prosecution was in every way justifiable. Blenders have taken upon themselves to issue to the public a new raw patent still spirit with a dash of the old pot still, and called it whisky pot still. Distillers of the Highlands are jubilant, but the Edinburgh blenders are most indignant, arguing that it is impossible that a stroke of a magistrate's pen should deprive of its name an article which for sixty years has been known as whisky."

One leading expert says it is the most momentous legal decision ever pronounced in connection with the whisky trade and would strike at the most powerful branch of the industry and at practically every one of the great distributing firms. The present output of whisky in Scotland is about 26,000,000 gallons annually, and of that fully two-thirds is represented by the product of the patent still. There is, moreover, 120,000,000 gallons of whiskey in bond in Scotland and nearly half that quantity, or 60,000,000 gallons, was made in patent stills, and under the magisterial decision had no right to be sold as whisky.

The opinion generally is expressed in the trade that a new name will have been found for whisky made in patent stills, but there also is a feeling of indignation at the condemnation of the patent itself. Archibald Williamson, M. P., has given notice of a bill to amend the law relating to the sale of whisky and to provide for the marking of casks and other vessels containing whisky.

Jubilee of the V. C.

Fifty years ago the Victoria Cross was instituted by Queen Victoria. A little bronze cross, made out of cannon taken at Sebastopol, intrinsically worth 4 1-2d, it is, nevertheless, the most coveted of all decorations that a British subject can wear. The reason for the high value set upon it is to be found in the simple legend on its face: "For Valor." The cross, which is awarded to soldiers and sailors for valor in the face of an enemy, has been won 522 times; and as it is awarded impartially to officers and men, being thoroughly democratic in its regulations, the men have won slightly more than the officers.

It is interesting to pick out the regiments that have won the most V. C.'s. At the head of the list—if we except the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers as being too large corps to be counted as regiments—are the South Wales Borderers, with sixteen to their credit. They won the greater number of them in Zululand, at Isandhlwana and Rorke's Drift. The Rifle Brigade is second on the list, with fifteen, and the 9th Lancers, the King's Royal Rifles, and the Gordon Highlanders come next with thirteen each, and they are followed by the Cameronians and the Black Watch with ten each. The campaign which provided most V. C.'s was the Indian Mutiny, in the course of which 182 heroes won the decoration; the Russian War accounted for 111, and the late war in South Africa for seventy-eight, the Zulu War for twenty-three, the Afghan War (1878-89) for sixteen; the New Zealand Campaign for twelve, and the operations on the Northwest Frontier of India (1897-8) for ten. These wars accounted for 432 crosses, and the remaining ninety were distributed among the many other campaigns in Africa, India, and elsewhere, that have been fought during the past half century.

In a few rare instances the V. C. has been won by more than one member of a family. The most conspicuous case is that of the Gough family, which can boast of three V. C.'s—Gen. Sir C. J. S. Gough, Gen. Sir H. H. Gough, and Lt.-Col. J. E. Gough, all of whom are, happily, still alive. The first two were brothers, and the last named is a son of the second. Major-Gen. E. H. Sartorius and Col. R. W. Sartorius are another case of brothers wearing the decoration. Another instance of a father and son winning the cross is seen in Lord Roberts and his gallant son, Lieut. the Hon. F. H. S. Roberts, who lost his life in gaining the V. C. at the battle of Colenso.

There are some 200 odd recipients of the Victoria Cross still alive. Among them are three Field Marshals—Lord Roberts, Sir George White, and Sir Evelyn Wood, and the Admiral of the Fleet, Sir Newell Salmon. Among other well-known names on the list of survivors are Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, Vice-Admiral Sir A. K. Wilson, Gen. Sir Dighton Probyn, and three rear-admirals (Lucas, Bythesea, and Raby), who were among the first four to receive the decoration, Rear-Admiral Lucas being actually the first.

The decoration has stood the test of fifty years, and still preserves its unique character, and it is to be hoped that our soldiers and sailors will always regard as the most coveted distinction that cheap-looking little bronze medal—the Victoria Cross.

ACROSTICS AND ANAGRAMS.

They Have Been Known Since the Days of the Psalmist.

We find that the acrostic is the most ancient form of puzzling mankind. Acrostic is Greek for a number of verses the first letters of which form a word, sometimes a name and sometimes a sentence. The final letter may form a word, or, as Addison tells us, the letters will even run down the center of the verses as a seam. The Hebrew poets often made their verses run over the entire alphabet. Twelve of the psalms are written on this plan, the most notable being the One Hundred and Nineteenth. This has twenty-two divisions, or stanzas, corresponding to the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Each stanza is formed of eight couplets, and the first line of each couplet in the first stanza in the original Hebrew begins with the letter aleph, the second commences with beth, the third with gimel, and so on through the alphabet. The English divisions of the psalms are called after the Hebrew letter that began the couplets. It was also customary to compose verses on sacred subjects after the fashion of Hebrew acrostics. This was done with a view to aid memory, and such pieces were called abecedarian hymns.

The riddle is also of ancient origin. The Proverbs of the Bible, or sayings attributed to Solomon, are often in the form of riddles. Was it not the queen of Sheba who proposed riddles to Solomon? The Koran, the scriptural book of the Mohammedans, also contains riddles, as do some books now in existence, written in Arabic and Persian. The ancient Egyptians also propounded riddles, and one of the seven wise men of Greece, who lived in the sixth century B. C., was celebrated for his riddles in verse. Homer, the Greek poet, according to a statement in Plutarch, died of vexation at not being able to solve a riddle. In the middle ages riddles were encouraged for amusement on winter nights in the baronial hall and also in the monastery. In later days some of the most brilliant men of letters contributed to the list of riddles.

The anagram, or transposition of the letters in words or sentences, was much in vogue in Greece in the olden times. The Cabalists, or Jewish doctors, thought that the anagram always pointed out a man's destiny, and if his name written backward or transposed in any way spelled a word with meaning they firmly believed it a revelation. The flatterers of James I. of England proved his right to the British monarchy as the descendant of the mythical King Arthur from his name, Charles James Stuart, which becomes "claims Arthur's seat." The best anagrams are those which have in the new order of letters some signification appropriate to that from which they are formed. When Pilate asked, "Quid est veritas?" (What is truth?) he probably had no idea that his question answered itself, but it did. The transposition made it, "Est vir qui adest" (It is the man who is here). Anagrams were written as early as 250 B. C., and their name comes from the Greek words ana (backward) and gramma (writing).

Where the Lady Was Going.

An official of a New England road told the following:

The ticket agents in the Boston office of our road are greatly troubled by patrons who, when wishing to purchase tickets, lay down a coin and neither tell where they are going nor how many tickets they want. This necessitates one or more questions on the part of the patient agent. One day a little elderly lady approached the window of the office, placing a large family umbrella on the slab, and, after fumbling nervously in her pocketbook, pulled out a quarter and laid it down without a word to the ticket seller.

"Where are you going, madam?" asked the ticket agent.

"Oh, I'm going to the doctor," was the tremulous reply.

An Apt Pupil.

A professor who, when asked a question, was in the habit of saying: "That is a very good point indeed. Look it up for yourself," was once much disgusted with a student who had failed to answer a very simple question. "Mr. Jones," said he, "I'm surprised that you, who are going to teach, cannot answer such an elementary question. Why, what would you do if one of your pupils were to ask it?" "Well, professor," replied the other, "if such a thing had happened before I came here I'm afraid I would have said plainly that I didn't know, but now I think I'd do just as you do and say, 'Look it up, my boy; look it up!'"

No Procrastination.

"Ethel," he whispered, "will you marry me?"

"I don't know, Charles," she replied coyly.

"Well, when you find out," he said, rising, "send me word, will you? I shall be at Mabel Hicks' until 10 o'clock. If I don't hear from you by 10, I'm going to ask her."—London Tit-Bits.

VICEROY OF INDIA.

His Work No Easy Task — Frontier Troubles and Independent Rulers a Burden—Heavy Correspondence.

The appointment of Viceroy of India is in many ways one of the greatest positions that a British subject can be called upon to occupy, but it is very far from being a sinecure.

The work of the day ordinarily starts at a very early hour. When the late Lord Dufferin held this office he would often be at work with his secretaries at seven in the morning. The correspondence that has to be read and attended to each day is enormous, and is probably only equalled by that received by the President of the United States. From Bombay, Bengal, Madras, the United Provinces, Burmah, and other parts of our Indian Empire reports and documents of the first importance are received every day, and these have to be very carefully considered and dealt with by the Viceroy.

In addition to this, never a day passes but what important communications are received by cable from the India Office in London. Needless to say, the Viceroy's clerical staff is very carefully organized, so as to be able to deal with the vast amount of what may be termed routine work that has to be performed every day; but there still remain many matters that can be dealt with by the Viceroy alone.

To assist in the administration of India, the Viceroy has a Council of five members, with the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian army as an extra member. Each of the five members takes charge of a certain department, such as Finance, Public Works, Revenue and Agriculture, etc. Foreign affairs, however, are dealt with by the Viceroy personally, and it is this department that is responsible for fully four-fifths of the worries to which the Governor-General of India is subjected.

When Lord Lansdowne held this office he once declared in the course of a private conversation that the northwestern frontier had shortened his life by ten years. The Indian frontier, not even excepting the line between Canada and the United States, is the most important land boundary possessed by the British Empire, and with the contest that is ever waging between Great Britain and Russia for supremacy in this part of Asia the strain on the Viceroy is at times very severe.

The vice-regal year naturally divides itself into three unequal portions. During the cool season the Viceroy has his headquarters at Government House, Calcutta. When the summer comes, and Calcutta is a city of abomination for Europeans, the Government is transferred to the Vice-regal Lodge, Simla, among the hills whose caps of spotless snow make one feel cool even on the hottest day.

The third portion of the Viceroy's year, though the shortest, is in many ways the most important. It is the annual autumn tour through India, which is practically the only opportunity the Viceroy gets to see anything of the great country he governs. With the growing demands on his time each year it is becoming more difficult for him to see anything like the whole of India during his period of office.

Another source of anxiety and hard work for the Viceroy are the native rulers of the independent and semi-independent States. These, to use the words of an ex-Viceroy, are "the most cussed people on the face of the earth." They are extremely proud and haughty, and very tenacious of their "rights" — real or imaginary. If the Viceroy omits one compliment to which they deem themselves entitled, or they are received by one soldier fewer than their neighbors, or are not honored with the same number of guns, they proceed to hatch disaffection and trouble without further ado. The wild, semi-civilized tribes on the frontiers are not nearly so much trouble as these native princes, since a display of superior force will usually bring them to their senses.

Dinner in the House.

The dining rooms of the House of Commons are usually quite equal to any call made upon them by members, but on the opening days of the session these resources may break down, writes T. P. O'Connor in M. A. P. Not only will many new members want to dine in the House during the first triumphant days after they have been returned, but will be even more anxious to entertain their friends and relations. Plenty of the younger members especially will want to let their wives and sweethearts see the green-room of the House of Commons; the nooks and corners where members are able to disport themselves. When I entered the House first, the foot of woman was kept as rigorously from the inner tabernacle of the House as from the portals of a monastery of Trappists. There was nothing but a dingy underground cellar, where it was reported that a lady had once or twice dined; where usually she was treated to nothing better than a dry sandwich and a cup of tea. Now she roams all over the House. Behind the Ladies' Gallery there is a little room where she can have, even by herself, a cup of tea and even a mutton chop; and where also she can dress for dinner. Mrs. Gladstone used constantly to use this dressing-room, for her hurried and not always very elaborate toilet on the nights when she had come down to hear a great speech by her husband. Ladies have also some half-dozen rooms which run along the terrace, and no member is allowed to have a party there unless there be some ladies among the guests. The pressure on this part of the House is often overwhelming.

Not So Silly.

Weary from the chase, the ostrich of the desert had stuck his head in the sand.

"You silly bird," said the hunter, coming up. "Do you imagine I can't see you?"

"You mistake my purpose," replied the ostrich, with dignity. "Of course you can see me, but you miserable, feather stealing, egg hunting land pirate, I thus relieve myself of the necessity of seeing you."

Conscious that he had the better of the argument, the ostrich yielded $40 worth of plumes without a murmur.

The First Envelope.

The first letter envelope dates back to May, 1696. It is now in the British museum, London.

NO MORE DANDRUFF.

Newbro's Herpicide Destroys the Pestiferous Cause of Annoying Dandruff.

Does your head itch? Is your coat or dress full of white flakes after dressing your hair? That's the effect of dandruff. Is your hair thinning? Are you beginning to get bald in spots? Are you already, in fact, rapidly becoming bald? If so, that is the effect of a measly little parasite that burrows in at the root of the hair, and throws up the scalp in dandruff and eats off the hair at the root. Science's latest discovery is a destroyer of that pestiferous germ. That destroyer is contained in no other hair preparation on earth but Newbro's Herpicide. Try it, and be convinced. A delightful dressing.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

ONE OF NATURE'S TOOLS.

How Teasels Are Used in Finishing Different Cloths.

Growing by the wayside you will often see that stately, spiny looking plant, the teazel, but I wonder how many know that it has helped to finish many a piece of cloth they wear.

We are apt to think of a tool as something of man's make, yet here is one of nature's own, and nothing has ever been manufactured to successfully take its place. For ages the teazel has been used for fulling cloth—that is, raising the "nap"—and the manufacturers refer to "nap goods" thus treated as "gigged."

When ripe, the dried spike heads are gathered, packed carefully in bundles and shipped in all directions to factories. The variety mostly used have the extreme end of the spikes hooked or curved backward. This is called "fullers' teazel." These heads form a sort of brush and are attached to a wheel or cylinder which revolves against the surface of the cloth, and these curved spikes catch part of the threads and pull them up, making a fuzzy nap. This is trimmed down and leaves that soft, velvety finish to the cloth. The spikes have strength enough and elasticity, but when they come in contact with a rough place in the cloth they break and so avoid tearing the material. Try as they may, no one has ever been able to invent a tool possessing all of these qualities, so the teazel stands unrivaled for that use. The plant as we see it growing wild looks perhaps at first glance somewhat like a thistle, but it really has a dignity and character all its own. The heads in flower are covered with a fluffy down, lavender or white, and as the blossoms drop spikes appear until later it fairly bristles. The leaves, pointed and spiked, shooting out each side of the stem, meet at the base and form a little basin in which is usually water. So we have the name of the plant from the Greek "dipsacus," meaning thirsty, and many other fanciful ones, such as Venus' cup, Venus' bath, wood or church brooms, gypsy combs, clothier's brush, etc.—St. Nicholas.

ODDITIES.

Bees never store up honey where it is light.

The moth has a fur jacket and the butterfly none.

A squirrel comes down a tree head first and a cat tail first.

Leaves will attract dew when boards, sticks and stones will not.

Corn on the ear is never found with an uneven number of rows.

The dragon fly can devour its own body and the head still live.

A horsefly will live for hours after the head has been pinched off.

Fish, flies and caterpillars may be frozen solid and still retain life.

A horse always gets up fore parts first and a cow directly the opposite.

Some flies thrust their eggs into the bodies of caterpillars, but always in such parts of the body that when the larvae are feeding on the flesh of the foster parent they will not eat into any vital part.

Puns on People's Names.

A little while ago a popular form of social amusement was found in punning on people's names—"Why did So-and-so?" "Because Such-and-such." The game ran riot for a time, and echoes of it are still heard in the outer suburbs. Before those echoes die away a correspondent suggests that we should put it on record that the originator of the fashion was no less notable a person than the Quaker poet, John Greenleaf Whittier. On an anti-slavery lecturer named Mary Grew, visiting Boston in 1871, Whittier wrote a poem, "How Mary Grew," each stanza ending on a variation of the pun—

The world were safe if but a few
Could grow in grace as Mary Grew.

Not In Any County.

The city of St. Louis is not in any county. It is an independent municipality equipped with all the machinery of county and city government. It has its own circuit and criminal courts, its own grand jury, jail, etc. The circuit attorney is the prosecuting officer of St. Louis. Until 1876 St. Louis was the county seat of St. Louis county, but in that year the city was completely separated from the county, so that it is now as independent subdivision of the state. Clayton, a few miles west of the city, is now the courthouse town of St. Louis county.

MR. CAMERON'S CONCERT.

The concert in the City Hall last night, given by Mr. Cameron and his pupils, assisted by Miss Henderson, of St. Agnes' School, Miss Vera Riggs and Mr. Reginald Geen, was a success in every way. There was a large attendance, and the programme, from first to last, was highly enjoyable. Mr. Cameron is to be heartily congratulated on the success of his laudable undertaking. Everything on the programme was good, though some things were better than others. The opening number was a duet, "The Fishermen," by Mr. M. C. Gordon and Mr. Cameron, which was pleasingly sung in a finished way. Miss Annie Mair, a young lady in short dresses, sang "For All Eternity," by Mascheroni, and showed really remarkable sympathy and volume for one so young. This young lady should be heard of in the years to come. Mr. Harry Gordon gave Stewart's "Dolores" in a smooth and pleasing way, and Miss Hattie Gowsell's splendid contralto voice was heard to great advantage in "The Lord is My Light," by Allitsen. "The Sweetest Flower," a tuneful love song, was melodiously rendered by Mr. Gerald Clute, and Mr. Jas. S. Dyer more than earned all the warm applause he received for his singing of "The Strolling Player," a magnificent song by Trotere, of "Old Madrid" and "Deathless Army" fame. A duet, "The Passage Birds' Farewell," was given a fine rendition by Miss Mabel Vermilyea and Mr. Cameron, both vocalists being at their best and Miss Vermilyea being in particularly fine voice. Next came Miss Vera Riggs in a piano selection, Chopin's "Ballade in A flat," which was given in a highly creditable way and showed that this young lady can justly lay claim to a high place among Belleville's pianists. Miss Elsie Price, in splendid voice, sang Denza's perennial gem, "A May Morning," and Lane-Wilson's "Carmena Waltz Song," in a dulcet and finished way. Mr. Jack Hayes' rich bass voice was hardly ever heard to better advantage. He gave Morin's "Good Night, Beloved," from the German, and fully earned all the hearty applause he received. Miss Mabel Vermilyea came next in "Love the Pedlar," a lyric by German, the aria-like features of the song being splendidly suited to her flexible voice and fine range. Mr. Cameron sang "The Hills o' Skye" in a manner which earned him a hearty encore, and Mr. Reginald Geen followed with two Chopin selections, the "Etude" and "Valse in C sharp minor. Mr. Geen displayed remarkable technique and an artistic touch, this latter quality being particularly noticeable in the "Valse." Miss Mabel Henderson, of St. Agnes' School, sang a French song, with violin obligato by Mrs. MacColl. Miss Henderson's round and pure contralto, under perfect control, was listened to with delight by the audience. In answer to a persistent encore she gave a verse of "Annie Laurie." Mr. Merton Gordon sang Balfe's "Good Night, Beloved," and could hardly have found a song better suited to his smooth and musical voice. The programme closed with a sextette from "Lucia di Lammermoor," the vocalists being Miss Vermilyea, Miss Vera Riggs, Mrs. Gordon, Messrs. M. C. Gordon, Hunter and Cameron. It was a very enjoyable and finished bit of part singing. One would travel a long way before he heard anything much nicer. Taken altogether, the concert was an unqualified success The accompanists were; Mrs. (Col.) Campbell, Mrs. M. C. Gordon, Miss Flossie Moon, Mr. D. A. Cameron and Prof. Hunt.

"THE CONVICT'S DAUGHTER." TO-NIGHT.

There is something so sensational and yet realistic about "The Convict's Daughter," which comes to the Carman to-night, that one is held spellbound from the rise until the fall of the curtain. It pleases both sexes and all classes of people, for it is an American play, by an American author, and written for the melodramatic loving public. Peaceful and stirring scenes follow each other in rapid succession. The first scene in act one is indeed charming—an ideal southern home where sunshine and happiness dwell hand in hand. But it suddenly changes to clouds and despair, for the unseen enemy has commenced his persecution. It would require too much space to tell of all the good things in "The Convict's Daughter."

"THE HOLY CITY."

Large and appreciative audiences all over the country are again welcoming Gordon and Bennett's magnificent Biblical drama, "The Holy City," which comes to the Carman next Friday night, the second season being apparently of greater importance than even the remarkable first. That theatre patrons are entertained and bettered by the ever-beautiful and touching story, old as Christendom, founded upon gospel truths and the teachings of the Nazarene, will not be disputed by any who have witnessed the performances. Every man, woman and child in the land should listen to and see this pure, instructive, illustrative story of the days of our Saviour among men.

Graphic Letter From San Francisco.

ONE WHO WAS THERE WRITES OF THE AWFUL HAPPENINGS ON EARTHQUAKE DAY.

The Intelligencer has been privileged to publish the following letter from a lady who was through the earthquake in San Francisco.

"In the midst of this fearful horror it is nearly impossible to quiet oneself to write. It is all perfectly appalling. When we went down to wire you there were hundreds waiting at the office to give assurance to friends in the east, and we had to wait our turn, and so it may be twenty-four hours before you get it. The horror of the earthquake will be upon me as long as I live. It was at 5.13 in the morning, and I was lying awake, when suddenly the earth began a great shaking, and the house to rock backwards and forwards as though it were being swayed about on great rockers and no foundation at all. My one thought was that our last moment had come, for every instant I felt the house would be about our heads, and through it all was the constant crash, crash, crash, as things about the house fell down, yet, strange to say, comparatively few things were broken—several of my lovely pieces of bric-a-brac and painted cups and saucers—and that was practically all. As soon as the rocking ceased we flew out of doors, and everyone, up and down, was out in night clothes, and the bricks were lying in all directions, for the brick chimneys on almost every house were down. Instantly one saw the wisdom of wooden buildings that would give in such a calamity. On the street, just above us, the water was rushing down in torrents, for the water main had burst under the street, and broken through and, of course, that is what happened in the city where the shock was far more severe than here. It ripped up the street car tracks, twisting them like wire, left great gaping cracks yards wide in the roads. Burst the sewers below, so that the streets were running rivers and no water could be got, twisted and broke up the gas pipes, so that fire broke out instantly in many places, and in a few moments a great volume of smoke was ascending and has continued ever since, for the city that was, is now a great roaring furnace. Hundreds are killed, thousands ruined and hundreds of millions lost, and as I look out at the back verandah the bay is crimson from the reflection and the whole sky a pillow of smoke over a great furnace, and the air is so hot from it that one can scarcely breathe. We have been waiting all day for friends in the burned parts of the city, but have not heard anything from them, and if we do not by night, we will take in some of the homeless strangers, for, of course, there are hundreds who were wealthy two short days ago, who now have nothing but the clothes upon their backs. The Bank of British North America went yesterday, but we cannot hear of any of the men connected with it, and there is no way of finding out—no telephone, telegraph, newspapers, nor anything, and we hear from some of the refugees that have just come into Berkeley for shelter, that the building is burned, and there is no way of getting to the ferry but by walking miles all around the edge of the city to the water's edge. No passengers are allowed to land in the city after eight. This morning the militia are on guard, keeping the people back, and it is just as well, for the awful sights make even the strongest men sick. There is not a drop of drinking water to be got at any price in the city, except what is carried over, and with this fearful heat that is terrible."

Lydford Lodge, S. O. E. Had Smoking Concert.

Lydford Lodge, Sons of England, last evening held a smoker to commemorate St. Geroge's Day. A large number were present and an enjoyable time was spent. The early part of the evening was spent in card playing and social intercourse, after which refreshments were served. After partaking of the spread a toast list was carried out, being as follows;

"The King."--The National Anthem by the company.

"The Land we Left and the Land we Live In."—Responded to by Bros. J. B. Harker and H. F. Ketcheson.

"Officers of the Lodge."—Responded to by Bros. N. Cousins, W. R. Vallance and G. R. Brown.

"Sister Societies."—Responded to by R. H. Ketcheson and W. Rodbourne.

"Our Visitors."—Responded to by Prof. Spooner.

At intervals songs appropriate to the occasion were given by Messrs. N. Cousins, S. Burton and W. R. Vallance and graphophone selections by Mr. T. Soat.

Chief Newton occupied the chair and responded to the toast of "The Chairman."

The Rolling Mills.

SOME STATEMENTS WHICH PUT RATHER A NEW FACE ON THE PRESENT CONDITION OF AFFAIRS.

The Intelligencer has been complimented on the article of yesterday dealing with present conditions in connection with the rolling mills, but it is stated by people who claim to be well-informed, that the information given to us yesterday was not quite so correct as it might have been.

In the first place, we are informed that lawyers scout the idea that the Council, by taking half the amount of taxes alleged to be owed the city, would render themselves personally liable. They would, we are told, do absolutely nothing of the kind.

In the second place, we are told that a committee of the Council, with power to act, has already agreed to accept the settlement which they now wish to have discussed at a public meeting. This settlement, we are told, was agreed on and subscribed to on the 14th inst., and legally ratified before the Master in Chancery on the 16th inst.

Taking the above statements into consideration, it is hard to see what is to be gained by a discussion of the matter before a public meeting, unless the Council thinks it necessary to try to justify its course in making the settlement in question.

So far as The Intelligencer is concerned, we have no hesitation in commending the settlement if that alone will bring about the operation of the mills, something we would all like to see.

Apropos of this matter, we have heard it whispered that certain material for use in the mills, when they again begin operation, is now under way.

That looks promising.

CITY FATHERS WENT TO ZWICK'S

LOOKED OVER THINGS AND WATCHED A FIRE ENGINE PLAY.

Members of the City Council, namely, Mayor Sulman, Ald. Marsh, Vermilyea, Green, Knox and Panter, yesterday afternoon visited Zwick's Island for the purpose of seeing what is being done there, and principally to consult in reference to the advisability of moving the crusher. It was ascertained that it would cost upwards of $200 to move the crusher from its present position to the old quarry on the flats in West Belleville, and return it again to the Island. In view of the expense the majority of the members were in favor of procuring a new crusher. This matter will be considered at the meeting of the committees to be held to-morrow evening.

In the centre of Zwick's Island an excavation has been made where it is contemplated to have a filtering basin, if such should be built. In the excavation made a considerable quantity of water has accumulated and one of the city fire engines was taken to the scene, and although two streams of considerable dimensions were thrown out for some time the water in the excavation was by no means lowered.

The members of the deputation express themselves as much edified by what they saw at the island yesterday.

NOTICE.

The steamer Annie Lake will on Saturday, April 28th, run to Massassaga Park (weather permitting) as follows; Leave the Institution dock at 1.45, calling at Belleville at 2 p.m. She will also make trip from Belleville at 3 p.m. Object, May flowers.

Cheer Up. The Ex-Cow Inspector is Safe

Most people in this city will remember Mr. D. J. Rutledge, who for many years held down the honorable and responsible position of Cow Inspector in this city. Some two years ago, Mr. Rutledge, with his good wife, went west with his son, they taking up their residence in San Francisco. When the news of the quake came many people thought of old Mr. and Mrs. Rutledge, and wondered how they had weathered the terrrible disaster. Cheering news now comes in the shape of a postal card received at noon to-day by Mr. F. M. Clarke. It is dated San Francisco, April 18, 8 a.m., and bears the brief but pointed message;

"All alive. Home gone."

POPULAR YOUNG PEOPLE WEDDED.

NUPTIALS OF MR. DAVID A. STRACHAN AND MISS HANNAH COOKE THIS MORNING.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at 10.30 this morning at the residence of the bride's mother, Mill St., when Mr. David A. Strachan, of this city, was married to Miss Hannah Cooke, also of Belleville. Rev. C. R. Emerson, pastor of the Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. The bridesmaid was Miss Mary Robinson, and the best man Mr Will Kelly. The bride and bridesmaid were both handsomely and tastefully gowned in white silk. At the conclusion of the ceremony the wedding breakfast was partaken of and general congratulations indulged in. Mr. and Mrs. Strachan were valued members of the Baptist congregation, and will be much missed. For some time past the bride had been an employee of McIntosh Bros. of this city, and was handsomely remembered by both her former employers and former associates in the store. The wedding presents were exceedingly numerous, useful and beautiful, amply attesting the popularity of the happy couple. Mr. and Mrs. Strachan left on the flyer at 1.40 for Winnipeg, where they expect to reside. The best wishes of many friends will follow them to their new Western home.

CORONER WALSH SAYS DEAD ARE OVER 1,000

The Alaska Packers' Association has resumed business on Stuart street wharf, where the loading of eighteen ships will begin at once. Three thousand persons can get work in the canneries in Alaska.

Pekin, April 25.—The Empress Dowager has sent to the American legation a cheque for $50,000 for the relief of the sufferers from the disaster at San Francisco, and is sending $20,000 to the Chinese of that city.

At 10.40 Monday night an earthquake shock was felt throughout. No damage was caused, but in some few instances persons living in houses ran out badly frightened and called upon the sentries and guards to help carry out clothing and other effects.

The total of the New York Chamber of Commerce relief fund Tuesday night was $724,564. The combined red cross and the mayor's fund had reached nearly $600,000. The Merchants' Association fund stands at $145,000. The Jockey Club, the controlling body of the eastern turf, contributed $25,000.

Following the unfortunate killing of Major H. C. Tilden of the general relief committee on Sunday by some self-constituted vigilants, the city patrols and all guards will be disarmed, and the troops, both regular and militia, will be instructed not to shoot, except in cases of extreme necessity.

M'AULIFFE FOUND GUILTY.

Peterboro Hotelman Will Be Sentenced To-Day—Suit Against Gow.

Peterboro, April 25.—In the case of King v. McAuliffe, yesterday, the grand jury returned a true bill, charging manslaughter. The witnesses heard were Stanley Coo, Cleveland Conley, Chas. Wolfe and Arthur McDonald, who gave strong evidence against the accused, stating that he had struck the unfortunate man, in the barroom, the blow causing ultimate death. Judge Anglin's charge was rather against McAuliffe, and the jury, after two hours, returned a verdict of guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy. Sentence will be given to-day.

In Hill v. Gow, for $1,000 damages, arising out of shooting of Hill's son, for which Gow served a three months' sentence, Constable Archie Morse stated under oath that Gow said to him after the inquest that he was sorry the boy had been shot, but that it would not have been so bad had he shot the old man. The case continues to-day.

Sped to Lady Love's Rescue.

Guelph, April 25.—Wesley Welsh of Moorefield, was yesterday brought to Guelph jail by Constable Kyle, charged with stabbing Robert Montgomery of that village on Sunday evening. He is not right in his mind. Welsh is a former teacher, and had been acting very queerly. Miss Maggie Patterson, a milliner of Moorefield, had attraction for Welsh, and he got it into his head that he was going to marry her. He proposed and was refused. Then he got it into his head the idea that some person was hurting Miss Patterson. He got up and ran over to the young lady's residence, to find her in company with Montgomery. He sprang at the latter and stabbed him with a knife, inflicting a painful wound on the left shoulder.

King to Ascend Vesuvius.

Naples, April 25.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra will reach Naples April 27. They expect to ascend Mount Vesuvius and visit the observatory. Frank Perret, the American assistant of Prof. Matteucci, will act as interpreter during their Majestys' call upon Prof. Matteucci, who has reached the crater and who finds it increased from 100 to 5,000 feet.

Athens, April 25.—At the Olympic games yesterday a fencing bout between England and Germany, arranged especially for the benefit of King Edward, occurred at the Zappeion, and was won by the Englishmen by 9 to 2. King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the Greek royal family were present.

Wreck at Merritton.

St. Catharines, April 25.—Merritton, about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon was again the scene of an accident upon the Grand Trunk Railway. While no lives were lost the wreck was disastrous so far as the rolling stock is concerned.

Going to Cobalt.

Toronto, April 25.—Provincial Geologist Miller will shortly leave for Cobalt to begin preparation of a contour map of the Gillies' timber limit, about 100 square miles in extent. He will take many assistants.

Body Found in the Don.

Toronto, April 25.—The body of David C. Cornell, 334 Sackville street, was found floating in the Don yesterday morning. Cornell was about 60 years of age, and was formerly a railway conductor on the G. T. R. He left his home on Saturday.

MACKAY CHIEF CRITIC

Most Contentious Clauses of Mines Bill Held Over.

New Mining Bill, However, Is Practically Passed In the Committee of the Whole House—Hon. Frank Cochrane Reaffirms Government's Position That There Will Be No Royalties—Money-Raising Bill.

Toronto, April 25.—The Government's mining bill was taken up in committee of the Legislature yesterday afternoon.

Mr. MacKay objected vigorously to the passing of clauses dealing with the conditions under which patent rights would be granted, urging that the question of the right of the province to receive certain profits could not be clearly defined until the other mining bill was brought down.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane replied that no one with experience in mining would invest capital in a mine unless some title was held.

No Royalties.

"I may say there will be no royalties" was his answer to Mr. Mackay's objection that while this exemption would be all right for struggling prospectors it wouldn't be fair that the province should receive nothing in the case of a man who stumbled upon a million dollar deposit. The Government should get a substantial share.

Mr. Whitney intimated that the provisions of the supplementary bill relating to patents would be along the lines of the one before the House.

At the request of Mr. Gamey, who had doubts of its merits, the clause allowing free public inspection of alleged discoveries of deposits before an official certificates had been granted, was allowed to stand.

The formal reading of the bill in committee was concluded, a number of the more contentious clauses remaining over.

Third Readings.

The following bills were read a third time: Respecting the Town of Port Hope (Preston); to amend the Ontario Medical Act (Beck); respecting local municipal telephone systems (Beck).

Second readings were given Hon. Dr. Pyne's bills respecting the education department, and to amend the Public Schools Act.

On the House going into committee on Col. Matheson's bill for raising money on the consolidated revenue fund of Ontario, Mr. Harcourt advised making the bonds payable, both in England and in Canada. The Treasurer replied that the intention was to make them payable in Canada only. He also said that the bonds would not be liable for death dues in England, but they would be liable to income taxes.

Kakabeka Dispute Ends.

Toronto, April 25.—The Wegg-Jenison combination has finally won out in its battle with the Clergue interests over Kakabeka Falls water-power, the private bills committee of the Legislature yesterday throwing out by a large majority the Kakabeka Falls Land & Electric Co.'s bill.

CZAR TO OPEN PARLIAMENT

Will Leave Shelter of Tsarskoe-Selo On Witte's Advice—General Amnesty For Political Prisoners.

St. Petersburg, April 25.—After much hesitation, Emperor Nicholas has finally decided to come to St. Petersburg and personally open the first Russian Parliament, May 10. His Majesty's decision comes as a surprise, as it was supposed that after his long absence from the capital, he would not dare to leave the shelter of the Palace of Tsarskoe-Selo. But Premier Witte and other advisers urged that it would be a great blunder to miss such an opportunity.

It is rumored that the Emperor, in greeting Parliament, will announce general amnesty for political prisoners.

RUSE FREES PRISONERS.

Men In Uniform Present False Order For Their Delivery.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, April 25.—At 9 o'clock yesterday morning seven men in carriages and attired in uniforms of the Gendarmerie and police, drove up to the prison here and presented a false order for the delivery of ten political prisoners, who were to be tried yesterday, saying that they intended to convey them to the citadel. The prisoners were delivered to the men, who drove them away. At daylight the carriages were discovered empty on the outskirts of the city, the drivers bound and gagged and the discarded uniforms inside the vehicles.

Cossacks on Rampage.

Voronezh, Russia, April 25.—The Governor-General of Voronezh has hastily left this city for the Village of Dievitza, where it is reported Cossacks have killed 19 and wounded 50 persons in suppressing peasant disorders.

Prince Arthur Inspects Soldiers.

Toronto, April 25.—Our soldiers of to-day, our soldiers of yesterday and our soldiers of to-morrow were inspected yesterday by His Royal Highness Prince Arthur of Connaught, who attended Stanley Barracks at noon and inspected the regulars of the cavalry and infantry, also a company of army and navy veterans. In the afternoon over 15,000 people witnessed his review of the school cadets, numbering nearly 2,500, on the university campus. He wore a British general's uniform with red cap of the German peak pattern.

Insurance Inquiry At Toronto.

Toronto, April 25.—The insurance commission meets at the city hall today at 10.30. Judge McTavish of Ottawa and B. L. Kent of Montreal, who, with J. W. Langmuir, compose the commission, arrived in the city last night.

Prevent Fire Insurance.

Albany, April 25.—The Assembly yesterday passed a bill designed to prevent fire insurance companies entering into or maintaining combinations to control rates of fire insurance.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, April 24.—Receipts of live stock at the city market, as reported by the railways, since last Friday were 65 carloads, composed of 1108 cattle, 500 hogs, 76 sheep, 576 calves and 36 horses.

Exporters.

Only a few loads of export cattle were offered. Prices ranged from $4.70 to $5.10 per cwt. Bulls sold at $3.75 to $4 per cwt.

Butchers.

Prices were easy at following quotations: Picked lots at $4.75 to $5, but few brought the latter price and those that did were good enough for export; loads of good sold at $4.50 to $4.70; medium at $4.25 to $4.40; common mixed with cows, at $3.25 to $4, canners at $2.25 to $2.75.

Feeders and Stockers.

Several loads of medium cattle brought in for export were bought as short-keeps and a few lots of stockers were offered. Harry Murby, who bought 150 all told of both stockers and feeders, reports prices the same as those given last week as follows: best feeders, 1100 to 1200 lbs., at $4.50 to $4.75; best feeders, 1000 to 1100 lbs., at $4.25 to $4.60; best feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $4 to $4.25; best feeders, 800 to 900 lbs., at $3.85 to $4.10; best stockers, 500 to 700 lbs., at $3.50 to $3.65; common stockers, 400 to 600 lbs., at $3.

Milch Cows.

About 12 milch cows and springers sold from $30 to $50 each.

Veal Calves.

The railways reported 576 calves as coming on the market. Prices were unchanged at $3 to $6 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The receipts were not large, the bulk of which were bought as usual by Wesley Dunn at following prices: export ewes at $4.50 to $5; bucks at $3.50 to $3.75; yearling lambs at $3 to $6 each. Spring lambs sold at $3 to $6 each.

Hogs.

Prices were reported as unchanged by Mr. Harris. Selects, $7.15; lights and fats at $6.90.

WATER POWER IN THE TRENT VALLEY

Five Points For Long Distance Transmission.

Report of the Hydro-Electric Commission For the Eastern Section of Ontario—25,000 Horse-Power Can Be Supplied, With Available Present Market For 10,000 Horse-Power—Annual Saving at Typical Points.

Toronto, April 25.—The second report of the hydro-electric power commission of Ontario covering the Trent district has been made public. It shows that there are five water powers on the Lower Trent River that are worth developing for transmitting power to the towns along Lake Ontario, but on the Upper Trent and on the Moira River and its tributaries, there are numerous water-powers which are now developed and which are capable of supplying the immediate local demand.

To develop the five large water powers on the Lower Trent would call for an expenditure, according to the estimate of Chief Engineer Cecil B. Smith, of $2,295,000, and the amount of power available to these five points would be 25,000 horse-power. As to the market for this power, the engineer says 10,000 horse-power could be disposed of at once, with an increase to 15,000 horse-power in five years.

Typical Points Illustration.

Two typical points, Kingston and Oshawa, are given to show the cost of municipal transformer stations and the cost of power to the customer. The cost of a plant at Oshawa is put down at $48,900, and the total savings, not counting cheap power for street lighting and pumping, would be $11,919 a year. The Kingston plant would cost $60,190, and the savings would amount to $29,100. The cost of power at the generating plant at, say, Healey's Falls, would be $12 a horse-power, and, adding transmission the cost at the municipal transformer station would be, at Kingston $21.43, and at Oshawa, $21.52.

The report deals with the Trent district, including that portion of Ontario lying north of Lake Ontario, but not including Toronto. The district is divided into three divisions.

The Upper Trent Valley affords opportunities for local development and these have been taken advantage of so that Peterboro, Lakefield, Lindsay and Fenelon Falls are well supplied with hydraulic and electric power. The total amount of power is not very large and in the near future will all be utilized for local consumption, at which time a combination of private interests would tend to raise rates.

Three Divisions.

In the Lower Trent Valley far more valuable water powers exist, which have only been developed to a very slight extent.

In the Moira River Valley a large number of comparatively small water powers exist and few are developed.

The commissioners believe that an immediate market for 10,000 horse-power can be obtained within a reasonable distance of Healey's, Middle or Ranney's Falls of the Trent River, which would be increased to 15,000 horse-power in five years.

The total power in sight is estimated at 65,675 horse-power of which 17,000 horse-power is now under development. The various water powers named and the totals for the various divisions are as follows:

	Horse-power.
Moira River and tributaries	4,900
Upper Trent River	17,265
Lower Trent River	43,510.

Five For Long Distance.

Of the various water powers investigated the chief engineer shows that only five are worthy of being fully developed for long distance transmission, viz., Healey's Falls, Middle Falls, Ranney's Falls; rapids one and a half miles above Glen Miller, and rapids three-quarters of a mile above Trenton. The dry weather capacity of these developments would be 25,000 horse-power, more than sufficient to supply, for the present at least, all industrial demands of the Lake Ontario towns. At present it would not be necessary to develop all these water powers, but as the demand increases they could be developed one by one, all being worked in unison and under one management; which would be far more economical than if several companies were to take them up and transmit independently.

Wanders Into the River.

Gananoque, April 25.—Fred Crozier, Sr., aged 70 years, disappeared at daybreak yesterday morning from his residence and late yesterday afternoon his body was recovered in the Gananoque River by a searching party organized by Mayor Wilson. He had been in poor health, and his mind was affected. He was very highly respected.

HOW THE TIGER KILLS.

Never Faces His Prey, but Attacks It on the Flank.

I have taken considerable trouble to find out how tigers kill large game. Some time ago I was asked to come and see a full grown bullock that had been killed by a tiger. On examining it I found the animal had its neck broken, and there were claw marks on the nose and shoulder, but nowhere else. There was no doubt that the tiger had jumped at the bull and landed on the shoulder, and when the bull turned his head to gore the tiger he must have put his claw out and with a sudden jerk broken the neck.

On another occasion I went to see a young buffalo which had been killed by a tiger and found the same thing had happened. There were similar marks on the nose and also on the near shoulder, which clearly indicated that this animal had been killed in the same way. Malays who have actually seen a tiger killing a buffalo told me they saw the same thing happen; also that in dragging off a heavy carcass, such as buffalo or bull, he gets most of the weight across his shoulder.

This must be fairly correct, as I have often followed a kill, and the marks left indicate that only a portion of the animal was trailing along the ground. I have known a full grown bull, which ten men could not move, dragged for two miles by a tiger in a heavy jungle, where roots of trees and swamp had to be gone through. In no case have I seen the pug marks facing the wrong way except when stopping to feed, which proves he must carry a portion of the animal over his shoulder.

The old idea of a tiger killing large game by a blow from his paw is nonsense; besides, in India a tiger never faces his prey, but attacks him on the flank unless charged. Another curious fact that may seem very like a fairy tale is that a tiger does not seem to mind a small lamp being tied over a kill about ten feet high, but will come and feed. I have known three occasions when this has been tried, and each time a tiger has come to feed upon the carcass.—London Field.

The Jersey Cow.

The Jersey cow is a small animal, and therefore her maintenance ration is small, while a relatively large part of her food goes to profit. She is a persistent milker, often a perpetual milker, and ordinarily not dry more than six or eight weeks in a year. She has an extremely long period of usefulness in the dairy. Five years cover the profitable work of the average cow. The Jersey produces until fifteen years old. Many are profitable when eighteen to twenty-one years of age.—Farmer.

Another Quake At San Francisco

Falling Chimney Kills Woman at Work In Mission District.

Shock Lasted Nearly a Minute and Was Felt In Oakland and Berkeley—Number of Walls of Ruined Buildings Collapse—Immense Population Receiving Free Rations—Greatest Problem Is to Prevent the Unequal Distribution Of Food.

San Francisco, April 26.—At 3.15 o'clock yesterday afternoon a shock of earthquake was felt. It lasted nearly a minute and caused considerable alarm and one death. A number of walls of burned buildings which were standing were thrown down and frail buildings were considerably shaken up, but the damage done was slight.

The shock was felt in Oakland and Berkeley, but in those places it was very slight and of brief duration.

Mrs. Annie Whitaker, aged 25 years, was at work in the kitchen of her home on Shotwell street, in the Mission district, when the shock came. The chimney, which had been left in a tottering condition by the heavy quake last Wednesday, crashed through the roof and fractured her skull. Her body was taken to the morgue at Portsmouth Square and buried an hour later at Laurel Hill Cemetery.

Distribution of Food.

An idea of the task which confronts the food committee may be gained from the fact that throughout the city rations for 349,440 persons were distributed Tuesday. At one point provisions were given out to 672 persons an hour for ten hours.

All flour that was received in sacks is exchanged at bakeries, pound for pound, for bread. Almost all the bakeries in the unburned regions have opened and are selling bread at five cents a loaf. There is no danger of a meat famine.

"From the re[illegible] of officers filed this morning," said Chief of Police Dinan, "there is every indication that San Francisco has settled down to almost a normal condition. The one perplexing problem that we now have to contend with is the prevention of an unequal distribution of food."

Instances have come to light where different members of families have each secured and stored away provisions intended for a whole family's sustenance.

Many tons of fresh fruit were distributed free Tuesday and yesterday.

Rebuilding.

Members of the Jesuit order announced yesterday that they intend to at once rebuild both St. Ignatius College and the cathedral.

Several of the foundries and factories near the waterfront and south of Market street were yesterday preparing to resume operations.

The losses of San Francisco's fire department during the earthquake and fire were inconsiderable. So far as known, three firemen were killed and one injured.

Paragraphed News.

Gen. Greely reports that 221 injured are being cared for at the general hospital, Presidio; 784 at Park emergency hospital, making 1,005 injured so far as reported.

Chicago reports that there are 7,000 telegrams from San Francisco and California tied up and that there are 1,000 messages for California dated the 23rd and 4,000 dated the 24th on the files.

The business centres and half of the resident section of Santa Rosa were damaged or destroyed. The loss will aggregate $8,000,000. Nineteen persons were killed, and 200 injured, and 5,000 are homeless.

Several bullets fired from the water front off the ferry depot struck a red cross launch, in which were Dr. Higgins of the emergency hospital service and several others. None of the occupants were hit.

An official list of the condition of the school buildings throughout the city shows that 29 buildings were utterly destroyed and that 44 were partially damaged. Many of these will have to be pulled down.

The bodies of Mrs. Manning, daughter of W. A. Lawsing, Shelburne, and her five-year-old girl, who were killed in the San Francisco disaster, passed through Toronto Wednesday for interment at Shelburne.

Robert Bacon, acting secretary of state, has wired Mayor Southam of Ottawa, that "contributions of American citizens makes outside help unnecessary, and we feel obliged to decline all such. We are none the less grateful to you for your generous sympathy."

State Insurance Commissioner Wolfe announces that nearly all the large insurance companies will be able to make satisfactory adjustments of the losses caused by the San Francisco fire. He estimates that the amounts for which the companies are liable will probably reach $230,000,000. There are 107 companies to share the insurance loss.

Steamer Sinks at Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., April 26.—Lake Superior traffic is blockaded by the Canadian steamer Iroquois, which sank Tuesday night crosswise of the channel, after striking the head of the dyke in Hay Lake. Nothing can get through until the Iroquois is raised or swung out of the channel. She was downbound with a cargo of grain.

J. Seymour Corley Appointed.

Toronto, April 26.—At a meeting of the Cabinet yesterday J. Seymour Corley was appointed crown attorney for the City of Toronto in succession to J. W. Curry, who has resigned. The appointment dates from May 1. The salary is fixed by statute. Mr. Curry has been receiving $3,500.

Sentenced to Five Years.

The Latest Fraud at Ottawa.

After seven years of extremely secluded life, the North Atlantic Trading Company's contract with the Government has perished from too much exposure. For weeks Opposition members in the House and in two committees have resolutely and persistently hunted down this scheme and the schemers behind it, and have brought to light what bears the earmarks of being one of the greatest "grafts" in the history of Canada—or any other country. Little by little the Opposition have dragged certain facts to light in spite of the efforts of ministers and officers of the Government. They have found among other things that the company has received about $300,000 in bonuses on continental immigrants, without evidence that any of these were influenced by the contractors to come to this country They have learned from Lord Strathcona that when the contract for 1904 was made, setting forth in the preamble that the company was incorporated in Amsterdam the company had no corporate existence in Holland or anywhere else.

From the same source it has this week been ascertained that the company since the Opposition criticism began went to the island of Guernsey for a charter and that a group of clerks holding one ten pound share each are the incorporators. It came out also this week that while Mr. Smart was the deputy minister carrying on negotiations with the mysterious beneficiaries of this deal he was in private correspondence with them, with the view of leaving the Government and taking an interest in the contract.

Last year the Government voted down the motion to cancel the contract whose existence had only that year been discovered. This year ministers and deputy ministers defended and protected the scheme so long as they could. By concealment, by contradiction, by obstruction, they stood between the contractors and the independent enquirers.

At the evening sitting on Friday the Opposition moved for the cancellation of the contract as injurious, absurd and improvident. They gave the history of this deal under which an alleged company which had no corporate existence and no place of business, whose members and officers could not be found, was receiving $75,000 to $100,000 a year, and giving no return which could be computed It was showed that three contracts had been made, the second better for contractors than the first, and the third better than the second. All were made without authority of Parliament, and it was believed that the transactions had gone on a long time before they were known to the colleagues of the Minister of the Interior.

The contempt for the authority of Parliament and of the interests of the country; the generosity to the other contracting party, and the secrecy of the whole affair were marks of Siftonian origin. Conservative members spoke of the falsehoods contained in the language of the contracts, declaring plainly that the whole affair was a fraud from beginning to end. It was their hope that after the exposures so far made, the contract would be brought to an end, and that there would be no more bonuses paid to companies or individuals for bringing or professing to bring immigrants to Canada from the Continent of Europe.

Mr. Oliver, Minister of the Interior, replied at much length. His long defence of the General Immigration Policy, of the Laurier Government was not heard with deep interest, as members were waiting for the announcement of the Government's policy It came in at the last five minutes of the speech. Mr. Oliver had been praising the contract, when he suddenly observed, that in view of certain circumstances the Government had concluded that there should be a change. Here the Minister was interrupted by loud and long continued Conservative applause. When he was able to proceed, he said that a message and a letter had been sent to Lord Strathcona announcing that the contract would be closed and bonuses cease in November.

Here are the facts; it is for the people to judge of the honesty, the capability and the cost of the Ottawa Government and whether it deserves their support and esteem.

HAIR TELLS CHARACTER.

Color of Hair Said to Indicate a Person's Temperament.

Many people believe that blonde, or light hair denotes affection and dark hair constancy. A person without hair is not devoid of character; far from it. The disposition of the average bald-headed man is to show such solicitude for the welfare of others, that he neglects himself. A germ causes baldness. Prof. Sabouraud, of Paris, France, innoculated a rabbit with Dandruff germs, causing it to become totally bald in five weeks' time. To rid the scalp of these dangerous germs it is necessary to apply Newbro's Herpicide.

HERE'S SOUND SENSE.

(Toronto Saturday Night.)

So the rumor goes that Mr. Joseph Phillips of the York Loan, if he will give up everything of value that he controls and will induce his friends to do the same, will have the law's kindest face turned towards him. It is rumored that there has been bargaining and that Phillips will shell out and be let go—let go to pursue his remarkable career. It is difficult to understand the ways of justice, sometimes. But if Phillips owns anything that is his own, this property should not be scared out of him by shaking him over the mouth of the pit, while if his practices have been such as would have earned imprisonment for him, he should not be able to purchase release by handing over his property. Surely that is a fair statement of the vital principles of justice. Why settle anything in this ferocious business? Give Joseph Phillips a square deal—take from him what is not his, leave with him what is his, and, if he deserve a testimonial, have it engrossed for him, while if the evidence shows that he is entitled to punishment let him have it good and plenty.

A Comparison of Mechanics' Methods

The Toronto Telegram publishes the following letter:

Sir,—I arrived in Montreal about twelve months ago. Previous to landing I was told by the engineer aboard that if I wanted to get on in Canada I was to say that I could do anything. Now, I am an electrician by trade, but seeing a painter glazier wanted I changed my arm at it, although not having done much at it before. I lasted till the third week in July. In starting a glazing job down the canal side in Montreal, I started to bed my glass in the frames, which I have seen done in England, when the foreman told me not to be particular but to get a hustle on. The little time that I have been in this country has taught me that the British mechanic is far superior to the Canadian. Now, I am not a home-born Britisher myself, having seen the light in Wellington, New Zealand, in 1879. Longing to see the home of my parents, I journeyed to Bognor, Sussex, where I was taught my trade and taught it thoroughly, too. If Canuck thinks himself capable, let him journey across to the other side, and obtain a job under the London County Council. That body will give him the greatest test of his life. Remember no hustling. They give time to eat your dinner there. An electrician, in order to hold his casting to the wall will have to drive 4 in. pitch pine plugs in, and cemented, too. He will then be visited by the consulting engineer, who will take hold of his switches with both hands and throw his whole weight from the wall. They may be slow there, but they do things right.

SAFETY.

Never in all the history of transportation has travel been safer than it is to-day. Seated in perfect comfort in any of the mile-a-minute trains of the Lake Shore Railway you are in less danger by far than was your grandfather in the lumbering six-mile-an-hour stage of a half or three-quarters of a century ago. Trains over this line are protected and guarded in a way that is but little short of marvellous. Every device that skill or money can provide is used without regard to the expense and in spite of the high speed—the fastest in the world—you are as safe here as in your own home. Combined with safety and high speed are luxurious comfort and punctuality, all combined to make a service unequaled the world over. See that your ticket reads "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway," and write for full information to J. W. Daly, Chief Ass't G. P. A., Buffalo, N.Y.; A. J. Smith, G. P. A., Cleveland, Ohio, or W. J. Lynch, Passenger Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

Dog Collars!

DAME FASHION has decreed that collarless gowns shall be worn this year, with the consequence that Dog-Collars will be more in evidence than ever before. And really the manufacturers have "spread themselves," for many of the designs are exquisite. The tints most approved at present are; Amethyst, Topaz, Ruby, Sapphire and Garnet. The stones representing these colors are—to be fashionable—mostly imitation jewels. The imitations, however, are of the finest and the stones all cut by expert diamond cutters.

We show some of these in our window and shall be pleased to have you call and examine them, even if you don't purchase.

AN EARTHQUAKE MARK TWAIN SAW.

SAN FRANCISCO'S WARNING OVER FIFTY YEARS AGO.

Mark Twain was a reporter on a San Francisco paper once. He tells of an earthquake he witnessed in San Francisco. He describes the affair in "Roughing It":

"It was just after noon on a bright October day. I was coming down 3rd street. The only objects in motion anywhere in sight in that thickly built and populous quarter were a man in a buggy behind me and a street car wending slowly up a cross street. Otherwise all was solitude and a Sabbath stillness. As I turned a corner around a frame house there was a rattle and jar, and it occurred to me that here was an 'item'—no doubt a fight in that house. Before I could turn and seek the door there came a really terrible shock; the ground seemed to roll under me in waves, interrupted by a violent joggling up and down, and there was a heavy grinding noise, as of brick houses rubbing together. I fell up against the frame house and hurt my elbow. I knew what it was now and, from mere reportorial instinct, nothing else, took out my watch and noted the time of day; at that moment a third and still severer shock came, and as I reeled about on the pavement trying to keep my footing I saw a sight.

"The entire front of a tall, four-story brick building in 3rd street sprung outward like a door and fell sprawling across the street, raising a dust like a great volume of smoke. And here came the buggy —Overboard went the man and, in less time than I can tell it, the vehicle was distributed in small fragments along 300 yards of the street. One could have fancied that somebody had fired a charge of chair-rounds and rags down the thoroughfare. The street car had stopped, the horses were rearing and plunging, the passengers were pouring out at both ends and one fat man had crashed half-way through a glass window on one side of the car, got wedged fast and was squirming and screaming like an impaled mad man. Every door of every house as far as the eye could reach was vomiting a stream of human beings, and almost before one could execute a wink and begin another there was a massed multitude of people stretching in endless procession down every street my position commanded. Never was solemn solitude turned into teeming life quicker.

"The curiosities of the earthquake were simply endless. Gentlemen and ladies who were sick, or were taking a siesta, or had dissipated till a late hour and were making up lost sleep, thronged into the streets in all sorts of queer apparel and some without any at all. One woman, who had been washing a naked child, ran down the street holding it by the ankles, as if it had been a dressed turkey. Prominent citizens, who were supposed to keep the Sabbath strictly, rushed out of saloons in their shirt sleeves, with billiard cues in their hands. Dozens of men with necks swathed in napkins rushed from barber shops, lathered to the eyes, or with one cheek clean shaved and the other still bearing a hairy stubble.

"A crack 100 feet long gaped open six inches wide in the middle of one street and then shut together again with such force as to ridge up the meeting earth like a slender grave. A lady sitting in her rocking and quaking parlor saw the wall part at the ceiling, open and shut twice, like a mouth, and then drop the end of a brick on the floor like a tooth. She was a woman easily disgusted with foolishness and she arose and went out of there. Suspended pictures were thrown down, but oftener still they were whirled completely around with their faces to the wall. Thousands of people were made so seasick by the rolling and pitching of floors and streets that they were weak and bed-ridden for hours and some few even for days afterward."

CURE CATARRH BY BREATHING HYOMEI.

Hyomei is not a cure-all; it is a specific for the cure of catarrhal troubles. Breathed through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit the aromatic healing of Hyomei penetrates to the most remote parts of the nose, throat, and lungs, healing all inflammation and killing the catarrhal germ wherever present. The complete Hyomei outfit sells for $1, and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the vest-pocket, a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hyomei. The inhaler lasts a life-time, and if more Hyomei is needed, extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents.

It is the most economical of all remedies advertised for the cure of catarrh, and is the only one that treats this disease without stomach dosing, applying the medication and healing where the disease germs are present.

If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price. Write to-day for consultation blank that will entitle you to services of our medical department without charge. The R. T. Booth Company, Hyomei Building, Ithaca, N. Y.

What May Befall in 1906.

Here are Spangler's prophecies for 1906:—

The dissolution of Russia.

The overthrow of Turkey.

The assassination of the Czar of Russia

The assassination of the Sultan of Turkey.

The prevention of three wars by President Roosevelt.

A protracted race war in the South.

Destructive spring floods in the United States.

A destructive eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

The activity of Mount Pelee and Popocatepetl.

Volcanic eruptions in all parts of the world.

The eruption of many volcanoes now supposed to be extinct.

Great loss of life at sea by storms.

Destruction of two western cities by cyclones.

Earthquakes in all parts of the world.

Destructive earthquakes in California and the Philippines.

Rebellion in Spain.

Great disturbances all over Europe.

Spangler says further, that the summer of 1906 will be hot and sultry throughout the temperate zone, with extensive death rate.

That Christ will make his spirit felt among the people of the United States and England, in which countries there are to be fervent religious and potent political movement which are to overcome in a great degree the present spirit of graft and commercialism.

that Pennsylvania is to have administration of the people and that discoveries of corruption will be discovered which will drive some of the guilty to suicide.

That God will wreak terrible vengeance upon the Russians for the massacre of the Jews.

A ROCK IN THE BALTIC.

A Remarkable Series of Adventures Resulting on a Naval Mistake.

The careless firing of a new piece of ordnance by Lieut. Alan Drummond, of H.M.S. Consternation, while cruising through the Baltic, has led to a series of unaccountable and surprising international complications.

Drummond sighted a new gun on an apparently deserted bit of rock that jutted up out of the sea. To his amazement his cruiser was at once fired on from the rock, and the Russian Government demanded an explanation from Great Britain.

The mystery of the whole affair—the presence of cannon on such a site, the anger of Russia and the importance given to so insignificant a matter—worked on Drummond's imagination, and in a moment of headstrong folly he went to Russia to investigate.

A series of surprising adventures followed, culminating in a scene that defies description.

The whole story is splendidly recounted in Robert Barr's great novel, "A Rock in the Baltic," which has just been purchased by The Mail and Empire, and it is to be the first novel of the much-talked-of "$150,000 series" which this enterprising paper is to issue during the forthcoming twelve months.

The series consists of twelve great novels by the most famous living Anglo-Saxon authors.

The Mail and Empire, with its customary alertness, has secured the sole right in this district to publish these novels in serial form before they appear in book form, which will afford its readers a literary treat never before offered by any newspaper in America.

No other paper in the city or vicinity can publish these great stories. Order in advance to avoid disappointment, as the edition will be exhausted before all are able to buy. Commences on Saturday, May 5th, and each succeeding Saturday. These stories will also be published in The Weekly Mail and Empire, commencing May 10th.

Wales' Largest Family.

A Cardiff workman, employed at the Ely Paper mills, near that city, holds probably the record for the largest living family in Wales, his wife having borne him no fewer than 21 children, nineteen of whom are living. Although the father has only just turned 63 years of age, he has already 169 grandchildren. His family, including himself and his wife, his sons and their wives and children, number 209.

Before the Looking Glass

How much time does a woman spend before the looking-glass? A German estimates that a girl of six to ten years spends an average of seven minutes a day before a mirror; from ten to fifteen, a quarter of an hour is consumed daily, and from fifteen to twenty, twenty-two minutes. A woman of seventy, it is estimated, has spent 5,862 hours before the glass, in other words, eight months, counting day and night.

MARK TWAIN TELLS A STORY

HUMORIST AMUSES SPECTATORS AT TOURNAMENT FOR BENEFIT OF SAN FRANCISCO VICTIMS.

New York, April 25.—Mark Twain told the spectators at the billiard tournament last evening, for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers, what he knew of the game, and kept them laughing while he talked, says the World. He said: "The game of billiards has destroyed my naturally sweet disposition. Once when I was an underpaid reporter in a Virginia city, whenever I wished to play billiards, I went out to look for easy marks. One day a stranger came to town and opened a billiard parlor. I looked him over casually. When he proposed a game I answered: "All right."

"Just knock the balls around a little so I can get your gait," he said, and when I had done so, he remarked: "I will be perfectly fair with you. I'll play you left handed."

I felt hurt, for he was cross-eyed, freckled and had red hair, and I determined to teach him a lesson. He won first shot, ran out, took my half dollar and all I got was the opportunity to chalk my cue.

"If you can play like that with your left hand," I said, "I'd like to see you play with your right."

"I can't," he said, "I'm left-handed."

ROYAL EPICURES.

Monarchs Who Were Famous For Their Culinary Learning.

Royalty in times past has had many an accomplished epicure as learned in culinary lore as in the practice of the cuisine. It was Henry de Valos who brought into fashion aromatic sauces and various spice dainties, inheriting his taste for cooking from Catherine de' Medici, who introduced into France not only ices, but much of the culinary art from Italy.

Louis XIV. was devoted to gastronomy, and for his use liquors were invented in his old age, when, it is said, he could scarcely endure existence without a succession of artificial stimulants. But the pertinacity with which Charles V. of Spain gratified his appetite under all circumstances rivaled even that of Frederick the Great. Before rising in the morning potted capons were usually served to him, prepared with sugar, milk and spices, iced beer being one of his favorite drinks. Fish, too, of every kind was to his taste, eels, frogs and oysters occupying a prominent place in the royal bill of fare. Frederick the Great was fond of highly seasoned meats and had a strong predilection for Italian or French made dishes. It was his habit during dinner to make pencil marks against the different items of the bill of fare, to which he referred when conversing afterward with the maitre d'hotel.

When the Duc d'Escars and his royal master, Louis XVIII., were closeted together to talk over a dish the ministers were kept waiting in the antechamber, and the next day this notice regularly appeared in the official journals: "M. le Duc d'Escars a travaille dans le cabinet." It may be added that Louis XVIII. had invented the "truffles a la puree d'ortelans," and, reluctant to disclose the secret, he invariably prepared the dish with his own hands, assisted by the duke. Another epicurean of the first order was the Polish King Stanislaus Leszinski, who invented many a new dish and vastly improved the style of cooking, astonishing the Lorrainers, among other things, by having served up at his table dishes of meat with fruits, both of which had been cooked together. Geese which had been plucked when alive, then whipped to death, and marinees were set down in his bill of fare as foreign birds, and after a somewhat similar fashion turkeys were transformed into "coqs de bruyeres" and were served at the table buried under the strong smelling herbs of Lorraine. One year was remarkable for the entire failure of the fruit crop, but Stanislaus would not be deprived of his dessert, for, turning his attention to confectionery, he substituted compositions of sugared vegetables, especially of turnips.—London Standard.

FATHER'S LONG SUIT.

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)

Everybody winks when father,
Self-sung,
Begins to blow about when he
Was young.

He likes to reminisce way back
And tell us what a crackerjack
He used to be when he played ball,
And how he drove into the tall
Uncut, with his unfailing bat,
Every pitcher; how he spat
Upon his hands, and how he had
A way of driving pitchers' mad;
And how he used to hammer dents
In the old, ball-beaten fence
With anything they used to serve;
And how he used to have a curve
That made the boys so timid that
They trembled when they stood to bat;
And how he used to shoot them in
Underneath the batter's chin
And make the enemy absurd
And helpless as a dodo bird.
To-day there isn't any man
Can run as fast as father ran,
Nor anyone can steal a base
As father could, nor with the grace
Pick up a hot one off the bat
And fire her in, and all of that
As father did when he was all
The mustard in this game of ball.

Everybody yawns when father
Begins to reminisce
And point the difference between
The olden day and this.

Volcanic activity is so often associated with the palms of the tropics that it is somewhat difficult to think of subterranean fires burning fiercely through the hard crust of the cold northland. Yet one of the most extensive volcanic belts of the globe lies on the southern coast of the Alaskan province. This necklace of mammoth peaks comprises fifty-seven active or recently extinct volcanoes, with altitudes ranging from the 14,000 feet of Wrangel, above the head of Cook's Inlet, down to the few hundred feet of the Bogoslofs beyond the western extremity of the Alaskan peninsula. This belt of volcanic activity is 1,600 miles long and not more than forty miles wide. More than twenty-five of the Alaskan peaks are live volcanos to-day, forming a varied and imposing array of cones that rise in many cases from the sea.

It would seem that it is possible to see across Lake Ontario. The Oswego Times of Monday said: "Yesterday was one of the clearest days on the lake in a long time. From the trestle or lake bank one could see the South shore as far down as Stony Point. Looking across the lake there were several islands in view which the wise ones said were the Ducks, False Ducks, Galloups, Timber Island and Pigeon Island. With the aid of a glass (telescope) the light house on the east end of Pigeon Island was plainly visible. Some who had several glasses in spite of Wesley Hook's visit, said that they could make out the light house keeper lighting his pipe."

Success is now reported for the experiment of changing modern language teachers between England, France and Germany, which has been in progress for about a year. Fifty-eight English teachers, of whom seventeen were women, have been placed in French or German schools, and fourteen French teachers have received appointments in England. The idea originated with the French Minister of Education, who agreed to give board and free tuition at certain schools and colleges in France to teachers from England who would agree to conduct conversation classes in English.

ARNISH ROCK.

A Lighthouse Which is Without a Light of Its Own.

The most extraordinary of all lighthouses is to be found on Arnish rock, Stornoway bay, a rock which is separated from the island of Lewis by a channel over 500 feet wide. It is in the Hebrides, Scotland. On this rock a conical beacon is erected, and on its summit a lantern is fixed, from which, night after night, shines a light which is seen by the fishermen far and wide. Yet there is no burning lamp in the lantern, and no attendant ever goes to it, for the simple reason that there is no lamp to attend to, no wick to train and no oil well to replenish.

The way in which this peculiar lighthouse is illuminated is this: "On the island of Lewis, 500 feet or so away, is a lighthouse, and from a window in the tower a stream of light is projected on a mirror in the lantern on the summit of Arnish rock. These rays are reflected to an arrangement of prisms and by their action are converged to a focus outside the lantern, from which they diverge in the necessary direction."

The consequence is that to all intents and purposes a lighthouse exists which has neither lamp nor lighthouse keeper and yet which gives as serviceable a light, taking into account the requirements of the locality, as if an elaborate and costly lighthouse, with lamps, service room, bedroom, living room, store room, oil room, water tanks and all other accessories, were erected on the summit of the rock.

RAILWAY TAX DOUBLED

By Hon. Mr. Matheson's Supplementary Revenue Bill.

All Ontario Railways Over 150 Miles in Length, Electric Lines Included, Must Contribute More Funds to the Public Treasury—How the Provincial Treasurer Takes Municipalities Into Partnership With Government.

Toronto, April 26.—Hon. Mr. Matheson brought down his supplementary revenue bill in the Legislature yesterday. He explained that it provided for a slight addition to the revenue from banks, each branch being required to pay a tax of $25. The main feature was an increase in the taxes of the railways. He referred to the appointment of the Railway Taxation Commission a couple of years ago. Its report was valuable, but he was afraid that some of its conclusions were not borne out by facts. The commission went on the supposition that the provinces had the same powers in regard to taxation as some of the States of the Union. This Mr. Matheson controverted. In the United States the Federal Government's powers were defined, and all the remaining powers were left to the States, while under the B. N. A. Act the powers of the provinces were defined, and everything else went to the Dominion. The provinces had power to impose direct taxation within the province. The Pettypiece commission recommended a percentage tax on the gross earnings of the railways and stated that the province had the power.

Direct and Indirect Taxation.

When the late Mr. Hardy brought in the supplementary revenue bill of 1899 he defined the difference between direct and indirect taxation. If the province acted on the recommendation of the Pettypiece commission and levied a tax of three per cent. on the gross earnings, all the railways would have to increase their charges and thus take the money out of the people. They could contest the law by showing this to be an indirect tax on the people. The Treasurer proposed to increase the tax on the railways on the basis of mileage. If the province went beyond that the result would be either to take the additional revenue at the expense of the people or impair the service of the railways. He thought the railways would submit to a fair increase.

Tax Will Be Doubled.

Under the old act railways under 150 miles in length escaped taxation and it was proposed to leave the law as it stands. For railways over 150 miles the tax will be doubled. That is, instead of $30 a mile for each additional track, the tax will be $60 a mile for a single track and $20 a mile for each additional track. This will apply to organized districts. In unorganized districts the tax is now $20 and $5 and it will be increased to $40 and $10.

These figures will apply to electric railways of over 150 miles in length running on their own right of way. Under the old act there was a tax of $10 a mile on rural railways running on the highway, but it was not collected. The Government propose to impose a tax of $10 a mile for each track. There will be no addition to the tax on railways in cities.

The increase, the Treasurer said, would amount to between $180,000 and $190,000 a year.

Disposition of Tax.

Then, as to the disposition of the receipts. It was proposed to make the municipalities partners with the province in supplying the unfortunate in the asylums.

Out of the whole tax $30,000 would be taken to pay off cost of collection and distribution and to meet the expenses of the Railway Commission to be appointed.

One half of the balance of the receipts would go to the cities, towns and villages and townships of the province in proportion to population. That would, on the present census give each municipality 8 cents a head of its population. That would mean that a town having a population of 5,000 would receive $400.

Pay For Unfortunates.

The municipalities would be asked to contribute out of the funds 10 cents a day for the support of their patients in the asylums. The expense to the province was about $150 and the municipalities would pay less than one half.

The Dominion census would be adopted as there might be an inducement to the municipal assessor to pad the list. Where there were additions to the territory the Government would have the power to say what the population was, taking the Dominion census for it.

Graham Delighted.

Mr. Graham was delighted that the Government had come to his way of thinking. The old Government had decided that the only fair way of taxing railways was by the mile and the Treasurer's conversion seemed to be complete. He recalled that Col. Matheson had voted for the "whole Pettypiece bill."

The Premier promptly declared that the Pettypiece bill had never been voted on in its entirety.

Hon. Mr. Hanna said that for whatever would go to the municipalities they would have the Government side of the House to thank for it. The proposal would establish a partnership between the Government and the municipalities which would work out very satisfactorily.

Ross' Idea of It.

Mr. Ross said he did not think we had arrived at the point where it would be desirable to transfer the burden of maintaining the asylums to the municipalities. If that was to be done let it be done directly, not by the circuitous way proposed by the Government. The motive of the bill apparently was that the Government might square itself with the municipalities. The Government, he declared, was putting itself into an absurd position, since the Conservatives when in Opposition had voted for the whole Pettypiece bill.

Squaring With the People.

The Premier declared that it must be a remarkably good bill as not a word had been said against the proposal to take more money from the railways. It had been said that the Government was trying to square itself with the people. This was true and it was with satisfaction that he was able to say that the Government was succeeding. The Government would continue to square itself with the people by squaring its actions in accordance with its past promises.

Regarding the Pettypiece bill, Mr. Whitney said when the bill was before the House communications were dispatched to the Opposition side of the House asking assistance to defeat the Pettypiece bill. It was never hinted that the Opposition approved of the Pettypiece bill. They were prepared to vote for the second reading because there was enough that was good in it to warrant the endorsation of the principle of the bill, this being that there should be an increase in the tax on railways, a portion of which should go to the municipalities. Mr. Pettypiece was told that if he could summon courage enough to move the second reading of the bill the Opposition would vote for it.

Harcourt Notes Record.

Mr. Harcourt said there was a record that Mr. Whitney voted for a resolution to refer the Pettypiece bill back to the committee of the whole with instructions to report the whole bill.

"Will the hon. gentleman say that I made that statement," asked the Premier.

Mr. Harcourt would not, but held to the record.

Mr. Preston of Brant gave the House the benefit of his recollection of the affair and then Col. Clark of Centre Bruce admitted that he was just as anxious to have Mr. Pettypiece vote for his own bill as Mr. Preston was to have Mr. Pettypiece vote against it. He thought on that occasion Mr. Preston felt somewhat aggrieved when his leader was handing out portfolios "that had the germs of galloping consumption."

May Lease Spur Lines.

Hon. Dr. Reaume brought down a bill to amend the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Act. It empowers the commission to lease branch or spur lines not exceeding ten miles long and to sell, lease or otherwise deal with mining rights along the right of way and on town sites.

The following bills were passed: Respecting prospectuses issued by companies (Hoyle). This was amended, to meet the objection of A. G. Mackay, by providing that no subscription for stock shall be binding on the subscriber unless he shall have received a copy of the prospectus respecting it.

After some discussion Mr. Carscallen (Hamilton) withdrew his bill to prohibit unlicensed conveyances from practicing for hire. Mr. Lucas' Devolution of Estates Act amendment was also withdrawn after discussion.

PURSUIT OF ZULU CHIEF.

British Detachment Poorly Equipped and Grave Situation Feared.

Pietermaritzburg, South Africa, April 26.—The rebellious Zulu chieftain, Bambaata, with about two thousand of his followers, is in full retreat toward the fastness of Zululand, closely pursued by the detachment of South African police and a battalion of infantry that was sent out to capture or kill the rebels.

Grave apprehension exists over the fact that the pursuing force is short of rations and ammunition. The rebels have plenty of both, and are ready to fight desperately if cornered.

It is admitted that should Bambaata gain the slightest advantage over his pursuers he will receive strong reinforcements at once, as many of the tribesmen are dissatisfied and would rise against the Government at once were they assured that they had any chance of success. Orders have been sent to the several garrisons to send such reinforcements to the punitive expedition at once as can be spared.

The white settlers of Zululand are leaving their homes and crowding into the larger towns for protection.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Ottawa, April 26.—In answer to a question by W. F. Maclean (South York) the Minister of Finance in the House yesterday stated the beneficiaries of the annuities under indemnity act of last year and the amounts to each to be as follows:

Sir H. Langevin, $2,446.18; Sir Charles Tupper, $2,795.91; Sir C. H. Tupper, $2,154.52; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, $2,795.67; Sir Adolph P. Caron, $2,446.18; Sir John Carling, $2,446.18; Hon. George E. Foster, $2,446.18; Hon. Clifford Sifton, $2,446.18; Hon. J. I. Tarte, $2,154.52; Hon. John Costigan, $2,446.18; Hon. John Haggart, $2,446.18; Hon. A. G. Blair, $2,446.18.

In further answer to the member for South York, Sir Wilfrid Laurier fixed next Wednesday evening for the discussion of Mr. Maclean's bill to abolish these pensions and the increased indemnities of members.

Mr. Bennett (East Simcoe) urged that the report of the transportation commission be dealt with by the House.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the Government was not yet ready to announce its position as to the proposition to place express company tolls under the jurisdiction of the railway commission.

AS HE'D SHOOT A SQUIRREL.

Would Gow Shoot a Hill, One Witness Says At Trial.

Peterboro, April 26.—In the suit for $1,000 damages brought by Robert Hill against Charles Gow, the jury last night handed in a sealed verdict to the sheriff.

Gow gave practically the same evidence as at the trial, when he was convicted of manslaughter.

John Newham swore that, while driving sheep with Gow in May last, Gow said: "I would not think much more of shooting one of the Hills than I would of shooting a squirrel."

The Horse Show.

Toronto, April 26.—Yesterday H.R.H. Prince Arthur of Connaught declared the horse show here formally opened. The scene was a brilliant society one. The standard of the horses shown was above the average, and the entries were well filled.

Drafts in the Bison Hot Water Furnace work on exactly the same principle as in a kitchen range.

Its direct draft will give a roaring fire in "no time," and its side and down draft will bring the water to the boiling point very quickly.

Every heat unit in the fuel is utilized, its draft construction preventing any escaping.

The Bison has more good heating points than all other heaters combined.

TELESCOPES.

The Difference Between Reflecting and Refracting Kinds.

A very pretty little experiment which illustrates the two methods of forming an optical image and by way of corollary illustrates the essential difference between refracting and reflecting telescopes may be performed by any one who possesses a reading glass and a magnifying hand mirror. In a room that is not too brightly illuminated pin a sheet of white paper on the wall opposite to a window that by preference should face the north or away from the position of the sun. Taking first the reading glass, hold it between the window and the wall parallel to the sheet of paper and a foot or more distant from the latter. By moving it to and fro a little you will be able to find a distance corresponding to the focal length of the lens, at which a picture of the window is formed on the paper. This picture, or image, will be upside down because the rays of light cross at the focus. By moving the glass a little closer to the wall you will cause the picture of the window to become indistinct, while a beautiful image of the houses, trees or other objects of the outdoor world beyond will be formed upon the paper. We thus learn that the distance of the image from the lens varies with the distance of the object whose image is formed. In precisely a similar manner an image is formed at the focus of the object glass of a refracting telescope.

Take next your magnifying or concave mirror, and, detaching the sheet of paper from the wall, hold it nearly in front of the mirror between the latter and the window. When you have adjusted the distance to the focal length of the mirror, you will see an image of the window projected on the paper. By varying the distance as before you will be able to produce at will pictures of nearer or more remote objects. It is in this way that images are formed at the focus of the mirror of a reflecting telescope.

Simplicity.

I am convinced, both by faith and experience, that to maintain oneself on this earth is not a hardship, but a pastime, if we will live simply and wisely, as the pursuits of the simpler nations are still the sports of the more artificial.

Seems Reasonable.

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

"Be careful, Ned," said Sheppard. "Better not. Wait till it's light."

Now, I knew very well at the time that he spoke wisely and that I was merely taking a rash hazard for no better purpose than to display to myself my own determination—or obstinacy, if you will. But the feeling was strong upon me, and so, picking my steps down the ladder, I paid him no attention. Presently my foot, descending, shot through empty air, and coincidently with that the iron bar to which I was clinging with my left hand ceased abruptly. For a moment I had a sickly sensation in my stomach, and I went quite cold. But, bracing myself together, I kneeled upon the lowermost step and launched my body into space.

I have no intention, as I say, of defending my foolhardiness, nor do I take any credit for my ultimate escape from what was undoubtedly a deadly peril. My legs kicked aimlessly in the air and found no rest. I tightened my hold upon the iron of the ladder and strove to pull myself up. But my wrists had already weakened in that tedious and unavailing oscillation in space, and, to my horror, I realized that I could not get back.

"Sheppard!" I called faintly.

"Ned! Ned!" came Sheppard's whisper from above, and I was vaguely aware of a tiny spark of light shining as it were in heaven. The glow lit up the remnants of the iron ladder, and below this I could see as I hung the imminent brows of the ruined wall and the gleaming light of water far away. Yet this illumination proved my salvation. The ruins were overrun with masses of Irish ivy, as I have said, and in the course of centuries this strongly growing creeper had clambered over and beyond the proper limits of decay and clothed with great twisted branches the wall of the drum tower at one side of me. Gasping from my exertions, I reached a hand toward these leaves and, catching at a thick stem like a cable, clung to it desperately while dividing my weight between the two supports. My only anxiety was as to whether the ivy would hold. Its attachment to the stones of the wall must be precarious, and yet I had to trust it, and, poising an instant between the two, I dropped slowly upon the creeper. The friendly branches held, and I slipped carefully down until I stood upon the broken stones of the ruined wall. High above I saw Sheppard light another match and heard his voice calling to me, but I had no strength to reply. He flung the light from him, and, descending in an arc, it passed before my eyes and went out with a fizzle below. I leaned over, and the grayness of the coming dawn lay in the water thirty feet beneath me. A fragment of stone, detached by my movement, rumbled over the margin and fell with a great blob into the moat. There were twelve feet of water in the fosse. I shuddered and called back to Sheppard.

"I was afraid something had happened to you," said he. "Are you all right?"

I explained the position. "Wait there, and I'll join you from the other side. You old fool, Ned!"

I accepted the criticism meekly and retained my place upon the ivy covered ruins until I heard the sound of feet upon my right and presently perceived Sheppard crawling over the stones toward me. He sat down near me, panting.

"You can get down from the other side pretty easily," he declared. "It's well to remember that."

"I don't quite see why you have done so," I answered, rather ungratefully. "You would be better asleep."

"Oh, nonsense!" he exclaimed; then, after a pause, "The dawn will be up directly, Ned."

Presently his head nodded upon his shoulder. I let him sleep. He must have been worn with his long vigil and the longer toil. I knew that he would not go to bed and he had better take what rest was possible in this illegitimate way. The stars flared and went out, yet the dawn seemed long in coming. I pulled out my watch and, striking a match, consulted it. It was half past 3. Sheppard's head lurched forward, and his breath grew stertorous. A thin fine line of light cut across the eastern horizon, and then suddenly a stick cracked below me. I started, alert, intent, the drums roaring in my ears. A soft sibilation as of voices exchanged below the breath caught my eager senses. Surely I could discern the noise of footsteps falling quietly upon the grass. I strained my sight to pierce that gray-black cloud of gloom, but there was nothing visible, and, leaning softly forward, I touched Sheppard upon the shoulder. He was awake in an instant and ere I knew it whispering at me under his breath: "What is it? Are they come?"

"Listen!" I murmured. Sheppard turned to me, motioning with his hand. Reaching close, he put his lips to my ears.

"They're down by the moat, exploring," he said—"several, I think. Shall I fire?"

I grasped his hand in return. "No, no," I murmured back. "You stay here and keep quiet with your shotgun. I'm going down to find out."

With which I slipped noiselessly on hands and knees until I reached the back parts of the wall. From here it was a descent of twenty feet or more into the courtyard, but the face of the ruin was irregular, and I found, by groping, projecting stones which offered me a foothold, so that presently I dropped to the flags of the yard without sound and stole into the house. My first duty was to awaken Montgomery and the man Williams. Both of them I dispatched by means of a ladder to join Sheppard on the heights, and, that done, I took a lantern and descended into the corridor of dungeons. My light was but feeble, and my progress was necessarily slow along that path of inky blackness. At each of the turnings I paused and, proceeding to the bottom, peered out through the grating on the waters of the fosse. I had in this manner and exercising this precaution made the circuit of half the castle and was now upon the southern face and, as I concluded, in the proximity of Sheppard and the others. Here it was that I met my first alarm. As I gazed out of the grating on my tour of inspection and was almost now convinced that our fears had been unnecessary and that we had been deceived by the early movements of the dawn, suddenly there grew before my eyes and out of the grayness a vast head, set with horrible rolling eyes and with a profusion of shaggy hair. The apparition loomed before the bars of the window and with a quick movement seemed to push forward as though to enter. Involuntarily I started back into the darkness. The face glared at me, pressing upon the bars, the lip twisted over the red gums and yellow fangs, and the water dripping from its black hair. Its eyes measured me with a glance, and for half a minute of time we stood confronting each other, my tiny thread of light streaking the ghastly apparition with yellow. The next moment it had vanished, and, my wits returning in a tide, I flung myself forward to the grating and looked out. The lantern shone upon the dark waters, and that was all. But this was more than enough for me, and I was aware that it was likely to be quite enough for our assailants.

The face glared at me, pressing upon the bars.

Hurriedly I quitted the corridor and regained the upper air. By means of the ladder I reached the rest of the party and at once communicated my information.

CHAPTER XI.

THE dawn was now abreast of the hilltops, and the trees of the park stood out like shadows in a great mist.

"They will begin here," observed Sheppard, "when they find there is no entrance below."

"I don't envy them the twelve feet of water to start with," said I.

"I don't envy them if they get here," remarked Montgomery quietly.

Williams said nothing. He looked from one to another curiously and then craned his neck over the castle wall and scrutinized the foreground. Now and then he grasped his shotgun almost mechanically, as if to feel certain that it was there. I agreed with Sheppard that if any attack was to be delivered it would be upon the breach made by time in the defenses. There was no way into the castle by the gratings above the moat, and it would take artillery at least to shake the huge portcullis. Yet it seemed incredible that any sane man should attempt to swim the fosse and scale the battlements. If I had been seen by that appalling face, as I conceived, the enemy would be aware that we were on the watch and ready for them. If so, I considered it more than likely that they would retire and make the best of the reconnoissance they had achieved.

"I don't like this," Sheppard said. "What the mischief are they up to? Let me go and see."

I considered. To say the truth, I did not like it myself, but would it be wise to divide our forces?

After a momentary reflection I decided to do so, and, enjoining upon Montgomery a strict vigilance, I crawled after Sheppard toward the upper battlements.

Once we had reached the ramparts we proceeded more quickly, but still with great caution, stopping at intervals to reconnoiter the ground below. But there was nothing to be seen or heard, and until we had passed the keep and had got upon the western wall we encountered no sign of the enemy. Here, however, Sheppard stopped short and pressed his hand on my shoulder.

"Down!" he said.

Simultaneously with his words a whiz of cold air passed my nose, and a small crack of some firearm ensued upon it.

"That's by way of introduction," said Sheppard, "and now the fight begins."

Keeping our heads below the parapet, we stumbled as fast as possible along the roof, and presently after rounded the corner to the northern wall. Here a sight met our eyes, even in that obscurity, which struck amazement and even terror to my heart. I have already spoken of the sycamore which stood outside my bedroom window and beyond the moat. It was a lofty tree, spreading very amply, and mounted to within a dozen feet of the parapet. This the ingenious wits of some one—and I had no hesitation in naming the author of the plan—had utilized to scale the walls. As I found afterward, a tough and serviceable rope had been employed to connect the peaks of the battlement with the tree, and over this, as we came into sight, the black figures of men were scrambling. I had little doubt on thinking over it subsequently that my presence in the basement revealed to the man in the moat had given the signal for the adventure, seeing that I was not likely to be in my chamber and able to detect them ere the enterprise had gone forward sufficiently.

Both of us sprang forward on the instant, but ere we could reach the spot the foremost of the men, landing, stood up and made at us with a cutlass. Taken aback by the shock, Sheppard, who was in front, gave way, and the weapon, swinging heavily, cut the air with a formidable whistle and struck the leads near my foot. I leaped at the fellow's throat, drawing my revolver, and, borne back by the impetus of my charge, he stumbled against the second man. But by this time some half dozen of the storming party had gained the ramparts and without a pause bore down upon us. No shots were fired, and the struggle that ensued was decided in a silence almost complete, save for the noise of our hurrying feet, the sound of blows and the hard breathing of the combatants. I cannot but admit that if the dawn had been a little further advanced and it had been possible to distinguish between the various bodies raging in the medley things would have gone very badly with us. But as it was the darkness fought for us once more, as it had fought the previous evening. I brought the butt of my revolver full upon the head of one man, and he fell like a log. Sheppard's arms were twisted round another, and the two, swaying together, stood out for an instant against the sky and were then snapped up into the confusion of the melee. Blows rained upon us, and the warm gush of blood started from my arm. With a rush we were carried backward, and the struggle seemed all over. At that instant I bethought me of Montgomery and Williams, and, getting my finger on the trigger of my weapon, I fired. The shot flew aimlessly, but the noise rang loud upon the heights and passed from the courtyard in dwindling echoes. Then, throwing off the man who was struggling with me, I seized Sheppard's arm, and, dragging him from the kneeling posture into which he had been thrust, I ran across the leads toward the round tower of the keep. Sheppard raced with me, panting as he went, and after us pressed a thin stream of black creatures just visible against the heavens. Scrambling up the stairway, we jammed down the lid which gave access to the top of the tower and, turning, looked down upon the nether battlements.

After an ineffectual rally upon the stairs the assailants drew off and, huddling in a group some twenty paces away, whispered together. I heard the sounds of their voices stirring in argument, and now and then a syllable came to me, faintly familiar. Where had I heard it? Above the rest and lighted by the kindling sky towered a form which I took to be Sercombe's. For the space of three minutes or more this interval of rest continued, and then a louder voice cried something from the terrace. I recognized it now. The language was Greek, and those strange and horrible creatures, that seemed somehow to my excited brain compact of all deformities, were Greeks—sailors also, as I conjectured from the smartness of the trick which had led to our discomfiture. At this moment a low whistle came from the farther corner of the tower, and immediately two heads stole over the coping.

"It is I," said Montgomery. "What has happened?"

We welcomed them with warmth and hastily unfolded the situation, but the words were scarce out of my

CAN SAVE TEN MILLIONS

CHEAP ELECTRICAL ENERGY AS AGAINST STEAM IN ONTARIO.

It Costs Eight Dollars to Develop Energy at Niagara Falls, and Five More to Transmit It to Toronto—Striking Figures Given by Hon. Adam Beck to the Toronto Board of Trade—$23 Unreasonable Price.

That electric energy can be developed at Niagara Falls for $8 per horse-power, which figure would cover money invested and operating expenses; that it should only cost $5 for transmission to Toronto; that under such conditions the saving to consumers of Toronto as against steam would be from $500,000 to $750,000 a year, and that it would mean a saving of $10,000,000 a year to the province as against steam, were the striking statements made by Hon. Adam Beck in an address delivered before a general meeting of the Toronto Board of Trade recently on "Electric Power."

"I would like to impress on you the fact," said Mr. Beck in opening his address, "that I am not appearing as a representative of the Government in regard to any policy it may bring forward in respect to waterpowers of the province. I come here as one of you to deal not with a political issue, but with a question that is of direct interest to every person in the province, irrespective of his political stripe."

Leading into the question of power, the speaker pointed out how the waterpowers of Canada were essential to the development of natural resources such as mineral wealth and forests.

In inducing foreign capital to come here for investment Canadians were always met with the argument that there were no cheap coal supplies. Capital must be brought in, and the largest prize Canada could hold out was cheap waterpower, which would in turn mean cheap transportation.

Power From Niagara Falls.

"I will confine myself to the waterpower of Niagara Falls," continued Mr. Beck. "That is of especial interest to us because it will supply with cheap power a large part of the population of this province. I estimate, in fact, that 1,500,000 people may easily be supplied with electric power from the Falls if the available power there is developed. There is an agitation going on both in Canada and the United States over the likelihood of destroying the scenic beauty of the Falls by a diversion of water. Our friends in the United States need not be so concerned as they profess to be. Canada has not been prodigal in letting franchises, although too great concessions may have been made to companies, but I am sure the Government of Ontario—and from what I read in the press the Minister of Public Works at Ottawa is of a similar view—will never consent to any steps which will mean the depletion of the waters of the Falls. President Roosevelt has been very fair and pronounced on all these matters, and I feel certain he will not consent to allow the scenic beauty of the Falls to be destroyed. He may repose, I believe, the same confidence in our Governments, both of Ontario and of the Dominion. It is true the State of New York has been granting power franchises without demanding a limit to the water that shall be used. We want the amount to be limited.

Would Not Prohibit Export.

"The export of power should not be prohibited, I think. It would be an injustice if it were to those who have invested between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 in the development of power at the Falls. It would be unfair to prohibit a realization of profits on money so invested, but what I do hold is that power must always be first available for local consumption.

"Regarding the price of this power to the consumer, I believe the matter might well be left in the hands of our Provincial Legislature. The power companies are our tenants, and as such we should be able to regulate them.

"From figures which I have been able to secure I estimate that power can be developed at the Falls for $8 per horse-power. This figure would cover money expended in installation, in maintenance, expenses, depreciation, and interest on money invested at, say, 4 per cent. to 5 per cent. Against this steam power costs on an average $28 per horse-power. The difference is a saving of $20 per horse-power, or $10,000,000 to the province."

Dealing with the benefits of power obtained at his figures, the speaker took the ground that it would build up manufactures, prove a moral blessing by giving more work to laboring men in all the cities of Ontario, and would even allow the Toronto Railway Co. to offer penny fares to the workingmen. If Ontario did not develop this power Winnipeg might take away the industrial supremacy of the large cities of this province, since that city was obtaining cheap power from Winnipeg River.

Not Antagonistic to Capitalists.

"I am not antagonistic to any capitalists," observed the speaker, "for we are all anxious to make all we can, but I hold the power at Niagara is for all the people of this province and should not be controlled by a few promoters and wealthy men. It cannot be contradicted that at present power is being sold at Niagara for $12 per horse-power. It is to be brought to Toronto by the Electric Development Co. and sold here in large units at $35 to consumers. How is it that the cost of transmission is $23 per horse-power? It is an unreasonable figure and can only be accounted for by the belief that the [illegible] of the three companies, the Electric Development, the Toronto [illegible] tric Light and the Toronto & Niagara have identical interests behind them. I cannot accept the statement that these companies are justified in charging $35. I may say to them that it costs only $5 for transmission instead of $23. But the price you are asked to pay is not what this power costs, but what those companies can get from you."

Cheap Power Will Reduce Fares.

It was then explained by Hon. Mr. Beck that $5 for transmission would allow for all expenses of right of way, superstructures, etc., and an interest of four per cent. or four and a half per cent. on all money invested. He then estimated that if power were sold to the Toronto Street Railway at $17 instead of $35, as under the contract made some time ago, it would mean a saving of $250,000 to the company, and would allow the workingman to get two or three more tickets for 25 cents.

Figuring on the basis of $20 per horse-power for pumping stations and railways, and on a slightly higher rate for small consumers, he estimated that, after allowing for all expenses and for interest on all moneys invested, the consumers of Toronto could be saved from $500,000 to $750,000 per year. He further quoted figures to show how capitalists had raised almost double, in some cases, the price of light, heat, and power in Montreal, Buffalo and Ottawa.

ANNEX THE WEST INDIES.

Toronto Business Man Enthusiastic Over Results to Be Attained.

The acquisition of the British West Indies by Canada is a step most strongly advocated by R. L. Patterson of Miller & Richards, type founders, of Toronto. Mr. Patterson has returned from a five-weeks' cruise amongst the various islands, such as Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbados, Bermuda, and St. Lucia. He found them fairly prosperous and contented, with the exception of Jamaica, business in which, on account of the low price of sugar, is in rather a depressed condition.

I certainly think it would be a good thing for Canada if it were possible to acquire these islands," he said on his return.

"In the first place, we should get the climate we require for the growth and production of such things as tropical fruits, sugar, cocoa and coffee.

"In the course of time Canada would be self-sustaining and meet all the requirements of a great nation.

"It is for Canada to take the initiative, and, I think there would be very little objection on the part of the principal people of these islands to amalgamate with Canada.

"From enquiries I have made, it seems that they would have decided objection to being annexed by the United States, because they are satisfied that the negroes, who comprise nine-tenths of the population, would not have fair treatment; they draw their conclusions from the unfair treatment meted out to the colored men in the southern States of America.

"Canada should sacrifice something for the sake of securing these valuable islands. I feel satisfied, too, that the English Government would not be likely to object. True, the West Indies are handicapped, as each island has its own Governor and its own Legislature. But all enactments, before being assented to, must be submitted to London for the sanction of the Crown, before being made law.

"If they threw in their lot with us they would have the same self-government as we have. Another advantage of amalgamation with Canada would be that our capitalists, our business and professional men, of all sorts and conditions, would visit the islands and purchase large estates, which are now more or less dormant and non-productive.

"It would lead to a revival of business that might mean much, both for the good of these islands and for this country.

"The main advantage, as I have said, would be that we could produce those articles of consumption that we are unable to produce at the present time. We would be a self-sustaining nation like the United States."

The Sunken Gunboats.

The statement of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the Commons recently, that the Government is in communication with the British authorities on the subject of raising the gunboats sunk in the River Thames, near Chatham, in 1813, again directs attention to these interesting relics of early Canadian history, says The Chatham Plant.

During the war of 1812-13 the British sank three of their gunboats in the river, just two miles below the present city of Chatham. These boats have rested in their watery graves for nearly a century. About five years ago, however, a Historical Association was formed in Chatham, of which Mr. J. S. Black was chosen president, and, with the consent of the Government, one of the boats was raised. Its contents included a couple of large guns and several tons of cannon balls. The trophies are being installed at the new Armories, to be opened this summer, Lieut.-Col. J. B. Rankin, commanding officer of the 24th Regiment, being their custodian.

Last year the American Historical Society put in claims to the other two gunboats and a party came over from Detroit to locate their position, sound the river and install apparatus for raising them, with the purpose of conveying them to Belle Isle Park, Detroit. This project caused a considerable storm among the loyal Canadians of the district. Through Mr. H. S. Clements, M. P., the Government was appealed to and their engineer visited the ground and went over the proposal with representatives of the district. As a result Mr. G. W. Cowan, the then mayor of Chatham, was authorized to police the banks of the river in the vicinity of the sunken trophies against the enterprising Americans, and their work was stayed by force of the law.

Curious Habit of Foxes.

The animals on which the fox usually preys are often left untouched round his own home; and it is even asserted that nothing is killed on the side of the hill in which that home is made. Some curious instances with regard to his habits in these respects are given in "Nature Notes." In a small patch of nettles within a few feet of the mouth of the foxes' earth a partridge placed her nest, and brought off her brood. Round this nettle-bed the cubs were constantly to be seen, and in it they played hide-and-seek. In another case the entrance of an earth was surrounded by five or six rabbit-holes, the tenants of which were unmolested by their next door neighbors. In a third a litter of cubs was placed in a large pit surrounded by fencing, from which there was no escape, and in which there were a number of rabbits. None of these was attacked by the cubs, though they would seize a dead rabbit in full sight of the person who had shot and thrown it to them.

THE GIANTS OF OLD

ANCIENT RACES MARVELS OF PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT.

The Semibarbarians of One Thousand Years Ago Were All Remarkably Proportioned Men—The Giants of Ancient Greece and Rome.

That the human race has degenerated in size as well as longevity is a fact well attested by various authorities. A prominent Washington physician who has made a life study of brain and cerebral developments, says that, on visiting the catacombs of Paris, what struck him most in these vast repositories of the contents of the city's ancient graveyards was the great size of the skulls in comparison with those of more modern mankind. This superiority of development in the men who lived 1,000 years or more ago the scientist attributes to the open air life then in vogue and the physical sports and exercises indulged in.

There are several races of giants mentioned in the Bible, and the Greek and Roman historians have recorded many examples which serve to show that these specimens of elongated humanity were by no means rare at one period of the world's history.

Thus it is mentioned that the Emperor Maximian was eight feet some inches high. The body of Orestes, according to the Greeks, was eleven and a half feet in height, the giant Galbora, brought from Arabia to Rome under Claudius Caesar, measured near ten feet, and the bones of Secondilla and Pusio, keepers of the gardens of Sallust, were but six inches shorter.

The probability is that outside of cultivated Greece and Rome among the semibarbarous of the greater part of present day European nations physical development reached often to more wondrous proportions.

The Chevalier Scory in his voyage to the peak of Teneriffe says that they found in one of the sepulchral caverns of that mountain the head of a Guancho which had eighty teeth and that the body was not less than fifteen feet long. The giant Ferragus, slain by Orlando, nephew of Charlemagne, was eighteen feet high.

Revland, a celebrated anatomist who wrote in 1614, says that some years before that time there was to be seen in the suburbs of St. Germane the tomb of the giant Isoret, who was twenty feet high.

At Rouen in 1509, in digging in the ditches near the Dominicano, there was found a stone tomb containing a skeleton whose shin bone reached up to the girdle of the tallest man there, being about four feet long, and consequently the body must have been seventeen or eighteen feet high. Upon the tomb was a plate of copper upon which was engraved, "In this tomb lies the noble and puissant lord, the Chevalier Ruon de Vallemont, and his bones." There is, indeed, evidence in the ponderous armor and two handed swords which remain to us in museums to prove that the knight of the ages of chivlary was a heroic specimen of human architecture.

Platerins, a famous physician, declared that he saw at Lucarne the true human bones of a subject who must have been at least nineteen feet high.

Valance, in Dauphine, boasts of possessing the bones of the giant Bucart, tyrant of the Vivarais, who was slain by an arrow by the Count de Cabillon, his vassal. The Dominicans had a part of his shin bone, with the articulation of the knee, and his figure painted in fresco, with an inscription showing that this giant was twenty-two and one-half feet high and that his bones were found in 1705 near the banks of the Moderi, a little river at the foot of the mountain of Crusol, upon which (tradition says) the giant dwelt.

On Jan. 11, 1633, some masons digging near the ruins of a castle in Dauphine, in a locality which had long been known as the Giant's field, at the depth of eighteen feet discovered a brick tomb thirty feet long, twelve feet wide and eight feet high, on which was a gray stone, with the words "Theotobochus Rex" cut thereon. When the tomb was opened they found a human skeleton, entire, twenty-five and one-half feet long, ten feet wide across the shoulders and five feet deep from the breastbone to the back. The teeth were each about the size of an ox's foot, and his shin bone measured four feet.

Near Margarino, in Sicily, in 1516, was found a giant thirty feet high. His head was the size of a hogshead, and each of his teeth weighed five ounces.

Near Palermo, in the valley of Magara, in Sicily, a skeleton of a giant thirty feet long was found in the year 1548 and another thirty-three feet high in 1550. Several of the gigantic bones of the latter subject are still preserved by private persons in Italy.

The Athenians found thirty-two famous skeletons, one thirty-four and another thirty-six feet in height.

At Totic, in Bohemia, in 758, was found a skeleton the head of which could scarcely be encompassed by the arms of two men together and whose legs, which are still preserved in the castle of the city, were twenty-six feet long.

The celebrated English scientist, Sir Hans Sloane, who treated the matter very learnedly, does not doubt the facts above narrated, but thinks the bones were those of elephants, whales or other animals. But it has been well remarked that, while elephants' bones may be shown for those of giants to superficial observers, this can never impose upon such distinguished anatomists as have testified in many cases to the mammoth bones being unmistakably human.

Be patient with every one, but above all with yourself.—Francis.

LIZARD MOST FAMOUS

PROBABLY MOST NOTED OCEAN LANDMARK IN THE WORLD.

Its Name a Household Word—Roman Galleys Hailed It and Vessels of the Armada Were Shattered on Its Rocks—The Two White Octagonal Towers of the Lizard Lights and Their Message to Sailors.

Before men knew that the earth was round, the Lizard was a famous landfall of the world.

The Roman galleys sped by it with gaudy sails and slave-piled tiers of mighty oars. The Norman conquerors, driven far west by channel gales, hailed it with joy as they won back again after days and weeks of beating in their uncouth ships. More than one of the "great sea castles" of the Spanish Armada shattered itself against the cavernous rocks at its base.

When ships of 200 tons burden were considered monstrous, the brave sea hearts of England, with neither sextant nor Mercator's charts to help them, took their landfall or their departure observations from the old Sphinx-like head of rock that is as well known as England is herself.

Like Sandy Hook, this famous place whose name is almost a household word from Anchangel to Cape Horne, is practically unknown in everything except name. The drowned and half-drowned rocks that lie scattered in the unpeaceful seat at its feet forbid a close approach to it by ships, and all that captains, crews or passengers see of it is the glimpse of the lizard-like formations that may be obtained from a distance of two miles or so, as the ships speed by, speaking their colored flag language to the Cornish signal station.

"Lizard" expresses its general appearance fairly well, although, like most of the fanciful names that are given to prominent landmarks on account of their supposed resemblance to something else, it is not always easy to see that the Lizard really does look like a great lizard squatting in reptilian clumsiness on the southern end of old England.

But, seen from the proper angle and under the proper conditions, the resemblance to a huge, fat, wrinkled lizard is not so hard to find, and then it is easy, too, to see why its eastern end should have been called The Beast, for, like a huge, uncouth beast it looks over the head and shoulders of the Lizard.

Two hundred feet and more high, and descending sheer into a fretted sea, is this most southern piece of England. In clear weather it is visible twenty-four miles by day, and on a nearer approach its two white lighthouses (twin towers like those that look over Sandy Hook at the other end of the ocean road) make it easily the most characteristic landfall that a sailor can wish, so that even a perfect stranger, who has never steered a ship into English waters, can recognize the Lizard on sight.

The two white towers of the Lizard lights are octagonal, sixty-one feet high, and burn fixed white electric lights that shine out 230 feet above the high water mark, and are visible twenty-one sea miles or twenty-four land miles.

They have a purpose beyond merely telling the mariner that England has been reached, or warning him away from the ripraps of rocky teeth that sow the Channel there. So long as the sailor keeps those two white lights in line by night or the two white towers by day, so long is he safe from going on the most wicked and deadly rocks in the narrow seas — the far-known Manacles that lie between Lizard Point and Nare Point, and have added some of the most terrible stories of the sea to its literature.

Not from all aspects does the Lizard look like the reptile that has given its name to the noble headlands. Seen a little to eastward from the sea, Lizard Head looks strikingly like the mutilated head and face of a Sphinx. In the old days, when the face of the great Lord Brougham was familiar to men, they used to say that the Lizard, seen from the land behind it, was strikingly like a massive bust of the peer.

But not many saw it from landward in those days. Indeed, not very many see it now; for the peninsula of the Lizard is a lonely, wild country, where there is little to attract men to live, although there is wild and terrifying scenery to attract tourists. But the way to the grand scenery is tiresome and uninspiring—so much so that the wonders of the desolate coast remained practically an unknown thing until the nineteenth century, because travelers who had penetrated into Cornwall as far as the beginning of the peninsula generally became discouraged by the monotony of the inland scenery and retired without going as far as the ultimate southern coast.

So it was that the Lizard remained and is still to a large extent a primitive, unknown place. Mixed with its ancient Cornish stock is a breed of handsome, black-eyed, dark-faced people, and these are descendants of the Spanish sailors of the Armada, whose ships were cast on the terrible teeth of the Stags and other wave-lathered rocks that ring the iron coast.

Coarse and naked roads lead to the Lizard—treeless, flat, monotonous. A few tararick hedges stick up here and there. Here and there are a few gray apple trees, silvered with lichens. The soil is decomposed hornblende rock. So scarce are trees that long ago a hedge near Lizard Town was christened Lizard Wood because it showed a few stunted thorn trees.

Fierce winds beat the land; yet the climate is so mild that a few days of frost are considered as making quite a hard winter there, and snow rarely lies long on the ground.

Below the lighthouses the ground slopes away suddenly and makes an abrupt promontory. At one extremity of this promontory, but not the most southern, rises an impressive, strange column of rock. It is the Bumble, sometimes accessible from the land at low water, but always hammered by ever-vexed water on the seaward side.

The most southerly rock of England rises from the sea a little distance from this. It is the Batha, and is a mass of mica that shines splendidly in the sun.

Near it is another massive, insulated rock, perforated by a natural archway. It is known as the Island of Crenval. Between this point and old Polpeor is a steep cliff worn into many caves by the sea. Some of these are forever crumbling away, for throughout this coast the fall of rock is almost incessant, owing to the tremendous battery by the surf.

A few years ago there was a cave here that could be approached with fair safety at low water, that was tapestried by wonderful sea ferns and floored with bright golden sand, in which flashed pools of water full of gorgeous seaweeds, making them look like great rubies set in dim aisles of rock.

From the great headlands beyond this spot is a most noble view. The promontory terminates in three masses of lofty, piled-up rocks, the most easterly being the Little Lizard, and the most westerly and largest the Old Lizard Head. A short way from shore, standing deep in the green water, is a black rock called the Quadrant, and beyond it the lofty pillar of Lion Rock stands in lonely defiance, as if it had waded from the mainland in Titanic rebellion.

This is the rock that was described in such glowing language by Charles Littleton, Dean of Exeter, and subsequently Bishop of Carlisle. "This rock," said he, "as well as the others, is enameled with the most beautiful colors, and decorated with samphire and other sea plants."

"Enameled," indeed, are the rocks to this day. The formation of many of the cliffs is serpentine, and so many varied and gorgeous characteristics does this kind of rock assume that the changing aspects of the cliffs and reefs fill the lover of nature with ecstasy. Black, green, yellow, red, polished like glass by the never-weary waves, rise the cliffs. Everywhere are water-worn caves. Some are tiny, but glow in purple and crimson, owing to the lavish growth of seaweed, which gathers so fast on this coast that a fish net is green and red with plants after a few weeks of service. Others are lofty, with roofs vaulted like cathedrals, and through their mysterious aisles the sea thunders in organ tones.

On calm days the mutterings of the surf is broken again and again by boomings like signal guns. Those are the caves, spouting forth foam, air and water as the tide fills them.

Several of these spouting caves are famous and are known by such names as Bellows and Postoffice. The latter is so called because beside the outrush of water there is an inrush of air so violent that a piece of paper held near the crevices of the rock is sucked into the "bowels of the earth" with a vast rumbling that dies away deep below.

When a storm beats the Lizard and its rocks, the surf is greater and more terrible than any in the world except in a few noted and dreaded places. So fiercely does it batter the stone walls of England's southern end that men standing on the cliffs imagine that they can feel the solid land itself trembling under the shock.

In winter the waves often beat clear over the highest point of the rocks till the twin lights stand in a pouring cloud of spray as if embattled. The onrush from the open ocean and the backwash from the shattered waves clash together and smoke high in the air, till even the most lofty of the sentinel rocks emerge only momentarily from the broken water that flies across and over them like gray banners of the sea. As far as the eye can see, wind-driven spray drifts fast, streaming from headland to headland high over the gulfs, where unceasing beat of thunder tells that the sea is whirling itself into white confusion below.

Through that driving mist that moves steadily like troops of phantom horse, the vast rocks of the promontory are visible only at times. In those occasional appearances they seem white from bases to summits, so high do the froth and foam of the assailing ocean rise.

The very froth itself is beaten so fiercely by the turmoil of the sea that it attains a consistency of its own and scuds in great spherical masses across and up the faces of cliff.

It is small wonder that in the days of sail many ships drove in on this fearful trapwork of rocks. Even now, in the days of high-powered steamers, the Lizard is dreaded. But nowadays the ships that go ashore strike usually because they blunder into the trap in fog and night. Once, when the Channel procession was white with sail instead of black with smoke as now, ships were forced in by the weather, and again and again the population of the Lizard watched vessels for days as they struggled against the doom that was shutting in on them steadily.

The records of the Vicar of Mullion (the parish close on the headland) tell many tales of this kind.

Faked Antiquities.

There are numerous old curiosity-shops where it would be difficult to find an article which is what it pretends to be. Furniture, prints, china, pictures, plate, armour, ivory, bronze and tapestry — all are successfully imitated "Antique" armour and metal work of all kinds are made in this country, and spurious "antique" china comes to Britain and her Colonies from France, Holland and Germany.

The spurious print is perhaps the commonest trap of all, and the market is flooded with re-prints and reproductions. Several firms are engaged in their production, and they cost the dealers of "objects or art" from seven-and-sixpence to a pound apiece. Usually the paper is manipulated to give it the appearance of age, or the print is put into an old frame. It is certain that countless numbers of them are sold as originals.

Guarding His Dignity.

As a large, ocean-going liner was making its way down the Clyde the officer in charge found his passage blocked by a dirty-looking, empty ballast barge, the only occupant of which was a man sitting smoking a short pipe. Finding that he did not make any effort to get out of the way, the officer shouted to him in true nautical fashion. Taking the pipe from his mouth, the fellow rose and said:

"An' is it yerself that's the captain of that ship?"

"No," was the reply, "but I am the chief officer."

"Then talk to your equals," said the Irishman; "I am the captain of this."—London Tit-Bits.

CASUAL PHILOSOPHY.

What one goes into debt for nine times out of ten is a luxury.

A man always making excuses leaves himself no time to make anything else.

Business based upon friendship threatens both; friendship based upon business strengthens both.

That man can best ignore the enmity of those who don't understand him who goes home to a wife who does.

It is a good deal easier to pray for men's souls than to pour balm into their wounds, not to mention that it costs less.

The supreme court has not yet decided which is the weaker man—he who is not able to see his own weakness or he who has no faith in himself.

From an intellectual point of view that time of one's life is most wasted when he tries, in a spirit of dumb loyalty, to admire all those things that are popularly considered admirable.

The Word "Slave."

The word "slave," which is happily used seldom unless metaphorically in this country, is a word of brilliant historical antecedents. Its original, the Russian "slava," means glorious and is the title of that race which subsumes the Russian people. But when the Germans reduced hosts of the Slavs to servitude their name, from malice or accident, as Gibbon says, became synonymous with "servile." It retains no more suggestion of its racial origin now than does "ogre," which is really "Hungarian," from a confusion of the Magyars with the Huns, and of both with the terrible Tartars.

. . . .

Onions.

Onions are almost the best nervine known. No medicine is so useful in cases of nervous prostration, and there is nothing else that will so quickly relieve and tone a wornout system. Onions are useful in all cases of coughs, colds and influenza, in consumption, insomnia, hydrophobia, scurvy, gravel and kindred liver complaints. Eaten every other day, they soon have a clearing and whitening effect on the complexion.

RICHARD BURBAGE.

He Was a Great Actor and Shakespeare's Leading Star.

March 16, 1618 or 1619, Richard Burbage, player, died at Shoreditch, London.

The first of the great English tragic actors, Burbage was in every way worthy to head the long roll of England's famous players. The son of an actor, the friend and companion of Shakespeare, it was through him that many of the heroes of the dramatist first spoke to the eager playgoers who thronged the Globe theater. He was the original of Romeo, Hamlet, Lear, Othello, Macbeth, Shylock, Richard III, and many other of Shakespeare's leading characters, and his name stands next to that of the great poet in the licenses for acting granted by James I. in 1603 to the company of the Globe theater.

His powers as an actor were not his only claim to distinction, for he was also a successful painter. The fame of his abilities held a prominent place in theatrical tradition for many years, a poem in his honor, dedicated to one of the great players of the day, being written as late as the time of Charles II.

His death, which was probably the result of paralysis, caused the poets to turn their thoughts to his successful career, and it is from the numerous elegies then written that most of the information concerning him must be gathered. Few players have ever had the good fortune to be so well liked by the dramatists of their time, and all praised him, one even lamenting that his death "hath made a visible eclipse of playing."

A shrewd, careful man in his business affairs, Burbage left an estate producing a yearly income of £300, a large sum for a player in those days to bequeath to his heirs. Beloved and respected by all, he survived his great master by only a few years, his grave bearing the simple, expressive epitaph, "Exit Burbage."—London Saturday Review.

CHLOROPHYLL.

To This Substance Is Due the Coloring of Plants.

Chlorophyll is perhaps the most important coloring substance in the world, for upon this substance depend the characteristic activity of plants, the synthesis of complex compounds from carbon dioxide and water process, upon which the existence of all living things is ultimately conditioned. Only in a very few unimportant forms devoid of chlorophyll can the synthesis of complex from simple compounds or from the elements be accomplished. The function of chlorophyll may only be comprehended when its chief physical properties are understood. These may be best illustrated by placing a gram of chopped leaves of grass or geranium in a few cubic centimeters of strong alcohol for an hour.

Such a solution will be of a bright, clear green color, and when the vessel containing it is held in such a manner that the sunlight is reflected from the surface of the liquid it will appear blood red, due to its property of fluorescence, that of changing the wave length of the rays of light of the violet and of the spectrum in such a manner as to make them coincide with those of the red end. It is by examination of light which has passed through a solution of chlorophyll, however, that the greatest insight into its physical properties may be gained. If such a ray of light is passed through a prism and spread out on a screen, it may be seen that there are several large intervals of dark bands in the spectrum. The rays of light which would have occupied these spaces have been absorbed by the chlorophyll and converted into heat and other forms of energy. This energy is directly available to the protoplasm containing the chlorophyll, and by means of it the synthesis of complex substance may be accomplished.

According to Horsepower.

A young motorist, endeavoring to convince a country innkeeper that the decay of coaching was more than compensated for by the spread of motoring as a pastime, exclaimed, as a final argument, that his car was of forty horsepower, "the equal, sir, of ten relays of coach horses."

The next morning he read in his bill, "To feeding and stabling, 80 shillings."

He asked the landlord for an explanation.

"The charge for 'osses is 2 shillin' a 'ead, sir," was the reply. "That machine of yours is equal to forty 'osses, which is 80 shillin'."—London Express.

The Paradox.

Hamand—Since Walker Tighs inherited $1,000,000 he is a paradox. Eggbert—What's the answer? Hamand—He is both the richest and poorest actor on the stage.

An excess of levity is as impertinent as an excess of gravity.—Hazlitt.

Hair Gone?

If your hair is falling out, strengthen it. Give it food, hair-food—Ayer's Hair Vigor. It checks falling hair, cures dandruff, and makes the hair soft and smooth. Sold for over half a century.

PRETTY WEDDING ON MOIRA ST.

NUPTIALS OF MR. JACOB FERGUSON AND MISS NINA ACKERMAN LAST EVENING.

A pretty home wedding took place at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Ackerman, Moira St. The bride was Miss Nina Ackerman and the groom Mr. Jacob Ferguson, of Roblin's Mills, Prince Edward County. Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., pastor of Bridge St. church, officiated. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of brown silk, trimmed with white lace. The bridesmaid was Miss Annie Yourex, who wore a dress of green silk with lace trimming. Mr. Ernest Ackerman, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The parlor, where the ceremony took place, was appropriately decorated with flowers. After the ceremony a wedding repast was partaken of. The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful gifts. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson left for their home in Ameliasburg.

Frankford Licenses.

The License Commissioners for West Hastings met at Frankford yesterday to consider the granting of hotel licenses for that village. A large deputation of ladies waited upon the Commissioners and urged upon them the necessity of having the law strictly enforced. Whilst the ladies did not definitely ask that the number of hotels in the village be reduced, they intimated that such might be done.

The result of the Commissioners' deliberations was that licenses for a year were granted to M. A. Clark, for the Clark House, and to Mr. W. U. Timblin. Three months' extension of licenses were granted to Messrs. J. Smith and W. Y. Lyon.

DIED AT THOMASBURG.

MRS. SECCOMBE, WIFE OF REV. W. B. SECCOMBE, PASSED TO HER REWARD LAST FRIDAY.

After an illness of some fourteen months from nervous prostration, followed by anaemia, Mrs. Seccombe, wife of Rev. W. B. Seccombe, pastor of Thomasburg and Bethel churches, passed to her eternal reward on Friday afternoon about five o'clock.

She was born in the village of Hastings nearly forty-seven years ago, being a daughter of the late Alexander Wilson, merchant of that village. She was united in marriage to Mr. Seccombe in 1873, when they removed to British Columbia, where they resided for five years. They then returned to the east and Mr. Seccombe has ever since been attached to the Bay of Quinte Conference, being stationed at Havelock, Carrying Place, Milford, Odessa, Greenbank, Keene and Thomasburg. Deceased was a faithful helper to her husband, being a very active church worker. She was a splendid singer and took a very deep interest in the young people of the various congregations under their charge with whom she was extremely popular.

Miss Ethel Mackie's Safety Is Assured.

The many friends in this city of Miss Ethel Mackie, and they are numerous, will be pleased to learn that she is safe. She was an inmate of the St. Francis Hotel, at San Francisco, last week, and although she came through safely, all her worldly belongings are gone. This morning Mr. Mackie, sr., and other members of the family were relieved in mind upon the receipt of a communication from Miss Ethel to the effect that she was all right. Since the catastrophe Miss Mackie had left San Francisco, and is now with friends adjacent to the devastated city.

Fifteenth Band Had a March Out Last Night.

The Fifteenth band had a practise march out last night, and paraded several streets on the east hill. Coming up Front St. to their rooms, the band, twenty-seven strong, was handing out a really creditable article of marching music, and their showing surprised many people. There was a marked improvement over the form shown when the band turned out for St. Michael's bazaar. Stopping in front of their rooms, on Front St., a couple of selections were played, the same evoking many appreciative comments and liberal applause from the listening crowd.

RESIGNS TO GET MARRIED.

MISS SINCLAIR PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONARY, TO WED REV. J. S. MacKAY.

The Globe in its issue of to-day says:

Miss Jean V. Sinclair, of Indore, Central India, has resigned her position as missionary under the Foreign Mission Committee of the Presbyterian Church, in order to marry Rev. J. S. Mackay, another member of the Canadian mission staff in Central India. Miss Sinclair belongs to Madoc, Ont., and has been in mission work in India since 1889. She has been home several times on furlough and had the distinction of being the first woman in Canada to deliver an address to the Presbyterian General Assembly. Rev. J. S. Mackay belongs to Oxford and is a graduate of Manitoba College. He was appointed to the Central India mission staff in 1904.

Miss Sinclair is a sister of Ald. Sinclair of this city.

SAN JOSE CITY ABOUT DESTROYED

ABOUT $8,000,000 DAMAGE OCCASIONED—5,000 PERSONS DESTITUTE — MANY RICH AND PROSPEROUS MERCANTILE FIRMS REDUCED TO BEGGARY BY RECENT EARTHQUAKE.

San Jose, April 22.—(Delayed).—At 5.12 o'clock last Wednesday morning the City of San Jose was practically destroyed in the business centre, and more than one-half of the homes in the residence section were so damaged or destroyed that repairing will be beyond question. The property loss is more than $8,000,000. Five thousand people were rendered destitute and many rich and prosperous mercantile firms were reduced to beggary.

The handsome and massive brick building of the Roman Catholic Church of St. Patrick, costing more than $150,000, situated at Santa Clara and Ninth streets, was a ruin. Two blocks away the San Jose High School, a five-storey building of brick and stone, erected at a cost of $90,000, was a pile of debris, from the top of which flaunted in the air a great American flag, which had formerly hung on the front wall of the assembly room at the top of the building. Further north, the Grant School, a wooden structure, capable of accommodating 1,500 pupils, was sent to the ground, a twisted and broken ruin.

It was along First, Second, Third, Market, Santa Clara, and Fernandino streets that the greatest ruin was wrought. Here building after building had come toppling to the ground, and three, four, and five-storey structures of brick, stone, and iron, that had been the pride of San Jose, lay jumbled piles of debris.

In the Phelan Building, at First and Post streets, Dr. De Crow, a pioneer dentist of San Jose, lost his life. His wife and another woman, Mrs. Ellen Stone, were taken from the wreck of the building barely alive.

At Santa Clara and Lightstone streets the three-storey building of the Elks was demolished, and the adjoining building on Lightstone, occupied by the San Jose Mercury, was badly wrecked.

In the wreck of the Hotel Costa, five dead bodies were found, and seven guests were taken out seriously injured. The Martin, Liberty, and Louise Buildings, occupied by offices and stores, were wrecked by the shock and then the wreckage was burned by fire.

The St. James Hotel, one of the most costly structures in the city, was saved as to the main building, but the annex, a four-storey building of brick, terra cotta, and stone, was so badly damaged that it had to be torn down. The Vendome Hotel annex collapsed, and Thomas O'Toole, one of the wealthiest and best known cattlemen in the West, was crushed to death in his bed. The Hotel Menlo was destroyed but the 40 guests escaped. The Hotel Monterey, in Vince street, was thrown off its foundation, and an instant later caught fire and seven guests were roasted to death in the ruins. The other fatalities in the city proper make the total of deaths 19.

The destitute and homeless, not only of San Jose, but several thousand from the more heavily stricken City of San Francisco, are being fed and cared for, and many more from surrounding towns. The work of removing the giant piles of debris from the streets is going on in a systematic manner.

Ashes of Fire Floated Seven Miles and Half

Mr. B. F. Quincey, of this city, has received a letter from his daughter, Mrs. A. W. Brown, who lives at Ocean View, seven miles and a half from San Francisco. Mrs. Brown, who was Miss Clara Quincey, reports that they were all uninjured, but their household property was greatly damaged by the earthquake, a leg of the bed on which she and her husband were sleeping being twisted out of shape. She sent her father, in the letter, some ashes which had been found on their doorstep, having been borne there by the wind from the great fire at San Francisco.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE CONVICT'S DAUGHTER."

The above drama, in five acts, was last evening presented at the opera house to a rather small audience. There were many pleasing features in the play, which, upon the whole, appeared to give general satisfaction. The leading character, was A. S. Byron, as Wm. Woodford, or rather as "Weary Willie," the convict, who had an excellent conception of his part. The stage settings were in keeping with the play.

"THE HOLY CITY" TO-MORROW NIGHT.

In selecting for "The Holy City" the thrilling narrative of St. John the Baptist, Mr. Bennett chose the most dramatic story ever told. The epoch covering the birth of Christianity provides scenes of vivid comparison; the arrogant and sensual splendor of the Romans, shown with the greater spiritual beauty of the humble followers of the Master, presents enthralling contrasts. No more absorbing tragedy was even conceived, no greater stage pictures ever presented. Spectacle and powerful acting combine, scenes of enchantment inspire ennobling thought. The interpreting company formed for this, the second season engaged, the performances are again the most important theatrical offering of the year. "The Holy City" will be seen at the Carman to-morrow night.

Writing Paper "Disappears."

The newest thing in paper is the disappearing kind. Soused in diluted sulphuric acid and then carefully glazed, it looks like the paper that abideth; but slowly the acid nibbles at the fibres under the glazing, till in a week or so the substance has gone out of it, and the place thereof knows it no more. A most convenient sort of paper—when you're the one to use it. You can now write promissory notes without a shudder. You can flirt by mail with perfect composure. You can even sign the pledge if you like, and after several days' abstinence rejoin your "former associates." The grim sentence, "What I have written I have written," loses nine-tenths of its terror, and Omar's remarks about the "moving finger" are reduced to agreeable nonsense, for who wants to "wash out one word" when a judicious choice of stationery will insure the evanishment of the entire document? Moreover, we're enabled henceforth to scorn the fear that some day our adversary will confront us with a "deadly parallel."

THE INSURANCE PROBE

Royal Commission Began on Manufacturers' Life Co.

Protest Against Ending Department Inquiry Made by Mr. Hellmuth, K. C. —Mr. Shepley, However, Wins and Goes His Own Way About Conduct of Inquiry—Evidence re. An Insurance Amalgamation.

Toronto, April 26.—Judge MacTavish, chairman, J. W. Langmuir and B. L. Kent, the Dominion Insurance Commission of Inquiry, resumed work here yesterday morning at 10.35.

Mr. Shepley, K. C., and W. N. Tilley are the counsel representing the Dominion; I. F. Hellmuth and G. R. Geary appear on behalf of the policyholders of Ontario; C. L. Le Boeuf, K. C., represents the policyholders of Quebec; R. J. McLaughlin, K. C. (Lindsay) and R. L. Johnston represented the Manufacturers' Life; and Robert Smith, K. C., the Sun Life; L. J. McCarthy, K. C., (Montreal) the Canada Life. W. S. Andrews was present as the actuary of the Ontario Government.

The commission will sit daily from 10.30 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 2 to 4.30, except Saturday.

Protest From Hellmuth.

Mr. Hellmuth said: "I conceive it to be my duty now to enter a protest against leaving the enquiry into the department of insurance at the present stage. I was advised that the proceedings would not continue as intended at Ottawa last week, owing to the illness of the chairman, but that during this week the proceedings would go on here into the affairs of the Manufacturers' Life.

"At the time when I received that letter I wrote to them at once, and I requested that my learned friend, Mr. Shepley, might bring before you, as chairman, my protest against this alteration in the proceedings for reasons which have partially appeared, and I subsequently received an intimation that the commission would sit here today.

Cross-Examine Fitzgerald.

"It appears to me no reason has been given for this change. On the 30th of March last, the date of our last meeting in Ottawa, it was distinctly understood the proceedings of the commission would be resumed in Ottawa, and that after the examination of Mr. Fitzgerald he would be placed in the position to answer such questions as I might see fit to put to him. It was distinctly understood that I would have this opportunity.

Department First.

"The enquiry should begin in the department and then proceed to the various companies. Whether it is right, is immaterial. If begun it should be concluded as far as possible."

Mr. Hellmuth hinted that though startling facts had been brought out by Mr. Fitzgerald's examination, there was more behind.

"Why should they not come out? Why should not the commission have the advantage of them before going into the individual companies? Isn't it most material for the policyholders to know just what safeguards were placed round their interests by the department? I think that is sufficient reason for continuing."

Who Was Responsible?

Mr. Hellmuth referred to the legislation of 1899 changing regulations as to reserve.

"No more hostile legislation to the interests of the policyholders was ever passed. Are we not entitled to know where that legislation originated—who approved of it?"

Mr. Hellmuth did not wish to be thought to be protesting for the sake of making a disturbance.

"I would be recreant to my trust, were I to sit merely as an onlooker," he declared.

He insisted that the program should be adhered to, unless the departure had the consent of those interested.

Wanted to Cross-Examine.

"It was understood," he continued, "that Mr. Fitzgerald would be handed over to me and to others as a witness. My learned friend (Mr. Shepley) has had the benefit of Mr. Fitzgerald's evidence as far as he has carried it. If it had been pursued further, I should be in a better position to examine witnesses when they come before us.

"There were many points where my learned friend said 'I will take that up again.' I see no reason why that should not be carried out.

"It was necessary to maintain the confidence of the public. There was no reason why we should not exhaust the departmental enquiry before proceeding to the individual companies."

Quebec Counsel Satisfied.

Mr. Le Boeuf doubted if the interests of the policyholders would suffer by the revised mode of procedure. It really mattered little, he thought, whether Mr. Fitzgerald was examined now or later.

Mr. Shepley replied that he was fully sensible of the necessity of inspiring public confidence in the commission. He conceived, however, that the best means of inspiring public confidence was to consider the conduct of the enquiry as a whole. Mr. Hellmuth did not suggest that there would not be a thorough departmental enquiry. He did not know what Mr. Hellmuth's instructions were, whether he proposed to promote the thoroughness of the enquiry or to criticise at every turn those who were endeavoring to conduct it in the interests of the public. "I will not take the trouble," said Mr. Shepley, "to vindicate my own desire for a thorough and honest inquiry, for I know that when this investigation is brought to a close what we have done will be a subject of legitimate and proper criticism. So long as I am entrusted with the conduct of the enquiry I propose to act as seem in my own judgment best in the public interests."

Objects to Muzzle.

Mr. Hellmuth answered:

"If my learned friend's remarks mean I am not to say anything I should like to know it. Surely I'm not bound to accept by learned friend's judgment as final. I don't think he should say I do nothing but criticise."

Chairman Rules.

This reply brought forth an answer from the chairman, Judge MacTavish.

Mr. Shepley, he said, was appointed by the Government to aid the investigation. If he, the chairman, attempted to interfere, he would be interfering with the Government. He would not say arbitrary, "you must finish the examination of this witness before you proceed with another." This would be limiting the scope of the commission.

"I might simply refer to what has been referred to in the House, when it was said it would be on the lines of the state investigation in New York. On the grounds that Mr. Shepley has the conduct of the inquiry we will not interfere with his conduct."

The Manufacturers' Life Co.

The entire morning was taken up with the evidence of Mr. J. F. Junkin, managing director of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co., who described the transfer of the control of shares of the old company from Mr. George Gooderham to Hon. George A. Cox. The control of the company remained in Mr. Cox's hands only a short time.

The withdrawal of the right of policyholders to vote by proxy which existed in one of the former companies was shown to be withdrawn in the new company.

Mr. Junkin could give little information as to the agreement between Mr. Cox and Mr. Gooderham regarding the transfer of the control of the Manufacturers' life.

An agreement was also produced showing that $10,000 was promised to be paid to Henry Sutherland, managing director of the Temperance & General Co., who retired when the company amalgamated with the Manufacturers' Life. The amount was to be paid in five annual instalments of $2,000 each, and Mr. Sutherland was bound not to disturb the business of any of the parties.

On the commencement of the afternoon session Mr. Junkin, for half an hour, corrected incorrect testimony given in the morning.

A Moral Dividend.

The attention of the commission was drawn to the fact that immediately on the formation of the new company in July, 1901, a dividend of 4 per cent. had been declared for the first half of the year 1901. The declaration was made on the list of shareholders as it stood in 1901.

"Was there any obligation on the part of either company to pay a dividend on June 10?"

"There was a moral one."

Big Stock Transfers.

"After the agreement was carried into effect and a new company was formed, there seemed to have been some considerable changes in the holdings of stock," observed Mr. Tilley. "Can you say whether during 1901, 1902 and 1903 there was any agreement made between certain persons as to acquiring stock in the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co."

"Yes: Mr. Cox sold out his interest."

"That appeared to be in the year 1902," continued counsel. "I see the transfer from Mr. Cox to you of a large block of 4,000 shares is dated Sept. 1, 1902. Is that the transfer you mean?"

"That was part of it."

"Well, now, was that transfer made pursuant to an agreement that had been arrived at or to an agreement of some standing?"

"That particular transfer was due to an agreement made at the time as far as that purchase was concerned. Two thousand of the 4,000 went to D. D. Mann and the balance went to William Mackenzie of Mackenzie & Mann."

"The transaction, as far as they went concerned, took place at about that time."

Montrealers Had Option.

Had there been any previous arrangement as to the stock in the Manufacturers' Life?

"Yes, some Montreal gentlemen had an option on Mr. Cox. They were C. J. McCuaig and William Strong."

Continuing, witness said that he became responsible for the whole of the stocks as between himself and McCuaig and Strong, and it was about the time of amalgamation. That was while the bill was before the House.

Got $100,000 Loan.

"When you transferred the stock to MacKenzie and Mann, were you paid for it?"

"Yes, they paid cash."

"Did they obtain any accommodation?"

"They received a loan of $100,000 on Inverness Railway bonds and these shares."

"Then the real state of the transaction?"

"No."

"Then the real state of the transaction is this," said Mr. Tilley, "MacKenzie and Mann placed with the Manufacturers' Life certain Inverness Railway bonds at the time of the transfer to you of the 4,000 shares of Manufacturers' Life by Cox and a loan was made with a view to carrying out the purchase. That the same transaction referred to at the departmental inquiry at Ottawa?"

"Yes."

Witness said further that the par value of the bonds was $100,000 and the market value, $90,000.

The commission then adjourned to enable the Manufacturers' Life to get documents and books needed in further examination of the witness.

Crew Strikes and Leaves Train.

McINTOSH BROS.

SUBMERGED GUNS.

The Experiment of Firing a Cannon Buried Under Water.

The most curious experiment ever made with a piece of ordnance was at Portsmouth, England. A stage was erected in the harbor within the tide mark. On this an Armstrong gun of the 110 pound pattern was mounted. The gun was then loaded and carefully aimed at a target—all this, of course, during the time of low tide. A few hours later, when the gun and the target were both covered with water to a depth of six feet, the gun was fired by means of electricity. We said "aimed at a target," but the facts are that there were two targets, but only one was erected for this special experiment, the other being the hull of an old vessel, the Griper, which lay directly behind the target and in range of the ball. The target itself was placed only twenty-five feet from the muzzle of the gun. It was composed of oak beams and planks and was twenty-one inches thick.

In order to make the old Griper invulnerable a sheet of boiler plate three inches thick was riveted to the waterlogged hull in direct range with the course the ball was expected to take if not deflected by the water. On all of these—the oaken target, the boiler plates and the old vessel hull—the effect of the shot from the submerged gun was really startling. The wooden target was pierced through and through, and the boiler-iron target was broken into pieces and driven into its "backing," the ball passing right on through both sides of the vessel, making a huge hole, through which the water poured in torrents. Taken altogether, the experiment was an entire success, demonstrating, as it did, the feasibility of placing submerged guns in harbors in time of war and doing great damage to the vessels which an enemy might dispatch to such points for the purpose of shelling cities.—London Spectator.

The Sacred Bo Tree.

On the night of Oct. 7, 1887, the tree worshipers of Ceylon met with an irreparable calamity. During one of the worst storms that ever raged on the island their sacred bo tree was thrown to the ground. The oldest written description of this wonderful tree known to exist is that by Fa Hiam, a Chinese historian and traveler, who visited the tree in the year 414 A. D. According to the learned Chinaman, it was then 702 years old, having been planted by King Devinipiatissa in the year 288 before our era began. If the above data be correct, and there is no reason for doubting it, the bo tree was more than 2,175 years old when the storm ended its career on the date mentioned above.

Shifting the Blame.

It is the custom of the Khonds in the Madras presidency to offer a buffalo in sacrifice in substitution for the human victim, but in doing so they make long apologies to the deity, explaining that they themselves would willingly make the customary sacrifice, but are prevented by the British government, on whose head they pray that any anger at their neglect of duty may be visited.

Why He Quit.

"Did you read my novel, Criticus?"

"Well, I read as far as the chapter where the hero was shot, and then I quit."

"Oh, but the hero recovers in the next chapter."

"I was afraid he would. That's why I quit."

Piles Cured.

Suffering For Years, and Bed-Ridden From Piles, a Contractor of Marion, Indiana, is Cured by Pyramid Pile Cure.

Trial Package Mailed Free to All Who Send Name and Address.

"I was troubled with piles for several years before I would let it be known. But at last they became so severe that I could not walk and I had to take to my bed. I tried everything and anything the doctors prescribed, and took their treatments for a long time. But nothing ever did me any good. I had seen your ad. in different newspapers, so I got a 50-cent box and began using them. From the very first I got quick relief and by the time I was starting on my third box I saw I was cured. I have not been troubled with them since. Now you can use this as you please, because it is genuine. Yours, T. A. Sutton, Stone and Cement Contractor, Marion, Ind."

Instant relief can be gotten by using the marvelous Pyramid Pile Cure. It immediately reduces all congestion and swelling, heals all sores, ulcers and irritated parts.

The moment you start to use it your suffering ends and the cure of your dread disease is in sight.

The Pyramid Pile Cure renders a surgical operation unnecessary. Don't hack to pieces those tender muscles, which must be intact if a satisfactory cure is to be obtained.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is put up in the form of "easy-to-use," specially made, suppositories. They are soothing, painless, instant and certain.

A trial treatment will be sent you at once by mail, in plain, sealed wrapper, without a cent of expense to you, if you send your name and address to Pyramid Drug Co., 3879 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

After you receive the sample, you can get a regular-size package of Pyramid Pile Cure at your druggist's for 50 cents, or if he hasn't it, send us the money and we will send it to you.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, April 25.—(Special.)—Receipts were 000 cattle, 100 milch cows, 2000 calves, 2000 hogs and 100 sheep and lambs. Out of the above number of hogs over 1000 were bought in the west by a leading packing concern, consequently the offerings on the market were not excessive, for which the demand was good and prices ruled firm at the recent advance. Sales of selected lots were made at $7.75 to $7.85 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. There was an easier feeling in the market for cattle, and prices declined ¼c per lb., which was due entirely to the limited demand, as the supply was small. There was some demand from exporters, and they paid 5¼c for a few extra choice, and the butchers paid 5c to 5¼c; pretty good sold at 4c to 4½c, and common 2¾c to 3¾c per lb. There were a number of good milchers on the market, and prices were nearly $5 per head lower than such cows would sell for three weeks ago, ranging from $40 to $55 each. Calves sold at $1.25 to $7 each. Sheep sold at 4c to 5¼c per lb. Spring lambs sold at $3 to $6 each.

TEXAS TOWN WRECKED.

Tornado Cut Swath of a Mile Wide For Eight Miles and Swept Bellevue Into Ruins.

Bellevue, Texas, April 27.—A tornado, which swept through this place last night, destroyed everything in its path, and as a result practically the entire town is a mass of ruins.

Only three buildings are now standing, and at least eleven persons are dead and a number are injured.

The tornado was followed by fire, which consumed the wreckage.

The town consisted of over 200 houses.

The whole business section of the town, and all stocks of merchandise were destroyed.

The tornado was a mile wide and traveled eight miles, levelling everything in its path, ruining crops and destroying all farm-houses and buildings on the way.

This section is thickly settled and it will be late to-day before there are complete reports of the dead.

PREPARE FOR THE WORST.

Extra Troops by Thousands to Protect Paris May Day.

Paris, April 27.—The prefect of police, M. Lepine, yesterday made a reassuring reply to hundreds of letters which anxious persons had addressed to the police. He said that all precautions had been taken to maintain order in the streets May 1, and prevent attempts against life or property.

Besides the full police force, which will be on duty, reinforcements, consisting of 28,000 infantry, cavalry and artillery, which will arrive here by Saturday.

In addition to the troops mentioned, eight squadrons of cavalry relieved from duty in the mining regions, have been brought to Paris, and dragoons and hussars are coming from many other points.

The Government has received the most positive assurance that the labor leaders do not intend to permit any disorder May 1.

EDMONTON IS CAPITAL.

Alberta Legislature Decides Question By Two-Thirds Vote.

Edmonton, Alta., April 27.—The location of the permanent capital was settled in the House Wednesday, 16 voting for Edmonton against 4 for Calgary.

The legislative buildings will be placed on the site of the old Hudson Bay fort, which was the capital of western Canada in 1776.

ALLAN BOWSFIELD DEAD.

Was Father of Hon. Frank Oliver and Local Preacher.

Brampton, April 27.—Allan Bowsfield, one of the oldest residents of the County of Peel, died here yesterday at the age of 81. He was a prominent and influential Methodist and local preacher. Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, is a son of his.

President Roosevelt Declares Outside Aid For San Francisco Is Not Required—Detailed Damage From Northern Towns In California—Five Hundred Teams Haul Supplies—Japanese Contribute $200,000.

Ottawa, April 27.—Before the orders of the day were called in the House yesterday, Hon. Mr. Fielding, Minister of Finance, read the following telegram, received by the Governor-General:

"Washington, April 25.—Earl Grey, Ottawa: I am requested by the President of the United States to convey to the Government of the Dominion of Canada, from the people of the United States, their deepest gratitude and most profound appreciation of the magnificent contribution which your Government has proffered towards the relief of the distressed citizens of San Francisco. They feel sure that the Government of Canada will understand that they no less appreciate this generous proffer because of their conclusion that outside assistance will be unnecessary. —(Signed) Durand."

Mr. Fielding suggested that the estimate be carried, so that it should, if necessary, be available hereafter.

Damage in Northern Counties.

News has just been received at San Francisco of the damage done by the earthquake of April 18 in the northern counties of California. In Lakeport, Lake County, a large portion of the fire wall of the Lakeview Hotel crashed through the porches and brick annex. Several other brick blocks were cracked, chimneys toppled over throughout the town and show windows of business houses for the full length of Main street were scattered. No one was injured. At Albion, Mendocino County, the Occidental Hotel is a wreck. All the big saw mills in the region will have to shut down for some time. There were no lives lost. At Anderson, in Shasta County, chimneys tumbled down and windows, dishes and furniture of houses were demolished. There are many wide fissures in the earth. Slides along the southern Humboldt Lumber Co.'s railroad line did thousands of dollars damage to their dam across Indian Creek.

"Emergency Orders."

Orders have been issued by the officials of the Carnegie Steel Co., at Pittsburg, making all contracts for structural and other steel material to be used in the reconstruction of San Francisco "emergency orders," and giving them precedence over all other contracts.

The C. P. R. steamship Amur, which was placed at the disposal of merchants of Vancouver and Victoria by the company, left Vancouver Wednesday laden with supplies donated to San Francisco sufferers. There was only 25 tons of vacant space, which would be more than filled at Victoria.

500 Teams Haul Relief Supplies.

Five hundred teams were hauling supplies to the sixty odd relief depots Thursday. There is still a scarcity of sugar and coffee, and an urgent and pressing need for more blankets, cots and tents.

The Dairymen's Association will furnish milk free to the relief organizations until May 1.

Jap Emperor Gives $100,000.

The Emperor of Japan has donated $100,000 for the relief of the people of San Francisco, and the business men at Tokio and Osaka have contributed a like sum.

In response to an appeal from Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the Chinese Minister at Washington, the Chinese of Hong Kong yesterday remitted a first installment of $10,000 in gold for the relief of the sufferers by the San Francisco disaster.

41 Dead at Santa Rosa.

At Santa Rosa latest figures show 41 dead, 63 injured and 7 missing. Twenty fires started, but the water supply was unimpaired, and within three hours the flames were under control. Santa Rosa knew nothing of the destruction of San Francisco until the arrival from there of a trainload of 1,000 refugees begging for help that could not be given them.

Consuls Missing.

The Danish consul at San Francisco, H. H. Birkholm, has not been heard from since the earthquake. The French embassy at Washington also is still trying to get trace of the French consul-general at San Francisco, who has failed to respond to all enquiries directed to him.

The United States Government has declined the $75,000 subscription to the relief fund tendered by the Empress of China, but it is probable that this money will be sent direct to Chinese representatives in San Francisco for the use of the homeless Chinese.

Nine charitable organizations in Hong Kong have subscribed $40,000, and smaller amounts have been contributed in other cities.

A Laurier Government Failure.

The Laurier Government has created a most extraordinary situation in Canada's trade relations, which should be better understood as a result of Monday's discussion in the House of Commons. Led by Mr. Fielding the ministers splurged into a tariff war with the continental country of the greatest market for such products as Canada exports. The trouble, says the Montreal Gazette, goes back to the time of the short lived "reciprocal tariff" introduced by Mr. Fielding in 1897. That tariff was announced as a revolutionary measure. It was to make the nations sit up and look around. It made Great Britain look around, in order that she might retain for her merchants the most favored nation treatment they had long enjoyed in the German Empire. Then she got on sufferance what had before been hers by treaty right. None of the nations sent ambassadors to Mr Fielding to secure the reciprocity he had announced himself ready to grant, nor did there seem any promise of such sending. The "reciprocal tariff" was abandoned and the British preferential tariff took its place, which, besides being a new thing, was advertised as an evidence of the loyalty of the politicians who had lately been advocating unrestricted reciprocity with the United States. It maintained the principle of a double tariff, and put Germany and all other foreign countries except France on the least favored list. France was excepted, there being in existance a special treaty in her favor, not secured by the Laurier Government. Germany, which stood fourth or fifth among the nations as a purchaser of Canadian merchandise, did what Canada had done, and imposed the maximum tariff on imports from this country. This created a bad enough situation, which was not improved when what was in effect a third schedule was added to the Canadian tariff and a surtax was imposed on all German merchandise imported. The result of what may be called a little tariff war has not been satisfactory. The fruit growers at their recent convention pointed out that it was especially injurious to their interests. It is calculated to injuriously affect other departments of agricultural production. Germany imports some $140,000,000 worth of agricultural products annually. It includes, flour, wheat, barley, corn, rye, beef and pork, mutton and fruit All of these are produced in Canada for export, some of them in increasing quantity. It is to the advantage of all that the widest range of markets should be secured for them. The one effect of the Laurier Government's tariff policy has been to practically close to them the largest and most rapidly developing market in continental Europe. When attention is drawn to the fact in Parliament, the reply of the Minister of Finance is that every patriotic Canadian approved of the action of the Government in instituting the surtax, which is not the truth, and in saying that the German market is not much of a market anyway, which is not good sense. The Government has had nine years in which to show what it can do in the following out of its policy. It has done nothing good. It has secured no new markets for Canadian produce. It has been instrumental in closing, partly at least, one large market. It thinks this should be satisfactory, and its members are insolent to men who draw attention to its failure. It is likely to find that it is making an error. The splurge that does no harm may be borne with. The splurge that causes mischief to the country's commerce can only be resented.

Good Nature May Be Costly.

"Don't look so glum, Pilkerton. Use cheery words. They cost nothing."

"Cost nothing! If I speak ten cheery words to my wife, she asks me for some money."

A Little Misunderstanding.

"Sir, your son's performance on the French horn is execrable. It will drive everybody from my house. You told me he was a teacher."

"I did not. I said he was a tooter."

Men are often capable of greater things than they perform. They are sent into the world with bills of credit and seldom draw to their full extent.—Walpole.

Toronto has voted $5,000 for a similar purpose, and Ottawa has recently selected a newspaper man at $1,500 to attract manufacturers and others to the Capital. The community which doesn't sound its own horn these days is apt to become very much of a has-been.

Hereafter in the public schools of Lynchburg, Va., the increase of teachers salaries is to depend upon efficiency. This is to be ascertained by having the superintendent and supervising principals report on the work of the teachers as to six points; discipline, knowledge of subject, method and manner, moral influence, professional interest and health.

According to the latest report of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, 15,676 messages, containing 203,276 words, were sent and received during the past year. That is just about double the business done the year before. Still, we agree with the Boston Herald, it is evident that wireless telegraphy has got to grow considerably before it becomes really imposing in its proportions.

An American exchange says: Who wants a strike? Evidently the coal operators. They are ready for it. They have large stocks of anthracite on hand and they are better prepared for a battle with the miners than ever before. A few of their number, indeed, may desire to effect a compromise with the miners, but a majority feel that the time has come when they can fight a pitched battle and by winning it destroy the effectiveness of the miners' organization and make themselves complete masters of the anthracite industry. It remains to be seen whether such a victory would would be worth all that it will cost. As for the consumers—oh, well, what's the use of talking about them?

The fruit growers in the vicinity of Grimsby do not propose to be held up by the manufacturers of crates and baskets any longer than they absolutely have to. They are organizing a joint stock company among themselves, and by the time that the fruit is ripe they expect to be turning out enough baskets to supply the whole district. That is the way. Knock the combine on the head every time it shows itself.

At the Teachers' Association meeting the other day, Dr. Pyne expressed the hope that the public indifference, especially as to the public schools was at an end. It had been glibly said Ontario had the best school system in the world, allowing the child to enter at the kindergarten and pass directly through the public and high schools to the university, but he opined that few pupils got a through ticket. Ninety-five per cent. never got beyond the public school station.

The enormous number of students in Germany is made known by recent reports from official sources. There are at the present time in the various universities in the German Empire 42,390 students, an increase of more than 2,500 from last year. A large number of these are women. In the year of 1875-76 there were in these institutions but 16,094 students, so that in a generation the enormous increase in the number is plainly seen. The greatest trend among the students is toward the law, and there are fewer medical students than ever before. The number of women students is constantly increasing.

The great west has a certain assurance and conceit which are refreshing, but there are many who will object to the tone which is adopted in dealing with the east. The Manitoba Free Press, for instance, has the following: From the western point of view there is something amusing about Montreal's rebukes to Toronto's aspirations. Says the Montreal Gazette, for instance: "One of the Toronto newspapers now demands that the Canadian Pacific Railway establish headquarters in Toronto, with full power to accommodate all the business without reference to Montreal. The tail should be allowed to wag the dog, so to speak, when necessary." It is only a matter of time, of course, until Winnipeg becomes the headquarters city of Canada.

A London insurance company has refused to pay a large accident policy on the life of a New Orleans man who was recently killed in an automobile accident. The ground taken for this refusal is a singular one and will hardly be sustained by the courts. The company contends that most automobilists are monomaniacs on the subject of speeding their machines, and that the company should not be held responsible for deaths resulting from the actions of a person while insane.

"OUR BEST ADVERTISEMENT."

You have noticed more than once to the effect that "A satisfied customer is our best advertisement." As in the local shop windows a legend a general rule the patrons of a great transportation company like the Canadian Pacific Railway do not express their satisfaction in so many words, but just occasionally a more appreciative traveller than usual voices the opinions of the majority, and behold—"our best advertisement."

The following letter from the well-known Toronto divine, Rev. Dr. Sutherland, speaks for itself:

"Vancouver, B. C., Mar. 30, 1906.

"E J Coyle, Esq., Passenger Dept., C. P. R., Vancouver.

"My Dear Sir, — Permit me, before embarking for the Orient, to express my high appreciation of the courteous attention extended to me by yourself and other officers of the Company. My room on the "Empress of Japan" is all that could be desired, and will contribute much to the comfort and satisfaction of my trip across the Pacific. It will always afford me pleasure not only to speak in high terms of the completeness of the Company's travelling equipment, but to make any practical acknowledgment in my power of the kindness that has been shown me. With best wishes, believe me,

Yours faithfully,
A. SUTHERLAND."

Reading Fortunes In The Tea Leaves.

Reading fortunes from the tea leaves left in a cup can, with the exercise of a little imagination and humour, produce much merriment. It comes in opportunely at the doubtful half hour just after a "company" when the machinery of pleasure-giving is not always running quite smoothly.

After the tea has been drunk — leaving but a few drops to "carry the grounds," the enquirer must make a wish, repeating it in mind three times, after which the tea cup must be whirled around vigorously to grow the grounds as much as possible into the upper part of the cup This must be done three times from right to left, when the cup is turned over into the saucer to "settle the affairs of the future," given three turns again from left to right, and then handed to the fortune teller, without looking into the cup one's self, or else, so the oracle says, the spell will be broken.

The prophet or prophetess then picks up and begins reading from the bottom of the cup (the past) and then around, spiral fashion, until the top (present or near future) is reached; or three cups may be used — one for the past, the second for the present, the third for the future.

A man is indicated by a long, hard leaf, with something that suggests a hat or cane, or legs that fork.

A woman by a light colored leaf that spreads, to indicate a gown, or with something atop that may be imagined to represent a woman's headgear.

A figure in a kneeling position denotes an offer of marriage, either made or received. Groups of dots near mean acceptance. If these are absent the suit will be rejected.

One figure alone surrounded by a group of grounds premises a lover or a sweetheart.

A figure alone with no grounds near means single blessedness at the time indicated by its position in the cup.

A heart promises a love affair and much pleasure.

Two hearts a marriage.

Two figures near together, with no grounds very near means an engagement.

Three figures together is the sign of a speedy marriage.

A love letter is indicated by four dots forming a square. If near the top it will be received in a short time An extra dot within the square, or just outside, means good news; many small specks about it bad news.

Three dots in a group promises the granting of your wish, as does a triangle.

A number of tea leaves, short and tall, means a company of great and small Crosses mean adversity.

A ring, a happy marriage.

Dots in the form of a parallelogram, sickness or bad news.

Fine dots reaching in a long line, a journey. Many dots clustered about the end of the line means many new friends and pleasures.

An anchor if at the bottom of the cup, means success, at the top, love; in the middle constancy; if surrounded by clouds the course of true love will not run smooth.

A star, if not surrounded by clouds means happiness; if circled by dots, long life.

Mountain, favor of person of high position, social success. If clouded on its summit, ill-success in society.

Serpent, an enemy. If near the top of the cup you will be successful, and finally turn him or her into a friend. If near the bottom and clouded around, the enmity will cause you sorrow.

Seven dots in a row, great prosperity.

A straight line, if surrounded by many grounds, foretells an illness.

Wavy lines, if circled by dots, money: if cloudy, reverses of fortune, either past or to come—according to their position in the cup, near the bottom or top.

Tears are indicated by drops at the bottom of the cup, or by many thick dots there.

A succession of large dots in a line foretells difficulties to be overcome. Many fine dots among them unfriendliness will be superadded.

A leaf folded over the rim promises something unpleasant.

If the rim of the cup is clear a happy future is assurred.

COD LIVER OIL.

It almost makes you sick to think of it, but it isn't nearly as bad as it used to be. The improved method of refining it makes it much easier to take, and when made into Scott's Emulsion almost every one can take it. Most children like it and all children that are not robust are benefited by it. When the doctor says "Take cod liver oil," he generally means Scott's Emulsion; ask him if he doesn't. They know it is more easily digested and better than the plain oil.

Dog Collars!

DAME FASHION has decreed that collarless gowns shall be worn this year, with the consequence that Dog-Collars will be more in evidence than ever before. And really the manufacturers have "spread themselves," for many of the designs are exquisite. The tints most approved at present are: Amethyst, Topaz, Ruby, Sapphire and Garnet. The stones representing these colors are —to be fashionable — mostly imitation jewels. The imitations, however, are of the finest and the stones all cut by expert diamond cutters.

We show some of these in our window and shall be pleased to have you call and examine them, even if you don't purchase.

IRONY OF RICHES.

BEAUTIFUL CLOTHES COME TOO LATE IN THE LIFE OF ONE WOMAN.

In the spring the young man's fancy may lightly turn to thoughts of love, but for woman, young or old, there is a serious question to be settled, Can I have a new hat, a new dress, and will they be becoming?

The clothes problem is never so vital as in spring-time. Worn garments and, above all, worn bodies, faded faces, never seem such an affront to nature, such a reproach to ones' humanity, as they do exhibited in contrast with bright days, budding trees, singing birds—with all the gayety and gladness of spring. The dowdy woman, the tired woman, as she is fittingly defined in self-accusing unloveliness amid the splendor of Easter lilies, is matched by just one other sad spectacle which clothes in their portentous relations make of woman—that is, the woman to whom fine clothes have come too late in life. Behold the pity of such irony manifest in one instance.

Her father was a self-made man, and in the process of his own creation he was as stern with others as with himself. Having given his only daughter a thorough musical education, he exacted that she earn her own living. She worked hard. She gave music lessons. She married a musician younger than herself. They had two children, and the woman bore the brunt of the strain of supporting the family. She was not beautiful. Her face was good and exceedingly plain. Earning one's living may be a noble task, but it seldom improves a woman's looks or bearing. The lines of her face and figure take on more or less of the hardness of the lines along which she battles her way.

Finally, when the woman was fifty-five years old, she inherited her father's millions. Then she bought horses, houses, furniture, befitting her fortune, and she bought clothes. All her life long she had craved pretty things to wear. Now she is having her heart's desire. She has gowns made by the most famous artists in the world; she has laces, furs, jewels, and she wears them — with what pathos in her glory! Exquisite fabrics are hung in perfect lines upon her large frame, but when she moves it is always her own ungraceful self that is in evidence, and the art of the dressmaker is lost. The artists who clothes her are too clever to array her in fashions or fabrics unbecoming her age, but her ugliness dominates her appearance always. Loving beauty, possessing all the exterior elements at her command, years of struggle and of labor triumph; she is the more unsightly because of the loveliness brought so near her lack of charm.

The moral of this sad, sad story is that when any mere beauty-loving woman in the spring-time of her life considers going without an Easter bonnet and a new gown in order to buy a new parlor carpet or a set of Browning, let her beware how she puts off being pretty until it is too late!

Six Months in "2 in 1."

A Consulting Chemist Makes a Novel Experiment. An Unsolicited Letter that Explains Itself.

"I write to state that on account of your "2 in 1" Shoe Polish being criticised, and the charge made that it injured leather, I made this test as follows:

I mixed the contents of a box of "2 in 1" Shoe Polish, bought at a retail store from regular stock, with four ounces of water and into this mixture put a kid glove, and left the said glove in the mixture in a bottle from June 15th to December 15th, 1905—a full six months. I then took the glove out, washed it and examined it. The fine leather of the glove was not affected in the least. It was as pliable and soft as when new, and was not altered in condition, nor were the stitches affected in any way. This test, I consider, proves that "2 in 1" does not injure the finest leather.

I hereby state that these facts are correct and true.

J. M. WILLIAMS, Consulting Chemist, Hamilton, Dec. 15th, 1905.

GOT HIS HAIR BACK.

Was Perfectly Bald When He Started to Use Newbro's Herpicide.

Frederick Manuell, Maryland block, Butte, Montana, bought a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide, April 6, '99, and began to use it for entire baldness. The hair follicles in his scalp were not dead and in 20 days he had hair all over his head. On July 2nd he writes, "and to-day my hair is as thick and luxuriant as any one could wish." Newbro's Herpicide works on an old principle and with a new discovery—destroy the cause and you remove the effect. Herpicide destroys the germ that causes dandruff, falling hair, and finally baldness, so that with the cause gone the effect cannot remain. Stops falling hair at once and a new growth starts.

Old Age Pensions.

In Germany there obtains a general system of compulsory insurance against old age and invalidity. An old age pension is payable on the recipient attaining seventy years of age. It is composed of two parts; a contribution from the state of two pounds ten shillings per annum; the balance is made up of contributions from the employers and employed in equal shares. The amount of the pension depends in the wage class, of which there are five, which also determines the amount of the weekly contribution. The minimum invalidity pension for first wage class is three pounds, plus Government contribution of two pounds ten shillings—total, five pounds ten shillings per annum; ranging up to a minimum of seven pounds ten shillings for class 5. These amounts are increased according to the number of weeks' contribution to the fund. The old age pension amounts to five pounds ten shillings per annum, including Government contribution of two pounds ten shillings for class 1, ranging up to eleven pounds ten shillings per annum for class 5. The rate of weekly contribution is twelve pfennigs (three half-pence) for class 1, increasing in proportion to thirty-six pfennigs—(four pence half-penny) for class 5.

Not only do Belgium and Italy also give a lead to Great Britain; our own colonies are far in advance of the mother country. In New Zealand persons reaching the age of 65, whose income does not exceed one pound per week receive a pension of eighteen pounds per annum, roughly, seven shillings per week. The Act of Parliament, which gives this power has a clause which is worth repetition: "Whereas, it is equitable that deserving colonists, who during the prime of life have helped to bear the public burdens of the colony by the payment of taxes, and to open up its resources by their labor and skill, should look to the colony for a pension in their old age." This strikes one as sound doctrine, the justice of which is as applicable to the old country as to the new.

A not uninteresting sign of the times comes from France. A leading plank in M. Rouvier's platform is old age pensions. The Government of France at present subsidizes the pension funds of trade and friendly societies, but no general scheme of old age pensions has yet been adopted.—George McCrea, M.P., in Chambers' Journal.

Mohammedan Sects.

Mohammedans divide themselves into two principal sects—Shiah and Sunni, the Persians representing the bulk of the former, the Turks of the latter. The chief points on which they differ are the condition of the soul after death and the succession of caliphs. "The Sunni belief is that there is one immortal God, whose works are without beginning or end, and that he will be visible to the souls of the blessed, while the Shiahs deny the immortality of the soul and maintain that the coexistent principles of Zoroaster will forever contend for the mastery." With regard to the prophet's successors, the Sunnis claim that the lawful successor of Mohammed was Abu Bekr and after him Omar, Osman and Ali, nephew and son-in-law of Mohammed. The Shiahs, however, reject the first three and hold that Ali was the only legitimate successor. Shiahs pray but three times a day and enjoin pilgrimages to Nejef, Kerbela, Kazimain, Meshed (Persia), Samara and Kum as well as to Mecca and Medina. Sunnis make pilgrimages only to the two latter cities and pray five times a day. From this it can be readily understood that the circumstances of the Turks being in possession of the shrines of Nejef (Meshed Ali), Kazimain and Kerbela is most displeasing to devout Shiahs.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Stay With It.

The first day mother sent me to school I went home at recess, thinking school was out. As I have grown older I find that a whole lot of people did the same thing, and the sad part of the affair is that too many of us never went back. In life be careful that you don't go home at recess. If you start to learn a trade or profession, stay by it and master it. Don't chase away at recess. If you have a business, attend to it. Don't go home at recess. This going home at recess has sent many a business man into bankruptcy. It has caused mothers' tears to flow and mother hearts to ache. It has made crusty old bachelors and sour old maids. It has filled worlds with ignorance and made barren deserts of fertile plains. Going home at recess means that you have fallen asleep at the switch and your train has plunged into the ditch. Always stay until school is out.

The Air of London.

There is no fresh air in the heart of London, according to the conclusions of a recent investigator. He says: "No evidence of ozone was anywhere apparent except at Brownswood park, in the northeast. It was from the northeast quarter the wind was blowing, and the air had lost all trace of ozone before it had reached Hyde park. At Bushey park, although practically a country district, no ozone was present in the air. London had not only abstracted the goodness out of the air that swept over it, but had added to it the exhalations from the breath and bodies of millions of human beings and of tens of thousands of animals. Persons living within a one or two mile radius of Charing Cross cannot have fresh air entering their dwellings at any time."

Parsee Burial Customs.

A Bombay correspondent, writing of the burial customs of the Parsees, says: "The approach of that transition we call death is a signal for the relatives to leave the presence of the dying one, the priest alone remaining to whisper Zend-Avesta precepts into his ear. He in turn passes out of the room and admits a dog, who is trained to gaze steadily into the face of the dying one. A dog is accounted the only living creature that can terrorize the evil spirits, so the 'sas-did,' or 'dog stare,' is the last sight the Parsee has on earth. No human shadow must intervene; otherwise the guardian virtue of the dog's gaze is annulled."

To Scrape an Acquaintance.

"To scrape an acquaintance" was originated by the Emperor Hadrian. Once when visiting the public bath he found an old veteran scraping himself with a piece of broken crockery in lieu of an iron or copper scraper. Hadrian gave him a sum of money to provide the necessary materials for a bath and on his next visit to the institution found it full of veterans scraping themselves with potsherds. "Scrape away, gentlemen, but you shall not scrape an acquaintance with me," was Hadrian's comment as he went out.

The Poet's Inconsistency.

"You speak of the brooks," said the critic as he looked over his friend's poem, "as the most joyous things in nature."

"So they are," said the poet.

"But you are inconsistent."

"Why?"

"Because later on you say they are ever murmuring."

Dodging Him.

Mr. Borem — I didn't see you last Sunday— Miss Cutting — Oh, you must have if you saw me at all! Mr. Borem—I—er—beg pardon. I don't understand. Miss Cutting—I say if you saw me Sunday you must have seen me last, for I was careful to see you first.

Why Life Preservers Are Useless.

"On my ship," said the captain, "the stewards, the first day out, go to every passenger and show just how the life preservers are put on.

"The steward first says:

"'Excuse me, sir, but do you know how to manipulate a life preserver?'

"'Why, yes; I suppose so,' the passenger replies.

"'Then, sir, if you please,' says the steward, getting a preserver down. And he hands it to the passenger to put on.

"The passenger, nine times out of ten, either puts the life preserver on wrong or can't put it on at all. So the steward shows him how to do it. He is impressed and grateful.

"The life preservers, in a shipwreck, would be of little use, for nearly all the passengers would be unable to get into them. There should be a maritime law requiring a passengers' drill with the preservers every voyage, so that each passenger in a catastrophe would know how to save himself with the means placed at his disposal. As things are now, there might as well be no life preservers on ships."

The Costliest Canes.

"A single joint malacca cane will always fetch from $400 to $500," said the dealer.

"Why?"

"Because malacca hardly ever grows with enough space between the joints to make a single joint stick. Usually the joints are not more than a foot apart. When you find in Singapore—that is where malacca comes from—a piece of malacca with the joints five feet apart, so that it will make a single joint stick, come to me, and I will give you $500 for it. Malacca sticks with the joints three feet apart are worth $30 or $40. Snakewood sticks, if they are marked well—snakewood comes from British Guiana—are worth $40 or $50. A yellow ebony stick—ebony comes to us in logs from Ceylon and Mauritius—is worth $20 or $25. Wanghee, from China, makes an excellent and costly stick. A perfect wanghee is worth $20."

Persian Peasants.

There is probably no peasantry in the world so ground down as the Persian. The agricultural laborer there, as in China, never tries to ameliorate his condition for the simple reason that if he earns more more is taken away from him by the rulers of the land. The general condition of the laboring classes, however, does not seem to be so bad as might be supposed. (In a country so vast (550,000 square miles) and so thinly populated (5,500,000 in all) a small and sufficient supply of food is easily raised, especially with such prolific soil at the command of the poorest. At Shiraz there are two harvests in the year. The seifi, sowed in summer and reaped in autumn, consists of rice, cotton, Indian corn and garden produce, and the tchatoi is sowed in October and November and reaped from May till July. This is exclusively wheat and barley. Here also grow grapes, oranges and pomegranates, for which latter Shiraz is famed.

The Color of Flames.

You have often noticed the many tinted bars and bands that rise in the shape of "forked tongues of flames" from wood burning in the grate. It is ten to one, however, that you never have thought to figure on the cause of the variegated hues presented by flames. To bring the matter quickly to the point, we will say that the many colors are the result of combustion among the different elements of the wood. The light blue is from the hydrogen and the white from the carbon; the violet is from the manganese, the red from the magnesia and the yellow from the soda, which are constituent parts of the wood.

The First Man Dressmaker.

As far back as 1730 there was in Paris a man dressmaker, probably the first of his kind. His name was Rhomberg, and he was the son of a Bavarian peasant from the neighborhood of Munich. He owed his success to his genius for concealing and remedying defects of figure. He drove a beautiful carriage on the boulevard and had an escutcheon in the shape of a pair of corsets and an open pair of scissors painted on the panel of each door. He left a large fortune to his heirs.

Doctors and Solemnity.

The days are past when every self respecting doctor was expected to dress in a style tastefully blending the divine with the undertaker. But a "sustained and impenetrable solemnity" is still a priceless possession for those who would achieve success in medicine. If this is a natural gift, so much the better; if not, it should be acquired at any cost.

For Its Vocabulary's Sake.

"Indirectly, more forcibly sometimes than directly," said a senator, "a man may be accused."

"Thus a good woman of Cincinnati called her cook one morning and said:

"'Mary, come and take the parrot out of the bedroom at once. The master has lost his collar button.'"

The Difference.

Mr. Wholesale — Want a job, eh? What can you do? Applicant—Nothing. Mr. Wholesale — Say, you don't want a "job." What you want is a "position."

The Way of the Law.

A man who goes to law may not be in the poor suitor class when he starts, but is liable to be before he finishes.

Who rises every time he falls will sometimes rise to stay.—Morris.

Miners to Hold a Convention.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 27.—After hearing the report of the sub-scale committee, the scale committee of the anthracite miners yesterday decided to call a convention of miners to meet in Scranton, Thursday, May 3. The scale committee, it is said, was not willing to take the responsibility of accepting the operators' plan.

President Mitchell last night made two propositions. The first proposition asks for an increase in wages ranging from 5 to 15 per cent., according to the wages now received. The second proposition asks for an advance equal to 10 cents per ton upon the total production of coal, to be added to the wages of employes and apparently in such percentage as may be agreed upon.

Delaware's Names.

Delaware has been called the Diamond State, for, though small in size, it formerly was of great political importance. It also enjoys the nickname of the Blue Hen State, this having been bestowed on account of a gentleman named Caldwell, who made the state famous in sporting annals by the quality of his gamecocks, which he always bred from the eggs of a blue hen, believing that this was the best color for the mother of a gamecock.

Joy.

Joy is the mainspring in the whole round of everlasting nature; joy moves the wheels of the great timepiece of the world; she it is that loosens flowers from their buds, suns from their firmaments, rolling spheres in distant space seen not by the glass of the astronomer.—Schiller.

THE BOOK AGENT.

(N. Y. Times.)

She sold me a book, and I do not know why:
She sold me a book I had sworn not to buy;
I declared up and down I would not even look,
But I broke my resolve and she sold me her book.

She was such a sweet lass — so unwitting and shy,
With a wealth of dark hair and a fetching blue eye,
And I frowned upon her with a threatening look,
But she paid me no heed—only took out her book.

I had sworn not to look, but she told me a tale
Of a mother bedridden, so worn and so frail,
And of sisters and brothers so young, to be fed,
And herself all alone, for dear father was dead.

Quite unfitted she was for the winning of bread—
Father had been so good, but dear father was dead,
And the fortune they'd cause to believe had been his,
Well—a rascally partner; you know how it is.

So the bread must be won, and the rest were so young,
With the mother bedridden—some lesion of lung—
But, of course, if I chose, she would never insist—
And her eyes shone with tears like two stars through a mist.

So she sold me the book, and the reason is plain;
She would sell me another if she came again:
But they tell me dear father is hearty and hale,
Content to be dead for the sake of a sale.

And the bedridden mother, so feeble and slight
As she said, is bedridden—but only at night;
And there are younger children, all crying for bread,
But all she knows of them is what she has read.

So she sold me and sold me her book—it is well,
But here, all alone, for my life I can't tell
If it was her sad story I could not resist,
Or her eyes that shone wet like two stars through a mist.

Gin Pills Cure Kidney Troubles.

OR YOUR MONEY BACK.

Read this letter from Mrs. Gargill. Has it not the ring of truth? Does it not describe your own sufferings? And does it not point the way to quick relief?

"For three years I suffered more than I can tell with terrible pains in the small of my back. When I stooped over, it seemed as though I would never be able to straighten up. I tried Kidney Pills for a year and a half, but was getting worse all the time, until advised by my neighbor to try "Gin Pills," as she had been almost similarly affected, and had been completely cured by them. I took three boxes of Gin Pills, and almost from the first dose I began to feel better. Now I am pleased to say I can do as good a day's work as ever in my life without feeling tired out. Before getting Gin Pills I had to have a girl to do my housework, but now I can do it all myself, including the washing. I will always recommend Gin Pills for kidney trouble.

"MRS. GARGILL, Winnipeg, Man."

Don't suffer the agonizing tortures of Kidney Trouble. Don't let it run into dreaded Bright's Disease. Cure yourself now with Gin Pills—the pills that cure. Sold at all druggists on a positive guarantee that they cure or you get your money back. 50c box—6 for $2.50.

If you will write asking for it and tell us the paper in which you saw this we will send you a trial box of Gin Pills absolutely free. The Bole Drug Co., Winnipeg.

Omens of Bricklayers.

Bricklayers believe it is unlucky to lay the top brick at the north corner of a building. Some of them would lose a day's pay rather than imperil their future by doing such a piece of work. A bricklayer often bricks up in the hollow of a wall a horseshoe with a cent tied to it. This he does for good luck. To lay the first and last brick of any building but a church brings good luck to the bricklayer. Churches are the luckiest buildings to work on; theaters are the unluckiest. It is bad luck to break a trowel.

"This," exclaimed the orator, "is a decadent nation! As before the fall of Rome everything was rotten, so today in our erstwhile fair land everything"—

His nostrils dilated.

"I desire," he continued, "before retiring to add that this egg is corroborative evidence."

A Case For Sympathy.

"I pity the youngest," returned Brown quietly.

"Why?" asked Jones.

"Because he is the one who will have to resemble you the longest," said Brown.

A STORY OF WEBSTER

ONE OCCASION WHEN DANIEL WAS DEEPLY HUMILIATED.

An Incident Which Shocked and Surprised Him Into Tears—The Admiration, the Loyalty and the Generosity of His Circle of Friends.

The following incident in the life of Daniel Webster was related to the writer by the late Joshua Seward:

Mr. Seward came to Woburn from Boston in the early seventies and bought a farm, where he lived until his death in 1885. He was a native of the New Hampshire "Peace City," from which place he came to Boston in early manhood and later engaged in the livery business off School street. He was a genial, social, active young man, and in a short time many of the business and professional men of the city were his friends and patrons. Daniel Webster, then in the fullness of his masterly manhood, was his particular friend and most favored patron. One year Webster early engaged to deliver the Fourth of July oration in the city.

A public procession was then an important feature of the celebration, and the orator of the day was the chief person of distinction in the parade. In those days there were no four wheeled vehicles for convenience or for pleasure. A chaise was the proper carriage for gentlemen to use. Webster was popular and proud as popular. He saw no chaise in the city as good as he desired to appear in on that important occasion, and therefore he ordered one to be built by the principal carriage maker of the city (Sargent, I think it was), to be ready for use on that day. In the morning of the Fourth he appeared at Seward's stable office and requested Seward to go to the carriage shop and get the chaise he had ordered. Seward harnessed a horse and went to the carriage shop as directed and told the proprietor he had come for Mr. Webster's chaise. The proprietor in firm and measured tones that could not be misunderstood asked, "Did Mr. Webster send the money to pay for the chaise?"

In relating this to me Seward said: "I was never so astonished in my life! I should have been less surprised if he had raised his fist and knocked me down. I had no thought that there was a man living who had ever heard of the great Webster, the godlike Daniel, who would or who could have denied him any request it was possible to grant. I could only say, 'He sent no money by me.' 'Then,' said the proprietor, 'tell him he can have the chaise when he sends the money to pay for it and not till then.' " Seward said he was never in such a dilemma in all his life. He could not go back and tell that great man, whom he adored, that he could not have the chaise till he paid for it. And yet he must go back and tell him something. But what could he tell him? Finally, after much thought and study it occurred to him that he had a new chaise which he would offer to Webster and tell him that the varnish on the one he had ordered was not yet hard and that it would be liable to injure if taken out in the heat and dust of that public day. Webster met Seward at the door when he returned, and before Webster could ask a question Seward was telling him the story he had invented on the way home. Webster made no reply, but accepted Seward's statement as true and rode in his chaise that day.

About a week later Webster came again and said to Seward, "I think the varnish on that chaise is hard now, and you may go down and get it." Seward said: "With a heavy heart I harnessed a horse and went again to the shop. I knew I should not get the chaise, and I was not disappointed. In the same manner I was asked the same question as before. I could not invent another story that would be credible and was therefore compelled to go back and tell him the truth." Webster was impatiently awaiting Seward's return, and when in hailing distance he called to Seward: "Where is the chaise? What is the trouble?" Seward approached him more closely and in tones so low that no one could overhear him replied, "He told me to tell you that you could have the chaise when you sent the money to pay for it and not before." Webster stood silent an instant and then with voice trembling with emotion exclaimed, "My God, Joshua, did he say that?" and sank into a nearby chair and cried as would a deeply aggrieved child of six summers.

It is well known that Webster would incur debt, apparently with no thought that there were two parties to a contract, a creditor and a debtor, and that their moral obligations were coequal. Consequently his creditors so multiplied and his indebtedness so increased as to interfere with his political plans, if not, indeed, threaten his political future. At this time his friends came to his aid and, it is said, raised the sum of $10,000 to cancel his indebtedness and relieve him from the further annoyance and pressure of his creditors. When we realise that $40,000 was a larger sum to raise then for any purpose than would be $200,000 today we have some measure of the admiration and the loyalty of his friends.—H. C. Hall in Boston Transcript.

Just So.

"I thought you said you couldn't live without me," sneered the girl.

"So I did," answered the man.

"Yet you're living."

"No; I'm not. Just boarding; that's all."

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

mouth when a noise of feet and a clanging of iron proclaimed a renewed attack upon the tower. Upon those heights, as I have explained, lay the wreckage and debris of centuries. Groping in this, Montgomery found a large stone and, leaning over the parapet, hurled it down upon the crowd. Almost as quick as thought we followed his example and had the satisfaction of seeing the parties withdraw to a safer distance. It was now plain to me that Sercombe had issued an order against the use of firearms. If the business could be managed without undue disturbance, he had decided that it was wiser. Indeed, the strange part of this remarkable encounter was that, saving the first shot and my own signal of distress, the conflict had been carried on in comparative silence.

I had also come to the conclusion that the fight was one to obtain possession of ourselves. It was to secure our bodies that the attack was directed, Sercombe knew well enough and Hood knew even better that to gain access to the precincts of the castle meant very little provided we were still at liberty and able to resist a forcible removal of the treasure. Bound and gagged or stunned or dead we should offer them no further trouble, and the treasure of the Vyrians would be theirs to deport at their convenience.

Sheppard clicked the trigger of his revolver. "The first man that essays this position shall find the time has come for real warfare," he observed quietly.

"Do not be in a hurry," I answered. "We have still the upper hand." He waited expectant. "You know the drum tower down which I climbed? I think it would not be a bad plan to venture that and take them in the rear."

"The devils are plotting mischief," said Sheppard uneasily.

"I wonder if we could manage that ascent," I said.

Montgomery moved forward. "I will," he said.

"No, no," said Sheppard.

"I think I had better go," I hazarded.

"You're wanted here," said Montgomery. "I know the way." And ere I could speak or interfere he sprang away and was on the ladder leading to the southern battlements.

"Come back! Come back!" I called under my breath.

"Ned, Ned! Don't spoil his chances," whispered Sheppard, and we watched his big body vanishing in silence.

"That boy is going to his death," he murmured. "I hope you'll trust him now."

"Oh, hang your sentiment!" I answered uneasily.

"I think we'd better go back," he said after a pause, and we returned to Williams. The man stood like a rock, his eyes riveted eagerly upon the dark figures of our antagonists. "Shall I fire?" said he in his high Welsh voice.

"No," said I. "Hold yourself together and fire if I tell you. We shall have blood on our hands soon enough."

There followed another space of silence, broken only by the interjected voices below murmuring in conference. For my own part I was taken up with Montgomery and his hazardous venture. I blamed myself for not stopping him at any cost, and in my mind's eye I followed him in his perilous ascent. It was still too dark to watch his progress, for the drum tower was as yet shrouded in vagueness, and no sound greeted us from the stillness of the breaking dawn. I think some five minutes passed in this dreadful stage of anxiety, and then I observed a movement among the men below. Evidently they had concerted some plan, and we were to resist a fresh attack. Just at this point, and when our thoughts had been necessarily called off Montgomery and were directed to the new development, there arose a loud whooping on the battlements, and a tall black body ran in the rear of the stormers and fell upon them. I saw in the gray light something as a flail rise and fall, and I heard the astonished cries of the enemy.

"Down! Down! Follow me," I said sharply and, scrambling by the stairway, flew out upon the battlements, with Sheppard and Williams at my heels. I had only my revolver for the attack, but I used the heavy butt freely, and cries and curses arose from the pack of Greeks. They scattered like a flight of sparrows, and Montgomery almost fell into my arms in the ardor of his onset. Then we pursued, and as they ran I fired some barrels of my revolver in the air. The alarm increased their panic, and, turning the corner, they flung themselves in confusion on the ropes that connected with the sycamore. I heard Sercombe's voice cursing, but where in the melee he was I had no notion, for at that moment there arose before us, I cannot say whence, a tall figure, very lithe and active, that grappled with me, gurgling strange oaths. Two strong arms were braced about my back, and it was with the utmost difficulty that I kept my feet. Together we swayed and rocked, drawing nearer to the edge of the parapet.

With all the strength at my command I flung my body forward, and, twisting my legs about my opponent's, I bore him sideways toward the roof. As I did so he wriggled a hand free and snatched it to him, fumbling in his coat. I bent him backward, and suddenly his hand stood out before my eyes, with all the light of the gray dawn gleaming upon steel. Death certainly affronted me in that second, but I hardly knew it, for quickly an arm was thrust over mine, where it gripped the ruffian round the loins, and the next instant his hand fell and his head went back, and, slipping through my grasp, the body rolled over the parapet and dropped, with a splashing plunge, into the waters of the moat.

It was some seconds ere I could look round, and when I did Sheppard was standing by my side, a long Persian dagger in his hand, gazing vacantly over the stone coping, and the ramparts were clear of the enemy.

"You saved my life, old man," I gasped.

"I believe I did," he returned slowly, but seemed to be pondering something, so remote and abstracted was his air. He stepped forward and severed with his knife the ropes which bound the sycamore.

"You must chop that down," he said.

Suddenly a great glow lit up the eastern heavens, and the trees and the time worn ramparts rose green and gray in the morning. The dawn broke over us. No living soul was visible in this early light, and only the water rocked faintly against the masonry of the castle, carrying on its surface that inert body.

Sheppard's hand opened in a spasm, and the knife fell, cutting an arc of light. He looked up at me and smiled wearily. "I think I'll go to bed, old chap."

"You have had no rest for forty-eight hours," said I. "Don't be a fool; sleep before you think."

"Yes; I believe I'll take your advice," he replied mechanically and, turning slowly, marched with a dull and sober step toward the drum tower. I watched him go, and then I turned to the others.

"Any damage?" I asked.

Montgomery showed his teeth. "Pooh!" he said. "They didn't show fight!"

Williams shook his head. "I have a bad knuckle," he said.

I positively yelled with laughter. Somehow the hilarity would not be denied. "I owe you both thanks," I said presently. "Montgomery, you're a brick, and I won't forget it." He hung his head in a sheepish fashion, but I doubt not was very well pleased. "Now get you gone," I resumed. "There will be nothing further tonight, and if there is I will let you know."

For my own part sleep was impracticable, worn and jaded though I was. The events of the night and of that sharp struggle clamored in my brain, arresting every sense to attention. I leaned over the parapet and watched the dawn come up for the second time, but today it rose in different circumstances, flushed and lurid, menacing storm. The sky was red as with blood, and a black cloud fringed the margin of the horizon. My thoughts flew about like a whirling wheel, leaving upon me dim impressions. The light grew apace and struck the castle walls with fire. I was aware of something in the moat below, but my mind made no inquiries. It rested palpitant and turning upon itself in idle revolutions. The sounds of the dawn crept out across the quietude, and the trees waved and shook in a gust of air. Disturbed by this flux of the wind, or overbalanced by its own weight, a jagged stone toppled on the parapet and fell. It struck the water with a crash, and my eyes followed it. Then it was that for the first time I knew what had been beating at the door of my brain.

Suddenly, and at the instant sight of it, the confusion of my wits precipitated, and they settled clear and sharp. The cloud passed from me, and I stared with open eyes and a dreadful appreciation at the body.

The water was tossed into undulations started by the fallen stone, and the body, supported across a fallen branch, rose and fell with the water. Drawing back, I moved to another part of the battlement. But the thought pursued me in my flight. Had Sheppard struck too soon? Was it, indeed, inevitable? For the first time there grew into solid fact the horror of the supposition I had several times entertained. We were embarked upon a war, committed of our own act and will to a deadly strife, of which no one of us could see the end. And beneath me, stored in the vaults of the venerable fortalice, lay the accursed treasure for which this blood must be spilled. Hastily I withdrew and mounted to the top of the keep. I could bear the fellowship no longer, and yet there arose now upon my mind, premeditating flight, a new perplexity. I dared not leave the body there, exposed to the sight of the world. Doubting in my thoughts and torn by shapeless fears, I stood irresolute, but at that moment my attention was caught by a movement in the bushes across the park. A head peeped out and scrutinized the scene with diligence. Then Sercombe's face emerged, red and bloated. He pushed through the covert and strode boldly toward the castle, followed presently by his companion, a rough, black fellow, with a gallows look. I watched them approach and halt under the walls, facing the dead body underneath me. I suppose my outline appeared against the sky, for Sercombe looked up and fixed his eyes on me. But he said nothing, only addressed the Greek in an undertone. I leaned forward and regarded them intently. The rough fellow stepped to the brink of the moat and, stooping forward, pulled the floating bough toward him. It moved, carrying its hideous passenger. When next I looked the Greek had the body on his shoulders, and the two were retreating into the underwood. At the end of the reach of turf Sercombe came to a stand, and once more looked up at me. But he still made no sign, and I could imagine that the color of his face had faded. It seemed somehow to me to be ominous of the new position in which we were involved. I descended into the castle. Outside Sheppard's door I paused. It stood open, and I looked in. The light streamed through the window and fell across his face. He lay dressed upon the bed, a red stain of blood upon his cheeks, and as I gazed his hands moved convulsively—a contortion twisted his sleeping face. I left him and, returning to my own room, threw myself upon the bed.

The body rolled over the parapet.

CHAPTER XII.

IT was not long before we were visited by the first retribution for what might be accounted a crime and what was at least provoked by our own illegal acts. Indeed, the surprise fell sooner than I had anticipated, although it happened by the means I had always considered probable. That Williams, garrulous and sharp eyed Welshman as he was, could be secured in silence was well nigh impossible, for even if concealment had been for his personal benefit he would still have plied his tongue, and, though he were sworn to secrecy, the private transactions of this singular feud would have slowly dribbled through his communications and become current in the gossip of the country. This knowledge was mainly instrumental in deterring us from confiding in him. Burglars were the bugaboo we had brandished before him, and burglary, sure enough, was the word that ran over the district. The news came to us late that morning. As I gathered, Williams, who was keeping company with some girl of Llanellan, woke early from his belated sleep and ran down to the village, full of the battle. His own appearance in it, as I afterward discovered, had been gorgeously conceived and magniloquently rendered. I believe, according to his version, it was he, and he alone, who gave the signal for the final rout, and certainly he was the author of that fall from the battlements. But this was just as well, for the man knew nothing of its fatal issue, and poor Sheppard did not grudge him the credit.

But I am trespassing upon my narrative too rashly. Williams returned later in the morning and, apparently to celebrate his own cleverness, made his communications to me. He had given warning to the schoolmaster at Llanellan, who had offered to hand on the notice to the authorities at Raymond. I could have cursed the man for his folly and his babbling tongue, but I was just enough to recall that his conduct was merely natural. In truth, if he thought at all, he must have considered us a pack of egregious asses for not taking better precautions and acquiring the aid of the Raymond police. I could do nothing, therefore, but acquiesce with as good a grace as I might and wish heartily that we had left him sleeping as soundly as Mrs. Main and the maid, who, it appeared, had never opened an eye throughout the night, although the former asserted that she had dreamed "there was a thunderstorm-like," adding the enclitic familiar to her conversation.

But the situation remained to be faced, and I guessed that we should be confronted with it very shortly. Consequently we must compose a plan of action, and, whatever we agreed upon, must run no risk of denial at other hands. In this connection it seemed that I must pay a necessary visit to Sercombe, a task which for some reason was not to my taste. Sheppard, who had quite recovered himself and had not yet referred in any way to the event of the early morning, cordially approved my suggestion.

"It will be a wise course," he declared. "And, besides, I am anxious to inspect these foreigners nearer."

Where the Greeks were lodged we knew not, but it was evidently not at the Woodman, for on our arrival there the place was deserted except by the woman who had charge of Hood's kitchen. She could give us little information. She had not seen her master since she went to bed on the previous evening. But Captain Sercombe had been called at 9 o'clock and had gone out after eating a hasty breakfast. There was no one else staying in the house. Such was the information she imparted to us, influenced to her frankness, I had no doubt, by my position as the big landed proprietor of the place. Which way had Captain Sercombe gone? He had gone down the roadway in the direction of Raymond.

With this we had to content ourselves; but, determined at all hazards to catch Sercombe, Sheppard and I took the narrow lane that led down the valley in the hope of hitting upon him. At the bottom of the valley the stream makes an open pool of some considerable size upon a piece of flat land. Here it receives a few exiguous branches from the lower hills and rests, as it were, in those spreading shallows ere it narrows and spins for the Ray. The wood was sparse about the pool, but it was very private and retired from the roads, and it was quite by accident that we penetrated the wood so far. But here we perceived through the leafage the smoke of fires and heard the noises of human creatures, an uncommon feature in the silent Gwent. Pushing through the brushwood, we came next upon a veritable encampment in that friendly spot. And now we solved the riddle which had perplexed us earlier in the morning, for the first man my eyes fell upon was my old acquaintance of the squint. Here was not a camp of gypsies, but of cutthroat Greeks!

The discovery was no sooner made than it was confirmed by a voice sounding from my right and calling my name in familiar tones.

"Ah, how d'ye do, Mr. Greatorex? Glad to see you. What pleasant chance has brought you into our little village?"

The man stood before me as debonair and well groomed as ever, his puffy red face smiling cheerfully into mine and his bloodshot eyes twinkling with gayety. It seemed almost inconceivable that this fellow was but a few hours earlier upon the footing of a deadly foe and earnest to rob us even of our lives. And yet I confess that even at this juncture and after the grave events of the siege I experienced for him what always underlay my superficial feelings, a genuine liking. The impudence of the adventurer, his very gayety, the assumption he wore that whatever he did and however ruthlessly he pursued us he was still a welcome acquaintance—all these facts gave a charm to his person. His benignity was superb; it was that of an urbane philanthropist. He was ready to crack a joke with you, to recount his entertaining adventures in your ears or to offer you his choicest cigar. He was a man pre-eminently cast for social popularity, and circumstances or his own wickedness had made him a scoundrel, and a very bad scoundrel at that.

It was he, and he alone, who gave the signal.

And so it was that I responded quite affably to his greeting, oblivious of the past and almost forgetting the future. He stood by me, surveying the encampment, his bulky form overtopping mine by three inches at the least.

"It's a pity, Mr. Greatorex," says he, reflecting, "that these animals have no spunk. Spunk goes a long way with me, I will admit, and that warms my heart to you. I doff my hat to Mr. Sheppard and, by the way, to my young friend Montgomery also."

"What you lack in quality, I suppose, you calculate to make up in quantity," I said grimly.

"Precisely, Mr. Greatorex. You've hit it. That's the rub. If I had three of my mongrel Indians here I'd reckon to finish the job in a couple of days, but one has to use the material at hand."

"No doubt," said Sheppard, "but your plans must have been laid a long time."

The captain cast a curious glance at him. "Well, you seem to know," he said slowly. "But I tell you frankly that greed can carry too far and that a jaw too widely open will sometimes lose a bite; it takes too long to shut it. If I had managed this business"— But here, apparently recollecting himself, he broke off and turned away with a little frown. But presently he resumed, wearing his accustomed good humored expression. "There was never any good came of a Greek. I've known them upward of twenty years, and I never knew one that was fit for anything save to jab you in the back when you were not looking."

"I should say," remarked Sheppard mildly, "that you had a very suitable gang for your purpose."

Sercombe laughed. "Oh, I don't fancy the knife myself, though some people do."

Sheppard turned deathly pale, but he smiled politely and answered, "There is no knowing what scruples a man will develop."

This turn of the conversation suddenly woke me to a sense of my errand, and I quickly communicated my news to Sercombe.

"I thought we should come to this," he said cheerfully, "and I would have laid odds I should have had you here on this mission. I knew you would drop that mealy mouthed righteousness of yours. What I disliked in you, Mr. Greatorex, from the outset, if I may say so without offense, was your blamed British pharisaism. You couldn't look at a job squarely. It's not your fault, but that of your training. I had the same defect once myself, but a campaign in the Ionian isles knocked the pretenses out of me. That's how I came to know these scoundrels so well. Well, I'm glad we meet evenly at last. You can see for yourself there's not a penn'orth to choose between us, save that you've had first blood," and with that he looked at Sheppard.

This time Sheppard held his color under control, but he looked away, and I perceived, in spite of his severe restraint, a twitching of the nostrils.

"Come, come," said I, "we must take what steps we may in self defense against cutthroats, captain."

"I'm with you there," said Sercombe cheerily, "and the steps I usually take consist of a barker. I shoot out of my coat tails as often as not. My plan is to fire when I see a squint."

"I fear you rebuke me," I replied, with a bow, "but I swear that I would have fired if it had been any other place but London. I am so well known there."

Sercombe burst out laughing. "I once thought," he said, "that Mr. Sheppard was more my sort, but now I believe I pin my note on you!"

"You honor me," I returned, "but come to business."

The captain plucked his long red mustache meditatively. "I'm sorry I can't discuss this with you now, gentlemen," he said. "After all, it's your affair, though I admit I have a certain interest in it, but if I may come up and see you about 3 o'clock we can go into details. I fancy it's a concerted plan we want."

"That's so," I returned, feeling terribly mean and small to be conspiring so against the laws of my country with an admitted scoundrel.

"Very well; let us say 3," said the captain and stuck out his hand as though to dismiss us.

For myself, being in the frame of mind I have described, I contrived to overlook his arm, but Sheppard, all smiles, sprang forward and shook him heartily. "By the way," he said brightly, "and where is my friend Hood?"

"Hood!" echoed Sercombe and looked at us queerly. "Oh, Mr. Hood is inventing a new maneuver. He is a better soldier than I am, is Mr. Hood, naturally." I suppose he saw that we exchanged glances. "My dear sirs," he said, "I only tell you what you might suppose for yourselves. Mr. Hood is trying his hand at generalship, but I don't reveal his plan of campaign. Perhaps you guess it." And he burst out laughing rather unpleasantly.

It was obvious to both of us that there was a bitterness in Sercombe's words. Fallen though he was from a respectable estate and sunk as he had become in a career of dissipation and unscrupulous adventure, he still retained a certain feeling of his own dignity. How far the difference between Hood and himself had gone I could not know, but if it went much further it seemed us though we might take some advantage out of it. But of the two it was Hood—Hood, with his lean black face—that I feared.

Sercombe kept his appointment with commendable punctuality, entering our council chamber, if I may so describe the smaller of the halls in which we usually sat, with the jauntiness of his morning's encounter. Lunch was but newly over, and I felt myself descend in Montgomery's eyes when I offered the captain a glass of wine. He took it airily, even with a kind of rude grace, which sometimes characterized him, and nodded us a good health, plunging at once into the matter of his visit.

"You will excuse me, gentlemen. I can spare little time today. You will understand that I am very busy," this with a twinkling eye. "But we must needs oblige a friend, and I am here over a dusty road to meet you."

"We are gravely indebted to you," said I ceremoniously. "But I must point out that this point touches you as much as, if not more than, it affects us."

"We have shed no blood," said the captain emphatically, settling back for argument.

"'Tis not your fault, then," I retorted, "and, in any case, what blood was shed was spilled in self defense in repelling an illegal assault upon our persons and our property."

"You would find it difficult to prove that in a court of law," says he, casting his eye at me.

"I thought we were agreed to leave the law alone," said I.

"Unhappily," observed Sercombe, with a laugh, "the law won't leave us alone."

"Oh, come," said I impatiently, "we are confined to this, Captain Sercombe. Are you prepared to help us? You yourself say time presses. If not, it may well be that we shall throw the onus upon the proper offenders and leave you to shift for yourselves."

"And what about the treasure, my friend?" asked the captain, with an ogle.

"I know nothing of any treasure," I remarked calmly, "nor does either of my friends here. Presumably an attack was made upon the castle for the purpose of burglary, and I can conceive that my silver only was aimed at. I think that will suffice to explain the cowardly attack of some ruffianly foreigners. I think the Raymond police will easily understand that."

Sercombe looked somewhat blank, but in a moment resumed his cheerfulness. "Quite so, and, as such a course would benefit no one, we are to combine forces against a common enemy. Well, fire ahead."

At this moment an interruption came through the entrance of the maid with the announcement of some visitors at the door. We all stared at one another.

"Who are they?" I demanded.

But the girl, being raw and unsophisticated, had not inquired their names. They were, however, gentlemen, and there was a policeman with them. This was enough for us, and an uncomfortable silence fell on us. Sercombe raised his eyebrows and sucked in his lips soberly.

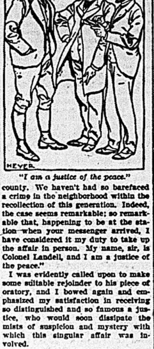
"Have 'em in," said Sheppard. I looked dubious. We had arranged nothing and had no plan of action between us. "It is far wiser," urged Sheppard. "Don't give it too elaborate an appearance." And, turning, he gave the order to the maid.

I was still doubting and Sercombe was regarding Sheppard with a certain grave interest when the maid returned, ushering in an important looking old gentleman with a very ceremonious manner and a man whom I took to be a sergeant in plain clothes.

"Mr. Greatorex?" asked the old gentleman, with heavy courtesy.

I bowed. "That's my name," I replied. "I suppose you have come upon this business of last night?"

"Yes, sir," said he, signaling to the sergeant, who forthwith pulled out a notebook. "It looks a bad thing for the county. We haven't had so barefaced a crime in the neighborhood within the recollection of this generation. Indeed, the case seems remarkable; so remarkable that, happening to be at the station when your messenger arrived, I have considered it my duty to take up the affair in person. My name, sir, is Colonel Landell, and I am a justice of the peace."



"I am a justice of the peace."

I was evidently called upon to make some suitable rejoinder to his piece of oratory, and I bowed again and emphasized my satisfaction in receiving so distinguished and so famous a justice, who would soon dissipate the mists of suspicion and mystery with which this singular affair was involved.

This address set the old gentleman upon his legs, metaphorically speaking, and forthwith he plunged into the depths.

"This party, I understand, Mr. Greatorex," said he, "attacked you early this morning?"

"About 3 o'clock," I answered. He commended the reply to the sergeant, who scribbled in his book.

"Had you any reason to fear this assault was intended?"

I hesitated. "Well, to say the truth," I replied, "we were not wholly without some suspicions."

"I may take it upon myself to say, sir," suddenly broke in the captain, "that it was I that first put the suspicion into Mr. Greatorex's head."

He looked at me as if inviting my corroboration, and a twinkle glistened in the rascal's eye.

"That is true," said I gravely. "Captain Sercombe is entirely responsible for my suspicions."

The ambiguity of the phrase tickled us both, and a smile was very privately exchanged between us.

"May I ask, Captain Sercombe," said the old gentleman politely, recognizing this importation with a bow, "what reasons you had for supposing Iver castle would be attacked in this extraordinary way, and whether you have any clew to the offenders?"

The captain lolled back in his chair and stroked his red mustache. "I used my eyes, colonel. I have lived a sharp life, sir. And when I see a fact I record it. That's a hint which is of use in your profession, as I make no doubt you know well enough," he said courteously. "This affair of the attack is a bad business; there's no denying that. But it might have been worse. No lives were lost, you see." And he glanced out of his ensanguined eyes at Sheppard.

"No; we must be thankful for that," observed the justice heartily. "But do I understand you that you had indeed actual evidence that the burglary was planned?"

"I can add two to two, colonel, and make them four," says Sercombe, seeming to be very complacent. "And, staying by accident in the same neighborhood with my friend Greatorex, I put a point on his wits. That was all. I make no claim to extra smartness, but when I see a number of lazy looking gypsies about, there's no good promised, according to my notions."

"You are right; you are right," agreed the justice. But here the sergeant struck in for the first time, casting a glance from sharp, beady eyes on the captain.

"Where were these gypsies, sir?"

We all looked at Sercombe, who showed not the least discomfiture, but bit the tip off a cigar.

"I trust I have your permission, Greatorex?" said he. "The gypsies, sir, are encamped at the bottom of the valley; have been so, indeed, for a week."

I was astonished at the man's audacity. He had actually revealed the secret of his nest of cutthroats. The sergeant turned the pages of his notebook.

"The man Williams, examined this morning, states that one of the men, seen closely, looked like a foreigner—

ODE ON SOLITUDE.

Happy the man whose wish and care
A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air
In his own ground.

Whose herds with milk, whose fields with bread,
Whose flocks supply him with attire,
Whose trees in summer yield him shade,
In winter fire.

Blest, who can unconcernedly find
Hours, days and years slide soft away;
In health of body, peace of mind,
Quiet by day.

Sound sleep by night, study and ease,
Together mixed, sweet recreation
And innocence, which most doth please,
With meditation.

Thus let me live, unseen, unknown;
Thus, unlamented, let me die,
Steal from the world, and not a stone
Tell where I lie.

FIRST AID BY DOGS.

How the Intelligent Animals Find the Wounded in Battle.

Two specially trained dogs and the ambulance section of the London Volunteer Electrical Engineers had a field night on Wimbledon Common on Saturday.

Long shafts of brilliant light swept the entire range of the common, and under these the Electrical Volunteers and the dogs groped their way through the bracken and conducted a search for men who were supposed to have been wounded in a battle fought along nearly the entire width of the common.

The dogs have been specially trained for ambulance service by Major E. Hautonville Richardson of Carnoustie, Forfarshire, and their duty is to find the wounded who have crawled under cover in places that human searchers might overlook, says The London Express.

One of the dogs is a collie, and the other a cross-bred retriever. Their outfit is complete. Bandages and dressings, and also a flask of stimulant, are carried on their backs, and round their necks are bells, which tingle loudly as they move.

When the word was given for the bearer sections to advance. Major Richardson and his dogs, accompanied by an Express representative, made for a thicket in the centre of the line of fight. Here the collie was loosed from its leash, and at the word, "Seek, laddie!" it sprang into the undergrowth and nosed among the dark bushes and long grass, moving a a rapid pace.

The jangling bell enable the dog to be followed easily. After several minutes, during which a considerable portion of the wood had been traversed, the bell suddenly ceased ringing, and a low whine from the collie proclaimed a "find." Hurrying to the spot, the major and his companion saw one of the "wounded" lying under a tree and the dog licking his face.

At a word from his master Laddie resumed his search, and soon led the way to another casualty, and the cry of "bearer company" brought the stretcher men up quickly. Then for some time the dog ran along without a halt. He plunged into a dense growth of bracken on the extreme left flank, but Major Richardson judged that this was too far away for any wounded to be found, and called him back.

The dog ignored the call, and, as no bell could be heard, the only course was to follow him. A few yards away he was discovered standing over two men, who were well hidden in the bushes.

The retriever as also tried with similar success.

Major Richardson said he had six dogs now in training. He did not take up any particular breed, but trained any kind of dog. Some of his dogs were put through a severe test with the Black Watch in Scotland by Gen. Tucker, and a board of officers, and they were quite satisfied with the result.

"I sold six dogs to the Russian Government for the war in Manchuria, and they did good service," he said, "I was also approached by Norway when there was the danger of war between that country and Sweden, and the Sultan of Turkey wishes me to supply dogs for his army.

"I want, however, the British War Office to take them up, and I believe they will do so."

The dogs cost about 60 guineas each.

Stenographer's English.

In some stenographic systems an arbitrary sign may stand for one, two, or even three words. Sometimes the mistranslation of one of these signs leads to funny results.

"The deed shocked the nation to the heart core" was what was said, and the typewriter evolved, "The dead shocked the notion to the hard car." "The rumor was but transient, though," was hardly recognizable as "The rammer was trains end through." A rear-end collision was evidently in that girl's mind.

"As manna fed the Jews," was ingeniously tortured by another young woman into "As mamma fed the jays." Yet she was a Sunday school teacher.

"Plays, creep and laughs, the innocent," crooned the man one day, mouthing the opening lines of some projected baby verses. When the typewriter tapped out "Plays craps and leaves the innocent," he scanned her visage closely.

He said, "The voice of Dr. Jocelyn was heard calling for assistance," and it came out, "The vice of Dr. Josh Lane was hard killing four assistants."

When "But she held Jake too dearly for that, and so—passed on" was dictated, and it came out, "But she held jacks, two, drawing for that, and so passed one," would it have been unjust to credit the girl at the machine with an elementary knowledge of gambling?—Success.

Clock Not Crazy.

This story is told of Dan Leno, the late idol of the London music hall stage. His mind failed, and he was confined in a private asylum. Soon after this he got up an argument with one of the attendants about the correctness of the clock. "That clock's wrong," he said. "No, sir, the clock is quite right." "I tell you it's wrong." "No, sir, it's quite right." "Then, if it's right, what's it doing here?"

SYBILLA LONG, KNIGHT ERRANT

By INA WRIGHT HANSON

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

"I did have such an experience this morning! I started out to find a girl I used to know and who I heard was living here. I got tangled up in a minstrel show going over and coming back I got mixed into a funeral. I didn't know exactly where she lived, and I had all Boston Ravine out looking for her. I'm sure the folks down there haven't been so stirred up for years."

The voice beyond the bowlder broke most pleasantly into Fenton's moody thoughts. He sat up promptly, but cautiously.

"That's the first decent voice I've heard in this accursed place," he observed silently.

It didn't seem to be an accursed place. Fragrant with pine needles, vocal with the humming of bees in late manzanita blooms and the laughter of a watercress laden stream; beautiful with brick red soil, varied greens in foliage and glimpses of heaven's own blue—it seemed like a charming spot—the only discord the pale faced, hollow eyed man himself.

"I didn't find the girl after all," the musical tones went on, "but I found the house she used to live in."

Fenton listened impatiently while the other voice said things, querulous things burdened with the aches and pains of the speaker. "A typical sanitarium voice," thought Fenton peevishly. Then he brightened as the first speaker remarked:

"You think you will go back, do you? Oh, no, the walk hasn't hurt you. Exercise and fresh air do wonders for a body often. No, I am going to stay and read till luncheon."

In silence Fenton wondered if she would read aloud, but instead she began to sing. He fairly held his breath—notes soft as a wood dove's; a voice exquisite by nature and unspoiled by training. She was singing a lilting lyric of love, and Fenton thought of a swinging gate, scurrying clouds and his first sweetheart's first kiss, years and years forgotten. Then, without any perceptible hesitancy, the melody changed to a lullaby, tender as a mother's prayer, and the weary look left the man's eyes, the hard lines around his mouth relaxed, and he drew a long, almost sobbing, breath. The melody ceased, and Fenton felt as if he had never had a desire in his life but to hear her sing. He arose and went to the other side of the bowlder.

"Pardon a sick man," he began, but his tongue seemed paralyzed. His only conscious thought was that he was glad the girl in her nurse's uniform was so fair. Her eyes gazing curiously up at him had never a hint of fear in their amber depths. He gathered his senses together.

"I haven't slept naturally for a week," he said bluntly. "Will you sing for me?"

When Fenton awoke the sun was shining no longer. He sat up quickly and found that a great shawl was keeping the evening's chilliness from him; then his eyes discovered the nurse leaning against a tree, regarding him gravely.

"You have stayed here all day—you have had no lunch!" he exclaimed.

She smiled. "Oh, no; when I was sure you would stay asleep I went back to the sanitarium, and then I came again."

They arose. Fenton folded the shawl and laid it over his arm.

"How am I ever going to thank you?" he began.

"Don't try," she answered simply, preceding him down the narrow path.

"I worked too hard and collapsed," he explained. "Shan't be so foolish when I get well again. I am going to get well now that I can sleep. Maybe you have heard of John Fenton, carpet manufacturer. I am the idiot."

"Oh!" exclaimed the girl, then added hastily: "A pebble rolled under my foot. I am Sybilla Long, nurse."

He wondered at the deep flush which overspread her face—they were at the foot of the hill and walking side by side.

"Can't I syndicate your services?" he inquired gravely. "Do you suppose the doctors are averse to a graft?"

He thought her low laughter was pleasanter even than her song or her speech. That night he slept as he had not for a year.

A new life was beginning for John Fenton. The sanitarium's grim walls no longer spelled to him hopelessness. The doctors were complacent over so satisfactory a convalescent, but Fenton laughed in his sleeve at them. It was not pills and potions which had made a man of him again, but the tonic of a sweet voice and a gracious presence.

She seemed, this fair Sybilla, to be overyoung for a nurse. Perhaps for that reason the grave doctors indulged her beyond the others. At any rate, she always had time for Fenton, and daily she fascinated him more. He had not been a man of many loves. The first little sweetheart, dead years before, and the woman his mother wanted him to marry, but whom he had perversely refused even to meet—the first had set his heartstrings a-quiver; the last, his mother affirmed, stood ready to do so. So all the loves which Fenton might have nurtured and had not came flying around this amber eyed, flute voiced Sybilla.

So she sang to him, and he quoted to himself, "And thou beside me singing in the wilderness." She read to him, and he fitted other words to the melody of her voice, words he hoped some time to hear from her lips. She talked blithely or thoughtfully, as her mood might be, and he answered in like spirit, watching with a lover's eyes each changing expression.

The doctors had pronounced him well, but he was loath to go into the world again. He had a feeling that in its clang and clamor Sybilla Long would prove to be what she had been before he knew her—a dream too beauteous to come true.

There came a day when the breath of summer was hot over the red soil and withering manzanita blooms. The water cress laden stream was too languid for laughter, but Fenton's heart beat high with hope. He was wondering how he should say it, the world old tale, for say it he must within the hour. Looking at her pensive face, the words of a favorite song came into his mind, and his clear tenor broke softly into the stillness of the pine forest. Sybilla looked up surprised, for she had never heard him sing.

"I think of you all the day long.
You run through the hours like a song.
Sometimes I think if the world could see
My golden dreams it would envy me.
Dearie, my dearie, nothing's worth while but dreams of you,
And you can make every dream come true.
Dearie, my dearie—

"Will you, my dearie, make every dream come true?" He leaned toward her eagerly, but she shrank away from him, covering her face with trembling hands. A tear splashed out between her fingers.

His face clouded. "Why, little girl"—he began, with troubled concern.

She uncovered her face and looked at him wanly. He started at her expression.

"Did you ever hear of Martha Gillen?" she asked.

His look was uncomprehending. Martha Gillen was the woman his mother had for five years been importuning him to marry.

"Yes," he said dully. "Why?"

"For many reasons I love her as I would a sister. One day she told me that your mother wanted you to marry her, but that you wouldn't even meet her for fear you might be inveigled into it. She laughed about it, but I thought it an affront to her beauty and goodness and wisdom, and I prayed for the chance to avenge her. It came sooner than I expected. I learned about your illness and where you were. Dr. Jenson is my cousin, so it was easy enough to pose as a nurse, and that's what I've been doing. Now you despise me."

Fenton noted the quivering of her lips and said gently: "I don't understand. You have been goodness itself to me. You have"—

"Oh, don't you see the baseness of me? I did it to make you love me." Sybilla's white face was crimson now. "I wanted you to love me and tell me so, and ask me to marry you, and then I was going to spurn you to the ground, and so should Martha Gillen be avenged!"

Fenton smiled. "How old are you, little knight errant, avenger of another woman's wrongs? Not quite twenty? I thought so. Years ago I was not quite twenty, and often did I busy myself turning a gopher hill into a Vesuvius spitting forth fire, smoke and lava. Sybilla, dear, why don't you spurn me?"

He held out his arms, and into them crept a tearful, very rosy, very winsome knight errant, happily worsted in her first combat.

The Reserve Seat.

"As an instance of the way traveling Americans get foolish over making a show of opulence and liberality," said a New Yorker who is much abroad, "let me tell you about an old woman who made a visit to Ireland. This woman, getting off the boat at Queenstown, hired an outside car for a drive. The rate by the hour was 1 and 6 (35 cents) for the car and a shilling (a quarter) for the jarvey, or driver. Well, the woman got up on one side of the car, and the jarvey got up on the other, driving sideways, and they started off. After a bit the woman pointed to the empty driver's seat in front and said:

"'What is that seat in front for, young man?'

"'Sure, ma'am,' said the wily jarvey, 'that's what we call the reserve seat, nicely cushioned and all that kind of thing, and is only engaged by the real gentry, they payin' for the same 10 shillin's and 2 shillin's for the driver.'

"The woman hastily shifted to the driver's seat.

"'You should have told me that before,' she said. 'How was I, a stranger, to know what was the proper thing to do over here?'

"And she paid 12 shillings for the privilege of riding in the driver's seat, to the amusement of all Queenstown."

Dear Old Mother!

In the hurry and bustle of this busy life those dear old mothers, our best friends and champions, who gave us the very best years of their lives, who stood between us and all harm, who would willingly have laid down their lives for us, who in times of sickness were always our ministering angels—constantly at our bedside, responding willingly to every beck and call, attending with more than loving kindness to our every want and need—are too often forgotten and seldom accorded the loving attention which is their due, and when the grim reaper takes them from us we, for the first time, realize in anguish, sorrow and regret what the loss of a mother really means. It means more than all the other things of earth. All the riches of the universe could not compensate, and in all the whole wide world there is no other who can fill her place. Of all the beauty with which the world is embellished the most beautiful is the mother, and to her every human being truly owes a world of homage.—Papillion Times.

Egyptian Temple 3,900 Years Old Brought to Light—Built to the Memory of Thothmes III.

The world possesses another archaeological treasure. When, some months ago, in the valley of the Kings' tombs at Thebes, there was discovered a tomb, hitherto unviolated, containing a profusion of marvelous furniture, jewelry, vases, and carvings, as fresh as if they had been made yesterday, it was supposed that the land of the Pharaohs had yielded up ancient objects which could not be surpassed in beauty and in interest. But this discovery, wonderful as it was, has been far surpassed by the latest find in Egypt, the news of which has just been made known by C. T. Currelly, an Englishman, and Prof. E. Naville, a French savant, who are both working under the auspices of the Egypt exploration fund.

For the last two years the explorers employed by the fund, Prof. Naville, Mr. Currelly, Mr. Hall, and Mr. Ayrton, have been engaged in excavating the oldest temple that has so far been discovered at Thebes.

It was built in the eleventh dynasty, in the reign of King Menthuhetep Nebhelpet-Ra, who lived somewhere about 2,000 B. C. It was in the ninth and tenth dynasties that Thebes began to be transformed from an obscure little town on the upper Nile to the home of the Pharaohs, with magnificent palaces and temples of stupendous size and grandeur.

The temple which Prof. Naville and his associates have been laying bare is built on a platform, to which access is given by a ramp, and it is remarkable because it has in the middle a great block of masonry, the purpose of which is not known, but which, it is thought, was perhaps the base of a pyramid.

This year the efforts of the explorers have been directed toward the back part of the temple. They wished to see how it ended and how it was connected with the mountain at the end of the amphitheatre of Deir el bahari.

Early in the work Mr. Hall discovered the inclosure wall of the temple and found that the inclosure was interrupted by a court or wide avenue, lined on both sides by a single row of columns and directed toward the mountain. The rock had been cut open to make way for the avenue.

On the north side of the court, over the inclosure of the old temple, remains of a shrine of the eighteenth dynasty were found. The shrine was built in the reign of the great King Thothmes III. He lived 1,500 years before Christ, about 150 years before the exodus of the Jews to the promised land.

This was the King who in seventeen campaigns subdued Palestine and Syria, planted a tablet of victory alongside that of his father on the banks of the Euphrates, penetrated northern Mesopotamia, stormed Karkemish, on the Euphrates, planted garrisons and appointed governors everywhere, and when he died, after a reign of fifty-four years, was regularly receiving tribute from an empire extending from the upper waters of the Euphrates to the fourth cataract of the Nile. He was the greatest conqueror among the Pharaohs and the greatest military genius in his history of Egypt.

It was with the rich booty that Thothmes III. obtained that he embellished the temples of Egypt in a manner unequaled by any of his predecessors, though they had all been great builders. The gigantic temple of Ammon at Karnak was mostly built by him, and under his rule Egyptian art attained its greatest development.

LONDON'S LATEST FAD.

Chameleons Which Change Color to Suit Dress of Mistress.

The chameleon promises to be a favorite pet in London this year.

One great point in favor of the chameleon is its accommodating habit of taking on the hue of the color against which it is placed. Thus one chameleon will match up with gowns of half a dozen different shades. So, though fashionable, it is really quite an economical adornment.

Much, however, will depend upon the weather, for, like the summer girl, the chameleon only thrives when the sun is bright. To import them now would be almost madness, as a cold snap would rob them of their brightly colored little lives.

The chameleon is really the ideal pocket pet. It has a habit of sitting on its hind legs, and it has weird, staring eyes perched on the top of its head. To pursue natural history further, it may be pointed out that, the chameleon never goes far from home.

It has two little arms, with almost human-fingered hands, and with these it clings for an indefinite time to anything on which it is placed. For instance, if you put a chameleon on a plant it will cling to that plant until removed. Or if a lady attaches it to her gown it will cling passionately to the dress. It will never fall off, and it will never run away. In fact, it may be said that chameleons always become very much attached to their owner.

The species most recommended is the one hailing from Morocco, which is about five inches long, and has a fascinating habit of curling its tail between its legs and up its chest. One of these placed on its hind legs and provided with penholder as a walking-stick will sit for hours on end without moving.

The diet of the chameleon consists of meal-worms—with which your baker will surreptitiously supply you — and flies. The latter the chameleon catches for himself in the summer months by shooting out his comparatively immense tongue.

There is one sad aspect to the chameleon fashion. When the summer has flown and cold weather comes, the chameleon must die unless sheltered in a very hot plant house or sent south for the winter. One well-known marchioness, who became very fond of her chameleon, last summer sent it to Biskra during the winter months. At the present moment it is in excellent health, and will be restored to its devoted mistress when spring develops.

"Would you marry a man for money?"

"No," answered Miss Cayenne, "and yet I don't think I should regard a man as being especially desirable because of his poverty."

DOWN BY THE RIO GRANDE

By CURRAN RICHARD GREENLEY

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment

The long gray adobe walls of the hacienda lay bathed in the quiver of yellow light. Alleyne watched Margaret's face for a sign of truce, but the shadows came and went between the vines that draped the patio as the interminable Sabbath afternoon dragged away and Margaret remained buried in her book. "And all about a beggarly horse thief," he murmured to himself as he sat up straight and sent the pile of magazines crashing to the floor.

There was a look of consciousness about the back of that shapely brown head that held itself so persistently averted, but Alleyne deemed it wiser not to reopen the subject of Miguel.

Over in the corral things wore a deserted air. Two or three men lounged in the shade of the high wall. Alleyne yawned and looked at his watch and at a faint movement of the figure in the rocker. "Margaret, I"— Crack-ack-ack! Somewhere away to the west three shots rang out in rapid succession, a pause and then three more.

Over in the corral the lounging figures sprang to life, and an instant later three ponies were galloping in the direction of the shots. Alleyne dashed into the house, reappearing with the field glasses. "They've got him!" He was peering at a collection of black dots on the edge of the horizon.

"Got who?" Margaret laid her hand upon his arm.

"The mischief!" Alleyne jerked the glasses down. "I forgot you were here." Under her steady gaze his color changed. "Yes, if you will have the whole ghastly truth and cannot be persuaded to stay out of it, it's that scoundrel Miguel!"

Margaret shrank away from him with a low cry of distress. The look in her eyes went straight to Alleyne's heart, and his voice softened to a tender pleading as he tried to draw her to him. "Little woman, you cannot be the judge of these matters, and you cannot shield a horse thief. I could have told you this morning, but I preferred to let you think me a bit hard on Miguel than to shock you with the truth. There have been some queer happenings lately both here at the Alaho and at Jose's. Last night a bunch of Jose's best ponies came up missing, and the boys have been trailing him since sunrise."

"John Alleyne, do you mean to let those savages of yours murder a man here on the Alaho just for the sake of a few bronchos?" Margaret faced him sternly, and Alleyne lost his hard kept patience.

"You forget that there are men's laws to be considered as well as God's, and out here on the fringe of the world the code knows no greater crime than lifting a broncho, and the lifting of many bronchos aggravates the case. It is not a question in which my wife may meddle." And Alleyne strode toward the corral, while Margaret picked up the glasses.

The wind blown stretch of bare brown mesa told her nothing of the tragedy brewing behind its crest. She watched Alleyne until her eyes ached.

A clatter of hoofs and a voice calling her name brought her to the door, where a half broken cayuse snorted and pawed. Astride of him sat Bright Eyes, Miguel's Indian wife, the brown baby swung to her back. There was a queer ashen pallor on the woman's stolid face as she slid from the pony's back, one hand clutching at the deerskin thong that held the papoose. "White man got Miguel. Miguel he die." Here she pointed to her throat and made a gasping sound. "White squaw much hurree. Miguel he no die. Sabe?"

Margaret cowered before the awful pleading in those savage eyes. "Not a question in which my wife may meddle," John had said, but there was no time to weigh scruples, and five minutes later a strangely assorted pair rode into the face of the setting sun, and the rough little cayuse strove to keep pace with the swinging stride of the Hindoo mare. Far ahead a black dot moved against the sky that Margaret knew to be Alleyne. A glimmer of consequences flashed across her mind, but the sweet young mouth only grew a little firmer as she struck the trail of many horses and knew the goal to be in sight.

On and on, sagebrush and prickly pear, the yellow sand beneath and overhead the blue melting into the evening's violet crown—nature's own smile upon the scene that swept into view, where men and horses were grouped around the impassive figure wrapped in the ragged poncho that lounged in careless grace against the white scarred trunk of a large mesquite. Margaret's eyes went instinctively to the lariat knotted about the bronze throat. It was not the first time that Miguel had felt it there, but Rusty Pete himself held the end of this one.

The voices hushed instantly, and to a man the wide sombreros were lifted as Margaret slipped from the saddle and stood looking from one dark face to another. An awful sense of self engulfed her, and in another moment Miguel's cause would have been lost. But the grim set of Alleyne's mouth as he started toward her gave her the courage that is born of cowardice. Before he could reach her she had broken through the circle to Miguel's side, and the sun struck along the barrel of a revolver leveled straight at Rusty Pete. "Drop that rope!" she cried.

Pete let go as if the lariat were red-hot iron; then she wheeled to face the ring of Miguel's accusers. "Men of the Alaho, you are many. This man is but one, bound and helpless, but the first man that moves toward him does so at his peril. If you persist in taking him it will be over my body!"

Alleyne's eyes were blazing, but not a man stirred for a long moment, an interminable time, it seemed to the woman, who stood between that ring of fierce faces and their prey.

"God in heaven, will it last forever?" Her brain was reeling and the black figures danced in a blood red mist as earth rose in waves beneath her. The silent battle was almost done when a wild yell from the darkening mesa scattered the circle to right and left as the man from Jose's galloped in. "Cut that rope!" yelled the leader as he bore down upon the group under the mesquite.

Margaret staggered blindly into Alleyne's arms, seeing nothing but the flash of Pete's knife as he cut the thongs, then utter blackness until she awoke to the white walls of her own room.

Alleyne was bending over her. There was something distinctly apologetic in his attitude. Margaret grasped her advantage. "Well?" Her tone was tentative. Alleyne settled himself on the side of the bed, laughing a bit uneasily.

"I suppose you have the best of me, little woman. Your dramatic entrance upon the scene saved the day or we would have sent Miguel on the long ride on another man's count. Jose's men would have come too late."

"Who did it?"

"One of the greasers. Miguel had been over to the post loading up on fire water, as usual, and the greaser ran across him just about the time he discovered that the boys were close on his trail. Things were getting pretty warm for him when he persuaded Miguel to take charge of the ponies while he skipped out. Naturally the boys did not stop to question Miguel when they found him heading away from the ranch and the proof trotting alongside. It would have been all over for Miguel but for the fact that the greaser met a man who had good reasons for wanting to find him—and found him. Explanations came later, and when the greaser realized that a few bronchos more or less couldn't count against a man who had only about twenty minutes to live he set things in motion to reach Miguel. That is all the story."

The south wind rustled the vines in the patio. Margaret looked down to the grove of mesquite just beyond the big corral, where a brown baby rolled in the dust at the door of Miguel's tepee. Alleyne's eyes followed hers. He understood.

A Good Lacquer.

It is often the case that one finds it convenient to have at hand a first class lacquer with which to coat instruments, ornaments or other articles, to add either to their durability or finish. The following recipe will be found reliable and not specially expensive: One pint of best rectified alcohol, two drams each of saffron and Spanish annotto, an ounce of ground tumeric. Put these ingredients together and place them where there is a moderate heat. Leave them for several days, shaking them occasionally. When nearly dissolved add three ounces of the best seed lac in rough powder. Let this stand until the lac is all dissolved, shaking it frequently. If the color is to be a bright yellow, use less annotto; if a deep orange, use more. Put the mixture on while warm. Apply with a brush as one would use paint. The number of coats depends entirely upon the article and the purpose for which it is used. For blue lacquer add prussian or aniline blue to white shellac varnish made very thin. In making lacquer take great care not to use too much seed lac, as the mixture is likely to dry unevenly or in streaks.

A Veil With a History.

The bridal veil is evidently of eastern origin, being a relic of the bridal canopy held over the heads of the bride and bridegroom. Among the Anglo-Saxons a similar custom existed, but if the bride was a widow it was dispensed with. According to Sarum usage, a fine linen cloth was laid upon the heads of the bride and bridegroom and was not removed until the benediction had been said.

The old British custom was to use nature's veil unadorned—that is, the long hair of the bride, which was so worn by all brides, royal, noble and simple. Only then did every one behold the tresses of maidenhood in their entirety and for the last time, as after marriage they were neatly dressed on the head. Among some the tresses were cut and carefully stowed away on a woman becoming a wife. It was customary in Russia for village brides to shear their locks on returning from church.

The Precept of Idealists.

Listen to the old men seated upon the benches in the towns or during their walks in the parks. Listen to those who are in the midst of life, in the thick of bitter conflicts and heart sickening struggles. Listen to the women who have been married these several years. What discouraging remarks! Vanity of vanities! All these people have filed their reports, and, worn out, without the courage to put the ideal into life, it ends in inevitable and horrible bankruptcy. But in all this it is not life which is at fault. It is man. You must supply what is missing. Let us, then, to the professors of the ideal. Their precept is very simple. It resolves itself into this: "Be prepared for difficulties, but be faithful in the little things, and you will attain the great ones." It is by the very little steps that one rises slowly to the summits.—Charles Wagner in Harper's Bazar.

TRENTON ROUTE IS FAVORED

ROYAL COMMISSION REPORT IN REFERENCE TO TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

The report of the Royal Commission on Transportation, was brought down in the House at Ottawa on Tuesday.

It is of special interest to the section contiguous to the Trent Canal, because it recommends the completion of the work, the clause dealing with it being as follows; "The port of Midland should also serve as the port for the Trent Valley Waterway on which the Government of Canada has already expended between five and six million dollars, thus having made its construction a settled policy and your Commission would recommend that this waterway be pressed to an early completion, and that it be by way of the Severn at the Georgian Bay end, and the Trent on the Bay of Quinte, so that its terminals will be in protected waters whereby greater safety will be given to the somewhat smaller boats and barges which will have to be used on this route."

Notes From the Dock.

The steamer Ella Ross came up from Picton this morning and went up the bay as far as Trenton.

The schooner Echo laden with grain left to-day for Kingston.

The schooner Madcap is being ladened with fruit trees which will be distributed at various bay ports.

The schooner McBride has been sold to a party who resides at Oshawa. She is being fitted out preparatory to going away.

The steamers in connection with the Richelieu Navigation Company will commence to run next week.

The steamer Alexandria will be here to-morrow and will proceed across the lake.

The steamer Varuna is still upon the ways at Trenton.

Mr. Arthur Watch Is Safe.

Amongst those reported missing in San Francisco appeared the name of Mr. Arthur Watch, son of the Rev. C. W. Watch, a former pastor of Holloway street church in this city. It now transpires that the young man is safe, as the parents, who reside at Shelburne, Ont., have received a communication from him. The banking institution in which he was employed, was destroyed.

Hastings County Boy Watched.

Dr. Clare, son of Mr. James Clare, of Hungerford Township, who had been for some time connected with the Eastern Hospital at Brockville, has resigned to enter upon new duties in connection with the Woodstock Hospital. On Wednesday evening Dr. Clare was presented at Brockville with a gold watch fob and seal, an opal stick pin and a Masonic ring by the hospital staff. Dr. Clare is at present spending a few days in Tweed prior to leaving for his new field of labor.

Former Resident Dead.

The remains of Mrs. Mary Ann Maiden who died in Montreal on Wednesday, arrived here this afternoon for burial. Deceased, who was an elderly lady, was for some time a resident of this city but subsequently removed to Montreal, where she lived with her grandson. Mr Joseph Maiden, of this city, is a son of the deceased.

A Suggestion.

The following has been received;

To the Editor of The Intelligencer;

Belleville, April 26th, 1906.

Mr. Editor,—Do you not think it a good idea of asking the Sunday schools of our city to give one Sunday collection to the San Francisco children for a Sunday school to those little boys and girls who are deprived of everything in that which is a blessing to us who have been spared from that awful calamity. Will you please insert it in your paper and ask the boys and girls of our city to give something to gladden the hearts of San Francisco Sunday school children.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE HOLY CITY" TO-NIGHT.

The advertised engagement of Clarence Bennett's great play, "The Holy City," which comes to the Carman to-night, is well worthy of the attention it excites. Men will ever differ in opinions, but truth is acknowledged even when convictions regret its brilliant uses. It is difficult to conceive of anything but good coming from performances of "The Holy City," hardened sinners cannot dispute its facts, humble sinners will accept its teachings, and sanctified saints may gain instead of losing if they absorb the play from the rising of the curtain until it closes to view the artist-author's dramatic and picturesque story of Jerusalem, its people, its sorrows and its joys. The second season of this remarkable drama is great in its achievements.

Conditions Are Not So Bad in San Francisco.

San Francisco, April 26. — Conditions in the city are not so bad as at first supposed. The homes of more than 150,000 are standing, practically uninjured. There still remain the great shipyards at the Potrero, the Pacific Mail docks, and the busy district immediately surrounding them, the stock yards at South San Francisco, the wharves along the water front, the factories along the water front from Mission Creek to Hunter's point, the Mint, the post-office, and the large retail district on Fillmore and Devisadero streets. After all, a big city remains in San Francisco.

The Chinese Consul-General registers a kick. He says that the soldiers have been collecting graft from his countrymen. When the first crowd of refugees was taken from the ruined district the soldiers made the Chinamen pay toll, usually $5 a head, to be guided to the ferry. He makes a further charge that the military guard was withdrawn from Chinatown yesterday, allowing crowds of white toughs to poke through the ruins and help themselves to the stocks of Chinese stores. He said that a large amount of property was stolen in this way, while the Chinese stood by and took it all in. Being Chinese and in California, they had to.

Bay of Quinte Clerical Union.

The semi-annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Clerical Union was held in Trenton on Tuesday and Wednesday. A large number of clergymen were in attendance.

A report of the conference held in Belleville, between the Methodists and Anglicans, was presented.

The Rector of Trenton, Rev. Mr. Armstrong, read an interesting paper on the Canons of 1604. The Rev. Mr. Armatage, of Picton, gave a paper on The Titles or Names Given to our Lord in the Epistle to the Ephesians, showing reasons for the different names. His paper was much enjoyed. On Tuesday evening service was held in St. George's Church, conducted by Rev. Mr. Armstrong, assisted by Rev. Mr. Archbold and Rev. Mr. Dickinson. The Rev. Mr. Costigan preached on the incarnation.

On Wednesday, 7.30 a.m., there was a celebration of the Holy Communion, and at 9.30 the Litany was sung by the Rector.

The next meeting will be held at Deseronto.

The Rev. Canon Bogert was chairman of the meeting.

Safe and Thankful.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer;

Dear Sir,—Mrs. Levi Anderson has just received word from San Francisco concerning the safety of her sister and family, after the disaster there. For the benefit of many anxious friends, would you be kind enough to publish a portion of the letter, which is as follows;

San Francisco, April 20, '06.

Mr. Dear Sister, — You have, no doubt, heard of the terrible disaster which occurred here recently. The reports are all true and more. However, we are all safe with our lives and are in a tent with soldiers to protect us, and government supplies, so we are happy and thankful.

Lovingly, your sister,

M. E. MINAKER.

AS SMOOTH AS A BILLIARD TABLE.

Your comfort on a railway journey very largely depends upon the roadbed of the route you select. No matter how luxurious the coaches, or how much personal attention you receive from the employees, you cannot be comfortable if jolted and jarred by a poor and irregular roadbed. On the Lake Shore Railway no expense has been spared to make a roadbed as nearly perfect as the most skilful engineering could build, and as a result, throughout the entire length and breadth of the system the right of way is as smooth as a billiard table. No jolts or jars, nor dust nor dirt. This perfection of service extends throughout the entire system. Lake Shore trains are the most luxurious, they are equipped with every comfort and convenience and are run at highest speed and in safety. They run on time. For your own sake you should see that your ticket reads "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway." Write for full information about rates and routes to J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N. Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, O., or W. J. Lynch, Passenger Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

BEARS IN CANADA.

ENGLISH M. P.'s FEARED TO SEND CHILDREN TO NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John, N. B., April 26.—"It is a shame to send out helpless little children to New Brunswick, that wilderness, where they won't be able to go out without being eaten by bears."

This is a statement made by four members in the British House, and published in different London newspapers, in opposition to plans advocated by Mrs. Elinor C. Close to bring to Canada several thousand homeless children. Mrs. Close is here. The first party of 12 girls, all under 11 years of age, will sail for Canada this week.

Sipprell, principal of Columbia College, New Westminster, and Rev. Principal Riddell, of Alberta College, Edmonton."

Mr. Shorey is a former pastor of Holloway St. Methodist church, and is well known in this city. His many friends will be glad to hear of the honor being bestowed upon him.

Ruri-Diaconal Chapter.

The spring meeting of the Ruri-diaconal Chapter of Hastings was held in St. Thomas' Church parish on Monday, a good number of the clergy of the deanery being present.

The Rev. Rural Dean Beamish was chairman, and the Rev. A. L. Geen, secretary.

After the routine business was transacted reports from the several parishes were presented.

The Rev. Mr. Archbold read a very excellent and charming paper on the Epistle to Philemon, couched in beautiful English, in which he brought our truths not apparent on the ordinary reading.

At 8 p.m., evening service was held in St. Thomas' church, conducted by Rev. Mr. Beamish. The Lessons were read by Rev. Messrs. Ffrench and Young.

Rev. A. L. Geen preached on the Unity and Order of the church, viewing it as God's Household. His text was St. Luke, 12; 42.

On Tuesday morning, at 8 o'clock there was Holy Communion, the Rev. Mr. Archbold being celebrant. Morning prayer was said at 10 a.m., after which the chapter reassembled and completed their business part of the meeting.

Tricked the Thief.

Some idea of the credulous nature of the Galicians, and the extent to which their actions are controlled by superstition, may be formed from a recent occurrence at a police station in Winnipeg. A Galician had been robbed of $150 at a party of his countrymen, given in his honor, after he returned from work on railway construction. He informed the police, and Detective Seel, himself a Galician, who was educated for the priesthood, and one of the cleverest men in the city's secret service, was given charge of the case. He arrested all, who had been at the party, nearly fifty in number, and ranged them along the wall of the station. He then secured an old iron pot, well covered with soot, which he placed on the table bottom up. On the top of it he placed a crucifix with a lighted candle on each side of it, the usual manner in which they are placed when Greek Churchmen take the oath. He then told them to march past the crucifix, and each man to draw his finger downwards through the soot, explaining to them that when the guilty man drew his finger through the soot the candles would immediately be extinguished. The men then slowly filed past the crucifix, and when they had all resumed their places against the wall he ordered them to hold up their hands. On examining them Seel found that one man had no soot on his finger. His superstition had betrayed his guilt. The culprit was ordered to hand over the money, and on protesting his innocence he was seized and searched. The wad was found in one of his socks and returned to its rightful owner, who was so glad to recover it that he refused to prosecute.

THE STRENUOUS LIFE

RESULTS IN STOMACH TROUBLES AND PHYSICAL BREAKDOWN.

The strenuous life of modern times forces people to rush through their meals hastily, hurrying from the table in the mad rush after the almighty dollar.

The result is incomplete digestion, inflammation of the walls of the stomach, and lack of secretion of the gastric juices, ending in chronic stomach trouble and nervous breakdown.

How much better would it be to eat more slowly, cure the stomach trouble with Mi-o-na and soon regain perfect health. The headaches, sleeplessness, nervous troubles, pain after eating, specks before the eyes, backaches, melancholy and gloomy foreboding would be soon overcome and perfect health and strength would be restored.

Each box of Mi-o-na sells for 50 cents, and is invaluable to anyone who suffers with indigestion, nervousness or weak stomach.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

McINTOSH BROS.

FORTY-THREE MAJORITY

License Bill Gets Through With the Greatest Ever.

Rathbun Paired as Government Supporter and Labrosse and Racine Stay Away—Hon. G. W. Ross Dislikes Two Points in the Education Bill, But He Did Not Challenge a Vote—Bill Through Committee.

Toronto, April 27.—Hon. G. W. Ross, in the House yesterday, moved in amendment to the license bill:

"That the said bill be not now read a third time, but be referred back to the committee of the whole House, with instructions to amend sub-sections 4, 5 and 6 of section 25, by substituting the words "a majority" for the words "three-fifths" wherever the latter occur in the said section."

He supported his motion in a brief speech, and was replied to by Mr. Hanna, after which the vote was taken on the amendment, which was defeated by 64 to 21—a Government majority of 43.

Mr. Rathbun paired with a Liberal, so his vote must be reckoned with the Conservatives. Messrs. Racine and Labrosse, Liberals, would not pair on the license bill.

The third reading of the bill was then carried unanimously, the Opposition declining to ask that the same division be recorded.

Third Readings.

The following bills were read a third time in the Legislature yesterday: To amend the Pharmacy Act (Downey); to amend the County Courts Act (Foy); respecting the Township of Eastnor (Bowman).

The Education Bill.

A discussion took place in committee on Dr. Pyne's education bill. Mr. Ross considered the appointment of a superintendent of education as another instance of a Minister shifting responsibility on some one else, and confusion would be created and no good purpose served.

Dr. Pyne, in replying, said there had been great unrest in educational matters, and quoted President Loudon and Principal Grant to the effect that the system was disjointed and disorganized.

Mr. Harcourt combatted the idea that disqietitude and unrest was a bad sign. Rather, he took it, as a healthy indication of interest and desire for advancement. As to the remarks of President Loudon, Mr. Harcourt asserted that there was 100 men in the province who knew more about educational institutions than he did.

The Premier said that, assuming the system was good, the time must come for a change. The duties of a deputy minister and a superintendent were as wide apart as the poles. The latter would be an expert saturated with all possible knowledge of the educational system. He would be able to suggest where defects were and the means by which remedies could be applied.

Mr. Graham argued that if a superintendent was appointed he should not be a high school inspector, but a man familiar with public schools.

The whole bill went through with very little criticism, Mr. Ross' principle objections being to the constitution of the consultative council, and to the appointment of a superintendent of education. He did not, however, carry these objections to the point of moving against the clauses. Mr. Whitney said the Public Schools Act would be taken up to-day.

The Soo Guarantee.

Mr. Matheson announced that the guarantee of $2,000,000 of the bonds of the Soo industries would expire on Tuesday next. He had every reason to hope that the province would be relieved, but provision would have to be made to renew all or a portion. He introduced a bill which was put through all the stages, providing for the renewal. In case the whole loan was not repaid the Government would hold the securities of the Algoma Central Railway, but would release the other securities, consisting of first mortgage bonds of the Lake Superior Co., or stock in proportion to the amount taken up.

Mr. Matheson will go to New York Sunday night to arrange with the Canadian Improvement Co. and the Morton Trust Co. for the payment of the loan.

License Bill Law To-day.

The Lieutenant-Governor will attend at the Legislature at 2.30 this afternoon, to give his assent to the supply bill.

Mr. Whitney made the announcement in the House last night.

"I suppose the license bill will be assented to?" enquired ex-Premier Ross.

"Yes, and any others ready," was Mr. Whitney's remark.

The license bill goes into effect the moment the official stamp is put on it.

There is very little chance of winding up the session before May 12.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Unchanged—Lambs Higher, Other Stocks Steady at Buffalo.

London, April 26.—Cattle are quoted at 11c to 12c per lb.; refrigerator beef, 8c to 8¼c per lb.; sheep, dressed, 15c to 16c per lb.; lambs, 17c, dressed weight.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, April 26.—Receipts of live stock as reported by the railways since Tuesday were 77 carloads, composed of 1174 cattle, 1210 hogs, 220 sheep and 998 calves.

Exporters.

Only a limited number of shipping cattle were offered as such to-day, not more than two or three loads, all told. Prices ranged from $4.75 to $5 and one lot of 6 sold at $5.15 and one load at $5.20, but they were picked cattle. Bulls sold at $3.00 to $4 per cwt.

Butchers.

Butchers' cattle sold more readily than on Tuesday, owing to the fact of there being a few outside buyers on the market. Picked lots sold as high as $4.90; loads of good at $4.60 to $4.85; medium butchers' at $4.30 to $4.50; good cows at $3.50 to $4.25; common cows at $2.50 to $3; butcher bulls at $3 to $3.50 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. Murby reports a fairly good enquiry this week for short-keep feeders of the right kind. This class, if anything, sold higher. There is also a good enquiry for good breedy thin steers, weighing from 750 to 900 lbs., which kind are none too plentiful; all other kinds are slow of sale.

Mr. Murby bought about 300 head this week at the following quotations: best short-keeps, 1100 to 1200 lbs., at $4.75 to $4.90; best feeders, 1000 to 1100 lbs., at $4.40 to $4.70; best feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $4.10 to $4.40; best feeders, 800 to 900 lbs., at $3.90 to $4.10; best stockers, 500 to 700 lbs., at $3.50 to $3.65; common stockers, 3c per lb.

Milch Cows.

About 20 milch cows and springers sold from $30 to $55 each. There is a good demand for choice quality cows, of which there is not enough coming forward.

Veal Calves.

The market is being flooded with a lot of miserable trash called "bobs," many of which it is a shame to kill. They are being shipped in from dairy districts. Prices are quoted at $3 to $6 per cwt., but choice new milk-fed calves are worth $6.50 to $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run was light, but prices were not any better than on Tuesday. Export ewes, $4.50 to $5 per cwt.; bucks, $3.50 to $3.75 per cwt.; yearling lambs, unclipped, at $6 to $6.50; clipped at $5.50 per cwt.; spring lambs at $3 to $6 each.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reported the market unchanged at $7.15 for selects and $6.90 for lights and fats; sows, $4 to $5 per cwt.; stags, $2.50 to $3.50 per cwt.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET.

East Buffalo, April 26.—Cattle—Receipts, 300 head; steady; prime steers, $5.25 to $5.65; shipping, $4.65 to $5.15; butchers', $4.25 to $5; heifers, $3.75 to $5; cows, $3 to $4.50.

Veals—Receipts, 150 head; active; $4.50 to $6.

Hogs—Receipts, 1700 head; slow and steady; heavy, mixed and Yorkers, $6.80 to $6.85; light do., $6.70 to $6.75; pigs, $6.50 to $6.60; roughs, $6 to $6.15; stags, $4.25 to $4.75; dairies, $6.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 8400 head; active, sheep steady; lambs, 5c to 15c higher; lambs, $6.25 to $7.65; yearlings, $6.25 to $6.50; wethers, $6 to $6.25; ewes, $5.50 to $5.75; sheep, mixed, $3 to $5.75; clipped lambs, $5 to $6.18.

NEW YORK LIVE STOCK.

New York, April 26.—Beeves—Receipts, 398. A few cars changed hands at steady prices. Exports, 801 cattle and 139 sheep; none to-morrow.

Calves—Receipts, 228 head; trade limited but prices firm; prime to choice veals sold at $5.75 to $5.95.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 1975; steady on sheep; good lambs firm; others steady; spring lambs weak; medium clipped sheep, $4 to $5; spring lambs, $5 to $5.25 per head.

Hogs—Receipts, 1819; nominally weak; no sales reported.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, April 26.—Cattle—Receipts, 5300; 10c to 15c higher; common to prime steers, $4 to $6.35; cows, $3.25 to $4.60; heifers, $2.75 to $5.25; bulls, $2.60 to $4.25; calves, $2.75 to $5.75; stockers and feeders, $2.75 to $4.80.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,000; steady; choice to prime heavy, $6.45 to $6.55; medium to good heavy, $6.40 to $6.45; butchers' weights, $6.40 to $6.50; good to choice heavy mixed, $6.40 to $6.45; packing, $5.75 to $6.45.

Sheep—Receipts, 16,000; market for sheep steady; lambs strong to 10c higher; sheep, $4.50 to $6.40; yearlings, $5.25 to $6.25; lambs, $5 to $7.35.

Sentenced For Life.

Quebec, April 27.—The jury in the case of Gunner John Berry, charged with the murder of Gunner Hall, on the Citadel, in November last, brought in a verdict last evening of manslaughter. Judge Bosse sentenced Berry to imprisonment for life.

Russian Crop Prospects.

St. Petersburg, April 27.—Reports from correspondents throughout Southern Russia and the Caucasus show in general a thoroughly favorable outlook for crop conditions and the prospects of a good yield of grain for the coming year.

HOPED TO MAKE MONEY

But Secrecy of Transactions Was to Avoid Odium.

Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co's Directors' Stock Transactions Subject of Probe in Insurance Commission Inquiry—Manager Junkin Explains Many Items and the Expedients Resorted to For Concealment of Certain Performances.

Toronto, April 27.—The connection of Mackenzie & Mann with the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co., the loan of one hundred thousand dollars to the railway firm, and the various stock transfers firm, and the various cmfw transfers which marked the history of the company during the period of the amalgamation of the Manufacturers' Life and the Temperance & General Life Insurance Co., was the subject of special inquiry before the Insurance Commission yesterday morning.

The control of the two companies, the Manufacturers' Life and the Temperance & General, passed from the hands of Mr. Geo. Gooderham to those of Hon. Geo. W. Cox, thence to those of C. J. McCuaig and William Strachan, and finally came back to Mr. Junkin, who divided it among some ten persons.

Stock's Many Owners.

Mr. Tilley followed the course of the large block of stock which meant the control, first, of both companies and latterly of the reorganized concern, to the following final distribution of shares: Lloyd Harris 1,350, H. M. Pellatt 1,000, Wm. Strachan 1,078, S. G. Beatty 1,000, William Mackenzie 2,000, D. D. Mann 2,000, McLaughlin and Johnston 400, J. F. Junkin 323. These made a total of 9,146 shares.

Railway Men's Big Loan.

In the transfer securities ledger, under the heading Mackenzie, Mann & Co., date Dec. 1, 1902, appeared an item, "To loan, $125,000." The Mackenzie firm at that time held $185,000 in stock. There was another item dated Dec. 26—"By cash, $127,580.05."

"That was the repayment of the loan," explained Mr. Junkin.

"What about interest?"

"Five hundred dollars interest is included in that."

"Was that cheque deposited?"

"I presume so."

Mr. McLaughlin promised to produce the bank-book to prove the deposit. "Anything to assist the commission," he added.

Referring to another entry of Jan. 8, 1903, indicating a loan of $125,195.55, to Mackenzie & Mann, Mr. Junkin explained that this was on the same security as the old loan and for about the same amount. The securities were 200 bonds of Inverness Railway stock, at $500 each par value, aggregating $100,000; also 4,000 shares of Manufacturers' Life stock, par value about $80,000. The loan was paid off in December, 1902, possibly on the understanding that a new loan would be made to Mackenzie & Mann in 1904. To the best of his recollection that was the case. He did not recollect what bank Mackenzie & Mann's cheque paying the loan was on.

The minute book showed that the loan was approved by the directors, and it was paid up before the year was up.

Without Interest.

Another loan was made on Jan. 25, 1904, of $128,959, one of the amounts referred to in the Blackader's report at the department.

Mr. Junkin did not think they charged up interest against Mackenzie & Mann for the intervals between Dec. 26, 1902, and Jan. 8, 1903, and between Dec. 27, 1903, and Jan. 25, 1904.

The books also tended to show that on March 3, 1904, the Manufacturers' Life advanced a private loan of $11,000 to William Mackenzie, on the security of Inverness bonds. Later, this loan was transferred to the account of Mackenzie, Mann & Co., Limited, on the rearrangement of securities. The entire loan was paid off in three payments during the year 1904.

Mr. Junkin admitted that he knew these securities were not satisfactory to the Government, but it was a perfectly safe transaction.

The Transfer For Transfer.

At the afternoon session, Mr. Tilley asked the witness if he had the documents showing the transactions of the Mackenzie and Mann loan.

"They are bringing these up."

Mr. Tilley then read the agreement for transfer of Manufacturers' Life stock from Gooderham to Cox. This agreement had been made on Dec. 1, 1898. Charles Cox purchased from Gooderham 3,106 shares of capital stock of Manufacturers' Life and 250 shares of guarantee fund of the Temperance and General Life Co. For the first lot he paid $140,000, and for the second $132,000. Cox at that time had held 2,732 shares of capital stock, and 550 shares of Temperance and General. The agreement stipulated further that the sum of $36,000 would be paid on execution, and the balance in semi-annual payments extending over a period of four years with interest at 6 per cent. per annum.

Letters under date of May 30, 1904, written by Junkin to Mackenzie and Mann, were read by Mr. Tilley.

Correspondence relating to the loan to Mackenzie and Mann for 1905 was again produced, and Junkin gave evidence as to the dates of certain memos.

A Cheque From Pellatt.

In the bank book of 1902 a cheque for $128,000 appeared. It was marked Pellatt.

"Was that sent to you from Pellatt?" asked counsel.

"Yes."

"Do you remember that?"

"I remember it."

"You did not remember it this morning?"

"No."

"Can you tell me now any more about this than you did this morning?"

"Not any more than we received the cheque from Pellatt."

When Mr. Junkin was asked by counsel if he understood all the facts of different transactions, loans, and cheques put through in connection with the loan, he admitted that he knew very little about them.

A Deal Repeated.

"In reference to the paying back of the loan in 1903 and issuing it again in 1904, it came to the attention of the insurance department, did it not?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"Yes."

"Was not the same deal put through a year before and no notice was taken of it?"

"Yes."

Unauthorized Security.

Mr. Tilley then took up a loan of $11,000, dated April, 1903, given to Wm. Mackenzie, through Pellatt and Pellatt, for which Manufacturers' Life were given 30 bonds of Inverness Railway and Coal Co. with par value of $15,000 and market value of $11,000 or 73 1-2.

"This was unauthorized security, of course?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"Yes."

"Did you know this was not exactly right under the act?"

"It was probably technically wrong under the act."

"You would not put through a loan on unauthorized securities with anyone but a director, would you?"

"Yes, anything as good as Mr. Mackenzie and the margin of the security as large as it is there, it might be put through."

One Other Instance.

"Did you loan money to anyone else in this way?"

"Yes. A small loan to F. Sanderson, the actuary of the Canada Life."

"Any more?"

"No one else."

"If the three men who negotiated this loan of $11,000, Mackenzie, Mann and Pellatt, had not been on the board would the company have gave them money on such security?"

"I don't think so, but I think, at that time, anyone of good substantial financial standing might put through a deal like this, but they wouldn't do it now." (Laughter.)

The accounts of the Crow's Nest Co. and Dominion Coal Co. were next explained by the witness.

The evidence given when the Manufacturers' Life was the subject of enquiry in Ottawa was practically duplicated when the matter of the Prudential Securities Co., the holding company formed by the fourteen directors of the Manufacturers' Life for the purpose of holding the unauthorized investments of the company came up.

A Colored Resolution.

"The minute which approves of the sale of 1,800 shares Dominion Coal at 126 1-2 and 202, Crow's Nest at 300 1-4 to Mackenzie and Mann, the witness admitted was a colored resolution. He considered that it was simply a nominal sale, and not done intentionally to make a good appearance."

"There was a loss on the stock at the end of 1902, was there not?"

"Yes."

"Did the directors consider themselves responsible?"

"It was not discussed then."

"When did the department call your attention to this sort of business?"

"In 1903."

"It had been subject of discussion at a meeting of the board of directors re investing in securities like C. P. R. Crow's Nest, etc., was it not?"

"Yes! One of the members suggested that if stock went down the directors would be personally responsible and if it went up, the company would take the profits."

The operation of December, 1903, was described by the witness.

Secrecy to Avoid Odium.

"At the time of the buying of stocks," said Mr. Junkin, "we went into the game with the sole idea of making money. So when stocks went down, at the end of the year the directors realized their position, and to save the odium which would result if it were generally known that the directors' stock dabbling had proven a failure, the deals did not appear in the annual financial statement. As far as he was aware no one had been asked to relieve the company of the stocks.

"If any single one of the directors had made the slightest objection the deal would not have gone through," said Mr. Junkin.

"Was this manipulation brought before the directors?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"No."

"Then the directors did not get a chance to object?"

"No."

"The duties of the various committees of the Manufacturers' Life were being explained by the witness when the commission adjourned.

SEND TROOPS TO EGYPT.

British Troops at Crete Are Ordered Forward to Check Turkey Should She Prove Offensive.

Cairo, Egypt, April 27.—A battery of the Royal Horse Artillery and three companies of the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers now forming part of the British contingent of the international forces in the Island of Crete, have been ordered here to reinforce the British garrison in Egypt. The first battalion of the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers is expected here shortly from Belfast, Ireland.

Deemed Advisable.

London, April 27.—Foreign Secretary Grey replying to a question in the House of Commons yesterday, said that the British garrison in Egypt was being strengthened at the suggestion of Lord Cromer, the British agent there, who considered the step to be desirable in view of the unrest created by the action of the Turkish Government in connection with the Tabah boundary incident.

The report that orders had been received at Aldershot for the mobilization of the first division of Gen. French's army corps in view of serious development in South Africa or elsewhere, is unfounded. No troops have been ordered to prepare for foreign service in the near future.

King, Czar and Kaiser.

London, April 27.—King Edward, Emperor Nicholas and Emperor William will meet at Darmstadt, capital of the Grand Duchy of Hesse, during the first week in September, according to The Pall Mall Gazette, which adds that the Russian Emperor and Empress will leave Russian at the end of August for a long visit to the Grand Duke of Hesse.

Whose Key Unlocked the Drawer?

Here is a true story told by a doctor. This doctor had a patient, a brother physician, who was ill of a disease no one has ever cured yet. The sick man realized that his case was hopeless, and he knew, too, that before he died he would go through horrible convulsions. He begged his friend to kill him in order to spare his wife the sight of anything so unforgettably hideous, and the physician, bound by his code of ethics, refused. The sick man begged his wife to let him have his revolver, but she refused. The physician locked the drawer of the bureau in which it lay and gave the wife the key. Two days later the sick man shot himself, and the revolver he used was his own. He had unlocked the drawer.

"We found the key in it," said the doctor. "It was not the one I had given to the wife. I took it, and when I had a chance I went quietly into the room occupied by the man's mother. The key exactly fitted the lock of her bureau. That's all I know, except that the mother came out of the house with her bonnet and cloak on two minutes before her son shot himself."

Half Deaf People.

"If you are deaf in one ear," said the boilermaker, "I don't care about giving you a job."

"Why?" asked the applicant.

"Because you can't tell what direction sounds come from; hence in a place like this you would be in great danger."

"How do you know I can't tell what direction sounds come from?" the applicant demanded.

"No person deaf in one ear," replied the boilermaker, "can do so. A man deaf in one ear will look behind him if a gun goes off on his right. He will look up in the air if a child shrieks at his feet. He will look wildly in front of him if a locomotive whistles in his rear. A boiler shop is no place for such a man."

"I knew I was like this," said the applicant, "but I didn't know all half deaf people were."

"They all are," said the boilermaker, "and my shop is no place for them."

All a Matter of Doubt Anyway.

A young man from the south who a few years ago was so fortunate as to be enabled to enter the law offices of a well known New York firm was first intrusted with a very simple case. He was asked by the late James C. Carter, then a member of the firm, to give an opinion in writing. When this was submitted it was observed by Mr. Carter that, with the touching confidence of a neophyte, the young southerner had begun with the expression, "I am clearly of opinion."

When this caught his eye he smiled and said:

"My dear young friend, never state that you are clearly of opinion on a law point. The most you can hope to discover is the preponderance of the doubt."—Success.

Out of the Public.

When I was a very little boy, writes Sir William Gregory in his autobiography, my grandfather, who was then undersecretary for Ireland, took me to the chief secretary's room in Dublin castle and formally introduced me to Lord Melbourne.

After I had been with him for some little time he said, "Now, my boy, is there anything here you would like?"

"Yes," I answered, pointing to a very large stick of sealing wax.

"That's right," said Lord Melbourne, pressing on me a bundle of pens; "begin life early. All these things belong to the public, and your business must always be to get out of the public as much as you can."

Talent.

The world is always ready to receive talent with open arms. Very often it does not know what to do with genius. Talent is a docile creature. It bows its head meekly while the world slips the collar over it. It backs into the shafts like a lamb.—Holmes.

FOR PROOF OF SEDITION.

Paris Police Make Sensational Search of Royalists' Houses.

Paris, April 28.—The widespread labor agitation took a dramatic turn today when the police executed a series of wholesale searches, designed to unearth an extensive plot against public security. The searches included the offices of branches of the labor federation and the homes of labor leaders, prominent royal interests, Bonapartists and Anarchists.

The suspects among the Royalists and Bonapartists include the heads of several aristocratic families, while the laborists who were subjected to search include the conspicuous heads of the movement planned for May 1.

The searches were operated simultaneously early in the morning.

There is official authority for the statement that documents were received which proved that royalists and Bonapartists had intrigued with the labor leaders, and liberally financed the revolutionary and strike movements. The searches caused a sensation in labor and royalist circles.

Andrew Carnegie in Toronto.

Toronto, April 28.—Mr. Andrew Carnegie arrived here yesterday, and was warmly welcomed by a representative party. In the evening he addressed the Canadian Club, and said his hope was in Canada to unite Anglo-Saxons and ensure the peace of the world.

Flogging.

Flogging, in public and otherwise, is not of mediaeval origin. In the middle ages ridicule and not physical suffering was the means employed for the correction of wrongdoing; hence the pillory, the stocks and the thewe—a chair suspended high over the heads of the crowd, in which women, generally scolds, were brought to a sweet reasonableness—but the whipping post belongs to the Tudor age. The Elizabethan servant question was met by flogging girls for idleness on Sunday morning. But it was in the Hanoverian period that flogging was carried to excess. As late as 1804 six women were publicly flogged in Gloucester, England, because they had been found begging.

In Dresden 300 years ago "epicures" used to eat Venetian oysters that had been on the way three weeks.

Important To Canada.

Dominion Takes Jurisdiction Of Export Of Electric Power, Etc.

Fruit Marks Act and Leprosy Bills Discussed—Hon. Mr. Brodeur Introduces His Montreal Harbor Bill and Declares in Favor of Eight National Ports With Thorough Equipment—Whole Transportation Question to be Discussed Monday.

Ottawa, April 28.—A bill of the highest importance to Canada, and especially to Ontario, was introduced by Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick, Minister of Justice, yesterday afternoon in the House of Commons. It takes complete jurisdiction for the Dominion Government over the export of electric power, petroleum and natural gas.

In introducing the bill Mr. Fitzpatrick explained that the bill sought to give the Government effective control over the exportation of electric power, especially from Canada to the United States. It also applies to all fluids and gases transmitted by pipe lines, such as petroleum and natural gas. A license is required for such exportation and companies already engaged in exporting electric power must obtain a license within a specified time.

W. F. Maclean (South York) said this measure was a step in the right direction, but wanted the Minister to include nickel, pulpwood and even lumber in its raw condition. It was time for us to build up our country instead of having our raw products exported to build up other lands.

Fruit Marks Act and Leprosy.

Hon. Sydney Fisher brought up his amendments to the Fruit Marks Act, and two or three members debated the various clauses.

When this subject was exhausted, he brought up his bill respecting leprosy.

Dr. Sproule (East Grey) carefully followed its progress through committee, but otherwise it received but slight attention.

National Ports.

Mr. Brodeur's bill to reorganize the Montreal harbor board reduces the board from eleven to three, but the system remained. In his opinion all rivers and harbors should be under one responsible head. He deprecated the slow progress made in improving the St. Lawrence route between Montreal and Quebec. This bill was intended to produce relief. He favored making not only Montreal, but also Quebec, St. John, Halifax, Victoria, Vancouver, Midland and Port Colborne national ports, and equipping them thoroughly.

After some debate it was agreed that the whole subject of transportation should be discussed by the House on Monday.

Leave was granted to the promoters to withdraw the bill respecting the Vancouver and Northwestern Railway Co.

To Get Control in Canada.

The bill before the Railway Committee yesterday which asked, among other things, power to build through the Yellow Head Pass to Edmonton, produced vigorous objection from Senators McMullin and Kirchoffer against American lines being allowed to take up all the available passes through the Rockies. There seemed to be an organized attempt by outside interests, they said, to corner all these passes. The bill stands for further consideration.

G. T. P. Subsidiary Co.'s

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway commission bill, authorizing the issue of debenture stock to the amount of $25,000,000 for the equipment of the road was reported yesterday by the Railway Committee of the House of Commons. The Minister of Justice stated that as he understood this legislation, it would not interfere with the Government mortgage, as the issue provided for ranks after the Government lien.

The next bill taken up was that for the incorporation of the Grand Trunk Pacific Branch Lines Co., with power to build some twenty-two named connecting with the new transcontinental line and such other branches as the Governor-in-Council may approve. The bill will be further considered next week.

Civic Control of Streets.

Ottawa, April 28.—The delegation from Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, and also from the Union of Municipalities, and other cities of the Dominion waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. A. B. Aylesworth and Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick in the Premier's office yesterday forenoon. The Ontario Government could not be represented at the interview, owing to the Legislature being in session, but the following telegram from Hon. J. P. Whitney was received during the day by the Union of Canadian Municipalities:

"You are authorised to say that the Ontario Government is in hearty sympathy with the principle of the control of streets and highways by the municipalities."

W. D. Lighthall, the honorary secretary of the Union of Municipalities, introduced the delegation, several members of which spoke for control of their streets, and to give the power to expropriate and also control of franchises.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier promised to lay the matter before his colleagues.

King and Queen Ascend Vesuvius.

Naples, April 28.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra arrived here yesterday from Messina after a stormy voyage. In spite of the inclement weather, Their Majesties started for Vesuvius in an automobile with the Duke and Duchess of Aosta. The roads were difficult, for the ashes had turned into mud. King Edward was cheerful and turned every discomfort into fun. Their Majesties gave $1,000 to the fund for the relief of the sufferers by the recent eruption.

Union Treasurer Arrested.

Hamilton, April 28.—Thos O'Dowe, 137 East Simcoe street, a well-known cigarmaker, was arrested last evening on the charge of misappropriating funds of the Cigarmakers' Union. The warrant charges him with misappropriating $70. He was treasurer of the local union.

GOING WELL AT 'FRISCO.

Army Has Assumed Control of Feeding the 250,000 People.

San Francisco, April 28.—All is going on well here, and thorough system has been inaugurated in the feeding of the 250,000 homeless sufferers, the army having assumed control.

The homeless people camped in the parks, squares and vacant lots were awakened early yesterday because the water dripped through the improvized tents which afforded poor protection against the heavy rain that began to fall about one o'clock and continued for several hours. Many persons were driven into nearby houses for shelter. Thousands who are without proper shelter sands who in their wet clothes, vainly trying to get warm after the rain ceased, by walking or were huddled around little camp fires.

The French and Italian and Danish consuls at San Francisco, who were reported as among the missing, have all been heard from. They had temporarily become separated from their friends.

BRITISH DEMANDS.

Cabinet Sends Cruiser Minerva to Keep Turkey Within Bounds.

London, April 28.—The Cabinet yesterday lengthily considered the dispute with Turkey regarding the Tabah boundary, and resolved to despatch the second-class cruiser Minerva to El Arish, with instructions to investigate the report that the Turks have removed the frontier pillars at Rafanear and El Arish.

Coal Operators As They Were.

New York, April 28.—The anthracite mine operators, through their sub-committee of seven, yesterday replied to the latest propositions of the mine workers for an adjournment of the existing differences in the anthracite fields, refusing to modify their position heretofore announced. "Your propositions are wholly inconsistent with out position in the premises, from which we have not varied," the operators say. And then in conclusion: "We trust that on Thursday next the deliberate judgment of the anthracite workers will result in an acceptance of that proposition (to renew existing relations for three years)."

Overloaded Floor Collapses.

Montreal, April 28.—The collapse yesterday morning of three floors in the Granger Freres wholesale stationery building at the corner of Place d'Armes and Notre Dame street, did $200,000 damage. The accident happened at 5 o'clock, and the employes had not yet come to work or there would have been an appalling loss of life. Overloading of the third floor with ten tons of books caused it to break down, and it carried the second and first floors with it clear to the basement. The stock is a complete loss.

An Island City.

Greater New York consists of forty-five islands. It might be called the Island City. Read the names of some of the larger: Manhattan Island, Long Island, Staten Island, Hart's Island, City Island, Riker's Island, North Brother Island, South Island, Blackwell's Island, Randall's Island, Ward's Island, Berrian's Island, Governors Island, Barren Island and Coney Island. Many small ones in Jamaica bay have large names. One inland island, Marble Hill, near Kingsbridge, has been made by the government channel cut through on the Harlem river improvements.

The Immigration Scandal

The immigration scandal lately unearthed at Ottawa is just now very much in the public eye. Last year the shady contract with the mysterious North Atlantic Trading Company was defended in Parliament by the Minister of the Interior and Government as a useful and patriotic enterprise. It seems that its true character had not then dawned upon those responsible to Parliament. Now that they have been shown the kind of "graft" it is, the ministers hasten to cancel the contract and by so doing put the N. A. T. finally out of commission.

A more rascally conspiracy, it appears, was never entered upon under the sanction of a Canadian Government. It was done in Sifton's time, but in all likelihood he was ignorant of, or inattentive to, its real bearings. The pleasures of the new-rich politician and their attendant worriments doubtless sufficiently occupied his time, as they at present keep him from his place in Parliament. Why is Mr Sifton not there now to answer the damaging charges made against his regime as Minister of the Interior. To this question there is no answer. But it can be easily surmised that if private affairs do not detain him from his parliamentary duties, the revelations concerning the bogus immigration company, projected and engineered by the officials of his department, would account for his continued absence, so much remarked by members of the House.

Preston and Smart, the Deputy Minister, seem to have been at the root of the shady game. Preston, as is generally known, was the hero of the West Elgin bye-election scandal. It was he who sent the telegrams to MacNish to "hug the machine" for him, the machine being, as revealed in court, a nest of criminals under the election law, who secured MacNish's return by every kind of fraud. For his work there Preston was rewarded by Sifton with the Chief Commissionership of Immigration in Europe — salary $3,000 a year and expenses. He has the credit, or the shame rather, of this North Atlantic Trading Company scheme. It had been doing business, with the Lord only knows where as headquarters, for four years, and drawing money in large sums from Ottawa, when it was first "blown upon." Then, to give some color of formal organization, the company was incorporated in the Island of Guernsey, not being eligible in England. It had a number of persons in humble positions for shareholders and directors, doubtless "dummies." Thus organized its agents began work, it is said, in those European States where the laws forbade such agencies.

Smart, Deputy Minister under Sifton, left off duty in the department to become general agent of the company in the Northwest. It was his work to look after the immigrants sent out under the secret service system of the N. A. T., to count heads, and certify to Preston, who, it is now said, drew large amounts of money from the Government for the use of secret agents.

When brought before committee and asked to explain these matters Smart professed almost entire ignorance of what was going on. Though chief agent of the North Atlantic Trading Company, he did not know who composed it, or how it was organized. It was a deep secret which had been kept from him, though Preston knew all about it, no doubt. It came out, however, that the directors wished to remain incog They would rather forfeit their positions than be known in connection with the company. It is said that a million dollars or more has been due by the government to the company's account for immigrants at $5 per head.

With the information thus far, the Government had no recourse but to cancel the contracts, endeavor to repudiate the whole business, and talk about something, anything else. But it is impossible to draw the veil back now that so much has been disclosed. Preston has been summoned, with orders to bring papers. Smart, it appears, had papers and documents, which might have thrown light on the screen, but they have somehow disappeared. If Preston's papers are extant, they may shed a "lurid glare" upon the dealings of this game of official hide and seek, this business which Mr. Monk described as most "damnable."

The appearance of the West Elgin hero will be awaited with interest. The world may then know the real ins and outs of the late friction between Preston and the officials of the High Commissioner's Department in London. That the trouble was connected with immigration matters was lately asserted. Lord Strathcona's officials must have "viewed with alarm" the tendency of Preston's operations unchecked, yet while Preston enjoyed the protection of the Interior Department at Ottawa, it was scarcely their place to prefer charges or do more than chafe in disapproval.

It is a pretty scandal as it stands, but it may be found that the half has not been told.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The public meeting last night endorsed the action of the Council in accepting half of the unpaid rolling mills taxes in settlement. Taking into consideration the fact that the Council was already committed to the action indicated, it was undoubtedly the best thing to do.

* * *

Now let the mills roll. Whether they roll bars or spikes, or even marlinspikes, makes no difference to us, so long as they employ men, pay wages and incidentally earn their bonus.

The meeting, our reporter tells us, closed with three cheers for the Mayor. All together, now, "Hip! Hip! Hurrah." For he's a jolly good fellow, with Belleville's interests at heart all right, all right.

The police—or, failing them, the military authorities—would certainly be justified in using horsewhips on the young ruffians who make a practice of running ahead of the regiment or band and kicking up a dust. Last night, on Victoria avenue, it was something terrible. Soldiers and civilians alike suffered

A GENTLE HINT FOR ANDY.

(Toronto Telegram.)

These few lines will meet the eye of Andrew Carnegie, LL.D., as he rises to address the Canadian Club.

"The liberty to think, to speak, to utter, to argue freely is prized by Canadians above all other liberties.

In short Dr. Carnegie is in a
"Land where girt by friend or foe,
A man may speak the thing he will."

That is, Dr. Carnegie may speak the thing he will so long as that thing does not chance to be THE DESTINY OF CANADA.

Canada used to have "A DESTINY."

The fact is the country seemed to have nothing else but its DESTINY, or at least Canadians talked about nothing else.

Canada's DESTINY really caused so much talk that it was extracted. Thus Dr. Carnegie is an honored visitor in a country that has no DESTINY and does not want to have one.

To be an antiquarian in these times you must have money or you will not succeed. A despatch from Berlin says that a Frankfort antiquarian firm offers for sale the last copy that is likely to come into the market of the Mainz Psalter of 1457, the first printed book which bears a date and the names of the printers. It is a splendid copy and the price asked for it is $19,200. It is said that an American has made an offer for the book and that the bargain is nearly completed.

There is no encouragement for a man being good if he gets no credit for it. A railroad conductor has confessed to having robbed a freight train in Illinois eight years ago. His story is believed to be due to a disordered mind and he gets no credit for his confession. He must feel awfully humiliated.

A correspondent in the New York Times urges the nations to buy an island and give it to the anarchists without any reservation as to mode of government, and let them have a trial of their peculiar views. That the correspondent is not very sanguine regarding the success of such a movement may be inferred from the fact that he suggests "Helloneearth" as an appropriate name for the island.

LOCAL SPRING POETRY.

(T. P. B. Moralizes.)

At last the ice has left the bay,
At last the robins' here to stay;
Which fact remind us by the way
We're heading for the month of May,
And soon the cheerless cleaning day
In scores of homes will hold full sway;
And nothing we can do or say
Will head it off, this cleansing fray.

There is no time in all the year
When man is so subdued with fear,
As when housecleaning time draws near
And everything is out of gear;
The wife he promised to hold dear,
The children given him to rear,
Have launched out on a mad career
"To do or die" that's made quite clear.

There's music in the balmy air
Microbes and dust are also there,
But little do the women care,
They're beating carpets now for fair,
While men just stand around and glare,
And feel its up to them to swear
Or go on a protracted tear;
To find one home just now is rare.

Oh, for a lodge somewhere to dwell
Where things are not piled up pell-mell,
Where one can breathe without the smell
Of cheap brown soap the grocers sell;
I have in mind a quiet dell
Of which it might be just as well
All of my suffering friends to tell
That they may migrate for a spell.

A Lively Runaway This Morning.

This morning a team of horses belonging to Mr. P. Denyes, Front of Sidney, ran away, but fortunately no person was hurt. Mr. Denyes was driving at the time and the animals became frightened through one of them putting its leg over the tongue of the vehicle. They had only ran a short distance when the traces became unfastened, and this probably saved the occupant from injury. The animals fell on Front street and were caught. One of them cut itself about the legs.

The "At Home" given by the members of the "Y." W.C.T.U. to their friends was held at the residence of Mrs. Marshall, Charles St., on Thursday evening. Arrangements had been made to hold this "At Home" at Mrs. T. Ritchie's, but, owing to the accident to Mrs. Ritchie, a change was made. Mrs. Marshall generously offered her home to the society, who heartily thank her and her daughters for their kindness and assistance. A programme of music and recitations was rendered. A very pleasant evening was spent, and a number joined the "Y." some as active and some as honorary members. Refreshments were served toward the close of the evening.

In honor of the 87th anniversary of the founding of Independent Oddfellowship in America, the members of the order in this city will to-morrow morning march to Holloway St. Methodist church, where a special sermon will be preached by Rev. R. H. Leitch.

SAVING TIME.

In this day and age of the world when it seems as though every minute had a value and every hour its imperative demands to perform a necessary duty the traveller who has had experience is careful to see that his ticket reads "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Rilway." Here is a line whose schedule is so arranged that every available minute of the traveller's time is saved. No long waits for connections nor tedious delays en route. Trains are operated at highest speed and are equipped with coaches so luxurious that the comfort of The Lake Shore is famous the world over. You can obtain full information about rates, routes or service by addressing J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N. Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, O., or W. J. Lynch, Pass'gr Traffic Mgr., Chicago, Ill.

It may be possible to love two women at the same time, but not if they know it.

THE WEATHER.

TO-DAY'S PROBS.

Easterly winds, fine. Sunday, easterly winds, fine, not much change in temperature.

Dog Collars!

DAME FASHION has decreed that collarless gowns shall be worn this year, with the consequence that Dog-Collars will be more in evidence than ever before. And really the manufacturers have "spread themselves," for many of the designs are exquisite. The tints most approved at present are: Amethyst, Topaz, Ruby, Sapphire and Garnet. The stones representing these colors are —to be fashionable — mostly imitation jewels. The imitations, however, are of the finest and the stones all cut by expert diamond cutters.

We show some of these in our window and shall be pleased to have you call and examine them, even if you don't purchase.

Educational Contest Lists
Destroyed By Fire CONTEST EXTENDED TO
July 31st, 1906

Messrs Armour Limited, Toronto, regret to advise all who have so kindly forwarded lists of names as per the conditions of their Educational Contest, that their building, with its entire contents, was destroyed by fire on the evening of March 19th, and all records of lists they have received, as well as all lists, were destroyed, and we ask that all who had sent in lists previous to this time, mail us duplicates. No metal caps required with duplicate lists. To make up for time lost by the fire, and to give all competitors a fair and equal chance, we have consented to extend the Educational Contest until July 31st, 1906.

We offer $200.00 in gold to those sending in the largest lists of correct words made from the twelve different letters used in spelling the four words

Armour's Extract of Beef

$100.00 in gold will be given as the first prize.

$25.00 in gold will be given as the second prize.

$10.00 in gold will be given as the third prize.

$3.00 in gold will be given to each of the next five.

$2.00 will be given to each of the next twenty.

CONDITIONS

Use only the following 12 letters:—A-R-M-O-U-S E-X-T-C-F-B. No letter to appear in the same word twice.

Only such words may be used as are found in Webster's International Dictionary.

No proper names, foreign words or names of persons, towns or places are to be used.

Words spelled the same, but having different meanings, may be used but once.

All contestants must attach to their lists a metal cap taken from a jar of "Armour's Extract of Beef." Failure to do this puts the list out of competition.

The names of the winners of these prizes will be determined by judges whom we shall appoint.

Write only on one side of the paper. After making out your list, state the number of words it contains, with your full name and address at the top of each piece of paper and mark on the outside of the envelope "Educational Contest Department," and mail to our address as below.

Armour's Extract of Beef is sold by all druggists and grocers. If yours cannot or will not supply you, a small jar will be mailed you, post paid, on receipt of 25 cents in cash or stamps.

To-morrow's International Sunday School Lesson.

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER—GOLDEN TEXT IS "THE SEED IS THE WORD OF GOD."

HISTORICAL SETTING.

Time—Soon after our last lesson, during or at the close of Christ's second tour of Galilee, autumn of A.D. 28.

Place—On the shore of the Sea of Galilee, near a town, probably Capernaum.

Place in the Life of Christ — The last quarter of the second year of His ministry, marked by the introduction of a new method of teaching, begun on account of the growing opposition.

A SPECIMEN DAY IN CHRIST'S LIFE.

V.1. After the anointing in the house of Simon the Pharisee, Jesus set out (Luke 8: 1-3) on a second preaching tour of Galilee. The twelve went with him, and also certain women whom He had healed, including Mary Magdalene, and the wife of Herod's steward. In the course of this journey, or possibly on its conclusion, he came to a city by the sea, probably Capernaum; and there he entered upon a day of which we have a conspicuously full record, though we are to think of it as only a specimen day in Christ's busy life. He healed the blind and dumb demoniac (Matt. 12: 22-45), and had a discussion with some scribes from Jerusalem. When his mother and brethren sought him (Matt. 12: 46-50) he proclaimed his disciples as his kindred. Then, leaving the house (doubtless to speak to his mother and brothers) he went on to the seashore, and there spoke a wonderful series of parables, the first of which we are now to study.

1. And he began again. As on former occasions (Mark 2: 13: 3: 7). To teach by the seaside. He was sitting there at first (Matt. 13: 1), perhaps quietly talking with his mother and brothers, when a tremendous crowd came upon them, a great multitude.

So that he entered into a ship (R.V. "boat"). Sitting down at its prow, the highest part of it. The people stood on the shores, which are curved and sloping, thus forming a natural amphitheatre, with Jesus in the centre. Macgregor tested the acoustic properties of the spot, and found that from the sea, without raising his voice, he could easily be heard on shore at a distance of three hundred yards. Christ's audience had only to look around them, and they would see in actual operation every detail of the parables the Master was uttering.

2. And he taught them many things. Matthew records seven parables, and Mark adds another. By parables. Using this new method because of the rapidly growing hostility to him and his teaching, and because of his hearers' dullness and slowness of apprehension.

10. And when he was alone. "St. Mark here anticipates what took place after the Saviour had 'sent the multitudes away' and 'gone into the house' (Matt. 13: 36)." They that were about him. An outer circle of disciples from which the Twelve were chosen. Asked of him the parable. All the series; they were linked together by a common purpose, evidently, and the disciples did not understand what that purpose was.

11. Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God. The Greek "mysteries" were secret religious rites whose nature has never been discovered.

What is a parable? "A parable is an analogy. It assumes a likewise between higher and lower things, such that what is true of one department holds good in another. The analogy may be drawn out into a story, or description, as in most of Jesus' parable, but this is not essential."

Hearken! Hear! Listen a summons to attention natural for one addressing a great crowd from a boat. Behold; there went out a (R.V., "the") sower to sow. Christ is the great Sower, who has "come forth" from the Father. This has been generally called the Parable of the Sower, but he is not the prominent figure. The subject is much rather the soils.

14. The sower soweth the word. The Bible, and whatever, in speech or in writing, interprets the Bible, and brings it close to men's hearts; but especially the sacred writings themselves. The Bible is by far the most popular book in the world. In 1904 the American Bible Society issued 1,770,891 Bibles and portions of Bibles. During the 88 years of its history its issues have been 74,441,674 copies. The British and Foreign Bible Society issued in the year 1902-03 the enormous number of 5,943,775 copies, and from 1804 had issued 180,982,740 copies.

The soil is the human heart, which responds to the seed in many different ways, as the parable goes on to show.

As he sowed. The good seed of Bible truth is sowed by the preacher, in sermons; by the Sunday school teachers.

Some (seed) fell by the wayside. Canon Tristram thus describes a sowing that he witnessed on the plain of Gennesaret; His basket of seed slung under his left arm, with steady measured pace, he marched up and down his portion of the open field, jerking his handful of corn before him at each step. Two narrow paths intersected his corn patch. These necessarily received their share of seed, where it did not long remain; for a few jackdaws and some little flocks of larks and buntings followed the sower, and speedily swept the pathways clean. Grain fields in Palestine are seldom fenced, and both pedestrians and beasts of burden use freely the narrow paths intersecting them. And the fowls of the air (R.V. "birds") came and devoured it. Birds in Syria, and especially about the Lake of Tiberias, are extraordinary numerous. Syria is the winter feeding ground of many migratory birds from northern Europe and Asia.

When they have heard. They are not opposers, they receive seed; but they receive the truth as they are, without the soil of their natures being changed. They do not understand (Matt. 13; 19), because they are not prepared to understand. Their hearts "need the gospel plow to rip them up, tears of repentance to make them soft, and the Sun of Righteousness to make them warm. But, on the contrary, "they have exposed their hearts as common roads to every evil influence of the world, till they have become hard as pavements. Cares, worries, pleasures, passions, worldly interests, have complete possession of their minds. Moreover, Satan cometh immediately, like the birds in the field, and taketh away the word. He has many bills to peck at it! He will destroy the effect of a good sermon by a criticism of the preacher's manner, or the mispronunciation of a word. Into the midst of an impressive prayer he will insinuate a business worry. He will offset a revival by a frivolous amusement. And when we are about to obey the truth he will say, "Some other time. Put it off!"

Illustration. The chimes of Trinity Church in lower New York, which are quite swallowed up and lost in the roar of traffic on Broadway.

A dying man once said in despair to a minister whose church he had attended regularly for twenty years "I have never heard a sermon!" And he explained that always during the sermon he had been planning his business affairs.

There are delicate ears that can hear sounds, like the shrill noise of certain insects, that are entirely inaudible to most men. The trained eye of an astronomer can distinguish a star as double where the novice can see only one star, or none at all. So it is possible for any one to train his soul for the perception of the highest truths.

Some fell on stony (R.V., "rocky") ground. Not on ground strewn with boulders, for the soil among them is "the richest the earth produces, consisting of decomposed basalt from the stones. But the seed fell on flat rock, thinly covered with only an inch or so of soil. The dry, underlying rock held the sun's heat like a hot-bed, and forced the seed, so that immediately it sprang up.

6. But when the sun was up, it was scorched. The roots were shallow, and burned up by the overheated soil. The rock prevented their reaching down where it was cool and moist.

16. The interpretation. These are the hearers that receive the word immediately, and with gladness. Christ is not objecting to promptness in receiving Him. But there is a promptness of decision, and there is a promptness of frivolity, always, like the Athenians, ready for a new thing. The first is like the compass needle, which, when released from the clamp, turns promptly and faithfully to the north; the second is like the weather-vane.

17. The trouble is that these hearers have no root in themselves. They are moved by temporary enthusiasm and not by an inward conviction. They have followed the crowd rather than Christ. And the test comes when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake. There is sure to come a time when allegiance to Christ will mean a loss of popularity or property or position. The student must refuse to join in some foolish prank, the merchant must lose trade rather than stoop to dishonesty, the politician must oppose an unreasonable demand of his constituents, the friend must be rebuked and warned at the risk of friendship. Then, unless their religion is rooted far deeper than desire for ease or wealth or applause, they are offended, they choose the devil's way rather than Christ's, and their religion shrivels up.

And some fell among thorns. Among the seeds of thorns or briers, which afterwards came up. And choked it, and it yielded no fruit. The first did not spring up, being picked up by the birds; the second sprang up but did not grow, withered by the heat; the third sprouted and grew up, but yielded no (ripe) fruit, choked by thorns.

18. Interpretation. This class of persons also hear the word, like the others.

19. And the cares of this world. First kind of brier; worries; not business, but over-anxiety about business. And the deceitfulness of riches. Second kind of brier; greed for gold, which deceives by promising pleasure and ease when it only brings care. Not riches, but deceitful riches, riches in which men trust (see Mark 10:24). And the lusts of other things. Third kind of brier, pleasure; not joy, of which the Christian life is full, but pleasure become a lust, a passion, the end of life having become amusement. These things—business, money, recreation—are right and necessary in moderation, strictly subordinated to the higher life of the soul, used merely as our tools; but when they take possession of us, rule our thoughts and almost monopolize our time they, throttle all our nobler faculties.

8. And other fell on good ground. This, of course, was the greater part of the seed, as it is in all sowings of the word. And brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred times the original seed. At Geneva, in 1855, I got from a field a single ear of barley containing 276 grains. Trench remarks that "Herodotus mentions that two hundredfold was a common return in the plain of Babylon, and sometimes three; and Niebuhr mentions a species of maize that returns four hundredfold." In 1868, a year remarkable for its heat in Great Britain, it is mentioned in the newspapers that, in a field of wheat in Kent, there were many single seeds which produced, each, thirty straws, topped with closely set and fully developed ears, which yielded between nine hundred and one thousand grains from a single parent seed.

The good-ground hearers are not merely hear the word, but receive it, "in a good and honest heart" (Luke), and "hold it fast." Their minds are eager for the truth, they listen or read attentively, they meditate and pray over it, and then they act upon it, and bring forth fruit in their lives, the results varying according to talents and opportunities, as in the parable of the pounds, but the reward being equal if the fidelity is equal.

Illustrations. A medical missionary cured a Hindoo of a severe disease, and sent him home from the hospital with a Bible. Three years later, on visiting the man's village, that missionary found all the inhabitants worshipping only the true God, their sole instructor having been the Bible. Thousands of such instances have occurred on mission fields.

THE OPINION OF A WESTERN EDITOR.

ON THE PRESENTATION OF ADDRESS TO ROYALTY.

(Calgary Eye-Opener.)

There is great fame awaiting the mayor of a town—any old town—who has the nerve to break away from tradition and give a visiting Prince, or some otherwise distinguished man, a really good time, with no address, no Maple-Leaf-Forever-school-children, no bunting, no band and no fuss. Think of the absurdity of asking a live young man of the world like Prince Arthur to stand and listen to an address from the mayor and city clerk, with a group of trembling aldermen fidgeting in the background, clad in rented Prince Albert coats and ridiculously shaped plug hats.

Think of what an ad. it would be for Calgary if Prince Arthur, over the walnuts and the wine at his uncle's place, Sandringham, could lean back in his chair and toast Calgary as the only place where he was treated as a human being, and not as a royal dummy.

"Yes, uncle," he might say to the King, "I had a most delightful visit at Calgary, a beautiful little city by the Rocky Mountains. At all the other towns I had to listen to tedious addresses, all couched in the same terms, breathing loyalty to the throne and to your august person and other guff, and bunches of school children sang the Maple Leaf Forever; till it got on my nerves, and I was introduced to all sorts of impossible local magnates at every village, shown their local showplaces and wearied to death—but at Calgary—dear little Calgary—I was met at the station by two or three polished gentlemen, club men, who asked me if I would care to take a quiet drive, it being a pleasant day. Then I was informally invited to dinner in the evening at a lovely private residence, where I met several professional men and English ranchers, brimming over with unaffected cordiality, and bent on giving me all the latest amusing stories.

The King—"But I thought from the letters sent me by Lord Redesdale, that you were to be met at the station by a lot of aldermen and driven out to some ditch."

"That was the arrangement, but the sensible men of the town put their heads together and decided to treat me as a real live human being like themselves. They certainly gave me a most charming time."

"What other towns did you stop at?"

"Oh, I've forgotten 'em all. They are all mixed up in my head as a lot of stupid places, with stupid officials, stupid addresses, stupid surroundings and really pathetic decorations."

"Yes, yes, I've been through it all, Arthur."

"Yes, I suppose so. But give me Calgary every time. They knew just what I would like and omitted what they knew would bore me."

(Alas! The above is only what might have been!)

A Confiscatory Tax.

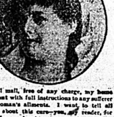
One of the problems which is facing the people of the United States is that of the large power which the owners of vast fortunes wield. The people are crying out against it, and a speech concerning, and a method of dealing with it have just been made and proposed by the President. Whether the proposal will become law remains to be seen.

"It is important to this people," said the President, "to grapple with the problems connected with the amassing of enormous fortunes, and the use of those fortunes, both corporate and individual, in business. We should discriminate in the sharpest way between fortunes well-won and fortunes ill-won; between those gained as an incident to performing great services to the community as a whole, and those gained in evil fashions by keeping just within the limits of mere law-honesty. Of course, no amount of charity in spending such fortunes in any way compensates for misconduct in making them. As a matter of personal conviction, and without pretending to discuss the details or formulate the system, I feel that we shall ultimately have to consider the adoption of some such scheme as that of a progressive tax on all fortunes, beyond a certain amount, either given in life or devised and bequeathed upon death to any individual—a tax so framed as to put it out of the power of the owner of one of these enormous fortunes to hand on more than a certain amount to any one individual; the tax, of course, to be imposed by the national and not the State Government. Such taxation should, of course, be aimed merely at the inheritance or transmission in their entirety of those fortunes swollen beyond all healthy limits.

"Again, the National Government must, in some form, exercise supervision over corporations engaged in interstate business—and all large corporations are engaged in interstate business—whether by license or otherwise, so as to permit us to deal with the far-reaching evils of overcapitalization. This year we are making a beginning in the direction of serious effort to settle some of these economic problems by the railway rate legislation. Such legislation, if so framed, as I am sure it will be, as to secure definite and tangible results, will amount to something of itself; and it will amount to a great deal more in so far as it is taken as a first step in the direction of a policy of superintendence and control not to be exercised in a spirit of malevolence toward the men who have created the wealth, but with the firm purpose to do justice to them and to see that they in turn do justice to the public at large. The first requisite in the public servants who are to deal in this shape with corporations, whether as legislators or executives, is honesty. This honesty can be no respecter of persons. There can be no such thing as unilateral honesty. The danger is not really from corrupt corporations; it springs from the corruption itself, whether exercised for or against corporations."

Free to You, My Sister

Free to You and Every Sister Woman Suffering from Woman's Ailments



I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand woman's sufferings. What we women know from experience we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish Discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial, and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment, for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book "WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER," with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young.

To mothers or daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and painful or irregular menstruation in young ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality, who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Why the Devil Has Cloven Hoofs.

Legends of the devil are quite common in Ireland, but the one which is most interesting and least known perhaps is that which tells why the prince of the infernal regions has split hoofs, like those of a cow beast. Moore alludes to the legend in his story of St. Kevin and Kathleen at Glendalough. In that story Moore makes St. Kevin throw his former ladylove over the cliff in order to be rid of her importunities, but the peasants of the Glendalough district give the story a more poetical touch. They insist that it was not Kathleen that was thrown over the cliff, but that it was Satan, who had assumed the form of the lady in order to tempt the saint. The moment the prince of evil toppled over the edge of the yawning abyss he spread his bat-like wings and sailed away in safety, much to the surprise of the holy saint. Later on the devil again attempted to lay a snare for St. Kevin, but the saint managed to get the arch fiend on holy ground, where, of course, he was helpless. While the devil was in this helpless condition Kevin sawed off his legs and attached cows' hoofs to the stumps. Since that day Satan has been cloven footed and will be until the end of time.

The doctrine of the survival of the fittest doesn't appeal to those who get left.

Even the milk of human kindness may contain a few germs.

Some people regard a collection plate as a slot machine in which they drop a dime in the hope of getting a dollar's worth of religion.

A new leaf is really the same old one with another turn.

Twenty-five years ago it was difficult to sell spring wheat flour for pastry at any price.

People didn't want it—they were using soft, winter wheat flour, and saw no reason for changing.

But hard wheat flour was persistently pushed and prejudice has been overcome. The women tried it, succeeded with it and appreciated it.—To-day hard wheat flour is the favorite for pastry as well as for bread.

The flour that is doing the most for the reputation of hard wheat flour is the brand known as

Ogilvie's Royal Household

It is hard wheat flour at its best—milled by modern methods, retaining all of the good of the wheat and none of the bad—it is without an equal for every kind of baking in which flour is used.

Talk to your grocer about it—if he isn't enthusiastic it's only because he isn't informed.

THE MOTHERS.

(N. Y. Sun.)

When from the Mount the Virgin went—
The awful Mount of Calvary—
Her slender form was weak and bent—
"Thy sorrow is too great for thee,
Ah, thou hast tasted bitter wine,
Gethsemane is His and thine,"
Said Magdalen, all wan and spent.

Then came a woman through the gloom
Her eyes like shadows in the light
Of torches on the Mount of doom—
She seemed a lost ghost in the night,
Her white hair hung unkempt and dank,
From her the Magdalen, scornful, shrank,
As one who sees a loathely sight.

Then Mary, Mother, sped as fast
As mothers go when young babes cry
(O gentle heart! O love so cast!)
And kissed the woman's eyelids dry;
"O thou to my eyes raise thy face!"
"Not I most cursed of all the race—
I in whose soul all hope is past."

"To thine my sorrow is as naught,"
The Mother said. The woman wept,
"I Judas bore!" The soldier caught
The words, and spat. "Yea, him I kept
Safe in my arms, Heart to my heart,
His shame and death are my part
In life." Her shrieks o'er all sounds swept.

The gracious John looked stern and cold,
He tried to part the close-linked pair,
But still the Mother would enfold
The woman of the wild despair—
"My Son is Mercy—thou shalt see
The boy that laughed upon thy knee,"
Said Magdalen, "The traitor sold—"

"Hush, hush, O friend—my Life, my Sun!
I see the spear," the Mother said,
"And I will ask the spear pierced One
For this for thee—when thou liest dead,
Thou from thy woe shalt find release
The torture of thy heart shalt cease,
Him thou shalt meet," "Ah, is't well done,
Said Magdalen, 'to give him peace?'

PERENNIAL.

'Twas back in 1863
(It doesn't seem that long),
That I first interviewed Marie,
The peerless Queen of Song,
When then I spoke about her past
And swore she was the rage
She smiled and said it was her last
Appearance on the stage,

Marie sang here the other night—
I'm quite rheumatic now—
But still I donned a choker white
And practiced up a bow.
She knew me, and the tears came fast;
She talked a half a page,
And finally said it was her last
Appearance on the stage.

A year and a half ago the British authorities at Portsmouth sunk two tons of coal in iron crates in a basin of water at the dock yards. At the same time a similar quantity of coal was stored in the open air and covered with tarpaulins. At intervals of six months samples of each storage have been burned under scientific tests, and the results show conclusively that the submarine storage adds to its value steadily, while storage in the open air decreased its heat-giving power Experiments are now to be made to test the practicability of marine storage on a large scale. The main difficulty is that the coal must be pried before it is used to avoid spontaneous combustion from superficial moisture.

Drudgery.

The everyday cares and duties which men call drudgery are the weights and counterpoises of the clock of time, giving its pendulum a true vibration and its hands a regular motion, and when they cease to hang upon its wheels the pendulum no longer swings, the hands no longer move, the clock stands still. —Longfellow.

A Protest.

The Lion—The leopard, you know, cannot change his spots. The Zebra—Well, I can't change my stripes either, but no one ever thought it of sufficient interest to make a proverb of.

Too Much to Ask.

A traveler in the highlands observed while at a tavern in a small village a very beautiful collie. At his request the owner was pointed out to him, and he asked the man what he would take for the dog.

"Ye'll be taking him to America?" the Scot asked cautiously.

"Certainly, if you sell him to me."

"I no coul' part wie Rob," the dog's owner then said emphatically. "I'm muckle fond-like o' him." And liberal offers were no inducement.

To his astonishment, the traveler later saw the dog sold to a drover for half what he had offered and after the drover had disappeared requested an explanation. "You said that you could not sell him," he remarked.

A twinkle came into the highlander's eyes.

"No; I didna say I'd no sell him. I said I couldna part wie him," he said. "Rob'll be hame in two or three days fra noo, but I couldna ask him to swim across the ocean. Na; that woul' be too muckle to ask."

Pews That Carry a Vote.

The parish church of Chertsey possesses a curious anomaly. It has several pews in its gallery which are bought and sold by auction, just like a table or a chair, and these pews give their owners for the time being a legal right to vote at parliamentary elections in the division. Moreover, the owners of the pews have to pay the poor rate of £2 a year into the bargain, a privilege they are not so eager to use as the former one. Many years ago the churchwardens of Chertsey were at their wits' end in order to raise money for the restoration and repair of the sacred edifice, and they could find no solution to the question until some parishioners suggested that they should sell the gallery pews to the highest bidder. They accepted the idea and obtained a special act of parliament allowing them to do this and also giving the privilege of a parliamentary vote.—London Spectator.

A Gallery of Forgeries.

Paris possesses a very fine gallery of modern masters, largely of the Barbizon school, not one of which is genuine. It is to the painter Harpignies that France is indebted for this queer collection of the spurious. Passing through the Rue de Vaugirard one day, his eye caught some canvases in a window. They were all signed by prominent names, including his own, and every signature was forged. Passing inside, the list became more extensive, and the painter found himself in the presence of false Corots, Diazes, Daubignys, Lancrets, Isabeys, Neuvilles and even English Turners. The revelation of his own identity enabled Harpignies to become possessed of this collection for something less than the proverbial old song, and it may now be inspected by those interested in such matters at the state furniture depot, where it is preserved as a kind of high water mark in sophistication.

An Arabian Legend.

The Arabians had a tradition that when the devil started forth from his own place to the garden of Eden he was too lazy to walk and begged all the animals, one after another, to carry him. All refused except the serpent, which was then a quadruped and the most beautiful of all beasts. Yielding to the entreaties of Satan, the serpent took up the devil on its back and carried him the rest of the way, no one knows how far, and after the consequences of the devil's entry into the garden became apparent the angels were commanded to look up the serpent and punish it, so Michael cut off its legs, and it was doomed henceforth to travel about as best it could flat on the ground.

Lynch Law.

In an article in Law Notes on "The Origin of the Term 'Lynch Law'" mention was made of the fact that formerly the term "Lydford law" was used in the same sense in England. A North Carolina judge in a recent case quoted the following lines:

I oft have heard of Lydford law—
How in the morn they hang and draw
And sit in judgment after.

They seem to show the existence of a similar summary punishment in England.

Unconscious Sarcasm.

A Scotch visitor to the Carlyles, in Cheyne row, was much struck with the sound proof room which the sage had contrived for himself in the attic, lighted from the top, and where no sight or sound from outside could penetrate. "My certes, this is fine!" cried the old friend, with unconscious sarcasm. "Here ye may write and study all the rest of your life and no human being be one bit the wiser."

Trouble For Government Clerks.

"Congress makes lots of unnecessary trouble for the government clerks," said a veteran employee, "but the worst case I know of occurred some years ago. A certain senator asked the comptroller of the currency to tell him how much stock a certain man had in a national bank. He was informed that such information was regarded as confidential and could not be given out."

"We'll see about that," said the senator, who was plainly disappointed and displeased.

"Several days later he secured the passage of a resolution calling upon the secretary of the treasury to furnish the senate with the names and holdings of the stockholders in all the national banks in the country. He really wanted to know only the interest of one man in a bank, but he knew that he couldn't get a resolution of that kind through the senate, so he included the stockholders in all national banks. It took the entire force of the comptroller's office several weeks to prepare the information, and when it reached the senate nobody paid any attention to it except the author of the resolution, and he merely looked at the mass of papers only long enough to see about the man he was after and then tossed the papers aside. It was an immense lot of work for nothing."

The Abbe's Criticism.

An American lady residing in Rome presented to a friend, who is an abbe, an intellectual man and familiar with English, although no traveler, a copy of one of Mary Wilkins' New England stories.

"The author of this, my dear friend," she said, "is the best portrayer of New England character we have. No other writer has caught so well the charm of the place and the people. I hope you will like it."

The abbe took the book and thanked her. In a few days he came again and returned it gingerly, saying a word or two of thanks.

"Were you not pleased with the quaint portrayal of the life?" asked the lady.

"You say this is a faithful portrayal of life in New England?"

"Very faithful indeed."

The abbe sighed and said, with deep sympathy, "How sad!"

The Curse of Shiftlessness.

Whether shiftlessness is a vice that is incurable or a habit that can be overcome, it is anyhow a condition that perplexes and irritates relieving officials. Shiftlessness is paying one's last 50 cents for a circus ticket without learning where tomorrow's breakfast is coming from. It is a refusal to repair the leak in the roof when the sun shines. It is killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. It takes no thought of the morrow. It never lays up anything for a rainy day. It always ignores opportunities. It prefers to rely on neighborhood bounty to hustling for itself. It won't work, except under the pressure of necessity. It never gets ahead.

Man Who Beheaded Charles I.

The mysterious masked man who beheaded Charles I. remains British analogue for the Man With the Iron Mask. Lilly, the lying astrologer, denounced Cornet Joyce at the restoration, but Joyce on the fatal 30th of January was not in favor with Cromwell. The parish register of Whitechapel records the burial in 1649 of Richard Brandon, the common hangman, and opposite the entry a contemporary hand wrote that "he cut off the head of Charles the First." Brandon himself asserted that "they made him do it for £30," with which he drank himself to death.—Dundee Advertiser.

Drinking Hot Water.

Persons who have irritability of the heart should not drink hot water. Hot water will cause palpitation in such cases. Persons with dilated stomachs should avoid the drinking of hot water; persons afflicted with "sour stomachs;" persons who have soreness of the stomach or pain induced by light pressure should also refrain from drinking it. Hot water will relieve thirst better than cold water, and for that purpose it should not be condemned, but hot water is an excitant, and in cases in which irritation of the stomach exists it should be avoided.

A sound discretion is not so much indicated by never making a mistake as by never repeating it.—Hovee.

BISON FURNACE

Twice as much heating surface is covered by the fire in a Bison Hot Water Furnace as in any other.

The flames are drawn up through the side flues, then down and to the chimney through the middle flue.

Burns all the gas and traps all the heat against the top section.

In other furnaces the fire travel is practically a direct one to the chimney, and much valuable heat escapes, the important top section getting less than any of the others.

e Bison has more good eating points than all ther heaters combined.

dark, stoutish; shouted in gibberish." He repeated the evidence monotonously.

Sercombe, puffing at his cigar, nodded. "That bears out my belief," he said. "Precisely—I thought so."

Colonel Landell turned to the sergeant. "This is important, Jones," he said. "You'd better attend to it at once. But one question more, Mr. Greatorex. Would you be able to identify any one of your assailants?"

"I fear not," I said. "You must remember that it was quite dark."

"Nor you, sir, I suppose?" he added, looking at Sheppard.

Sheppard shook his head doubtfully. "We were engaged in a pellmell struggle. The utmost I saw was the outlines of the men, but I can recall that one looked very like my friend Captain Sercombe—that is to say, in the dark."

Sercombe laughed. "My dear fellow, I wish I had been there. I'm sorry I missed it. But I shall have better luck another time, if I stick to Sergeant Jones."

The officer smiled without emotion, and the colonel put his question formally to Montgomery, who promptly returned a negative. Landell moved toward the door, but suddenly the police officer touched him on the shoulder and whispered in his ear, then faced us again.

"It was lucky you had that moat filled and the drawbridge up, sir. What made you take those precautions?" he demanded.

"We were forewarned, as you have heard," I answered.

He referred to his notes. "Was the warning sufficiently urgent to induce you to go to that trouble?" he asked slowly.

"You can judge for yourself, if we went to the trouble," I returned sharply.

Imperturbably he repeated his question again. "What were the terms of the warning?"

The man took me aback, and, moreover, I was a little angry at this impertinent inquisition, but before I could arrest my thoughts for a reply Sercombe intervened.

"I can recollect what I said very well," he said, taking the cigar from his mouth, "if it interests you, sergeant. I said: 'Greatorex, there's a number of very indifferent looking scoundrels down the valley. You have some valuable plate, and this is a lonely spot. Moreover, I saw a couple of them hanging furtively about the plantations as I came up. Now, I've never seen a moat full nor a drawbridge work, and if I were you and you were me, I fancy this ditch would be filled and the bridge hung up for my satisfaction and your edification and for the confusion of any nefarious scoundrel with a big maw.' These were the exact words, as I happen to remember, in which I introduced the subject, as Mr. Greatorex will no doubt recall, though he is not likely to have the terms on his tongue, like myself. But that, I reckon, is what started it." And with this Sercombe replaced his cigar between his teeth and went on smoking tranquilly.

The sergeant thanked him, frowning in some embarrassment; then he turned on his heel and, saluting to the company, vanished after his superior through the doorway.

Sercombe got up. "Well, we can break up now, gentlemen," he said. "Sorry to interrupt harmony, but I've got business to do."

"I am greatly obliged to you," I said, somewhat sheepily.

"You're very welcome," says the captain, with a wide smile.

"But what about the gypsies?" I continued.

"Oh, I suppose the police will catch them," he remarked, his grin growing broader. "But, you see, none of you would be able to recognize them."

Sheppard burst into laughter, and I was fain to follow him, but Montgomery stared in amazement and with a certain latent dislike at the adventurer, pursuing him out into the courtyard with his steadfast eyes.

CHAPTER XIII.

SERCOMBE'S frankness proved of a piece with his conduct hitherto. I could not imagine the old soldier making a bad blunder, and the news that came to us later demonstrated the method in his candor. Sheppard encountered the sergeant near Llanellan and found that his expedition into the Gwent had had no luck. There was no camp in the bottom. Evidences of the recent presence of strangers there were in plenty, but not a sign remained to indicate into what hiding place they had withdrawn. To move a number of persons, with their effects, and the men foreigners, too, and thereby certain to attract the attention of the villagers, would seem impracticable without some public notice. But apparently no one had seen a trace of the fugitives. They had vanished as completely as though the encampment had been a mirage of our disordered brains.

It was clear, however, that there would be no assault upon the castle that night. Jones and his troopers hung about the village, and the former was too zealous to allow any disorder under his nose. Sercombe would not dare to risk a second attack. That much was for our comfort. He had put it to me ingeniously that the interference of the police would embarrass him, and I was heartily glad to hear it, for we needed some further resources for our defense. That was plain enough. We had been able to resist the enemy on his first two attempts, but we had a most cunning and deadly foe, and I began to doubt if we could hold out against a renewal of hostilities unless, indeed, we broke our silent compact and called in the assistance of the law. We had decided to discard Williams from our society. He was too hazardous an ally, and we could not hope to circumvent the police a second time. As it was, I saw that some suspicions were breeding in the sergeant's mind. I suppose we took too lightly what was bruited about the country for a great "sensation." The storming of the castle even in the distorted narrative which Williams had delivered to his friends sounded remarkable in so dull and uneventful a place as that countryside. Pieces of rumor concerning it crept into the London papers subsequently, and we were most unwillingly become the figures in a tragic and heroic adventure.

We resolved despite the promised respite to pretermit no one of the precautions, and Montgomery mounted guard at 8 o'clock on the keep tower. As Sheppard and I sat over our wine we were interrupted by Mrs. Main, who had been greatly stirred by the visit of a justice. She came ostensibly with a question, but in reality to breathe the air of our central excitement.

"I am to give Williams his supper tonight, as last night, sir?" she asked.

I told her "No," and her wits wandered to the events of the day without more ado.

But presently she came back. "Then I'm not to prepare supper for Williams, sir?"

"Williams will not be sleeping here tonight," I replied. "He left at the usual hour—6 o'clock."

Her face wore a blank look, as of one struggling with perplexity, and, assuming that she had fears on her own account to combat, I went on, "You see, we shall be perfectly safe with the police looking after us."

"Oh, Lord, sir, 'tisn't that," she made answer, as though deprecating my reflection on her courage, "but Williams isn't gone, sir."

"But he is," said Sheppard. "I saw him myself two hours ago halfway to Llanellan."

Mrs. Main looked her incredulity. "If it wasn't his back I saw no more than two blessed minutes ago, I put it to you, whose was it, sir?"

I sat up, and we stared at each other. "Where was this?" I asked.

"I was leaving the kitchen for the pantry, sir, just preparatory with some dishes like, and, the blinds being down against the window that faces the courtyard, I see Williams' shadow—leastways what I took to be Williams'—pass across the blind, sir."

"It couldn't be Williams," said I after a pause. "Williams has never been in the castle since 2 o'clock, and, besides, the drawbridge is up."

"Did you see his face?" asked Sheppard.

"No, sir; it was on the blind like, but happening to have a question to put to him I just drops the dishes on the sideboard, and I run to the door, but when I'd got it open Williams was gone."

"It was not Williams," I repeated testily.

"What I took to be Williams, sir," corrected Mrs. Main, with gentle obstinacy.

"Did you hear any sound of footsteps?"

"No, sir, but then I was making a noise with the dishes like, and Williams walks very gentle."

"Oh, well," I murmured at length, "you must have been deceived, and if Williams was here he has gone since, and at any rate he won't want his supper."

When the housekeeper had retired I found Sheppard watching me. "What do you make of it, Ned?"

"I make nothing" I answered. "It's practically impossible for any one to get into the castle. We have had the bridge up nearly all day, but—you know my old adage, that it's better to be sure than sorry—we may as well have a look around."

Taking a candle we made a tour of the castle rooms and investigated all the corridors, peering into the dark corners. It was an arduous business, for I hardly realized the number of passages and crannies to be explored. Presently we both came to a stop on a simultaneous thought.

"This is really no use," I said. "It's quite impossible to exhaust all the possibilities of this house. And I still adhere to my previous notion that Mrs. Main was hardly in a sufficiently pacific state to judge between shadows."

"I'm with you there," said Sheppard cheerfully.

"Very well, then; bed," said I, and to bed we went, admirably tired with our excitement and our labors.

I must have been asleep for some hours when I awoke from dead unconsciousness with the presence of some one in the room oppressing me. Almost as I sat up I heard Montgomery's voice.

"Are you awake, Greatorex? There's some one about the house."

I sat still, striving to dissipate the confusion of my brain. Somewhere, far off, I remembered that I had heard this before. But with a strenuous effort of the will I threw off the dwindling bands of sleep and got out of bed. "We'll go and see," said I. "What time is it?"

"I don't know," said Montgomery as I lit a candle with fumbling fingers. "But my watch is over. I think it's about 12 or 1."

"Now, young man," I said, having pulled on some clothes, "what about this alarm of yours?"

LONG USED TO EARTHQUAKES

Golden Gate Metropolis Has Been Shaken Often In the Past.

PRESENT WORST EVER KNOWN

Some of the Skyscrapers and Other Buildings Destroyed — Magnificent City Hall In Ruins—Fires Arrested by Dynamite—Earthquake of 1868 Described by Mark Twain.

THE recent disastrous earthquake extending over so large a part of the Pacific coast region and wrecking such an extensive section of the city of San Francisco was not the first of these catastrophes known in the western metropolis, though by all odds the most damaging.

For many years the municipal authorities refused to permit tall buildings in the city because of the fear of earthquakes, several of which had already been experienced. Finally the interdiction was removed, however, and a number of skyscrapers resulted.

Prior to 1890 there was hardly a building in excess of five stories and only a few of that height. Today there is one eighteen stories high and quite a number from twelve to fourteen stories.

In the spring of 1898, about 10 o'clock one night, the city had a seismic shock that put to test its high structures. It was the worst earthquake since 1868, when for eight or nine blocks on the main street (Market) the ground was cracked open several inches.

In the upheaval of 1898 the tall buildings were given a fearful shaking, and some of their occupants were made dizzy and sick. The structures were uninjured, and ever since that time there has not been so much question of the safety of high buildings of modern construction—that is, buildings of structural iron frame and facings of pressed brick, terra cotta or stone.

It was M. H. De Young, the proprietor and editor of the Chronicle, who was the pioneer in this respect. He met with opposition from the municipal authorities fourteen years ago when he decided to erect a ten story house for his newspaper. It was believed to be a dangerous undertaking because of the earthquake fear, but Mr. De Young won out and thereby set an example of enterprise to other wealthy men who have since built more tall buildings. For instance, D. O. Mills, the New York banker, who owns a great deal of San Francisco property, has one of the tallest and finest structures in the city.

CITY HALL, WHICH WAS WRECKED.

Claus Spreckels, known throughout the country as the sugar king and the richest San Franciscan, owns a building seventeen stories high, commonly known as the Call building. On three of the corner sites, where Third street intersects Market, is located the great Spreckels building, the home of the Call; the De Young building, the home of the Chronicle, and the Hearst building, occupied by the Examiner, the three great Pacific coast newspapers having contributed handsomely to the building development of San Francisco in recent years. The city now has its share of tall buildings, one being eighteen stories in height. The major part of them are eight, ten and twelve stories, the eight storied being most numerous.

The Call and Examiner buildings were almost totally destroyed in the earthquake and many other skyscrapers were severely shaken, cracked and damaged.

One of the chief buildings which collapsed was the new postoffice. This was a substantial structure of granite, costing to exceed $5,000,000. While not striking from an architectural standpoint, the postoffice was impressive from its massiveness.

The Postal building was badly damaged, and the operating room was a wreck. Power of every kind was destroyed, and there were no lights, either gas or electric. Neither the Palace hotel nor the St. Francis was destroyed as far as the framework goes, but the inside plastering and decorations were greatly damaged.

The business section of the city from Market street to Mission street and from the bay back was almost completely wrecked.

The most conspicuous building in San Francisco, the city hall, is almost totally ruined. It cost from $6,000,000 to $7,000,000, took twenty-five years in construction and was surmounted by a dome 332 feet high. It was thought to be very solidly constructed, being built substantially of brick, with the walls covered by cement. The interior of the dome was decorated with expensive marbles taken from the Pacific coast mountains.

Another very fine building, which cost over $5,000,000, is the splendid hotel erected by Mrs. Herman Oelrichs on fashionable Nob hill. Mrs. Oelrichs, who is a daughter of the late Senator Fair, has shown fine taste in the architectural plans of Fairmont, the appropriate name of the new hotel. Seen from the bay this structure, with its classic outlines, makes the beholder think of a Greek temple. White and graceful, it looms above the busy market places, the great wholesale district, the crowded business section and picturesque Chinatown, which, by the way, is fast disappearing owing to the encroachments of commerce and the dwindling of the Chinese population.

Other imposing edifices, many of which have been more or less severely injured, are the Hotel St. Francis, the Palace hotel, the Hall of Justice, the Mutual Bank building, the Pacific Mutual Life building and the Callaghan building. The greatest property damage resulted in the manufacturing district and the greatest loss of life in the tenement house district.

The chief street of the city is Market, running diagonally for many miles. The destruction of many of the department stores and other business blocks on Market and Mission streets was almost complete. Fire added to the horrors of the situation, and, as the water mains had been burst by the shock, the fire department was helpless. The flames bit their way along Market street, and other fires started in different parts of the city.

As the earthquake occurred but a little after 5 o'clock in the morning, practically the entire population was in bed. Men and women rushed wildly forth in their night robes and fled in panic through the streets. Many were caught by the falling roofs and walls, and in the poorer districts the tenements collapsed like eggshells, crushing and suffocating their inmates before they had time to escape. In many cases fire finished the work of death, catching the victims as they were pinned still alive under the debris.

To arrest the spread of the fire along Market street many buildings were dynamited.

The track of one railroad was depressed four feet or more for a distance of three miles. At one point in the city the earth cracked open for a distance of six feet, leaving a yawning chasm of fathomless depth.

The destruction of all telegraph wires, except one belonging to the Postal union, made it almost impossible for the stricken city to communicate with the outside world. The severe injury to the Western Union and Postal offices, also the Associated Press, greatly added to the difficulty.

The practical destruction of six or eight blocks, coupled with the immense loss of life and damage to property throughout San Francisco and the entire coast region, makes this the worst earthquake disaster in American history, exceeding even the historic Charleston earthquake of a few years ago.

San Francisco has suffered from many slight seismic shocks, one of them occurring about a year ago. At that time a long article appeared in one of the papers, signed by a professor in one of the observatories near by, stating that there was no particular danger from these tremors of the earth's surface. The coast region, according to this writer, was newer than parts of the country farther east and was therefore settling. He said people should feel no alarm, as nothing serious was liable to happen.

Evidently the earth's crust in the Golden Gate region has been doing some more "settling."

The most severe earthquake San Francisco has known prior to the present one was in 1868. Quite a little damage resulted, though nothing remotely comparable to this. It was the 1868 shakeup that was made famous by Mark Twain. The most surprising thing the genial Mark saw at that time was the opening up of the ceiling of his room, the lips of the orifice working to and fro like a mouth and a brick slipping through and held in suspension, like one lone tooth on the jaw of an old man.

The last earthquake that occurred in San Francisco was in January, 1900. Several distinct shocks were felt early in the morning, causing the vibration of buildings all over the city. The chief building affected was the St. Nicholas hotel, which was severely shaken. The walls collapsed in certain parts of the structure, guests were thrown out of their beds and furniture was destroyed.

In 1904 there was a severe seismic disturbance in Los Angeles, which was felt throughout the city and for a radius of several miles around.

THE CALL BUILDING, ALSO DESTROYED.

SAN FRANCISCO IN HISTORY

Stricken City Long Permeated With an Air of Romance.

IN THE DAYS OF VIGILANTES

How the Metropolis of California Was Purged of Disorder—Lynching of Casey—The Days of the Forty-niners—Town Depopulated by the Rush of Gold Seekers.

SAN FRANCISCO, the earthquake stricken city, has long been permeated with an air of romance and adventure. Nowhere may one turn without being reminded of the legends that have been woven around the forty-niners and their immediate followers. The names of the streets and of the business blocks, such as Kearney, Sutter, Montgomery, Dupont, Flood, Crocker and Sharon, bring to the mind of the visitor long forgotten stories of riot or adventure and of fortunes whose vastness once excited his wonder or made him incredulous.

The site of the city was first visited by Europeans in 1769, and in 1775 Bucareli ordered a fort, presidio and mission founded on the bay. One year later, the year of the Declaration of Independence, the Spanish settlers began the work, and when Vancouver, the explorer, visited the place in 1792 the presidio represented the military authority, while the pueblo and mission stood for the civil and religious factors respectively. The mission was secularized in 1831 and a town laid out the year following.

In 1846 an American man-of-war, under command of Commodore John B. Montgomery, entered the harbor and hoisted the stars and stripes over the town. Mexico, which succeeded Spain as the owner of California, was then at war with the United States, and the act of Commodore Montgomery ended her dominion over San Francisco. Montgomery appointed Lieutenant Washington A. Bartlett to be Frisco's first alcalde, or mayor, under the new regime. Under Spanish and Mexican rule the town was a sleepy, unprogressive place, but with the coming of Americans and the discovery of gold in 1848 there came an era of growth and hustle. This did not eventuate at once, for the first news of the discovery of gold practically depopulated San Francisco.

The town was smitten as by a plague, and one historian thus describes what happened: "Its houses were left unoccupied and unprotected, its former trade ceased, its lots fell to a small part of their value, the two weekly newspapers were suspended, and the town, deserted by the bulk of its inhabitants, was at one time without a single officer clothed with civil authority."

After the first rush to the gold diggings the town began to regain its lost ground, and ere long the influx of gold seekers gave quite an impetus to its growth. The town was incorporated in April, 1850, and the first common council elected proceeded with diligence to plunder the city treasury. The same year the state was admitted to the Union, and when the steamer Oregon brought the news—there was no telegraphic communication in those days—business was entirely suspended and the entire population rushed to the wharfs to welcome the harbinger. The town had about 10,000 inhabitants at that time, and when the people were informed that the signal flags of the Oregon indicated that California was a sovereign state of the United States of America "a universal shout arose from 10,000 voices on the wharfs, in the streets, upon the hills, housetops and the world of shipping in the bay."

In its early history the city suffered from several disastrous fires. Between December, 1849, and June, 1851, six conflagrations played havoc with the growing young town. Better buildings were planned and several fire companies were organized. These were steps in the right direction. It was also discovered that the fires were started by criminals who profited by the confusion.

This fact and the inefficiency and corruption of the city government led a large number of citizens to organize the famous vigilance committee which ruled the place in 1851. Quite a number of crooks were lynched by the committee, others were driven out, like John Oakhurst, the leading figure in Bret Harte's "Outcasts of Poker Flat," and the city went through a purification process that was of great benefit to it.

The aspect of San Francisco at this time was not inspiring to inflowing gold seekers. It was a straggling medley of low, dingy adobes, frail wooden shanties, born in an afternoon, with a sprinkling of more respectable frame houses and a mass of canvas and rubber habitations. It was mainly a city of tents, rising in a crescent upon the shores of the cove. From Clark point it skirted the land to Telegraph hill, along the Clay street slopes, tapering away to the California street ridge. The larger number passed to the southwest shores of the cove, beyond the Market street ridge, a region sheltered from blustering winds and provided with good spring water and named the Happy Valley.

Stockton street, stretching from Sacramento to Green streets, presented the neatest cluster of dwellings, and Powell street was the abode of churches, for of the six churches in existence in the middle of 1850 three graced its sites and two stood upon cross streets, within half a block. Mason street, above it, was really the western limit of the city, as Green street was the northern. Beyond Mason street ran the trail to the Presidio, past scattered cottages, cabins and sheds amid dairies and gardens, with a branch path to the Marine hospital, on [illegible] street, and another to the North Beach anchorage, where speculators were planning a wharf to attract settlement.

After the vigilance committee disbanded the criminal element became bolder, and in 1856 the crime and corruption in the city had become intolerable to those who wished to live a decent and orderly life. When [illegible] King of the Bulletin, who had denounced the thugs, was murdered by James P. Casey, a new vigilance organization was created, and in a few days Casey and another murderer named Cora were executed in front of the committee's headquarters. Many lawbreakers were later put to death, and the regime of the California "bad man" came to an end.

It has been asserted that San Francisco is the most cosmopolitan city in the world, and by cosmopolitan is meant a population from all parts of the world. Not long ago the records indicated that 43 per cent of the people of the city were born in foreign lands, not in two or three different countries, but in practically every land under the sun. According to the national census reports for 1890, San Francisco had a total population of 298,997. Of these 172,186 were native born and 126,811 were born outside of the United States. Fully half the grown persons in the community removed to California from alien lands, while a large percentage of the other half and of the general body of children were of foreign parentage. In 1900 San Francisco had a population of 342,782, of which 34.1 per cent was foreign born.

San Francisco has long been famed as one of the "wide open" cities of the United States. As in the days of 1849, the gambler devotes himself to his vocation with little interference from the authorities. Prior to the earthquake two of the most prominent corners in the city were occupied by gambling dens. One of them, known as the Cafe Royal, has been a veritable gold mine for its proprietors.

The California supreme court has rendered a decision to the effect that the game of draw poker is not a game of chance, but involves judgment and other elements as well as chance or luck, and because of this decision these places are permitted to be maintained.

They are frequented by a hard looking crowd of men, and many scandals are told associated with these places. A visitor's life is probably safe in these resorts, but his money is not. It is said that the son of the premier of British Columbia was fleeced of $8,500 in the Cafe Royal a few years ago. He lost $1,500 in cash, but stopped payment on $7,000 in checks.

San Francisco has forty-seven square miles of territory, or about 30,000 acres, within the municipal limits. The finest residences are on Nob hill and Pacific heights, both of which districts command magnificent views of the bay and the Golden Gate. The city has six large parks and twenty-two small ones, and Golden Gate park occupies over 1,000 acres.

Echoes and Architects.

"It is possible to make echoes," said an architect. "It is, indeed, easier to make than to destroy them. In the past men built their great temples and cathedrals with no thought of acoustics; hence when the preacher preached echoes rolled freely amid the groinings of the roof, down the rows of sculptured columns and round and round the nave. With wires strung here and with tapestries spread there, many of the echoes of the old world buildings have been obliterated. There are echo experts—builders acquainted with the science of acoustics whose specialty is echoes' destruction. Sometimes their tasks are hard. Today an architect takes thought of the echo. His building is constructed so as to exclude this intruder. And, knowing how to exclude it, he knows how to welcome it also. I have frequently in landscape work put up summer houses and arranged rocks so as to create an echo there."—Exchange.

ANNIE OAKLEY
THE WORLD'S GREATEST LADY RIFLE SHOT USES AND RECOMMENDS
Newbro's Herpicide
The original remedy that "kills the dandruff germ"

"Travelling as I do continuously, I have been troubled a great deal with dandruff and falling hair, and until I tried Herpicide I never found a remedy that was satisfactory.

"Herpicide is a delightful preparation that fulfils the claims made for it, and no lady's toilet is complete without it. I highly recommend it to my friends.
(Signed) ANNIE OAKLEY"

It is certainly significant that Miss Oakley, the celebrated rifle shot and theatrical star who has traveled so extensively abroad, should choose Newbro's Herpicide as the most efficacious toilet remedy for the scalp. No one will doubt her opportunity to choose the best and those who have seen the natty and winsome Miss Oakley, will not doubt her power of discrimination in matters of this sort.

Newbro's Herpicide is a scientific germicide and prophylactic for the hair and scalp, it destroys the germ or microbe that causes dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair after which the hair will grow as nature intended. Extraordinary results follow the use of Newbro's Herpicide.

If your hair is dull, brittle or lustreless, don't wait until it begins to fall, but save it with Newbro's Herpicide. In addition to its wonderful medicinal qualities—Newbro's Herpicide is the daintiest and most delightfully refreshing hair dressing available. The first application proves its goodness. Try It.

Herpicide contains no grease, it will no stain nor dye.

City Will Accept The Settlement

Representative Meeting Last Night Endorses the Proposed Action of the City Council in Accepting Half the Taxes Due--Clear Statement Made of How Matters Stand--A Comprehensive Resolution Adopted.

The public meeting called by the Mayor to discuss the rolling mills sale and more particularly in regard to the settlement by the city relinquishing a portion of the taxes standing against the concern, was held last evening in the Council chamber. It was, though not largely attended, a representative meeting, as many of the heaviest taxpayers in the city were present. Amongst those who attended were the following:

Mayor Sulman, ex-Mayor Johnson, J. Cummins, R. Tannahill, Walter Alford, R. Rabbitts, Ald. Marsh, H. F. Ketcheson, A. E. Lewis, P. Hayes, Ald. Panter, J. S. Peck, W. H. Robinson, J. Caldwell, W. B. Northrup, M. P., F. R. Lingham, J. Milligan, J. H. Starling, R. Frederick, B. S. Sills, Col Ponton, P. Wims, H. Taylor, J. H. Anderson, Dr. MacColl, S. S. Lazier, E. L. Palen, J. K. McCargar, C. M. Stork, Police Magistrate Flint, A. McGie, W. B. Deacon.

THE MAYOR OPENS THE BALL.

Mayor Sulman occupied the chair and briefly stated the object of the meeting. The rolling mills had been sold, but a clear title could not be given to the property until the matter of taxes against it had been settled. The suit pending would have to be got out of the way. There was on deposit in the bank $3,500 for back taxes, and this was in litigation. The proposition which the Council desired to make and which would be accepted by the purchaser of the mills, was that this money be divided, namely, $1750 to the city and $1750 to the purchaser, and that all encumbrances of taxes upon the premises be removed up to January 1st, 1906. His Worship said if this were done the prospects were that the mills would soon be running. The Council desired an expression of opinion from the citizens in regard to the matter. The agreement with the purchaser was that the mills must be in full operation within a year in order to earn any of the bonus.

HOW MATTERS STAND.

Mr. J. W. Johnson desired to know the whole history in regard to the mills and in what position matters stood.

Mr. W. B. Northrup replied at some length, detailing the Kirkwood & McKinnon deal, which proved a failure, and also the sale (as thought at the time) to a French syndicate. The property was put up for sale a year ago, but no purchaser was found. A few days ago Mr. Wardrope, of Ottawa, appeared upon the scene and paid $30,000 for the works. There was paid into the bank $3,500 for taxes. This the city claims, whilst the purchasers do not think they should pay the taxes, and there the matter stood. Whether the city should allow a portion of this amount to be deducted from the purchase amount was the question. The proposition was that the city should get $1750 and the other $1750 go to the purchasers, which would mean that taxes would be paid up to January 1st, 1906. Mr. Wardrope will forfeit all rights to a bonus if the mills are not running within a year.

THE MASTER CONFIRMS.

Col Lazier said the matter as outlined by Mr. Northrup was perfectly correct. When he sold the mills the other day, he thought the sale was a good one, and considered everything would be satisfactory. He thought the city would have a perfect right to settle the suit pending re taxes. In the interests of the city he thought that there would be no trouble to settle the suit, and even if they did lose some of the tax money, it would mean much to have the mills running. He was prepared to hold up both hands for a settlement as proposed.

In answer to a question from Mr. Johnson, Col. Lazier said a settlement could legally be made, and he hoped it would be.

MR. FLINT IS IN FAVOR.

Mr. Flint thought the citizens would uphold the Council in the proposal made, and he wished to see the mills running. If a clear title can be given by the proposition made he would endorse it. The settlement was, in his opinion an excellent one. The citizens should uphold the Council in this matter. He moved the following resolution:

"That this meeting of ratepayers and citizens assembled in the Council Chamber, pursuant to an invitation of His Worship Mayor Sulman, by advertisement in both daily newspapers of April 24th and 26th inst., heartily approve of the proposed settlement of the action of the Iron and Steel Company of Canada, Limited, vs. Belleville, whereby the $3500 now on deposit in this action under order of the High Court be equally divided between the above named company and the city in settlement of all claims in said action and all taxes up to January 1st, 1906, against the rolling mills property, and also approve of the terms of the proposed purchase of the rolling mills by J. W. Wardrope, whereby benefits of the Kirkwood by-law are to be extended to the purchaser and his assigns, provided he commence operations in the way of repairs within four months from date of purchase and have the mills in running order and run same according to the terms of the Kirkwood by-law within a year, and if these terms as to commencing operations and running are not complied with within the times aforesaid, then he and his assigns are to forfeit the benefits obtainable from the city under the Kirkwood by-law."

MR. JOHNSON SECONDS.

Mr. J. W. Johnson said he had much pleasure in seconding the motion. It was in the interest of all to have the matter settled, and the citizens should back up the Council. It was apparent that when the mills were in operation the city would be benefited. We should do just as a business man would do in this matter and effect a settlement. We want to see the mills an active industry, not a monument of inactivity. He heartily endorsed the motion.

COL. PONTON IS IN ACCORD.

Col Ponton, as a ratepayer, was in hearty accord with the compromise proposed. It would be a settlement, and litigation would be over. The Council, he considered, had the power to meet the exigencies in this case and settle it. The meeting was representative and represented a large amount of property. The action proposed should be endorsed, as it would prove of benefit to the city generally.

ALD. PANTER WANTS TO SEE 'EM RUN.

Ald Panter said he would like to get half of the taxes for 1905, but he would forego this if the mills are put in operation. If the mills are not in full operation in one year the bonus came back to the city, but he did not wish to see this. He hoped the mills would soon be running.

OTHERS CONCUR.

Mr. James Cummins said he was proud of the action taken and would endorse all that had been said.

Messrs. A. E. Lewis, Walter Alford, C. M. Stork, R. Rabbitts, R. Tannahill, W. B. Deacon and F. R. Lingham were called upon and all expressed themselves as being in hearty accord with the resolution.

Mr. Starling stated that when the mills were running the pay sheet every two weeks was about $5,000. Some of the time as many as 250 hands were employed.

THE RESOLUTION ADOPTED.

The motion was finally adopted unanimously, by a standing vote.

The meeting was closed after three cheers had been given for the Mayor.

SOCIETY WEDDING THIS AFTERNOON.

MISS ETHEL J. ROBERTSON, DAUGHTER OF THE LATE ALEX. ROBERTSON, M. P., BECOMES THE BRIDE OF A MONTREAL MEDICAL GENTLEMAN.

A wedding occurred in this city at 2.30 this afternoon in which society was deeply interested. An unique feature was the fact that the bride was married in the same house and same room as were her parents. Many popular associations cluster around the name of Robertson in this city, thus it will be seen that the wedding, this afternoon, of Miss Ethel J. Robertson, daughter of the late Alex. Robertson, M.P., was an event in which Belleville society was, as remarked before, quite properly, deeply interested. The groom was Dr. Overton W. Bradley, of Montreal.

The wedding took place in the drawing-room of "The Cottage," George St., the historic residence of Mrs. George Stewart, which was charmingly and tastefully decorated. The color scheme of the drawing-room was pink and green—tulips and pussy willows being used.

Rev. George Ross Beamish, Rural Dean and Rector of St. Thomas', performed the ceremony.

The bride was married in a gown of white point d'esprit. She wore the traditional veil, which was fastened with a diamond star, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaids were gowned in white, with pink wreaths in their hair. They carried bouquets of pink carnations. The bridesmaids were Misses Bee Stewart, Georgie Stewart and Hulme, of this city, and Miss Dora Bradley, of Ottawa, sister of the groom.

The groomsman was Rev. Mr. Wheitley, of Montreal, a Church of England minister.

Little Miss Paddie Grace was a charming flower girl.

The ushers were Mr. Burnham, of Peterboro; Mr. Marks, of Toronto; and Mr. Wainwright, of Ottawa.

The bride was given away by her cousin, Mr. D. E. K. Stewart, of Madoc.

The groom's present to the bride was a handsome ring of rubies and diamonds.

The wedding presents were magnificent, being rich and elegant to a superlative degree.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the wedding dejeuner and a reception took place, and at five o'clock Dr. and Mrs. Bradley left for the west. They will, on their return, reside in Montreal.

Following is a list of the invited guests:

Montreal—Mr., Mrs. and Miss Jaques, Mr. and Mrs. Tye, Miss Egan, Mrs. Burch, Miss Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, Mr. Frank H. Jaques, Mr., Mrs. and the Misses Duclos, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Hill, Dr. Adams, Dr. and Mrs. Griffith, Mr. Guy Bell, Mr. Arthur Northrup.

Ottawa—Mrs. Bacon, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Shannon, Col. and Mrs. J. Lyons Biggar, Mr. and Mrs. O'Hara, Mr. Neil Stewart, Mrs. Harriet Stuart, Mr. J. and Mr. Hector McRae, Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Bryson, Mr. and Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. Macara.

Toronto—Mr. and Mrs. Grace, Mr. Marks, Mr. and Mrs. Snow, Mr. Jack Hungerford, Mr. Harry Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Parke, Miss Dickson, Miss B. Roberts.

Kingston—Miss Carter, Judge Britton, Mr. and Mrs. Brock, Capt. and Mrs. Arthur H. Powell.

Cobourg—Mrs. Wickstead.

Edmonton—Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald.

Trenton—Mrs. Burns.

Halifax—Mr. Sheffield Bacon.

Boston—Mr. Salsbury.

Belleville—Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Beamish, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Mr. and Mrs. Hulme, Mr. and Mrs. Denmark, Mr. Tannahill, Mr. and Mrs. Chisholm, Mrs. (Dr.) Ross, Miss Hawley, Mrs. and Miss Lister, Miss Norah Lazier, Col. and Mrs. Ponton, Miss Carman, Mr. Stanley Carman, Mr. Clifford Walker, Mrs. and Miss Yarwood, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. C. Phillips, Mrs. Stephen Gillum, the Misses Hope, Dr. and Mrs. Farley, Mr. Frank Wallbridge and Miss Wallbridge, Miss Bogart.

The Toronto Horse Show

NOTES OF A BRIEF VISIT TO THE QUEEN CITY'S GREAT ANNUAL EQUINE EVENT—"BEAUTY AND THE BEAST."

Lovers of that noble animal, the horse, missed a treat if they failed to attend the Horse Show which has been going on at the Toronto Armories during the present week. Incidentally it may be remarked that many Belleville people did attend the Horse Show, and thoroughly enjoyed everything they saw.

As everybody knows, the now celebrated annual event in Toronto is a case of "beauty and the beast." Beauty is up in the reserved seats (which, by the way, cost $1.50 per) and the beast is down on the tanbark. To a "mere man," who grows dizzy over a Belleville millinery opening, the sight of those gorgeously dressed daughters of Eve in the Toronto Armory last Thursday evening was something to be remembered with awe and admiration. Don't expect us to tell you about the costumes, but about the horses, well, that's a trifle easier.

This week's Horse Show is the twelfth Toronto has seen, and those who should know say it was the best of the lot. The boxes sold for high figures, and incidentally it may be remarked that a former resident of this city purchased one at a cost of $85. Among those from this city who took in the Toronto show on Thursday were Ald. Sinclair, Mr. J. S. McKeown, Ald. Marsh, Mr. C. J. Bowell, Col. Lazier, Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, Mr. J. V. Jenkins, Mr. A. Walker and others. Mr. and Mrs. "Tom" Power, of this city, accompanied by Mr. Griffith, of the Kilties' Band, were present on Thursday evening. Ald. Marsh, Messrs. Jenkins, McKeown, Ketcheson and Walker went up to the annual meeting of the Mystic Shriners. Other Belleville people in Toronto on Thursday last were Mayor Sulman, City Clerk Mikel, County Attorney Anderson, Mr. W. J. McCamon and Mr. W. J. McNab. It will readily be seen that, with the above gentlemen in the city, Toronto was en fete on Thursday. But to return to the Horse Show.

It was about 8 o'clock when the writer took a seat in the reserved chairs (they were uncomfortable enough to make anyone feel reserved) and settled down to listen to the splendid music being played by the band of the Tenth Royals. Suddenly the music changed to a stirring march, and here came the Queen's Own, Toronto's crack regiment. They entered the big drill hall at one end and marched through to the other, where they made their exit. The regiment was nearly 900 strong, and looked remarkably "fit" and ready for business. The large crowd applauded the boys vigorously. They were on their way to the station to entrain for New York, where they were to take part in a big military tournament.

The soldiers gone, people settled down to watch the horses. And surely it was a sight worth watching. Handsome, sleek-coated beauties, prancing proudly, their coats shining like the proverbial "nigger's heel." Some were led in by grooms and made to show their paces, whilst others came in attached to dogcarts, the harness shining and sparkling. The judges, in evening dress and stovepipe hats, looked as solemn as owls. The crowd picked its favorites, but did not always arrive at the same conclusion as the judges. One of the most attractive features was the tandem class. There were many entries. The winner was Hon. Adam Beck, a member of the Whitney Cabinet, and second place was captured by Mrs. Adam Beck, wife of the winner. The lady, gowned from head to foot in spotless white, guided her dancing beauties like a veteran, and made an instantaneous hit with the crowd, which evidently badly wanted to see her secure the red ribbon. However, this was one instance in which Adam got ahead of Eve. The last classes on the programme were jumping contests, which roused the crowd to quite a pitch of excitement, and there were many little feminine ejaculations, as the scarlet-coated riders swept furiously round the ring on their finely-drawn mounts. With few exceptions, the horses proved to be fine timber-toppers. Thirteen members of the Toronto Hunt Club tried for supremacy. Two of them came to grief as their horses refused the jumps, the riders losing their seats, but luckily sustaining no injury. The incident, however, gave the contest quite a little spice of excitement. The last event was a high-jumping contest, and the crowd waxed enthusiastic when first prize was taken by a Toronto horse, which beat a crack from New York.

At first, the numerous entries went over the jump, set at 5 feet, with ease and grace, but, as the white bars were slowly piled up, the ease and part of the grace vanished and the interest was enhanced. The six foot bar began the thinning out process, and, at the final jump but three horses remained, and but one, Miss Pepper's Myopia, made the height of 6 feet 10 inches. The animal rose to the jump on the first trial, but carried away the top bar. On his second attempt he took unto himself wings and soared cleanly over the obstacle amid a storm of cheers.

So ended one session of the Horse Show, which was well worth a visit by anybody. It is safe to say that prettier or better-cared-for horses would be seen in very few places in the world.

BY SEA AND LAND.

PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT AT UNIVERSITY CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

Residents of College Hill and vicinity spent a pleasant and educative evening in the University Methodist Church last night, at the re-opening of the church after having had its capacity considerably increased by the addition of a gallery. The Sunday School there, under the superintendency of the Rev. Prof. E. R. Doxsee, and a like enthusiastic staff of officers and teachers, has so grown as to need more space, and the erection of the gallery gives room and isolation for Miss Gardiner's class of young ladies, numbering about fifty. The total membership of the school is nearly two hundred. The thought of the entertainment was "A trip by sea and land." Each person on entering was checked through for the trip by receiving a tag, with his or her name on it, and wearing it during the trip.

The songs and readings all were illustrative of the sea or places of note. The conductors of the trip were Miss Gardiner, preceptress of Albert College, and Mr. Wm. Johnson. Songs were rendered by Messrs. Harry Gordon and James D. Dyer; readings by Miss Trotter and Miss Brown; a duet by Mrs. Nicholson and Miss Cumming, and a chorus of juvenile "Jack Tars," the four boys of which so well took the part of sailors as to merit the heartiest applause. The religious opening and closing exercises were conducted by the Rev. John Ferguson, and Rev. Dr. Dyer.

WALTER LUCAS' CASE DISMISSED.

TRIAL OF JNO. LUCAS, ALLEGED GRAIN THIEF, GOING ON THIS AFTERNOON.

The case of Walter and John Lucas, who were charged with theft of grain from G. T. R. bonded cars, was again up to-day before Magistrate Flint.

A large number of spectators were present.

Mr. Anderson represented the Crown; Mr. Porter appeared on behalf of Walter Lucas, and Mr. Carnew for John Lucas.

The forenoon was taken up in argument between the counsel in reference to Walter's case, the Crown contending that the circumstances were such as to connect him with the transaction.

Mr. Porter argued that there was nothing to connect Walter with the offence and asked for his acquittal.

The Magistrate reviewed the evidence at considerable length and dismissed the case against Walter Lucas. The case against John Lucas was continued at 2.30 this afternoon.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE HOLY CITY."

The above religious drama drew a small house to the Carman last night. The play deserved all the flattering press notices it has received, the performance last night being first-class in every respect. Religious themes for plays, however, do not appeal to all theatre-goers.

The New Skating Rink Has Been Started.

Mr. Richard Arnott informs us that he has started operations in earnest on the new skating rink, which will be erected on the corner of Pinnacle and Dundas streets. It will be up-to-date in every respect, with fine seating capacity and dressing rooms. The building will be 212 feet long and 178 feet wide, with an ice surface of 190 x 78 feet. The rink will, Mr. Arnott says, be completed in two months.

Firemen Had Run.

Shortly before 7 o'clock last evening the fire brigade was called, the cause of alarm being a bonfire in the yard of Mr. J. Caton's on Pinnacle street. The grass became ignited, also, we are told, the refuse from the gas works, and the premises near by were threatened. The blaze was soon extinguished.

Yesterday afternoon some long grass near Mr. McCamon's residence, on Moira street, was set on fire and, but for the exertions of some neighbors, serious damage may have resulted, as the blaze reached the barn and fence. No alarm was given.

Cured of Drunkenness

How a Montreal lady cured her husband of drunkenness with a secret home remedy.

"I want to tell you that tasteless Samaria Prescription has entirely cured my husband of drunkenness so quickly and simply that I am astonished. How glad I am that I confided in you and wrote for your free sample package. The sample tablets I got from you checked his drinking, and before I had used the full treatment he was permanently cured. I gave him the remedy in his tea, and as it had no taste or smell, he never knew he was taking it. I want others to know; so you can use this letter, but please not my name yet. I may say that my husband's health is better in every way than for years."

Free Package and pamphlet giving full particulars, testimonials and price sent in plain sealed envelope. Correspondence sacredly confidential. Address: THE SAMARIA REMEDY CO., 45 Jordan Chambers, Jordan St., Toronto, Canada.

Begin treatment by taking one "Fruit-a-tives" tablet three time a day and two at bedtime—for 3 or 4 days.

Take the tablets twenty minutes before meals, and always drink half a tumblerful of cold water (not iced) with each tablet.

Then take two tablets every night for a week—and then one every night for a month.

Be careful about the diet—eat regularly—avoid veal, pork, dark meat fowls, and never drink milk with meals.

Bathe frequently—dress warmly—exercise sensibly—take "Fruit-a-tives" faithfully—and see how much better you are at the end of the month.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets Are just for women and Contain just what every Sick and Run-down Woman Needs.

Do you know that distinguished physicians say that ninety per cent. of the ills of women result from your peculiar organism.

This should make clear to you the need and advantage of taking a remedy that contains uterine and female tonics.

You know, of course, that remedies made to sell to men as well as women do not contain these. They cannot.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women (not for men) contain them all, and you don't have to take our word for this. Chemists and physicians, whose standing makes their statements reliable, say that not one single medical ingredient of any value to women has been omitted from them.

What is the result? Simply this. When you buy a box of these tablets you get a remedy compounded just for your special needs, and one containing all that medical science can supply in this twentieth century to make you a healthy woman. What more could you ask?

And unless your experience should be different than that of other women, you need nothing more. If you don't feel as well as you would like to, try these tablets.

They Make Healthy Women.

McINTOSH BROS.

ETHICS OF MR. JUNKIN

Hypothecation Excuse to Conceal Improper Investments.

Sir Henry M. Pellatt Is Exonerated From Knowledge of the Resolution, and Made Reparation by Paying $79,000 Loss on Securities in Full—C. P. R. Shares Were Handed Over to Him to Carry Losses on D. C. & S.

Toronto, April 28.—Mr. J. F. Junkin, managing director of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co., began his third day on the witness stand before the Royal Insurance Commission yesterday morning.

To Mr. Tilley, Mr. Junkin finished recounting the names of committees that had to do with the Manufacturers' Life here and elsewhere.

He was asked if any policyholder had ever asked for information or any list of policyholders had been issued. Witness said "No." If a policyholder were to ask for a list of policyholders entitled to vote, he would turn to his card system. He would not be compelled to furnish such information by law. If he thought it was some rival agent he would decline.

Policyholders in Company's Hands.

"He would get the information if he was prepared to vote in a certain way; if not he probably would not get it; he would be practically in your hands?"

"Yes."

This matter had never been tested. He was asked if he knew why policyholders were put on a different basis from shareholders regarding voting by proxy. He said his company simply followed the old charter under which policyholders must come personally and vote.

"There is no way by which policyholders are supplied with information as to who are entitled to vote that you know of?"

"No."

The Call Loans.

Mr. Shepley, the senior counsel for the Government, took his first turn at examination during the morning. He sought from Mr. Junkin more complete information regarding the call loans which Mackenzie and Mann obtained from the Manufacturers' Life. The first loan was for $125,000, a part of which was devoted to the purchase of the 4,000 shares which the two directors held. The stock was hypothecated for the loan, and Mackenzie and Mann also gave as security the Inverness Railway bonds. To this security the Inspector of Insurance objected, and the Manufacturers' Life substituted other bonds. The first loan of $125,000 to the railway firm was supplemented by a later and smaller loan when they were amalgamated, the total amount being $152,000, which was loaned in this instance to Mackenzie and Mann, Limited. For this Mackenzie and Mann gave as collateral 1,600 shares of Canada Lake & Ocean Navigation, 1,650 shares of Imperial Rolling stock, and 2,566 shares of Vancouver Gas Co. The 4,000 shares of stock in the Manufacturers' Life purchased by Mackenzie and Mann were also pledged.

Loan Money on Own Stock.

"Did you think it was right to advance money on your own stock?" asked Mr. Shepley.

"I don't think it is."

Turning to the charter of the Navigation Co., Mr. Shepley showed that it was a special charter, not under the general act. Mr. Shepley called attention to the names mentioned in the incorporation.

Witness said he knew that Mackenzie and Mann were connected with the navigation company, but considered this no reason why its shares should not be accepted as security by his company. There were few large companies in and around Toronto with which Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann and Pellatt were not connected.

Methods of High Finance.

Mr. Shepley, however, went into the ethics of the transaction and asked Mr. Junkin if he considered it objectionable that the members of his board of the Manufacturers' Life should be members of the board of a company borrowing money from the Manufacturers'. Mr. Junkin would not admit that it was wrong. He thought that the principle was not bad. As managing director of the Manufacturers' Life he would not refuse to accept Toronto Railway stock, for instance, although Messrs. Mann, Mackenzie and Pellatt were members of both boards. He was prepared to say that he would accept the stock of any company. In short, he would buy a good investment for the Manufacturers' Life no matter where he found it. He wanted to find the cheapest market always.

"And the directors of other companies would naturally look for the highest market to sell securities," remarked Mr. Shepley; "don't you see any conflict of duty, when the same directors are on each board?"

"A conflict of duty would not necessarily arise," was Mr. Junkin's answer.

Crow's Nest and Dominion Coal.

Under examination Mr Junkin then proceeded to explain the investment of the company in Crow's Nest and Dominion Coal. The company secured 202 shares of Crow's Nest Pass and 1,825 shares of Dominion Coal. The price of the stock dropped and Mr. Junkin saw ten of the directors who were mainly responsible for accepting the security, and they agreed that they should personally stand the loss.

These ten directors formed the Prudential Securities Co., with the object of taking the stock off the company's hands and holding it until the market improved. The insurance company advanced $28,500 to certain of the directors on $30,500 of securities ("a narrow margin," commented counsel), but the remainder of the $240,000 was put up in cash. The sale of the stock to Mackenzie and Mann and its repurchase was a nominal sale, the witness admitted, and Mr. Shepley tried to make the witness say that the repayment of Mackenzie and Mann's loan and their borrowing it back again was a similar temporary device. "They didn't give you their cheque until they were sure they would get it back again?" said Mr. Shepley.

On Sir H. M. Pellatt's Advice.

On the beginning of the afternoon session, Mr. Shepley asked the witness if Col. Pellatt, the vice-president, was the broker for the company and who advised the sale of the different stocks.

Col. Pellatt was on the finance committee, said witness. He advised the sale of stock in conjunction with other members of the board of directors.

"I see on May 16, 1902, cheque from Manufacturers' Life for $30,000, and on May 19, you are credited with 500 shares Canadian Pacific and 50 shares of Commercial Cable, leaving a debit balance of $74,000. Then again there are interest cheques. Am I right?" asked counsel.

"Yes."

"Then I see no more items until August, when Pellatt appears the debtor to the amount of $41,000, which was balanced by a sale of stock. When did you begin to give Pellatt security when you gave him orders to buy?"

"If we did not pay outright, Pellatt held stock until he received our cheque."

"Was this purchase of C. P. R. on Sept. 30, 1902, 100 shares, to be paid for in installments. Did Pellatt owe the company on this date $103,200?"

"No, that is not accurate."

"What is the correct transaction?"

"Col. Pellatt referred to the matter of Dominion Steel as a profitable investment. It was then selling above 80, and in his opinion, would go to par."

"Was it a dividend-paying stock?"

"No."

"Was it authorized under the act?"

"No."

"Did Pellatt deal in the stock himself?"

"No."

Promised "No Loss."

Witness had hesitated, but Col. Pellatt seemed so confident that the directors finally decided to buy. Col. Pellatt had promised that he would see that the company would make no loss.

"When the stock started to go down was the matter reported to the finance committee."

"I saw him myself, but we did not see the committee."

"Was the desirability of keeping such a transaction out of the minutes gone into with Pellatt?"

"Not at that time. I told Col. Pellatt that he would have to assume the loss himself. This he agreed to do."

"But the stock was still dropping?"

"Yes."

"Now at the departmental enquiry it seems the C. P. R. was hypothecated to Pellatt. How did he come to have it?"

"We could not pay for Steel stock, so we sold 400 shares of Commercial Cable to get a loan from the bank to carry the Steel."

"Who do you mean by 'we'?"

"Mr. Junkin."

"Was the board consulted?"

"No."

"How did Pellatt come to have the C. P. R. stock?"

"Later on we bought 400 shares of Dominion Coal to improve the Steel transaction. Col. Pellatt had sold the Commercial Cable and we gave him 600 shares of C. P. R. to take the place of Cable."

Knew It Was Improper.

"You knew that this was an improper transaction?"

"Yes."

"None of these transactions appear in the securities account?"

"The Steel and Coal do not. The others do."

"On March 31, 1903, there is a deal of 400 Dominion Coal delivered and 400 C. P. R. received. Why was that?"

"To help out the Steel."

"Then that is how Pellatt got the 1,000 shares?"

"Yes."

"When this advanced stage was reached, was the board then told of the stock gambling?"

"No."

"When was it brought to the attention of the board?"

"The next October."

"Was there anything done in 1903 about the matter?"

"Yes."

"What was done?"

Squaring Things.

"Col. Pellatt took over the Coal and Steel and paid for the stocks himself. We made him a loan of $46,000 on his property at the Beach. Then on other securities we loaned him in all $101,300."

"Did you then tell the finance committee that all this occurred by Col. Pellatt hypothecating an unauthorized investment?"

"No."

"You are responsible for the resolution passed at a meeting of the board re the transaction which was improperly conducted?"

"Yes."

"Did Col. Pellatt tell you that his own transactions had been disastrous?"

"Yes."

Junkin Takes Blame.

Mr. Shepley then referred to the minutes of the finance committee meeting held in October, 1903, when it had been decided to give a loan to Col. Pellatt on the ground that he could not deliver 1,000 shares of C. P. R., which he had bought for the company and hypothecated.

"Who gave this explanation to the finance committee?" asked Mr. Shepley.

"I did," said Mr. Junkin.

"That is the explanation given to the insurance department by Mr. Junkin was an incorrect version, fixed up to induce the company to make a loan to Col. Pellatt to pay for investments in Dominion Coal and Steel, about which the board knew nothing?"

"Yes."

"What is the history of the transaction since that?"

"Everything is paid off."

Had Solicitor's Advice.

Witness took the responsibility of this. He said he had consulted the solicitor before preparing the resolution placed before the finance committee on the subject. It was left to the committee whether or not the mortgage given by Pellatt should be registered.

"When the department found this mortgage, you did not tell them the real terms of the transaction?"

"No. I just showed the resolution."

"Then this is the first time you have told anyone the real facts?"

"Well, I said something about it when the affair was being discussed at Ottawa."

Pellatt Had Made Reparation.

S. H. Blake, K. C., said, addressing the commissioners:

"I wanted Your Honor to give me an opportunity of asking these questions. I am representing Mr. Pellatt. He has done wrong in the way in which these transactions have been presented, but he made every restitution in his power by paying up the whole loss to the extent of $79,000."

When questioned further on "business ethics," the witness held to the same moral ideals that he had propounded at the morning session.

The Prudential Co.

Mr. Tilley—"Who were the ten directors that formed the Prudential Securities Co.?"

"Messrs. D. B. Mann, Wm. Mackenzie, S. G. Beatty, Lloyd Harris, Col. Pellatt, J. Mason, E. R Wood, E J. Lennox, J. F. Junkin and A. E. Patterson."

"This company was not formed as a paramount one to carry on the business of buying and selling stocks?"

"No."

Counsel then read the agreement between the Prudential and the Manufacturers' Life.

"This company was formed to take care of the unauthorized investments—18, 25 Dominion Coal and 202 Crow's Nest Coal. But there were also transferred to the Prudential some Mexican Power and Ontario Electric Development stocks?"

Mr. Junkin said that the Prudential had borrowed from other sources as well as Manufacturers' Life. The Manufacturers' Life had been reimbursed by directors for the loss on Crow's Nest Coal and Dominion Coal. They then formed the Prudential to reimburse themselves.

The court adjourned till Tuesday at 10.30 a. m.

Usually Effective.

"Sometimes," said the merchant, "I feel like the poet who wanted a lodge in some vast wilderness. I yearn for solitude and silence."

"Well," replied his friend sympathetically, "it's an expensive taste to gratify, but you might start in by taking your advertisement out of the newspapers."

TWO DRAINAGE AREAS

Ontario Is to Be So Divided, But the Bill Stands For Debate.

Hon. Mr. Monteith Introduces Bills to Prevent Fraud in Cheese-Making, For Suppression of Foul Brood Among Bees, and to Appoint Advisory Council For O. A. C.—Fifty-Seven Bills Receive Royal Assent.

Toronto, April 28.—The second reading of Mr. Hanna's Drainage Act amendment, to divide the province into two districts for the administration of the drainage law, raised a storm in the Legislature yesterday. It was eventually held over till Tuesday to give the House full opportunity to discuss it.

Frauds in Cheese-Making.

Hon. Mr. Monteith introduced a bill to amend the act to prevent frauds in the manufacture of cheese and butter. Mr. Monteith said this was to meet the views of the dairymen.

Another bill introduced by the Minister of Agriculture was entitled "An Act for the Suppression of Foul Brood Among Bees." It repeals the old act. The only important change is that the appointment and direction of apiary inspectors is taken out of the hands of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association and will in future be under the control of the Minister. More than one inspector may be provided for carrying on the work and appointments are to be made by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council instead of by the association.

Council For O. A. C.

A third bill amends the Act Respecting the O. A. C. It provides for the appointment of an advisory board in accordance with the recommendation of the university commission. Its members are to consist of the deputy minister of agriculture, who shall be chairman, the president of the college, three graduates or associates of the college and two practical farmers who are graduates. Under the old act this board was composed of not more than seven practical farmers and no provision was made for the representation of the graduates and associates of the college.

A number of bills were read a third time, among them being that respecting the Gamey money in the Court of Judicature.

Several bills were taken up in committee and Mr. Foy moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Devolution of Estates Act.

The House spent some time in committee on Mr. Cochrane's mining bill. Mr. Mackay objected strongly to the powers given inspectors, but the provision was defended as in the interests of the people.

Bills Assented To.

The Lieutenant-Governor attended the House at 2.30 and assented to 57 bills, among them the following of general scope:

To Incorporate the Synod of the Diocese of Algoma of the Church of England.

Respecting the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines.

To Amend the Act to Preserve the Forest from Destruction by Fire.

To Incorporate the Executive of the Provincial Y. M. C. A. of Ontario and Quebec.

Authorizing Certain Payments under the Public Libraries' Act.

Respecting County Houses of Refuge.

To Amend the Act for the Improvement of Public Highways.

Respecting Agricultural Associations.

To Amend the Ontario Elections Act.

Respecting the Town of Port Hope.

To Amend the Ontario Medical Act.

Respecting Local Municipal Telephone Systems.

Respecting Prospectuses Issued by Companies.

To Further Amend the Pharmacy Act.

To Amend the County Courts Act.

To Amend the Liquor License Law.

To Amend the Act Respecting Aid to the Algoma Central Railway and Associated Industries.

The Supply Bill, embodying the main estimates.

The Attorney-General introduced his amendment to the statute law in the Legislature yesterday. There are twenty sections.

TOO QUICK TO PROSECUTE.

Gets Young Man's Name Involved in a Serious Charge.

London, April 29.—Raymond Pincher & Co., stock brokers, New York, summoned their London representative, Reginald Brown, for alleged embezzlement.

When the case was called at Guild Hall Court counsel for the stock brokers expressed a wish to withdraw the prosecution, in that the summons had been issued before they had an opportunity of examining the books. The Crown's counsel said he was prepared to answer to a serious charge. Mr. Brown held a most influential position here and in Canada. His father was a minister of public works in Canada.

The magistrate said: "I cannot sanction the withdrawal of a criminal charge of this nature, but as counsel states he cannot substantiate the charge, I dismiss the summons. It is a pity they did not make enquiries before taking out the summons."

Shoots at Superior Officer.

Winnipeg, April 28.—Sergt. Foy of the Royal Canadian Mounted Rifles, quartered in Fort Osborne Barracks here, shot at Sergt.-Major Doherty with his rifle yesterday, as the result of a quarrel while on parade. Foy was arrested and will be tried by the civil authorities.

Boy Drowns.

Grenville, Que., April 28.—A drowning accident occurred yesterday morning. Adolphus Tassie, aged 12, son of Cyrille Tassie, fell into the locks and was drowned.

Loss of Life Is 14.

Fort Worth, Texas, April 28.—A despatch yesterday morning from Bellevue, Texas, places the loss of life there by Thursday night's tornado at fourteen.

Ellen Terry's Jubilee.

London, April 28.—At the close of the performance at His Majesty's Theatre last night, at which Ellen Terry had a remarkable reception, in a pretty scene the presentation of the Play-goers' Club silver casket and an address in commemoration of the actress' jubilee was made. The scene was one of indescribable enthusiasm and Miss Terry could not voice her feelings in words.

Call It "An Outrage."

Toronto, April 28.—Local Socialists have passed a resolution denouncing the action of the Postmaster-General in excluding the Appeal to Reason from the Canadian mails "as an outrage upon the principles of free discussion," and they declare such policy on his part as establishing a press censorship as bad as that existing in Russia.

Kaiser May Be at Bottom of "Sick Man's" Aggression.

One Explanation of Strained Relations Now Existing Between Britain and Turkey—Whole Egyptian Question Opened — Britain Determined to Maintain Firm Activity.—King Edward Hurries Home.

London, April 30.—The patience of Great Britain with Turkey over the Tabah affair is about exhausted, and it was understood at the Foreign Office yesterday if the Sultan does not soon accede to the British demands there will be another demonstration before a Turkish port.

The British Foreign Office holds that the Turkish commissioner at Cairo is largely responsible for the present situation, and that probably he is led by German scientists and merchants at Cairo to believe that Germany will support Turkey's aggression.

The British cruiser Minerva left Port Said for El Arsh yesterday in order to ascertain whether it is true that the Turks have removed the boundary posts at certain points.

King Edward Hurries Home.

Naples, April 30.—King Edward and Sir Charles Hardinge, permanent under secretary of the British Foreign Office, who is in attendance upon His Majesty, have received many despatches from Premier Campbell-Bannerman and Foreign Secretary Grey in regard to the trouble with Turkey over the Tabah boundary dispute, and, according to report, the King has issued instructions that the firmest attitude be assumed by the British officials. His Majesty is also said to have consulted with Lord Rosebery on the subject. He will cut his tour short, leaving for England on Monday.

FARM LABORERS UNION.

James Kier Hardy Urges It as Protection From Landlordism.

London, April 30.—Addressing a meeting of workmen at Ramsay, Huntingdon, Saturday, called to protest against the action of Lord De Ramsey in notifying the tenants of nearly 1,010 allotments to quit the land, James Kier Hardie urged the agricultural laborers to form a strong union in order to protect themselves and enable them to obtain land which would render them independent in times when they were without employment.

Men, he said, had been driven off the soil and into the town slums through the land being turned into deer forests for American millionaires and other idlers. Landlords, he declared, played the same part to society as did the parasite to the tree, sapping away its strength and giving no return.

They Need The Money.

San Francisco Not to Handle That Voted by Congress.

Stricken City Hears With Surprise That Only $300,000 of the $2,500,000 Is Available—Remainder Expended In Purchase of Supplies In East—Country Should Not Be Led to Believe That Millions Are On Hand.

San Francisco, April 30.—Surprise was caused yesterday when James D. Phelan, chairman of the finance committee, announced to the citizens' committee that he had been given to understand by Secretary of Commerce Metcalfe, representative of President Roosevelt, that only $300,000 of the $2,500,000 appropriated by Congress for the relief of the San Francisco sufferers, was available, and that sum represented the extent of financial assistance that might be expected from that source.

The citizens' committee of fifty, headed by Mayor Schmitz, now administers the affairs of San Francisco, though the military have immediate control of patrolling the city and distributing supplies.

Mr. Phelan announced Saturday that Secretary of War Taft had transmitted to his order $300,000, which he said was the first recognition the secretary had made of the relief work, and added that he had been informed by Mr. Metcalfe that the Secretary of War had expended the remainder of the relief fund for the purchase of supplies in the east.

Secretary Metcalfe corroborated Mr. Phelan's statement. Mr. Phelan said that there was only $518,000 available cash to his order at the mint, and the strictest economy would be necessary.

"We need money," said Mr. Phelan, "and the country should not be led into the belief that millions are on hand to relieve the destitute people."

Both Mr. Metcalfe and Dr. Devine endorsed Mr. Phelan's remarks and volunteered to apprise Washington of the situation.

The generous appropriation of Congress had been counted on by the finance committee as an available fund for necessary relief expenses, and the knowledge that only a small amount of this would be placed in their hands caused a shock.

Burns Up Valuables.

Business men who attempted Saturday to secure assets from safes dug out of the earthquake and fire debris met with disaster. Several of the safes containing books, records, stocks, bonds and negotiable securities were forced open. The instant the latent heat in the interior of the thick strong boxes came in contact with the first rush of air there was a blaze, and in an instant the contents were consumed.

'Frisco's Need Is Urgent.

Dr. Devine of the national Red Cross has issued a statement in which he says:

"It is important for the entire country to understand that the loss of homes and property in San Francisco has not been exaggerated. Sick and delicate persons will need care for months. Inmates of institutions which have been burned and destroyed must be established elsewhere on some plan yet to be devised. Families which cannot get started otherwise may be given a helping hand.

"SHINE!" "SHINE!"

Society Ladies Polish Shoes of Men to Raise Money For Sufferers.

Washington, April 30.—The ladies of All Saints' Unitarian Church have hit upon the novel expedient of shining the shoes of the male members of the congregation of that church as a means of raising money to aid the sufferers from the California earthquake.

About twenty-five of them were thus occupied at the parlors of the church three days during last week, and their receipts averaged over $100 a day. Many of the ladies thus engaged were prominent in society.

Victim of the 'Quake.

The Navy Department was informed Saturday by Rear-Admiral Goodrich, commanding the Pacific fleet, of the death in San Francisco of Boatswain Daniel C. Hansen, who was a victim of the earthquake. Boatswain Daniel C. Hansen, was serving on the training ship Pensacola, but was on leave of absence. His body and the bodies of his wife and child have been identified by his brother, and will be buried in the cemetery at San Francisco Naval Training Station.

Santa Rosa's Toll 54.

Santa Rosa, Cal., April 30.—Two more bodies have been taken from the ruins of the building destroyed by the earthquake. Neither can be positively identified. This makes a total of 54 bodies recovered.

Benefit Realizes $1,300.

London, April 30.—At a benefit performance for the sufferers by the San Francisco disaster at Charles Frohman's Duke of York theatre Saturday, with Marie Tempest in "All of a sudden Peggy," $1,300 was realized.

Burials Total 333.

San Francisco, April 30.—Three hundred and thirty-three bodies of victims of the recent earthquake and fire have now been found by Coroner Walsh and his assistants. Many of the dead have been identified. All that were buried in the public squares during the days of the fire have been removed to the several cemeteries of the city. The coroner's data is fairly accurate though his work and his reports are not yet complete.

Earthquake in Germany.

Berlin, April 30.—Several villages in Saxony experienced four earthquake shocks Saturday. No damage was done.

Bandits Kill Chinese Troops.

Chefoo, April 30.—Two weeks ago at Yiencbing, in the southwest part of the Province of Shantung, 500 foreign-drilled Chinese troops were attacked by 2,000 bandits, armed with modern rifles. One hundred of the soldiers were killed.

Exploring Party Back.

Quebec, April 30.—The Dillon-Wallace expedition, who have spent the winter in the wilds of Labrador, are in Quebec, having arrived by the steamer King Edward. They all look the picture of health.

Hackett Goes For Trial.

Montreal, April 30.—James Thomas Hackett was committed Saturday before Judge Desnoyers to stand his trial before the Court of King's Bench at the June term on the charge of the murder of little Edith May Ahern.

Wm. Hendrie, Sr., Very Ill.

Hamilton, April 30.—William Hendrie, Sr., is growing steadily worse, and his condition Saturday night was considered very critical. He is very weak, and it is feared that the end may come at any time.

Sunk In Cornwall Canal.

Kingston, April 30.—Friday night the barge Cobourg of the Montreal Transportation Co., struck and sank in the Cornwall Canal.

INTELLIGENCER JOB OFFICE

FOR CHEAP AND ARTISTIC WORK.

Daily Intelligencer.

A Fortunate Statesman.

The name of Mr. Sifton has cropped up in connection with the latest Ottawa fraud, the North Atlantic Company, to which reference has recently been made in this paper. In "Saturday Night" it is remarked that "This once influential Cabinet Minister is associated with others in an immigration scheme, that his former Deputy Minister resigned to join in the enterprise, and that these two men and those grouped with them had the inside track with the Government and a pretty sure thing."

It will, therefore, not be out of place to quote an article which appeared in a contemporary some time ago, showing what Mr. Sifton had made at politics up to that time. Since then his wealth has no doubt increased.

"The amount of money made by Hon Clifford Sifton, since his advent to power in 1896 is many times that acquired by the average business man in a lifetime. Mr. Sifton came from Winnipeg to Ottawa without means. He has now been a Cabinet Minister for six years, and his salary for that time has been $42,000. His sessional indemnities gave him $7,000 additional, or a total of $49,000.

"With this $49,000 Mr. Sifton has accomplished wonders. He lives at Ottawa in a style no other Cabinet Minister attempts to imitate. His residence is one of the best in the city, while his equipages are the most brilliant owned in the Capital. Mr. Sifton, at a conservative estimate spends something like $15,000 per annum for the maintenance of his establishment. In six years that would mean an outlay of $90,000. His home is assessed, for purpose of city taxation, for $23,000, the law providing that a property must only be assessed for the amount it would bring if taken by a creditor in lieu of cash. The property, before Mr. Sifton purchased it, was assessed at $11,300, but it has been greatly improved.

"Then Mr. Sifton holds 200 shares in the Bank of Ottawa, the par value of which is $100. The market value of the stock has been as high as 218 but in order to be within the mark let us put it down at 210, and we will find Mr. Sifton's holdings worth $42,000.

"Mr. Sifton also owns a steam yacht which is considered one of the finest boats of the kind owned in Canada.

"Summing up, we find that Mr. Sifton has had a prosperous six years in Ottawa. With $49,000 available in instalments of $8,000 during four years, he has been able to produce these results:

Real estate in Ottawa	$23,000
Bank of Ottawa stock	42,000
Living expenses, estimate	90,000
Yacht	25,000
	$180,000

Then, Mr. Sifton's summer residence on the shores of the St. Lawrence, "Assiniboia Lodge," must not be forgotten. Altogether he is one of the striking examples of the public men, who have won financial standing through politics."

It may be remarked that while the North Atlantic Trading Company is being discussed Mr. Sifton is far away for the "benefit of his health."

TIMELY TOPICS.

April had fireworks to help her off the stage.

• • •

Did you hear that clap of thunder early this a. m.? It felt like a little touch of San Francisco.

• • •

They say that residents of the east hill made a blind rush for the Corby park when they arose this morning. They were anxious to see if the lightning had struck that ornate building lately erected by Ald. Knox.

• • •

Belleville is surely blessed with bands at present. The desire to shine in music seems to have struck the rising generation hard. It's a good hobby, anyhow, and carries no evil consequences in its train. More power to the windjammers.

• • •

The sudden change to warmer weather should bring along housecleaning operations with a rush. It will soon be a case of "Nobody beats carpets like father."

• • •

What a blessing it will be when all the wooden sidewalks in this city are replaced by the concrete kind! Surely Belleville never made a better investment than when she started to build granolithic walks. One can appreciate them better after a short trip over the crazy and rickety old things which still ornament many streets in this city. They cannot be removed too quickly.

• • •

By the way, there is a spot on the east side of Murney street which calls for immediate attention, before some estimable citizen breaks his neck.

• • •

Mr. R. A. Lazier, formerly of this city, now cashier of the Lompoc Valley Bank, Lompoc, Cal., sends us an illustrated booklet showing some of the beauties of Lompoc and its surroundings. It must be almost an ideal locality, close enough, perhaps, to the earthquake belt to keep one from suffering for lack of excitement.

• • •

Andrew Carnegie is opening his new library in Ottawa to-day. Thank goodness, he'll never have that job in Belleville.

• • •

President Roosevelt's prohibition of all foreign aid to the San Francisco sufferers is neither popular in his own country, nor outside. There is no denying, however, that the President is right in his premises. There are plenty of rich men in the United States to build up San Francisco, if they would give as the occasion requires. But will they? Rockefeller and Carnegie could give ten millions apiece without feeling it, but you don't see them coughing it up. That is not the kind of advertising they are looking for.

• • •

Brantford's Chief of Police has issued an order to the hotelkeepers there that they must not harbor loafers. He thinks that if these men are kept out of the bar-rooms they can be more easily driven out of the city. That's good sense, too.

The report of the Minister of Lands and Mines shows that there have been 4,442 grants made to veterans, principally in the Temiskaming and Rainy River districts, and 8,558 remain to be provided for which will require 1,366,280 acres more. To provide locations for these under the original Ross legislation, which only allows one veteran on each square mile, would require 238 six-mile townships, or a total of about 350 townships.

• • •

San Francisco is not any better off now apparently than when the forty-niners first invaded it by going across the Isthmus or around the Horn. At present, luckily, it can be reached more expeditiously.

MRS. MARY GREGOVICH.

Of Philipsburg, Montana, Tells How She Was Cured of Dandruff.

Mrs. Mary Gregovich, of Philipsburg, Montana, under date of Nov. 26, 1899, writes: "I had typhoid fever this summer, consequently was losing my hair terribly, and my head in places was perfectly bald. Newbro's Herpicide had just come into use in Philipsburg, and the doctor strongly recommended it to me. After 3 or 4 applications my hair stopped falling out, and is coming in again quite thick. I used to be troubled greatly with dandruff, of which I am now quite cured." Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

A VOICE FROM THE FAR WEST.

MR. R. B. CHADWICK WRITES INTERESTINGLY OF THINGS AS HE SEES THEM IN EDMONTON, ALBERTA.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer;

Edmonton, April 24.

Dear Sir,—As per promise, here goes to tell you just a little of "The City of the Gods." We are as yet very nearly a wooden city, the bang of the builder's hammer is on all sides of us, and new streets are being opened every day.

One is bewildered at first by the newness and the rush of things. The incongruity of things is also striking—a pony and an ox pulling the same cart, followed by an up-to-date auto car. The sudden transportation of a building to a new site and the ever-changing expressions of the various races one sees on the streets are, to the easterner, wonders, but the fact that these people are anxious to be absorbed into this country is the hopeful part. All kinds, all nations, and yet with one idea, to become good Canadians. This is a land of strangers, and is not yet guilty of having its social fabric woven into any particular style. The people meet on the common basis of manhood and womanhood, and the square person is welcome to the best that is going. There are just two classes—the bad and the good, and there is not much trouble to place your man, for he is as a rule very frank and ready to say his "thinks" right out.

At first, the land conditions of the city, the prices obtained and the places offered, make one who has been used to the conditions of Ontario rather feel that these western people over-estimate the future, but I am beginning to change my opinion and see that they do not. It is simply great to see the people pour in here to register for homesteads; to see their outfitting, then to start off to their choice of land, to be swallowed up in the great prairie country, all eager and ready to fight. Of course there are lots of quitters, but the ones who really mean fight come out all right.

If a person is a quitter and takes the western fever, coax him to stay home. This country needs fighters, men who can set their jaw and hang on in spite of discomfort; fellows who can win out in the east will make a success in the west and the failure there will find some of his class here.

Good men of all kinds can be used here and find places. Men with a few thousand to start on can find in the city and around it chances to make ten more talents with their every one.

The churches are crowded with young men, the streets are full of them, and the eating houses are usually lined up two deep, waiting their turn at table. There is a fortune here for the man who will open up a good restaurant at a reasonable figure, for the present places are crowded out.

There is, as yet, little manufacturing done in this city, but as the city becomes settled there are bound to be big firms here, and a great field for all kinds of mechanics.

The man who said "Go west, young man," was all right, and I say "Amen" to his advice, providing the young man has the elements within him that make success in either east or west.

Yours truly,
ROBT. B. CHADWICK.

Are Now Camping Amid The Ruins.

Miss Chandler, of this city, has received a post card from her nephew, H. E. Chandler, who passed through the terrible earthquake and fire in San Francisco. The card is dated April 20, and Mr. Chandler says that both his office and home were burnt down, but he is safe and feeling fairly well. Some friends and himself are camping amid the ruins.

Lucas Case Was Again Enlarged.

The case against John Lucas, charged with breaking into and stealing grain from a G.T.R. bonded car, has been further enlarged until next Saturday, May 5th.

Mrs. Lombard Safe

The anxiety which friends in this city and county have had regarding Mrs. Lombard, of Oakland, California, nee Miss Jennie Morton, a former well-known resident here, was relieved by a postal card from her this morning, written evidently in great haste;

"Two days after the awful earthquake and we are safely covered in tents, with food enough to sustain us. Thank God, we are all together—Mr. Harry Morton and our family. No pen can actually portray the horrors and sufferings."

Itching Piles

If you are acquainted with anyone who is troubled with this distressing ailment, you can do him no greater favor than to tell him to try Chamberlain's Salve. It gives instant relief. This salve also cures sore nipples, tetter and salt rheum. Price 25 cents, to be had at R. Templeton's drug store

BARGAINS IN MEDICINE.

A woman once wrote us that she was not going to buy Scott's Emulsion any more because it cost too much. Said she could get some other emulsion for less money. Penny wise and pound foolish. Scott's Emulsion costs more because it is worth more—costs more to make. We could make Scott's Emulsion cost less by using less oil. Could take less care in making it, too. If we did, however, Scott's Emulsion wouldn't be the standard preparation of cod liver oil as it is to-day.

PERSONAL ....AND.... SOCIAL.

Miss Edith Anning has returned to the city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Cockram, of Madoc, were in the city to-day.

CROSSED THE DARK RIVER.

JOHN FREDERICK.

Mr. John Fredrick, a yeoman who resided in the Township of Sidney, just west of the Village of Foxboro, died at an early hour on Sunday morning. The cause of death was diabetes. Deceased, who was 65 years of age, was born in Sidney. In early life he followed the occupation of a harness-maker, and for some time conducted a business in this city. Later he removed to Sidney, where he had since resided. Mr. Frederick was a member of the Methodist church. A widow and a family of two sons, William, of Assiniboia, and Charles, of Thurlow, and two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Smith, of Foxboro, and Miss Alicia, at home, survive.

MRS. ELIZA J. JOHNSON.

On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Eliza J. Johnson passed away at her late residence, Grove street. Deceased, who was 78 years of age, was the widow of the late ex-Ald. L. Johnson. She had been a resident of the city for many years and was a lady who was esteemed by all who knew her. Mrs. Johnson had been for years a consistent member of the Methodist church, and in early life took an active interest in church work. Deceased had been in failing health for some time. No family survives.

Was Pastor of a Historic Church.

The Rev. H. D. Leitch and Mrs. Leitch, nee Miss Minnie Berkley, of this city, who have resided at St. Elmo in the County of Glengarry for the past nine years, have been in the city for a few days en route to their new field of labor. Mr. Leitch has been the pastor of the "Gordon Church," made famous by the Rev. C. W. Gordon, D.D., of Winnipeg (Ralph Connor) in "The Man from Glengarry." That Mr. and Mrs. Leitch have made a success of their lives and that their departure from the County of Glengarry is deplored by its inhabitants is attested to by the numerous testimonials presented to them by their congregations at St. Elmo and Greenfield, by banquets given by the Masons and Orangemen, by the comments of the press and the resolution of the Presbytery, as also by gifts of over $300. Yesterday Mr. Leitch preached in Bridge St. Church in the morning and delivered a sermon of which we have heard many favorable comments. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Leitch were welcomed to Bridge St. Sunday School, in which Mrs. Leitch was a valued teacher before her marriage, and in the evening Mr. Leitch preached at the Rossmore Methodist Church. They left this morning for their new home.

Dog Collars!

DAME FASHION has decreed that collarless gowns shall be worn this year, with the consequence that Dog-Collars will be more in evidence than ever before. And really the manufacturers have "spread themselves," for many of the designs are exquisite. The tints most approved at present are: Amethyst, Topaz, Ruby, Sapphire and Garnet. The stones representing these colors are—to be fashionable—mostly imitation jewels. The imitations, however, are of the finest and the stones all cut by expert diamond cutters.

We show some of these in our window and shall be pleased to have you call and examine them, even if you don't purchase.

THAT SILVER MINE NEAR HAVELOCK.

QUEST OF THOSE WHO GO IN SEARCH IS IN VAIN.

The Havelock Standard says; "The celebrated McMillan silver mine, which was to have created such a furore in this vicinity this spring, is still doing its old stunts. On Friday last an American, VanLeck, of Toledo, journeyed north with the discoverer, but sad to say, his quest was in vain and he returned in disgust. On Tuesday, two of our prominent citizens, armed with large sacks to store the precious white metal in, booted with rubber boots, to keep out the water in the swamp they were bound to, hied themselves some twenty odd miles north, in company with the sturdy and valiant discoverer, who, as he said, could take them right to the spot where he pried out the original chunk. 'Tis true and pity 'tis 'tis true," that they also returned without the anticipated ore, visions of which had haunted their dreams the night before. Wet, weary and disheartened, their tale of woe is hard to hear. But McMillan still has hopes!

SLEPT ON STREETS.

WORD HAS COME FROM JAMES G. CHOWN.

Kingston Whig; Mr. and Mrs. Jas. G. Chown, of San Francisco, are safe. They were heard from to-day. Mr. Chown is a son of Mrs. Arthur Chown, Clergy street, and brother of A. F. and Oliver Chown, of this city and Mr. W. W. Chown, Belleville. He conducted the Greystone Hotel, on Geary street. His message home is written in an extra of the San Francisco Examiner of April 20, and read: "We are safe, but living on the street. We will soon have plenty of food; have had very little for two days. Cannot get a telegraphic message through. Our hotel was burned and everything lost; saved only the clothes on our backs. I am writing at the home of a friend, near the park where we are camping. The fire is worse than the earthquakes. We have sat and slept on the streets since Tuesday night going on and on just ahead of the fire. We have much to be thankful for, not hurt at all."

French Socialists Arrested To-day.

CHARGED WITH PLOTTING TO OVERTHROW THE REPUBLIC — OTHER ARRESTS ARE IMMINENT.

Paris, April 30.—(Special)—M. Griffuehles, Socialist leader and Secretary of the Labor Confederation, and Xavier Fuellant, Bonarpartist, were arrested this morning for alleged connection with a plot to overthrow the Republic.

The fact that Griffuehles has been coupled by the authorities with the Bonapartist Fuellant has aroused a storm of indignation in the Labor party, which until now has been a staunch supporter of the Third Republic as opposed to monarchism and resents the slight upon the party's good faith.

The houses of several members of the Labor Confederation were searched by the authorities this morning.

M. Levy, head of the Labor Confederation, was also arrested to-day on the charge of being connected with the alleged plot against the Government.

It is stated that the arrest of many other known Royalists and Bonapartists is imminent.

In the Matter of Infringements of Trade Marks in Canada.

$100.00 Reward

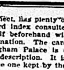
So many complaints have been received from all parts of Canada from people who have been deceived in the purchase of shoes represented to be Slater Shoes that we have decided to offer $100.00 reward to any person who will produce evidence which will result in the conviction of any dealer selling shoes and representing them to be

"Slater Shoes," "Slater Boots," "Slater Goods," "the Slater Shoe," or any other form of words calculated to deceive the public and lead them to believe that the dealer is handling Slater's Shoes.

It is our intention to actively prosecute imitators and infringers.

Such action is taken for the mutual protection of the public and of our Company. We are asking for the co-operation of the public. Our Inspector will be in this city shortly to investigate any information supplied.

Every shoe made by the Slater Shoe Company can be known as genuine only when the name and price is stamped on the sole. This is your Seal of Certainty in collecting evidence. This stamp is further emphasized for your protection by the trademark on the lining of the shoe.



This is the Stamp on the sole—and with it you will always find the price stamped.

All communications will be treated as confidential.

HOW THE KING KNOWS.

A Modern Business Method Which Well Serves His Majesty.

Persons presented to foreign royalty, and in particular to King Edward and to Emperor William, often have been amazed and flattered by the marvelous knowledge which the sovereigns in question seemed to possess of their families, their affairs, and their achievements, says the Marquise de Fontenoy. And they have been still more gratified when, after an interval of a number of years, on being brought once more in contact with the ruler, the latter seemed to have retained not only a perfect memory of the former meeting but also to have kept track of their doings in the meanwhile. Of course this conveys the impression to the people that the King or Emperor has been devoting a great deal more attention to their affairs and entertaining a far greater interest in their career than is really the case.

Curiosity has sometimes been expressed as to just how the "anointed of the Lord" manage to keep so well posted, since it is evident that not even the most encyclopedia of private secretaries could carry all this information in his head.

The fact of the matter is that the Emperor and the King, like newspaper editors and press agents, have discovered the value of card indexes and turn them to excellent account. Those of King Edward are in charge of the clerks not of Lord Knollys' department but that of Gen. Sir Dighton Probyn, the keeper of the privy purse. They are kept at Buckingham Palace. Opposite each name on the cards, is a memorandum of the last occasion on which the bearer of the name was presented to the King and a suggestion of what was said on that occasion, as well as other points concerning him and his family, his achievements, and his career. As people seldom obtain access to a monarch without a previous appointment or invitation, the sovereign, knowing whom he is going to meet, has plenty of time to have the card index consulted and to prime himself beforehand with the necessary information. The card system at Buckingham Palace is of the most elaborate description. It is supplemented by the one kept by the Lord Chamberlain's department, where brief records of scandals affecting people in society are preserved so as to avoid the appearance at court of people compromised thereby.

Escaped But Is Soon Captured.

Brantford, April 30.—A man named McKay, tried at the Police Court for stealing a watch from a jeweler, was found guilty and sentenced to six months in the Central Prison. Saturday afternoon McKay was shovelling coal in the basement of the jail and made his escape by sawing through one of the coal shutes. He was caught two miles out of the city.

When Lowell Was Suspended.

A biography of James Russell Lowell says of a famous incident of the poet's college life: "Throughout his senior year his unexcused absences from recitations and chapel exercises increased in number until they reached a total that even now is startling to an academically trained reader. Finally, so the story runs, there came a characteristic ebullition during one of his infrequent appearances at evening prayers that brought matters to a head. Having been elected in the morning poet of his class, Lowell had spent the day in ambrosial jubilation. At prayers that evening, being still jubilant, he arose in his seat and bowed low to the right and to the left. Coming at the end of a long career of consistent negligence, this breach of decorum was not to be passed in silence." Lowell was as a consequence suspended.

European Jiu Jitsu.

A French teacher of boxing points out that an art of self defense approximately equivalent to jiu jitsu was known in Europe in the seventeenth century. Its principles are expounded in a work by one Nicolas Peters, published at Amsterdam in 1674 and bearing the lengthy explanatory title; "The art of wrestling and how one can protect oneself in all kinds of quarrels that may occur; how one can with agility and rapidity repel all unfair attacks and meet one's adversary with science." The work is illustrated. The author apparently anticipated many of the characteristic grips of the Japanese exponents of today.

THE RIVER OF YOUTH.

From all the golden hills of dream,
Dew-cool and rainbow kissed,
It twines and curls a silver stream
Through valleys hung with mist.

Down past Enchanted woods to where
Romance walks ever young,
Where Kings ride forth to take the air
On steeds with velvet hung.

Where Secret Stairways tempt the bold,
Where Pirate Caves abound,
And many a chest of Spanish gold
May solemnly be found.

Through magic years it twines and creeps
Past towers of peacock blue,
Where still some captive Princess sleeps,
And dreams come, always true!

Then gleam by gleam the light goes out,
Then darkened, grief by grief,
It sighs into our Sea of Doubt
And Manhood's Unbelief!

Much interest is being created by the preparations of Walter Wellman, a Chicago newspaperman, for a trip by balloon to the north pole. It is admitted that he will get much fame on account of this trip, but it is held that most of that desirable thing will come before he sets out. The Detroit News evidently has not much faith in Mr. Wellman's ability to reach the pole. It says: "Mr. Wellman starts out under favorable auspices. He has a large share of his fame at the outset, and might take the advice of the literary cynic who advised those seeking fame to let it be known that they are preparing a great work, but by no means to prepare it, for that would destroy the illusion. A few years ago Andree started from northern Spitzbergen to reach the pole by balloon, but instead of sailing north he drifted east until his gas bag sank into the ice water and the ambitious aeronaut perished. Within recent years some partial successes have been obtained with dirigible balloons, but none of these have been able to cover a quarter of the length of the route to the pole, saying nothing at all about the return trip. If Mr. Wellman is making an attempt in good faith one may admire his courage, but his discretion cannot be respected. The most experienced navigators of the air have accomplished nothing that would justify such an attempt, and Mr. Wellman cannot be classed even among these."

THE ROSS RIFLE.

(Ottawa Journal.)

"A pretty weapon; a handy weapon at short ranges, a doubtful arm at long ranges, and costing the country several dollars more per rifle than it ought to."

Such were the words an expert rifle shot used to The Journal recently in regard to the Ross rifle, which the Dominion Government is under contract to pay quarter of a million dollars a year for during several years, until in short the whole defensive force of Canada is armed with it.

A considerable number of riflemen, including many volunteer officers, have given opinions regarding this rifle to The Journal. None has been very favorable. That taken all in all it is superior to the present weapon with which the volunteers are equipped, no one has asserted; while it is a comparatively expensive article.

The Dominion Senate, in which reference has been made to the contract, might do useful service to the country by instituting an examination of the question, and taking expert evidence as to the worth of the rifle. The matter is one of great importance to Canada.

GREAT SHOW AT WARWICK.

Historical Pageant to Review 19 Centuries of History.

All Warwick is at work in preparation for the great historical pageant which is to take place at the castle in July, and which is to extend over several days.

Over 5,000 seats already are booked for the spectacle, in which lords and ladies, rich and poor, great and small, will take part. Every mail brings inquiries from both home and abroad.

Tickets in large numbers have been taken by notable county families. Lord and Lady Warwick will attend with a party, including the Duchess of Sutherland and Lord and Lady Helmsley.

One episode, "The Kingmaker," will be in the hands of Lord and Lady Willoughby de Broke and a company of distinguished amateurs. More than fifty horsemen will appear in the scene galloping into the arena from hidden woodland paths.

The pageant will be a continuous panorama of gorgeous scenes representing nineteen centuries of the history of Warwick.

Commencing with Caractacus and resistance to the Roman conquerors in the first century, the pageant will carry the spectators rapidly through a stirring story in eleven episodes. The most striking will be the trial and execution of Piers Gaveston and the arrival of Queen Elizabeth in a stage coach drawn by four horses and her departure in a stage barge manned by sixteen rowers.

Other scenes will deal in picturesque fashion with notable incidents in the history of Warwick, winding up with a magnificent tableau in which all the characters will appear as well as figures representing fourteen young Warwicks in America, Canada, and Queensland grouped round a stately figure impersonating the mother of the town.

The scene of the pageant will be a lawn sloping down to the river. The most elaborate piece of "stage property" is the head of the Dun cow, which, after devastating the country, was slain by Guy of Warwick. It will be brought into view on a trolley. This monster will breathe fire from its nostrils and its huge eyes, composed of big red glass plates, will be illuminated by electric lights.

Profits of Indian Mine.

Another chapter in the romantic story of the Mysore Gold Mining Co. closed, when at the annual meeting in the Canon street Hotel, dividends were declared totalling 145 per cent. for the second year in succession.

The profit for the year was stated to be £450,556, the superintendent reporting that the year has been one of the busiest in the history of the company. The mills had crushed 195,650 tons of quartz, yielding 184,957 ounces of bar gold.

As far as age and consistency in dividends are concerned, the Mysore Gold Mine is probably the richest in the world, and yet there hangs in the London office of the company a framed certificate of the transfer of 1,000 £1 shares at the price of ninepence each. Such shares would be worth £14 each to-day.

For the last ten years the dividends paid have ranged between 100 and 150 per cent. per annum. Since 1883 the lowest dividend for one year has been 10 per cent.

Schoolboy Humorists.

Here are some "howlers" of British schoolboys: "Chaucer," we are told, "wrote a middle-class English"; "Every German goes to school at an early age, however old he is"; "An axis is an imaginary line on which the earth is supposed to take its daily routine"; "The Pharisees were people who liked to show off their goodness by praying in synonymes"; "A sower went forth to sow, and as he sowed he fell by the wayside, and thieves sprang up and choked him"; "The larynx is the voice box, and shuts when we swallow it."

A FAMOUS SWINDLER.

Edward Donkin, Who Posed as a Priest, Ends a Long Career of Crime —Died in England.

Edward Donkin, "bishop of Santa Croce of Antioch" and holder of several other self-conferred ecclesiastical titles, is dead in London. He was one of the most picturesque small swindlers in the world.

For fifteen years he ranged the world from Australia to Milwaukee, obtaining money and getting credit upon his pretensions of ecclesiastical position and great piety. He swindled all the branches of the Catholic church impartially, posing at various times as a priest of the Roman Catholics, the Greek Catholics, the Old Catholics, and the Church of England.

He worked monasteries by the dozen, and his changes of faith were swifter and more dazzling than those of the vicar of Bray. Yet so pious were his ways and so great was his learning in theology that there remained hundreds of people in England who believed until last year that he was a persecuted and unfortunate holy man.

He was exposed in 1905 by Labouchere in The London Truth, and a part of his life was made public.

Origin Is Unknown.

Just who Donkin was no one knows. It is said that he was born in England of good family. He appeared first in Australia in the early '90s and entered a Benedictine monastery.

He represented himself there as an Oxford M. A. and a Roman Catholic. The fathers were deceived by his apparent piety, and he was taken into the monastery as a novice.

He did not remain long, although he seems to have picked up there the foundations of his priestly knowledge which he used afterward.

In 1893 he appeared in England. Here he made his first change of religion. He represented himself as an Anglican priest, and got a curacy in the diocese of Bath and Wells.

He had presented forged credentials, and when this was discovered he was deposed. He bobbed up again as a Roman Catholic at Glastonbury. There he asked for admission to a French monastery, representing himself as a young man of fashion who was tired of the world.

Things were going well, when it was discovered that he had rolled up large debts in the neighborhood on the strength of his connection with the monastery. That ended him there.

Tries Another Monastery.

At Downside, near Bath, he tried it on another monastery. That time he was an Anglican clergyman who wanted to enter the Roman Catholic faith, and he presented forged letters of ordination from the Bishop of Bath who had deposed him from his curacy.

This was discovered before long, but not before he had touched Roman Catholic clergymen in London during one of his absences from the monastery. Next he caught the famous Father Ignatius, superior of Llanthony Abbey.

Father Ignatius was duped for a long time, but an accident proved to him that Donkin had been telling him a string of lies about his family and property. The Catholic papers of England bulletined him as a fraud, and he left the country for the time being.

After that he abandoned the church graft for a time and worked Paris as a British nobleman. A year or two later a party of monks from Downside found him in a Benedictine monastery in Rome. There he did a term in jail for frauds which he had perpetrated.

After his release he tried England again, nearly persuaded the monks of a Capuchin establishment to take him in as a converted Anglican priest, and was caught just in time. That time the affair received so much publicity that he started for America.

Sent to Prison in Chicago.

All the details of his American career are not definitely known. He appeared first in Buffalo in 1899. There he had a "mission" and was associated with one "Father Basil," known to the police all over the world, and finally sent to prison in Chicago.

When he appeared in Milwaukee he represented himself as a "Church of England missioner, St. Augustine' priory, London." The high church clergy of the diocese took him up, and he preached in several churches.

He moved on to Cleveland. There he founded an independent Catholic church and did well. But there was another scandal. He was arrested, but escaped conviction. Nevertheless the town was made so hot for him that he left for Rochester. The same thing happened there, although the case never got into the courts.

Rome Is His Hoodoo.

Rome was his hoodoo. He had little more than started his old game of an Anglican convert when he was caught and did another term in jail. Then one morning there appeared a note in the London papers saying that "Mgr. Benedict Count Donkin, bishop of Santa Croce, in Antioch, has been appointed vicar apostolic of the Old Catholic church in Southern Switzerland by the patriarch of Antioch."

There is no such bishopric in the Old Catholic church, and there is no such office as vicar-general of southern Switzerland. This, however, was his notice to England that he was coming back.

First he bobbed up in Switzerland to assume his new office. There he swindled the widow with whom he boarded to such an extent that she had to go through bankruptcy.

He arrived in England as the bishop of Santa Croce. The charity of believers in the Old Catholic church, some of whom he converted himself, established him in an oratory.

Beyond contracting debts on the strength of his ecclesiastical position, he did not show his hand until he worked a false draft for £200 on a Mr. Fisher.

At this time Labouchere started in on him and published a fair summary of his record, which created a sensation in England. He was arrested for the draft operation, but was acquitted.

Last January Donkin fell ill. He had contracted tuberculosis in prison, and he was taken also with heart weakness. From his death bed he issued a pious pastoral letter, asserting that he was the truly consecrated bishop of Santa Croce, and that those who denied it were persecuting him. He was cared for in his last days by people of Oxford who had attended his "oratory."

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

"It was a noise—it woke me up," explained Montgomery. "Sheppard relieved me at 11, and I turned in, feeling very sleepy. I thought I slept like a log, but something got on my nerves, I suppose. At any rate, it woke me up."

"My dear lad, what was it?" I asked impatiently.

"It came from the back of the bed," he answered. "It was a sound of feet."

"Something within the walls," I argued; "mice, beetles."

Montgomery shook his head. "Come and listen," he pleaded.

I followed him. Certainly he was the least imaginative young man in the world, and it puzzled me that he should have taken this whim. Perhaps it was not fancy! Suddenly Mrs. Main's statement, which I had doubted and ridiculed, returned to my mind in a flow of memory.

Montgomery's room stood upon the back of the castle and, like all the rooms which were in use, faced the park. It was a small, square chamber, lined, as had been practiced throughout the castle, with oak. Montgomery pointed to the pillow. "My head was there," he explained. "Listen!"

I lay down upon the bed and rested. "There's nothing to be heard," said I.

"Wait," said Montgomery eagerly.

A silence ensued. "Don't you hear anything?" he asked.

I shook my head. "My dear boy, it was fancy," I said and was raising my head from the pillow when suddenly a slight sound struck upon my ears, and I paused in the act and in the center of my speech. "I hear something now," I said. "But it's only the patter of rain."

Montgomery set his ear to the wall. "That's not rain," he whispered. He was right; it was not rain; it was the noise of feet falling lightly upon stone. At once I took fire.

"What is behind this oak?" I asked. "There must be some passage here." I sounded with my knuckles on the board. "It's hollow."

A careful inspection with the candle revealed a seam in the oak, which might mark the site of hinges, and together we pushed firmly on the panel. It fell back slowly, being, as I found afterward, without lock or spring and merely held in its place by disuse and dirt. Within, the light shone upon a black hole and a dark flight of stairs leading downward.

"We must see the end of this," said Montgomery, and hopped into the darkness like a frog. I followed. Below there was now silence; the footsteps had died away. The narrow flight in the wall continued for some thirty steps and brought us, as I reckoned, to the foundations of the castle. Here we were fetched up promptly by a blank wall of wood—no doubt a similar encasement of oak as that in which the panel above was set. Groping about, we fumbled upon a latch and opened the door quietly. The candle flared on the walls opposite. We were in the dark corridor leading to the treasure.

As this discovery flashed on me I heard once more the sound that I had detected in Montgomery's room—the sound of delicate footfalls on the stone flags. Blowing out the candle and putting a detaining hand on Montgomery, I drew back into the niche of that secret place. The sounds drew nearer, dropping regularly on the air and echoing faintly in the long tunnel. And then a figure, wrapped in darkness, but palpable to every sense save that of the sight, emerged, passed and faded before us. The footsteps pattered away into the distance.

The panel fell back slowly.

I waited a few moments, and then, stooping, shook off my boots, bidding my companion do the same. That done, we stepped out into the corridor and plunged into the blackness of the night.

The blood in my body ran like a mill race, but left my brain clear and bright in eddies. I was not blind to the probabilities of this adventure, which had now stepped out of the supernatural and become merely human and prosaic.

Here was one of our determined foes perambulating within the precincts of our hold, and even admitted to that privy place near which the hoard of treasure lay. Slowly and with great caution we followed. Our naked feet made no sound, but it was difficult to grope one's way in the darkness. Our direction lay round the castle walls and toward the drum towers, and it was upon the flight of stairs mounting to the guardroom in the northern tower that we came presently. The door at the top of this staircase stood ajar, and, proceeding with still greater care, we climbed up and looked through the chinks.

A lantern, newly lit and shedding a dull glow through the opaque glasses, was set upon the floor and cast the long, black shadow of a man against the wall. He was standing near the short, deep embrasure that yawned in the massive stone walls of the drum tower, scrutinizing the valley below. What could he be there for? As I wondered, turning over the circumstances in my excited mind, he stooped, and, picking up the lantern, thrust it into the window, waving it from side to side. I suppose this was in response to some signal from the valley, but I paid little heed to it at the time, being suddenly interested in a recognition. It was Hood!

I will confess that the identification of that unmistakable lean body and black head filled me with a sudden disquietude of which it would have been hard to give the reason. The very silence of the man sowed fear and mistrust in my heart. And so it was that instead of breaking from our hiding place and seizing the impudent intruder I put a hand on Montgomery and constrained him to retire with me into the lower passages. We concealed ourselves in one of the side galleries and there awaited Hood's return, for that he would return I had no doubt. Evidently he and Sercombe communicated with each other by means of flashing lights, and it was equally evident that Sercombe's signal must have been to postpone action. I could see pretty plainly the method Hood intended to adopt. He was to admit the marauders to the castle by lowering the drawbridge and raising the portcullis, after which they would have the three of us at their mercy. But the presence of the police in the neighborhood had saved us from that fate for one night at least, and, thanks to Montgomery's quick ears, it would be strange if we did not manage to put another face on the position by the morrow.

I was right in my conjecture, for shortly afterward we heard the returning feet sound along the stones. He passed the end of our passage, holding his lantern before him, and when he had disappeared we hurried out into the corridor and sped after him. Once we saw the spot of light that glowed in the vicinity of that shadow pause and waver. I dare say that some sound had caught his ear, and he turned and listened. We shrank into the protection of the wall until the footsteps had resumed their way. By this time I had guessed his errand, or at least his destination. He was bound for the treasure chamber in the keep and had probably come from there previously. Possibly it had been his hiding place. Here again my assumption proved correct, and we watched him open the cupboard in the wall and vanish like an expert, lantern and all, into the abyss.

"We must take him tonight," said I to Montgomery. "It won't do to let him get out of range."

Montgomery nodded and, cautiously approaching, pulled open the door in the wall. Drawing himself up, he clambered through the space and slid down into the farther room, making wonderfully small noise for so huge a body. I followed. But Hood was not in the lower room—at least there was no light to pierce the utter darkness—and, moreover, I think we both knew that he was in the loft above us. Together we crawled up the steps and once more looked in through the friendly aperture of a door upon the chief of our bitter enemies. Hood, kneeling upon the floor, was bent over the chests which contained the treasure.

Suddenly he started and lifted his head. It may have been that the door creaked, or perhaps he caught the sound of our breathing. All I know is that the next moment, and just as Montgomery leaped forward at a stride upon him, he put out his arm and with a swift movement overturned the lantern. The room was at once plunged in darkness, darkness so thick and gravelike that it was incredible. Eternal night dwelt and brooded in those rayless dungeons, and she resumed her empire greedily from that meek, usurping candle. Montgomery's rush carried him to the corner where the boxes lay, but he encountered no one. Hood by some slippery movement had glided away, and where he was in the solid darkness neither of us could say. I gathered this from the silence that ensued upon Montgomery's spring. I heard him pick himself up, and then there was a hush. I stood with my back against the door in a state of intense suspense. There came a slight soft sound, and a dagger whizzed past me and struck in the oak with a loud tang. I sprang forward, but my fist took the air.

Montgomery, from his corner, made a rush toward me, and I heard another of those horrid "tangs" and an exclamation of pain. Then there fell silence again, and presently an invisible person seemed to pass before me. I thrust out my arms, and again a soft and slender form touched me gently, and there came the clang and clatter of a knife upon the wall, pinning my coat sleeve to the woodwork; but upon that there bore down upon us the sprawling form of Montgomery, and two people were fighting upon the floor before me. Tap, tap, tap went the horrid knife upon the floor, and then silence again, broken only by heavy noises in the throat. With formidable fears in my breast, I struck a match, casting a thread of light upon the scene of the struggle. Hood lay in Montgomery's arms, crumpled like a snake whose back is broken, one hand (which held a knife) stretched inert along the floor, his head thrown back, his face white through its sallow discoloration, and his eyelids lowered over his strange eyes.

"Good heavens, you have killed him!" said I.

Montgomery looked doubtful. "I don't think so," he panted; "but he was the very devil to tackle with that knife of his. I may have squeezed too hard. Something did crack, but"—

I pulled him aside. "Light the lantern, old chap," I said.

Hood fell loosely to the floor as Montgomery moved his arms, and opened his eyes, which fell on me sharp and ardent, burning with a violent light. He sat up.

Hood was bent over the chests.

"You have me, sir," he remarked.

"Yes, my man," said I cheerfully, "I think we may go so far as to say that."

Hood turned on his side, and I kicked the dagger out of his reach.

"If you don't mind, sir, I should like to be eating something," he said quietly. "I've had nothing all day."

He looked toward the treasure chests, and I perceived upon one of these the preparations for a meal. I laughed. "You know the house well, I see, Hood."

"Yes, sir," said he. "I've done a good deal of foraging, sir, at one time and another."

"Very well. Have your meal," I agreed. "Any bones broken?"

"Thank you, sir; none, sir. A bit stiff, sir; that's all."

"Then I think we'll leave you to your supper, Hood," I said. I examined the candle in the lantern; it would last some hours. Ere it burned out I would revisit the prisoner with some supplies.

"You are not going to keep him here?" asked Montgomery in some surprise.

I nodded. "For the present."

We passed out, and I turned the key in the lock.

"He'll stifle in there," expostulated Montgomery.

"Oh, dear, no!" said I. "It's not the first time the keep has been used as a dungeon, though I dare say it will be the last."

I think the boy took a grewsome fear of me on that occasion, regarding me with horror as a malevolent and barbarous tyrant, but in truth I had a purpose in my seeming malice, as will appear.

CHAPTER XIV.

We had now a prisoner of war, lawfully taken in the flagrant act, and must consider what to do with him. For myself, I had already solved the riddle in my own way. To say the truth, I was getting a distaste for the adventure. It implied too many hard knocks, too rough a usage for a summer holiday, and, what was much worse, it entailed on me a grave responsibility.

It seemed to me that the drift of these lawless events was wholly in the direction of murder. The word was ugly enough, but it must be faced. Murder is what the law would call it, and murder was what it came near being at the best. The capture of Hood, then, opened a road of escape, and I had already resolved to employ it. Of course it would have been possible still to have surrendered the treasure to the crown or to have handed it into the possession of Sercombe's party; but, though I was reluctant to continue the bloody struggle, I was certainly indisposed to haul down my flag. If it were to be peace, it should be peace with honor. And the body of Hood gave me my means.

I was able after some argument to carry my point with the others. They had both a kindly fancy for the fighting and were inclined to take my announcement in a chapfallen manner. But I explained that I was making no decision of myself; that I was one of three and that I had merely offered the suggestion as my contribution to the counsels of war. Upon that I added the very cogent reasons which I had prepared in favor of my advice, and the end of the talk was that they accepted the plans I unfolded.

To execute my scheme it was necessary to see Sercombe. But first I must pay a visit to the prisoner, who by the time we had arrived at a conclusion had lain in the blackness of that abominable dungeon for five hours. Sheppard, indeed, had been eager to interview him, and upon hearing of the capture had at once betaken himself to the keep. He was absent half an hour, but I did not inquire what he had been doing. I merely looked at him interrogatively when he returned, which he did wearing a graver face than was usual to him. Noting the inquiry in my glance, he shook his head.

"That man is dangerous," he said—"abnormally dangerous."

"Montgomery and I have occasion to know that," I replied. "He is a snake—that is the substantive—and I doubt very much whether we can kill him."

"I have my doubts whether we can even scotch him," said Sheppard dryly and then dismissed the subject.

Yet my conversation with Hood later was very commonplace and marked by no particular points. He kept his customary face of obsequiousness and gave me the briefest replies to my interrogations. I was specially exercised in my mind as to the manner of his entrance into the castle. For all his dexterity and cunning, I could not see how, carefully watched as our fortress was, he had managed to gain admittance over the drawbridge and through the closed portcullis. At the question, which was delivered point blank, he turned his luminous eyes upon me and regarded me with a shifty smile, the shadow of a smile, betokening no amusement.

"I don't mind telling you, sir," he murmured, "though it's not what I would say to most gentlemen. But you have been a gentleman, sir, throughout, and I should be proud to have served you. I came with the party in the morning, sir."

"What!" said I. "You were with the storming party?"

"Yes, sir. Seeing you engaged, I crept away. I know the house, sir, being with my poor master so long. And I don't hold with violence where you can do without it."

I opened my eyes. The man's plans were conceived with excellent craft. It would be the last thing I should have thought of, and yet it was so simple to take advantage of the confusion and secrete himself upon the battlements after his allies had fled.

"You are a rascal, Hood," I returned, not without admiration. "But you are a clever rascal."

"Thank you, sir," said Hood.

"Yes," I continued, "you have had a smart shot for it, but your game is up, my man. Clever as you are, I have you caged, and I think Captain Sercombe and his scoundrels are further from the gold than ever."

"It looks like it, sir," admitted Hood.

I looked round upon the dark and grimy walls. "This is a mean hole for a man of your parts to lie festering in," I said, "but I see no choice before you. You have made your own bed, and you must lie in it. A man might rot here and drop into the bones of a skeleton without sound or sense of the outside world. The bodies of many captives have decayed within these gloomy walls."

"Have they, indeed, sir?" said Hood politely. He sat upon one of the oaken cases, his eyes bent upon me earnestly, his body almost couchant for a spring. I could have believed the man was preparing a sudden assault upon me but that I knew he carried no weapon and I was of stronger and bigger build than he. But apparently nothing of the sort was in his mind. It was merely the deference due to my position which he proclaimed in that attention. That mask of the trained servant concealed his individuality now as ever. Never once had I seen the veil lifted and the real man exposed and naked to the light of day.

"Hood," said I, almost with a sigh of despair at his imperturbable calm, "do you want to stay here indefinitely?"

"Certainly not, sir; by your leave, sir," he answered promptly.

"Then upon what terms shall I offer you release?" His eyes dropped, and there was silence. "Remember," said I, "that no one outside ourselves is aware of your existence here. You may be hidden here till the day of judgment and none be the wiser, and even then your bones will scarcely see the light of day. What do you propose?"

Hood shifted his gaze to my face. "Anything that's convenient to you, sir. I'd rather leave it to you, sir."

I experienced a strange impulse to cry out with some emotion, but whether this was astonishment, anger or a mere sense of the ridiculous, or whether it was a combination of all three, I could not have said. I rose from my seat, controlling my voice with difficulty.

"Very well, Hood," I said. "It shall be left to me, as you suggest." And with that I stalked out of the dungeon and locked the door.

It was impossible to transact business with such a man. I felt the need of reciprocity, whereas dealing with Hood reminded me of nothing so much as of digging at a piece of rubber that will fly gently back when the pressure is removed. And so it must be with Sercombe that I should arrange the details of a compromise, or at least the terms of a truce if not of a permanent peace.

Sercombe was absent from the inn, but I learned that he was in Raymond, and, taking our horses, Montgomery and I rode across to the little town in the early hours of the afternoon. We ran upon the captain himself in High street and as we were making for the Swan to put up our nags. He welcomed us cheerily and, mopping his red forehead (for the day was very sultry), invited us to drink with him.

"Just stepping across to the Swan," said he. "Come along and put up your toes. Ecuador was nothing to this."

I accepted with a nod, and presently we were seated in the commercial room by the window that looked out upon the courtyard, sipping a cooling draft.

"I prefer," says the captain hospitably, "to drink in company rather than alone. And that's the distinction between a drinker and a drunkard, Master Montgomery. Take it from me." With which he threw back his head and took a long pull at his glass. "I have not felt so warm since I was in Abyssinia," he remarked.

"Ah," said I, "you are right, captain. Hot is the word. I'm sure from my heart I envy Hood."

Sercombe pricked up his ears, regarding me inquisitively.

"Yes," I went on, leaning back in my chair; "cool, damp floors, cold stone walls and neither the sun nor the moon to smite him—that's my notion of comfort this weather."

Sercombe paused in the act of drinking and put down his glass. "What is this conundrum, Mr. Greatorex?" he asked in a puzzled way.

"'Tis no conundrum," I replied airily. "By the way, where did you say your friend Hood was?"

He looked at me under his red eyebrows. "Mr. Hood," he said, "is on business of his own. He is a gentleman at large, but he has affairs."

"No doubt, no doubt," I remarked amiably. "This is an excellent cooling drink, captain."

Sercombe puffed at his cigar, continuing to study our faces. Upon Montgomery's, I dare say, he perceived a smile of triumph, for he suddenly put down his cigar and folded his hands on his head.

"I fancy we've got to come to an understanding, Mr. Greatorex," he said slowly. "I'm slow of wit, no doubt, but I begin to see daylight. But I will call on you to observe that I am not responsible for Mr. Hood's movements."

"I have never imagined so," I answered. "On the contrary."

A frown, rather than a scowl, crossed his face. "Has it ever fallen to you, Mr. Greatorex, to be tied in a leash; to be— But I reckon as a barrister you are not particular about your cases. You have messed up with many a dirty attorney."

"You felicitate me too much," said I, with a bow. "I am unfortunate enough never to have had a brief."

"Ah!" said the captain and was for a moment silent. "You have Hood?" he asked.

The man's intelligence was quick; his wits were plying even more quickly.

"We have the honor to possess a prisoner of war," said I.

"I congratulate you, sir," said he, "upon an event I had always anticipated." Then again he was quiet, seeming absorbed in thought, but suddenly he sat up. "See here, Mr. Greatorex," he said, "I will be frank with you. This thing has not gone according to my notions, and that's flat. As for this folly of exploiting the castle from inside, I put no faith in it from the outset. A fair siege and a square siege is more to my taste. But you let up on us with that meat of yours and those sharp eyes. I will confess I never saw a position held more keenly. But that's no use to us, and I tell you that I'm sick of it. Look; I'll tell you how I stand. I have my men—they're mine, mind you, and not Hood's—and I've no stomach to give it all up for nothing. But, between you and me, it's no champagne supper to defend the castle and lose half your natural life in blows and strategies; therefore, what do you say to terms?"

"Terms!" I echoed. "To ransom Hood?"

He ejaculated an oath. "Let the beast rot," he declared. "I'm talking of ourselves."

"Captain Sercombe," said I gently, "I knew Mr. Hood in this business ere I knew you, and to my idea he was the prime mover in the conspiracy. Let us say that he is gone, and what have we to fear?"

Sercombe looked extremely blank, and I could see that my words had struck a vital spot.

"Hood," he said, "has done nothing but blunder, and besides"—

But he got no further, breaking off suddenly and as though with an effort.

"If that be so," said I, rising, "let us see how Captain Sercombe will manage matters."

"Hold hard," he interrupted. "Sit down awhile, sir. You have sprung this affair on me. I must take my counsel. Come, what do you say to going shares?"

I lifted my brows. "You are not serious?" I remarked.

He glanced furtively at Montgomery. "I will take one-third," he said, "and no questions asked."

"My dear sir," said I in amazement, "you embarrass me. Your terms are too liberal from a vanquished foe. I could not accept such generosity. And now, if you will allow me, as I have an appointment with Mr. Hood shortly, I must"—

But this alarmed him, as I could perceive, for he changed color and put out a finger to catch my arm.

"I will stand in with all of you!" he cried.

I smiled, but before I could reply an interruption fell in the entrance of the police sergeant, Jones, whom we had met before. He saluted us, and I made an inquiry as to his investigations.

"I am on a track, sir," he declared. "I can say no more." And he eyed Sercombe attentively.

"You've not struck those gypsies, I hear," said Sercombe, who had resumed his cigar with an appearance of nonchalance.

"No, sir."

"They're here today and somewhere else tomorrow. I hardly expected you would find them. They nose a scent pretty soon."

"I'm on a track, sir," repeated Jones.

"Glad to hear it," nodded the captain.

I went out with the sergeant, but Sercombe called to me.

"What is it?" I asked, standing in the doorway.

An anxious look troubled Sercombe's eye. "I have made you a proposition, Mr. Greatorex."

"That's true," said I gravely, "and I will ask you, captain, to better it. But, excuse me, my time is limited."

"You give me short shrift," exclaimed he, with a bitter laugh.

"Oh, no," I said; "but I dare say you will have time to think over it between now and 9 o'clock. If you can see your way to a more equitable adjustment, captain, perhaps you would be good enough to let me know by then?"

At that I left him and caught up with Montgomery, who had gone ahead with Jones.

"Excuse me, sir," said Jones politely, "but are you a very old friend of Captain Sercombe's?"

"Why, no," said I, "I have not known him long."

"Ah," said he, "an odd gentleman, sir. Mr. Hood of the Woodman, he knows some queer stories about him."

"He says so, does he?" said I.

Jones emphatically wagged his head. "Very queer," he added. From which it appeared to me that Mr. Jones might not be quite so smart as he seemed, and also that Mr. Hood was even smarter. What his object might have been in spreading an evil reputation for Sercombe I could not guess, but that he had an object, and a material one, I did not doubt for a moment.

Though I had introduced the idea to Sercombe's notice, and the introduction had had its effect, I had not yet given shape and substance to my plan of setting off the one scoundrel against the other. I foresaw that I could improve my own position very substantially by this system of balance, and I determined to go now forthright to Hood on the same errand. He had failed me in the morning, but perhaps he would have grown wiser in the course of the day's imprisonment. There is nothing like solitude and the opportunity of reflection to bring a man to prudence, and now, too, I had seen Sercombe and had a genuine offer to consider. I came to the conclusion that, after all, Hood would not prove obdurate and that the end of the warfare was almost in sight.

In some such mood as this I made the journey to the keep, flattering myself with the success of my diplomacy and complacently contemplating an honorable settlement which would rid us of our troubles, banish these wretched intruders and leave us to the comfortable enjoyment of our share in the treasure of the Vyvians.

Dinner was over. The clock in the hall had chimed half past 8. I expected Sercombe at 9 o'clock and must hurry to secure the interview before that. I entered the dungeon carefully and locked the door behind me, as was my custom. Then, turning, I cast the light toward the boxes upon which Hood had sat.

He was not there. Hastily I flashed the lantern round the walls. There was no sign of Hood. The dungeon was empty.

CHAPTER XV.

I stared at the blank stones, but they returned no sign from their unavailing grayness. The silence began to speak in that gloomy place. Recovering myself, I put down the lantern and considered. First I put the key in my pocket, a definite precaution which was to influence strangely the history of this narrative. It was not conceivable that any one could have opened the heavy door when it was locked, yet the prisoner was gone. "If he is gone," said I aloud in order to reassure myself, "he must needs have gone by some hole." That was incontrovertible. I decided, too, that the means of escape must lie within the dungeon. Once more I inspected the huge oaken door and shook my head. Was there any flaw in the wood? Perchance there was a secret spring in a panel. I went over the surface carefully, but found nothing.

"Very well," said I, "I will unriddle this or be hanged for a felon," and I set to work upon the walls. Inch by inch I passed the masonry under my scrutiny, but made no discovery. "I will go over it again," I declared desperately and resumed my work from the beginning. I had not reached a point very far from the door on this second round of investigation when my glance slid off at a venture and almost mechanically rested upon the treasure chests. Something unfamiliar in their appearance vaguely persisted in my thoughts. I left off fumbling with the wall and stood gazing at them. They took my eyes with interest, and, crossing the room, I shed the light upon the cases, fingering the gold pieces under the broken lid. One, two, three—they stood exactly as—no, that was the point. They had been moved!

With a new zest I examined the floor, and, sure enough, one of these chests had been pulled out from the wall as far as its own width. I peeped over it, illuminating the space beyond. The slab of stone which the box had covered was like the other flags that made the floor of the dungeon. I leaned lower, and, sitting crossways on the chest, pushed the slab with my foot. It clanked dully to the kick of my heel; but, what was even more amazing to me, it seemed to shudder and tremble beneath me. Fully aroused to action, I flung myself over and alighted with both feet hard upon the flooring. In another moment I was tipped forward and felt myself falling precipitately upon my face. Catching at the chest with one hand, I saved myself, but in the effort the lantern fell from my hand and went out.

MY FATHER'S BUSINESS

HIGH IDEALS FOR DAILY SERVICE OF THE ALMIGHTY.

VOICES THE CHILD HEARS

Calls to Duty, Life Work For the Master, Come Very Often to the Little Ones, and Should Be Heard and Prayerfully Considered—Their Elders Should Be Diligent and Fervent, and Serve Him in Their Daily Round.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1906, by Frederick Diver, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 29.—In this sermon the preacher takes us back to that wonderful period of life when the mind of the child, emerging from the mysterious twilight land, first begins to think independently. He warns us to respect these visions of childhood. The text is Luke ii, 49, "Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?"

Without doubt one of the most satisfactory pictures ever painted of Jesus Christ is that of Hoffman, called "Christ the Boy Talking With the Doctors In the Temple." We have seen scores of pictures of Jesus Christ. The Parisian Louvre is full of them. The Vatican is full of them. The art galleries of Antwerp and Brussels and Berlin and Venice are full of them. But, though the greatest artists have exhausted their genius to reproduce for us an inspired idea of the Saviour's face, yet most of them have come far short of the ideal. They either make Christ's face too effeminate, as did Bida, Da Vinci and Steinle; or too much of a Hercules, as did Rubens and Vandyke; or too grotesque, as did Tintoretto and Rembrandt and Guido; or too mercenary, as did Bernardo, Strozzi an Plockhurst; or too stern, as did Dore and Albrecht Durer; or too agonizing, as did Bouguereau and Correggio; or too lachrymose, as did Ary Scheffer. But toward Hoffman's picture there is no division of opinion. We are here a unit in our approbation. When we see Hoffman's youth standing among the doctors in the temple we at once say: "Yes, that is my idea of Jesus the Child. That child looks just as I supposed Christ looked as a boy."

The eyes are big and intelligent. They seem to be looking far off. They truly seem to be catching an inspired vision of his Father's business. The halo about the head, the beautiful curls falling in graceful curves about those shoulders, show the human and the divine commingling. The robe about his lithe form is as pure and spotless as his life. He seems to stand there as a child, and yet he seems to be reaching far out into the future. All worlds, all ages, seem to be his. In contrast to this beautiful face, with its wonderful features, are the astonished and puzzled countenances of the baldheaded, learned sages, who were not accustomed to debate with youths, but only with their compeers in the sanctum sanctorum of the Hebrew sanhedrin.

And yet, as I stood watching the beautiful face of that Divine Child, this question came to me: "Why should those Hebrew rabbis wonder at that boy's intelligence? Should not all men and women stand in awe before the average boys of the present day? Do not most youths and maidens of twelve summers have inspired visions from God, as Christ had an inspired vision? Does not God call to them at this critical age to be about their Father's business?" He does. I want you to study with me this morning some of those childhood visions. Men and women, too, have their times of reaching out to things unseen, but this morning let us think chiefly of those bright imaginings of youth. This age, the twelfth year, is to me the most important of life. May we be very careful how we deal with our children when they are entering the sacred portal of their early teens! The way they tread the path of life will in all probability decide the way they shall tread these paths through time and through eternity.

Why do I put such an emphasis upon the age of twelve? Because it is about the year when the child for the first time lets go of his parent's or guardian's hand and begins to climb the heights of the unseen world and to think for himself. That is the time when he begins for the first time on his own account to ponder about God and what God wants him to be. Before that age the child for the most part is completely under the control of the father and the mother, but at the twelfth year the parent is astonished at the strange questions which the boy puts. Suddenly, and seemingly without any preconceived thought, the boy will break out with such questions as this: "Mother, where was I before I was born?" "Mother, where shall I go after I am dead?" "Mother, how can I live in heaven when my body is buried in the earth?" "Mother, last night when I was lying awake in bed I made up my mind that Jesus wanted me to be a preacher, like Paul and Timothy, about whom we studied in our Sunday school last week." These questions or statements seem to spring from the lips almost involuntarily. When he first speaks thus you look at him in amazement. Then you say, "Who has been talking to you, my son?" He answers simply, "No one, mother; no one." Ah, yes, some one has been talking to him. Like Christ, the boy in the temple, he hears a strange voice. He sees strange visions. These visions are not of earth, but of heaven. He cannot see those visions full orbed; but, like Christ the boy he can see them in their dim outlines. He hears the divine voice, and in his faint way he is saying, "I must be about my Father's business."

"Has your boy never astonished you by his strange questions and answers, as Christ astonished the lawyers and doctors in the temple when but twelve years of age? Some time ago an anxious mother said: "When my children were very young they were mine. I could say to them, 'Children, sit down!' and they would sit down. I could read to them a book and explain to them the pictures, and they would accept my statements as true, because mother said it. But there comes a time when I feel my boy's hand loosening its grasp upon my hand. Then I see him move away and leave my side and begin to walk alone and to think for himself. Then I cannot say, 'Child, do this,' and he will do it simply because his mother tells him to do it. I cannot say, 'Child, believe this,' merely because I believe it. But I must give him an intelligent reason why he should do so and why he should believe." Then as the child moves away from his mother's side the mother must sit still and pray to God that he will help guide her boy. Yes, as parents we have all gone through this experience. For years and years our children have followed us, as bleating lambs follow the mother sheep. But some day we turn our eyes to see where the children are. Then, much to our surprise, they are not by our side. Then we look up the mountain heights. There we see our boys and girls beginning to climb. Along the dizzy precipices they go. Over the dangerous rocks, higher and higher, like Alpine hunters, they mount or balance. They are climbing up the mountains of original research. They are climbing up the mountains of thought. They are starting out for the mountains of fame. Then all that the parents can do is to sit in the valleys and see their boys and girls disappear among the cloudlands as they pray: "O God, guide my children! O God, reach out thy strong arm and bridge that dangerous crevasse!" This time of starting for the cloudlands, for pioneering among unseen worlds, generally comes to the boys and the girls when they are about to pass the twelfth golden milestone. Looking into the past, we know this was our own personal experience. Thus is it with the first coming of God's visions to our children.

Not only do these visions come to the child of twelve, but they come in a rational way. When God gives to the young boy a vision he is not picturing for him a future life which is impossible to be realized. God is giving to him the same kind of vision that he gave to the boy Jacob, and to the boy Joseph, and to the boy Samuel, and to the boy David, and to the boy Christ. These ancient boys as well as the modern boys of twelve may not fully realize what their futures are to be, but something within them says, "O child, thou art to be this or that or the other thing on account of thy mental and physical and spiritual powers." These boy children of twelve feel the inward as well as the outward callings of the future, as the great painter Benjamin West when a little child used to make paint brushes from the hairs of his cat's tail, and as the boy Demosthenes felt the slumbering fires of eloquence burning within him when he stuttered so badly that in order to articulate at all distinctly he used to put pebbles in his mouth, and as David Brainerd heard the divine call to give his life to foreign missions long before he was out of the short trousers of the schoolroom.

Oh, the visions of youth! How important they are for the development of the child. In the book of Proverbs we read, "Where there is no vision the people perish." That means when the people have no ideals hovering before them, where the sculptor cannot see a more perfect statue in dim outline standing beside the stone he has chiseled, and the musician cannot hear a sweeter song than that which he has composed, and the reformer cannot see a more perfect Utopia than that in which he lives, then the development of those people is retrograding instead of advancing, involuting instead of evoluting. But, my friends, if it is essential for the developed man to have perfect visions ever before him, how much more important is it for the undeveloped child to have visions before him! These visions, when they come from God, are not like the unaccountable mirages of the desert or like air castles builded in the sandy wastes. They are rational visions builded by the angel of hope saying to the child: "Boy, girl, with thy physical and mental and spiritual nature God bids thee to reach out to accomplish these things which thou now seest. Look up, look out, look on." Frances Hodgson Burnett, looking into the dim past and writing the history of her girlhood days in that fascinating book called "The One I knew Best of All," is not seeing a more realistic character than do some children when they look into the dim future and by reason of their physical and mental and spiritual tendencies picture themselves as some day being lawyers or doctors or ministers or merchants or bankers or inventors or musicians or statesmen or poets or songsters or reformers. These children by such visions hear the call for future work. They hear it so clearly and distinctly that in their minds there is no doubt as to that call coming direct from the throne of God.

But we must not stop here in the discussion of this mighty theme. It is very important to have the visions of youth, but it is just as important to have the child developed aright after those first visions have come and gone. These first visions of childhood always seems to me like the little green shoots which spring up out of the ground. Care for them. Give them plenty of sunlight, and let not the winds handle them too roughly, or the cold freeze them, or the droughts parch them, and they will change themselves into the saplings, then after awhile into the stout young trees and then into the giant oaks, but crush the roots or destroy the first visions and you may ruin the whole after development.

But there is still another fact relative to the visions of childhood to which I would draw your attention. They may come to a boy or a girl at a time when the parent thinks the child is too young to have any appreciation or any thought of his own. They may come and go so quickly that, like the humming birds drinking out of the honey cups of a garden, you can hardly tell whether they are truly here before they are gone. They may come and go and after awhile seem to disappear forever, but because the fulfillment of these first visions may be postponed for months—aye, for years—do not be suprised or skeptical. Those first visions of youth, if they have been welcomed aright by the parent and the child, will all be realized. They will all be fulfilled if they were true visions from God.

Let me illustrate my thought by the life of Jesus Christ. I love to think of the journey which this Divine Child took to the capital of his great ancestor, King David. Jesus up to this time was nothing but a boy. 'Tis true, he was a perfect boy, but he was a boy, with all the healthful desires of childhood. He was not a boy with the character of a girl, but a boy, a healthful, beautiful, noble boy. He could romp and play like other boys. In the games played between his companions and himself I have always thought there was no laugh merrier than his and no rollicking joy more full and hearty. I can never think of Christ as a frail baby or a sickly boy. Every part of him to me was that of a well-rounded, perfectly-formed child. He was a boy who was the life of his home, a boy who was loved by every one.

Now, it was a custom of all the Israelites ordained by the Mosaic law to attend the feast of the passover once a year. This feast took place in the springtime. It was a combination, if I might use the simile, of our Thanksgiving day and Fourth of July. It was a time when the Hebrews assembled in Jerusalem to thank God for their liberation from Egyptian slavery. In the spring of each year from the little village of Nazareth, among the Zebulon hills in the far north, the men and women would start on their sacred pilgrimage. The children were left behind as a rule on account of the length, the fatigue and the danger of the journey. Methinks I can see Christ and the other boys of Nazareth climb the hills to watch their fathers disappear in the distance. But one year Christ does not mingle with the boys. He has come to the sacred age of twelve. This is the year that all Hebrew boys are allowed to join the caravan. Thus as he walks along with his parents I see his cheeks flushed with excitement. This is most natural. Christ the boy for the first time is going to see a great city. Christ the boy is going to the capital of his country. Were you not excited when your father, a farmer, took you to the city for the first time?

But as Christ the boy wanders around that great capital, with its walls and palaces and temple and its thousands of inhabitants and visitors, there rises before him the dim vision of who he is and what God wants him to do. The vision is there dim in outline, but it is there. He naturally drifts to the temple and talks with the learned rabbis, who sat there to teach and answer questions. The thought that he was the Messiah whom the Jews were expecting was probably in his mind. He wanted to learn what was the idea that the doctors had of that being, and his inquiries showed so much intelligence that they marvelled at him. He had had a vision, but neither they nor his parents, when they came, understood it. What became of that vision? For ten, fifteen—aye, for nearly twenty—years the world hears nothing more about this strange boy. Like so many other youthful prodigies, he seems to disappear forever. He not only goes back to Nazareth, but instead of being a messenger of God he seems to become nothing but a carpenter. But nearly a score of years afterward we see this Christ in Cana, by Lake Galilee. Then in rapid succession come the Jordanic baptism and the miracles. Then come Gethsemane and Calvary, then the Easter resurrection and the ascension. Ah, did Christ's vision of boyhood come true? So, my friends, I want to tell you that the fulfillment of your child's visions, if they are of God and you welcome them aright, will come true, though they may be many years hidden away in a Nazareth oblivion. Beware how you sneer at those visions of the twelfth year.

But as I plead with you to be careful in your dealings with the God given visions of your children I cannot close without just one word of pleading for yourself. You are no longer a child. Your hair is gray. Your face is wrinkled. Instead of having the clear blue eyes of youth, your nose is bridged with glasses. A score, two score, perhaps three score years separate you from the scenes of your school days. Tell me, do you not believe it is full time for you to see the fulfillment of those visions of your own childhood? When you were a schoolboy you saw a God-given vision of a day in which you were to surrender your whole heart and life unto his service. Was it a dream? Do you not believe the time has come for that vision to be fulfilled at the altar of mercy now?

This is not a useless or an unimportant moment for you. This moment may decide the eternal destiny of some one. Your vision of childhood, about giving your heart to Jesus Christ, came to some of you nearly fifty years ago. Shall not that vision be fulfilled in this the twilight of your life? Shall it not, by the grace of God, be fulfilled now? Or if not now, when shall it be fulfilled? Do you not believe that that vision of childhood which still lingers in your mind was a vision sent from God, which, by God's will, is still calling you to him?

Lord Cadogan is known as one of the best landlords in London. When North street, Chelsea, was remodeled a short time ago Lord Cadogan was approached by a syndicate which asked him to sell the property to them. To which the earl replied:

"I will sell it, but I must insist upon your granting new leases to every one who is in that street, so that no one is turned out for five years and so that they will have ample notice."

That made a difference of £50,000 to Lord Cadogan. In other words, if he had sold it outright without a condition of that sort he would have got £50,000 more than he did.

Why Trepoff Resigned.

Why did General Trepoff resign his high command at St. Petersburg? Here is one explanation: General Trepoff went to the theatre one night when a cinematograph supplied part of the entertainment. Revolutionists had tampered with the film, however, and the instrument ground out moving pictures which led up dramatically from a meeting of conspirators to the murder of General Trepoff himself after the manner of the taking off of the late M. von Plehve. The whole thing was so realistically done that Trepoff was terrified and at once resigned.

Shaw's Ups and Downs.

George Bernard Shaw recently confessed: "The way in which I make money in the theatre is enough to demoralize a saint. For long periods of years I get nothing at all, and then I find myself making money at the rate of $£300 ($1,500) a week. The natural consequence is that one begins to live at that rate, and it is very difficult to leave off. Unfortunately the £300 a week leaves off with disconcerting abruptness."

Valadon's Special

By CONRAD HAUSSMAN

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

"I say," cried Billy, "wait for a fellow! My remittance will be along in a couple of days, and we can all go east together."

Mabel Brockman laughed. "You're twenty-nine, aren't you, Billy?" she asked irrelevantly.

"In February," assented Valadon.

"And you have to wait until your papa sends you money? I don't think you even call him 'father,' do you?"

Valadon looked hurt. "You are always at me to go to work," he frowned. "I don't see why I should have to with the governor so disgustingly rich."

"How much money have you?" she asked. Somehow her conversation this morning on the Coronado beach was most uncertain.

"Enough to pay my bills and get up to San Francisco."

"Then you will have to wait until some one sends you the money to get home on. I don't think you are worth waiting for, Billy."

"You might at least be nice this last day," he said shortly. "Let's talk about something else."

Two days later Valadon stood on the wharf at Oakland. Miss Brockman stood by the sleeper in which she and her mother were to make the trip east.

"I may see you sooner than you expect," he said, with a smile.

"Having money telegraphed to you?" she asked.

"No," he answered shortly. "I have an idea that perhaps I can go east in accordance with your approved methods. I'm going to try it anyhow."

"If you do, Billy," said the girl softly as she mounted the steps.

"If I do, what"—

Mabel shook her head over the porter's shoulder as the train pulled out. She loved Valadon in spite of his absolute dependence upon his father. If she could rouse him to action— She smiled to herself as the train rolled along the water front and permitted a last glimpse of the bay.

A TIRED AND DIRTY BUT CHEERFUL YOUNG MAN DROVE UP.

Valadon took the boat back to the city, but instead of returning to the hotel he went to the Barbary Coast. In one of the dives sat a party of men, rough, uncouth, and with a most evident smell of the stable about them. Billy went up to the leader.

"I'm ready now," he said.

"Stow the glad rags," commanded the other, "and come back here in half an hour. We don't want silk hats around."

Before the end of the half hour the silk hat and frock coat had been metamorphosed into a cloth cap and a pea jacket, and Billy was $7 richer.

The leader marshaled the gang, and an hour later Billy was back in Oakland, but this time in the freight yards.

He clung to a handsome leather suit case, but this time it carried only necessities, and his baggage was augmented by a soap box containing a whole boiled ham, ten pounds of corned beef, six loaves of bread, a hunk of cheese and a bottle of pickles. There was also a two quart pail, which, it was explained, was to be filled with coffee when they made their day stops.

On the track before him was a train of twelve yellow cars, at the head of which panted a huge engine. Billy climbed into the third car and deposited his belongings in a corner. There was much hoarse shouting, a blast from a whistle and a jolt as the train pulled out, and the first section of the horse special was under way.

Billy's fellow passengers in the car were another hostler and twelve thoroughbreds being hurried east to the big winter sale. The stalls took up most of the room, but there was a tiny space for the two men at opposite ends of the car and room enough to sleep in if one should be very tired.

Men from the ranch had accompanied the train as far as San Francisco and had fed the horses before the train had pulled out. The only thing to be done during the night was to quiet any horse that might become restless, and at 12 he could go to sleep and turn the watch over to his fellow.

Because Billy had paid over to the foreman $10 in addition to the pay due him he was given a car in which the travelers were experienced tourists, racers of the western circuit being sent east to be sold as hunters, and it was not a difficult matter to keep them quiet.

When the train stopped he could hear the yearlings in the cars behind stamping about, and he was glad that he had been given a quiet car.

Even as it was he was kept busy, and sleep came quickly to tired eyes in spite of the novelty of his surroundings and the fact that his head was pillowed upon a wisp of hay spread over the grub box, through which the smell of cold ham filtered.

There was plenty of work in the morning, too, feeding and watering six horses and rubbing them down, and he was glad enough when the train slowed down and the welcome shout of "Coffee!" echoed along the line.

There was a full quart of the taffy colored liquid in each can, and with that and bread and ham Billy made a breakfast that would have surprised the attendants at his favorite club.

By the time the next stop came he had his stalls cared for, and the fresh coffee came as a welcome reviver. He had wondered at the announcement that there would be coffee at frequent stops, but the day was not half over before he realized that it was needed.

Five days later a tired and dirty but exceedingly cheerful young man drove up to the door of the Valadon residence on Fifth avenue just as the head of that house was sitting down to his breakfast. It required an argument with a new footman to convince him that the caller was not required to go to the side entrance, but at his voice the elder Valadon came running into the hall.

"Bless my soul," he puffed after Billy had told his tale in brief. "Didn't you get my check?"

Billy thrust a paper into his hand. "It came the day I left," he said, "but it sort of spoiled the idea, and I pretended that I did not get it. Now I want a bath and breakfast, and then I want to see if I cannot go down to the station in time to meet the Brockmans."

The Chicago express was three hours late when it puffed into the huge arched shed and Miss Brockman was in no amiable frame of mind as she descended to the platform. There had been delay, and six days on the train even in a stateroom is not pleasant.

For a moment she stared as a well groomed young man possessed himself of her hand bag and turned to help her mother down the steps, and it was not until they had headed for the ferry that she found her voice.

"How did you get here so quickly?" she demanded.

"I came the northern way," he explained, "and I had a special."

Miss Brockman turned away to hide her disappointment. "I might have known you would do something like that," said she coldly. "I suppose that you wired for money."

"There was a check at the hotel when I got to San Francisco," he explained wickedly. "I had it in my pocket when I said goodby to you in Oakland. I thought you would like a surprise."

"It was not a surprise. It was the expected," she corrected. "I had hoped my sermon had sunk in."

He made no explanations until they were in the carriage which had waited at Twenty-third street. Then Billy leaned forward.

"I should have explained," he began, "that the special was for the Ora ranch horses for the sale at the garden. I was a hostler, and I brought the check back with me."

She leaned forward and kissed him, to the surprise of her mother.

"Billy," she cried impulsively, "you may take that check and buy me a solitaire with it!"

A Cat Dilemma.

A babu in charge of the documents of a certain town in India found that they were being seriously damaged by rats. He wrote to the government to provide him with weekly rations for two cats to destroy the rats. The request was granted, and the two cats were installed, one, the larger of the two, receiving slightly better rations than the other. All went well for a few weeks, when the supreme government of India received the following dispatch: "I have the honor to inform you that the senior cat is absent without leave. What shall I do?" The problem seemed to baffle the supreme government, for the babu received no answer. After waiting a few days he sent off a proposal: "In re absentee cat. I propose to promote the junior cat and in the meantime to take into government service a probationer cat on full rations." The supreme government expressed its approval of the scheme, and things once more ran smoothly in that department.

Heating Buildings.

There is ample evidence to prove that the rational heating of buildings was a well understood art several thousand years ago. In the palmy days of Pompeii's early existence, before its burial under volcanic ashes, the old Roman baths in that town were heated by steam and in a better and far more scientific manner than is followed at the present time. The walls of the buildings were double, and the steam, at atmospheric pressure, no doubt, was carried up through these walls all around the rooms to be warmed, bringing them to a temperature approximating that of the steam, and the occupants of the room were thus exposed to a radiation of warmth from all directions. In this we have the true theory of heating.

FREEDOM AT AN INN.

To thee, fair Freedom, I retire
From flattery, cards and dice and din;
Nor art thou found in mansions higher
Than the low cot or humble inn.

'Tis here with boundless power I reign,
And every health which I begin
Converts dull port to bright champagne,
Such freedom crowns it at an inn.

I fly from pomp, I fly from plate,
I fly from falsehood's specious grin;
Freedom I love, and form I hate
And choose my lodgings at an inn.

Here, waiter; take my sordid ore,
Which lackeys else might hope to win.
It buys what courts have not in store;
It buys me freedom at an inn.

Whoe'er has traveled life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
The warmest welcome at an inn.

WOMAN'S AIR TRAVELS.

The First to Cross the English Channel In a Balloon.

The honor of being the first woman to cross the English channel in a balloon belongs to Mrs. Griffith Brewer, the wife of a member of the Aero Club.

For some time Mrs. Brewer had been desirous of making the journey, and one recent Tuesday morning Percival Spencer telegraphed to her that the wind was in the right direction for the trip should she care to go. She replied in the affirmative, and arriving in London soon after noon, proceeded to the Wandsworth and Putney Gas works, where a balloon was being inflated.

The start was made at 2.15, the balloonists including Mrs. Brewer, Percival Spencer and Frank Butler. The balloon, which was of a capacity of 45,000 cubic feet, rose to a height of 2,000 feet, and soon attained a speed of 30 miles an hour.

In just over an hour the coastline at Dungeness was visible, and photographs were taken of the view below.

In crossing the channel the equilibrium of the balloon was so well maintained that the voyagers were able to enjoy a meal, consisting of sausage rolls, cake and champagne. As the strange meal was finished, the cross-channel steamer Onward, with passengers for Boulogne, who left London at 2.20, was sighted below, and the race between the balloon and the turbine boat for the French shore afforded considerable excitement to the aeronauts.

The balloon crossed the French coast a few miles south of Boulogne at 5.30, five minutes before the steamer entered Boulogne harbor. At one point on the journey the balloon reached an altitude of 7,000 feet and snow began to fall, the thermometer dropping below freezing point.

As darkness was coming on the aeronauts decided to descend soon after passing the French coast. The valves were opened and the balloon finally came to rest in a field at Samer, 20 miles from Boulogne, after bounding through a grove of poplar trees.

The balloonists caught the night mail from Calais and arrived in London at 5.30 the next morning.

Mrs. Brewer was somewhat fatigued, but otherwise suffered no ill-effects from her adventurous voyage.

A Scandal Averted.

"Oh!" exclaimed Mrs. Midgen. She had been shopping and visiting, and had just arrived home when a thought struck her. She clasped her hands together in dismay, and in her agitation sat flat down on the cat. "Whatever shall I do?"

"I expect you will get over it," said Mr. Midgen, testily. He was waiting for his tea. "What is it?"

"I took my diary out with me instead of my price-book, and if I haven't been and left it somewhere! Suppose somebody should get hold of it and read it."

"Ha, ha!" laughed her husband. "That will be fine sport. How I should like to see them reading all the rubbish you have written in it! What's the good of going back? You'll never get it."

"Oh, I remember now!" suddenly cried Mrs. Midgen. "It was my old one. So it doesn't matter at all. I feel quite relieved."

"What was in it?" said he, feeling disappointed.

"I had to amuse myself by copying your love letters in it, and I intended your signature at the bottom of them."

"What!" yelled Midgen, jumping to his feet and grabbing at his hair. "Do you want people to know what an idiot I was, and make me the laughing stock of the parish just when I am putting up for the vestry. Go and look for it quick! And offer £10 reward for it."

And if it hadn't been found in Mrs. Midgen's bag at that very moment there is no telling what would have happened to that household.—The Sketch.

A Mine-Sowing Cruiser.

The quaintest-looking warship in the British navy is the small cruiser Iphigenia, which has just been converted into a mine-sowing vessel. Along either side of her deck are two rows of elevated rails, in which numerous submarine mines are slung. Three lines of rail project over the vessel's stern, the mines being dropped overboard from them as she steams along.

The introduction of a mine-sowing ship unto our fleet is an experiment undertaken as a consequence of what was learned during the war in the Far East, and the idea is that the Iphigenia would be able to mine a channel or other narrow waters far more effectively than could be done by steam launches.

The Queen's Humanity.

A cable despatch to The New York Evening Post says: "The Queen's letter to the Duchess of Portland protesting against the wearing of egret plumes taken with such cruelty from the osprey maintains her noble reputation for humanity. It is well known that Her Majesty has for years refused to attend pigeon-shooting matches, but the reason for this is not so well known. Some twelve or fifteen years ago at a gun club match at Hurlingham Her Majesty was present when a half-killed bird fluttered into her lap. Since that day she has frowned upon these once fashionable events."

MINERS' RIOT.

Union Men Attacked by Foreigners—Several Injured.

Johnstown, Pa., April 30.—A conflict occurred between union and non-union miners at Paint Creek mine of the Berwind White Coal Co., near Ingleside, about midnight Saturday. The union men were attacked by a mob of foreigners and a number of shots were fired.

Steve Popovick, a foreigner, was fatally wounded and three others were injured, but not seriously. Word was sent to Windber and the sheriff and twenty-one members of the state constabulary were despatched to the scene.

When they arrived the rioters had dispersed, and all was quiet. Popovick was removed to the Windber Hospital.

TURNER'S SETTLEMENT.

Mr. A. D. Foster, of Prince Edward County, paid a flying visit here this week and bought two horses from A. Wannamaker for farm purposes. He was a resident here until two years ago, but after selling his farm here he moved to where he now resides.

Mrs. A. Ward is visiting her sister in Trenton, Mrs. J. M. Baker, for a few days this week.

The Eclipse factory here began making cheese on the 2nd of this month and shipped a load on Monday last, and the fellows who have been sending milk wear smiling faces on account of the high prices prevailing for cheese and the live hog, also.

Mr. Wannamaker bought a dwelling house from A. Ward this spring.

The weather has been very dry lately and the farmers are working overtime rushing the work in the fields, so the well-paid hired man finds plenty of work waiting to be done at all times.

Mrs. A. Ross has torn down her old house and is going to build a new one during the coming summer.

It was expected that the fall grain and clover would all be winter killed, but all through this section it is looking fairly well.

ULCER OF THE STOMACH.

INSIDIOUS NATURE OF THE DISEASE — HOW TO RECOGNIZE AND CURE IT.

Ulcer of the stomach may exist for years without very marked symptoms excepting those caused by indigestion.

In good health, the stomach resists the action of the gastric juices, but when weakened, the membrane is badly nourished and the digestive fluids act upon it as well as upon the food, keeping up until perforation of the stomach occurs. In advanced cases of ulcer of the stomach there is much discomfort after eating, with a constant gnawing sensation between meals, pain from the pit of the stomach back to the shoulder blade.

At the first symptoms of indigestion, treatment should at once be started with Mi-o-na. This is a scientific remedy adapted specifically to one purpose, the cure of stomach troubles

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

Plaster Casts.

Those who have plaster casts that they wish to preserve may protect them from dust by brushing them with a preparation of white wax and white soap, half a teaspoonful of each boiled with a quart of rain or other soft water. Use when cold, and when they are dried the casts may be wiped with a damp cloth without injury. To harden casts brush with a strong solution of alum water and brush with white wax dissolved in turpentine. Put the cast in a warm place to dry after using the latter, and it will have a look not unlike that of old ivory.

LAKE SHORE SPIRIT.

Throughout the entire length and breadth of the great Lake Shore Railway System there is a spirit of co-operation and personal responsibility on the part of employees from the highest to the lowest that is reflected in every detail of the road's operation. The traveller feels that the great army of trained workers have his welfare and comfort at heart as much as though he were the only patron of the road. This spirit—the Lake Shore spirit—is one of the features that have made this line so popular among experienced travellers. Comfort, speed, safety and punctuality here have reached their highest development. Write for full information to J. W. Daly, Chief A.G.P.A., Buffalo, N. Y.; A. J. Smith, G.P.A., Cleveland, O.; or W. J. Lynch, Pass'gr Traffic Mgr., Chicago, and tell the agent to have your ticket read "via Buffalo and The Lake Shore Railway."

Charity begins at home, but it is apt to be out when anybody calls.

School Suits

Getting the Boys ready for school—isn't it a great and perplexing problem? Its apt to make the pocket book worth overtime.

To be sure the average healthy boy, while he dotes on a neat suit, also unconsciously takes pleasure in knocking the spots out of that suit as soon as possible.

However, it is common home talk that our Boys' Clothes wear longer and withstand all sorts of Boyish frolics better than any other Boy's Clothes sold anywhere hereabouts.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Confirmation at Christ Church.

A very large congregation was present at Christ Church last evening, when His Lordship Bishop Mills held confirmation service and preached a sermon. The Bishop was in fine form, and delivered an eloquent and thought-compelling discourse. Five members of the clergy were in attendance, namely, Bishop Mills, Rev. Mr. Armstrong, of Trenton, who acted as the Bishop's chaplain; Rev. Mr. Blagrave, Rev. A. L. Geen, and Rev. Mr. Fleming. The choir was large and sang with fine effect. As usual, Mrs. Campbell's voluntaries were splendidly played and notable for their appropriateness to the service. The anthem was "Conquering Kings," the solos being excellently rendered by Miss Hilda Bell and Mr. "Ned" Henthorn. During the offertory Mr. Henthorn sang "Come Unto Me," in a cultured and reverential way. For his text the Bishop took the 9th and 10th verses of the second chapter of Paul's epistle to the Colossians:

> "For in Him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily.
> "And ye are complete in Him, which is the head of all principality and power."

St. Paul's epistle to the Colossians, the preacher said, was written to offset certain false teachings which had been spread abroad. St. Paul, in this epistle, sets forth the divinity of Jesus Christ. He was perfect God and perfect man. All good qualities dwelt in Him. Man's creator had come to be man's redeemer; the prophets bore witness to this. Jesus Christ said: "I and the Father are one." He claimed the same worship as God the Father, and because of this claim His enemies put Him to death. He also substantiated and demonstrated His claim, for the performed miracles, raised the dead and controlled the elements of nature. In addition to being perfect God He was perfect man—He was then, and is still, our brother, and could sympathize with us in all our trials and temptations. Though He was King of Heaven He submitted Himself to human authority; having loved His own which were in the world He loved them unto the end. Some said the incarnation and resurrection of Jesus Christ was a mystery. "Ah! my friends," said the preacher, "if we accept only that which is without mystery we will accept very little." All life was a mystery. There were many theories, but they were only theories. To sum it all up, God called us all to grow up to the measure of the stature and fullness of His Son Jesus Christ. To do so we must follow in His steps, ever looking unto Jesus. The Bishop then addressed himself to the candidates for confirmation, telling them that that sacred rite was one of the foundation principles of Jesus Christ's gospel. The Christian life was one of warfare. They would need to wrestle, fight and pray, but they could be sure that Jesus Christ would not leave them alone.

The solemn ceremony was then proceeded with. Rev. Mr. Blagrave, rector of Christ Church, presented a class of twenty-four, fifteen females and nine males, who were confirmed two by two by His Lordship.

Oddfellows at Holloway St.

To commemorate the 87th anniversary of the founding of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, the members of Belleville and Mizpah Lodges yesterday morning attended divine service at Holloway Street Methodist church. The turnout was one of the largest seen in the city for many years. The Patriarch Militants also turned out and added much to the appearance of the parade. Headed by the I.O.O.F. band, 27 strong and playing in very creditable form, the brethren left the lodge room on Front street and proceeded by way of Bridge St. West and Dunbar street to the place of worship. When all had been seated not only was the auditorium filled, but a large number, including the band, had to be placed in the gallery.

The opening devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. A. Martin. The preacher was the Pastor, Rev. R. H. Leitch, whose discourse was much appreciated. His text was from St. John's gospel, 15th chapter and 9th verse:

> "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you; continue ye in my love."

Before speaking to the text the Rev. gentleman extended to the Society assembled a most cordial welcome to the house of worship. They were commemorating the 87th anniversary of the Order in America, and the 60th, or jubilee year, in Ontario. The order was increasing in membership having added 1779 members last year. The shroud had become the last regalia to a number of the members during the year, and death the last degree, which enabled them to enter the golden or pearly gates. It was a Society which was doing a magnificent work in the way of paying out relief and benefits to the widows and orphans, and also in keeping up a home at Oakville, where those who needed it might be properly cared for. The Society was a fraternal one, a golden chain of three links that encircled the world. Charity and fraternity the world needed to-day. Organization was a necessity, as without organization there would be discord. There is organization perfect in nature, as seen in the evolving of the seasons. Our calendar is most beautiful and perfect, as the seasons come and go. We have in regular rotation the spring, summer, autumn and winter. What a grand and master organizer was God! In organizations there is or should be order, which means success. Organization means strength. Be as strong as the strongest and thus help by your influence those about you. Some were in societies simply for what they could get out of them. If we are in societies we should have a grander and a nobler purpose than that, to help to do good to others. In organizations discipline was necessary, this being the tonic of life. As in our homes and upon the street there must be discipline, so in societies must there be discipline, as it means harmony. Be glad of discipline, and lead rather than be led. Aim at a noble citizenship and do nothing to debase it. Do the greatest good you can to the greatest number. Let us rise to the thought that our lives and influence should be for the accomplishing of as much good as possible. It is not always those who live the greatest number of years who accomplish the greatest things. Alexander the Great died at 32 years of age; Mozart, the musician, died in early life, and Joan of Arc, who touched the world with her heroism, died at the age of 19 years. Let us be up and doing with a heart that is true. We can do much in fraternity, and as members of a fraternal society. The threefold links of the gospel were embodied in Oddfellowship, namely, Friendship, Love and Truth. Continue as you are doing until the fellowship below is over and in the Father's home above it will be renewed.

During the service a quartette composed of Mrs. M. C. Gordon, Miss E. Price, Messrs. M. C. Gordon and R. Leitch sang, "Jesus My Shepherd Is," and the band also rendered a sacred selection, which was much appreciated.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

At the above church yesterday morning, the Rector, Rev. Mr. Hubly, preached on "The Ministry of Earthquakes," taking as his text Isaiah 29: 6:

> "Thou shalt be visited of the Lord of Hosts with thunder and with earthquake and great noise, with storm and tempest, and the flame of devouring fire."

Considering the case of San Francisco, the preacher said it would not be justifiable for men to claim that God had punished her for her sins, though no minister would do his duty if he did not point out to his congregation the moral in the destruction of San Francisco, namely, that, no matter how rich or beautiful a city might be, the Lord might, in his wisdom, destroy it. As to the immutability of natural laws, the preacher said scientists could prate about that all they liked, but so long as he remembered the earthquake which swallowed up Korah, Dathan and Abiram, and the earthquake which rent the earth when the Son of God was crucified, so long would he believe that even natural laws were subject to one who ruled all, one who

She had him arrested, but did not appear in court this morning and the charge was dismissed.

RENT CASE.

Mr. Chas. Morrison was accused of owing Mr. A. T. Petrie $6 for rent. As the complainant was not able to appear in court the case was enlarged for a week.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING

CAUSED LITTLE DAMAGE IN THIS VICINITY, BUT SOME PLACES WERE STRUCK NEAR TRENTON.

A severe thunderstorm passed over this section of the community last evening. Whilst no damage was done in the city, or adjacent to the city, some considerable damage was done a little further off.

In the Town of Trenton a house was struck by lightning and set on fire, but the blaze was soon extinguished after the alarm had been given.

In the Township of Murray, about three miles from Trenton, a large frame barn belonging to a yeoman named Lynch was struck and destroyed. We are informed that a number of cattle were killed, and everything in the building destroyed.

Mr. Coon Welcomed.

At Bridge St. Sunday School yesterday, Mr. Harry C. Coon, M. A., Gold Medalist of Queen's University, was most enthusiastically welcomed back, the school rising spontaneously and giving him the Chautauqua salute. He was complimented on his remarkable success and many kind things said of his past.

"Patsy" Lawlor On Trial To-day.

CHARGED WITH CONNECTION WITH THE BURGLARY AT SHANNONVILLE ON MARCH 17 OR 18—COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

Patrick Lawlor, who is accused of being implicated in the burglaries which were committed in the village of Shannonville on the night of March 17th, was this morning brought up before Magistrate Flint.

The accused appeared in court shackled, and was rather closely scrutinized by the large number of spectators who were in attendance.

Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. McMahon appeared for the accused.

On behalf of his client, Mr. McMahon entered a plea of not guilty and elected to be tried before the County Judge. He asked that the shackles be removed from Lawlor's legs, but the Magistrate would not give such an order, declaring that the prisoner was in the keeping of the officers of the law, who could take such precautions as they deemed best.

THE EVIDENCE.

Mr. Morden, sworn, said he was a merchant at Shannonville. On the night of March 17th his place of business was broken into. Four pairs of boots were taken, that he was certain of. On Sunday morning, about 8 o'clock, he first knew of the burglary. The door of the store was forced open. A pair of boots produced in court were of the same make as those stolen from his store. He lost a pair of No. 9 boots, the same as those produced. On the same night the store of Mr. Mills was broken into, also the post office, kept by Mr. Creeper, and the grist mill. He also understood that some tools were stolen from the G. T. R. premises. Witness could not say that he had ever seen the accused.

Mr. Wm. Ryan, jr., sworn, said he kept a temperance hotel in Shannonville. He had been there for two years. He remembered the 17th of March, and heard of the robbery on Sunday morning. On Thursday, the 15th of March, two men, strangers, were in his place. Witness could not identify the prisoner as one of the men; did not think he was. They asked for liquor, which they could not get from him. Did not see them after that day.

Mr. L. D. Mills, sworn, said he was a merchant at Shannonville. On the 17th of March his place of business was broken into, and an overcoat, some canned goods, cigars and some money was taken. About 10 o'clock he left his store and locked it up. On Sunday morning, about 8 o'clock, he discovered that his store had been broken into. A large cold chisel, belonging to the G.T.R. Company, was found near the door which was forced open. On Thursday, the 15th of March, two strangers were in his store. One of the men made a small purchase. Both were young men. To the best of his judgment, the prisoner was similar in size to one of the men. Did not see the men after that. Had not recovered any of the articles taken from his store.

Cross-examined — Both men who came into his store were white men. He was certain that the prisoner was somewhat similar in size to one of the men.

Mr. Dean, sworn, said he lived at Shannonville and remembered the 17th of March. He heard of the burglary on Sunday morning, the 18th of March. On Saturday night he saw two strangers in the village. Some person asked witness if he knew the men and witness said he did not. The prisoner was not one of the men. Could not say that he would know the men if he saw them again.

Mrs. Wm. Docter testified that she lived in Belleville and kept Docter's hotel. Some time during the month of March, three strange men were at her place, but the prisoner was not one of them. Two were fair and one was dark. They had meals there on two evenings. Witness thought the men were train men. They all wore caps. She asked them if they were train men and they simply shook their heads.

Mr. G. Minchinton, sworn, said he was stenographer for John Sloan & Company in Belleville. One morning he was working at the typewriter when a stranger came in and walked to the desk where witness was at work. The man wanted a five dollar bill for five dollars worth of silver. The man looked something like the prisoner, but witness would not swear that he was the man. The same night the office was broken open by forcing an entrance through a back window. Some $5 in money was taken and a box of chocolates. The desk was pried open and papers scattered about the place. There was only one person in the premises that day. Never saw the man after that.

Mrs. James Wallace said that on a certain night three strangers came into their place of business and had a lunch. Witness could not recognize the prisoner as one of the men who were there.

Mr. Creeper said he was postmaster at Shannonville. The office was broken into on the night of March 17th. About $5 in money was taken, also two letters, one of the letters containing a postal order. Witness saw no strangers about the village, and did not see any about the post office.

Mr. Steele, sworn, said he was a County constable at Shannonville. He learned of the burglary on the morning of the 18th of March. On the evening of the 15th of March witness saw two strangers go into Mr. Kerr's store. One wore a stiff hat and the other a cap. One of the men was taller than the other. Witness could not identify the prisoner as one of the men. The grist mill was also broken into at the same time. Some tools, consisting of a small hammer, saw and cold chisel were taken from the G.T.R. toolhouse at the village. All the articles were taken back excepting the cold chisel. Witness notified the authorities at Napanee, Deseronto and Belleville of the burglaries. Heard there were suspicious parties in the hall at Shannonville on Saturday night, the 17th inst., but he did not see them. Witness was informed that on Sunday morning, the 18th of March, some men were eating a lunch on the side of the G.T.R. track near Shannonville.

High County Constable Duffin said that from information he had received he went to Toronto, and brought Lawlor to the city. Witness brought the boots, as produced, from Toronto; also the photographs.

At this stage of the proceedings the County Attorney stated that this was all the evidence he had to submit at present, but he would have more.

Mr. McMahon suggested that in order to expedite matters, and to have the affair cleared up, he would be willing to waive any further preliminary examination and have the accused sent up for trial, where all the evidence would be submitted.

This was satisfactory to the County Attorney and Court, and Lawlor was committed for trial.

That Rolling Mills Settlement.

EX-MAYOR CHOWN WRITES PROTESTING AGAINST IT — THINKS MATTER SHOULD GO TO THE PEOPLE.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer;

Dear Sir,—I see it is proposed that the City Council shall make some arrangement with purchasers re back taxes on the rolling mills, I understand that the Council have no control of the taxes. That is a matter that is outside of their power. The present City Solicitor and the former City Solicitor have told the Council on different occasions that they could not remit any taxes, The Court of Revision might in some cases. As I read the by-law with Kirkwood and McKinnon. It has lapsed because of non-fulfilment on their part. Clause 5 of the by-law says that they are to be exempt from taxes (except school rates) for a period of ten years from January 1st, 1904, provided they operate the mills for that period. According to the terms and conditions of the agreement, clause (1) of the agreement says "that they are to complete the purchase" and, it was understood, commence operations by January 1st, 1905. These conditions have not been complied with. The City Council cannot grant a bonus to any industry unless with the consent of the property-holders. If they remit a large amount of taxes it is granting a bonus.

There are taxes standing against the rolling mills for the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, in all, five years. The money in the bank was deposited to release a quantity of iron that was seized for 1903 taxes, till the court decided the liability of the Iron and Steel Company in reference to the taxes for that year, and I take it that this money can only be paid out by an order of the court. The taxes for 1901 and 1902 are still standing against the property. It was understood that they were to be remitted if the mills had been operated according to the agreement, but, as the mills were not operated, no one has the power to remit them.

If the present purchasers wish to have the taxes remitted and earn the bonus money, I believe the only way is for them to make a new agreement with the Council and have a by-law submitted to the people for ratification, and if there is a prospect of the mills running it will, no doubt, be sure to carry. If this is not done any property-holder could forbid the Council to carry out the proposed arrangement, and if they so desired, throw the matter into court and it would cost a great deal more than to submit a by-law.

If you remember, the Council a few years ago wanted to carry out an agreement with Mr. Graham made by a former Council, but they were threatened with legal action and had to abandon it.

I am anxious to see the rolling mills running, but want to see them on a proper basis, so am writing this. Thanking you for your valuable space, I am.

Yours respectfully,
W. W. CHOWN.

First Wife Lays a Bigamy Charge.

New Hamburg, April 30.—Henry Goldberg, who recently began business here as a dealer in scrap iron and rags was arrested Saturday by Constable Gerth upon the charge of bigamy. The prisoner recently married a pretty young Jewess, the daughter of Henry Berg of Hamilton, although he left a wife in Russia. The latter appearing here upon the scene instituted proceedings which resulted in Goldberg's arrest.

Goldberg has been remanded until next Friday, bail being furnished by his friends in Berlin.

To Oust Standard Oil.

Toledo, April 30.—Ouster proceedings were filed in the Circuit Court here Saturday against the Standard Oil Co. and 17 affiliated companies, including oil and pipe line companies; the Lake Shore Railroad, Hocking Valley, Toledo and Ohio Central, and Pennsylvania Co. The court was asked to dissolve their franchises and appoint trustees or creditors and stockholders. The suits will be prosecuted with despatch.

In Dresden 200 years ago "epicures" used to eat Venetian oysters that had been on the way three weeks.

MANY WERE IN DANGER

One Man Lost His Life in Fire At the Toronto Postoffice, Early Sunday Morning.

Toronto, April 30.—In a battle with smoke rather than flames, during which one life was lost and fifteen others placed in serious jeopardy, the Toronto fire department by sheer dogged determination and an almost heroic endurance early Sunday morning confined to the lower floors of the general postoffice a blaze which at one time threatened the entire building with destruction. The damage is estimated at from $20,000 to $30,000.

It is announced that there is but little loss of mail matter, and that postal business will be continued today as usual. There will be no delay in deliveries. The warehouse at Front and Lorne streets will be used as a temporary office.

Thomas Letray, night engineer of the building, and his dog, died probably from suffocation. Just how he met his fate will never be known.

That several other lives were not sacrificed also may perhaps be ascribed to a kindly providence.

The third and fourth floors of the postoffice building are occupied as the living apartments of George Ross, the assistant postmaster. He, his family of twelve, two lady visitors and a servant girl were sleeping. Two other sons were absent from home. When aroused, the smoke was filling the corridors so thickly that the imperilled ones had to crawl along the floors. There was no time to don street apparel, and all were attired only in their night robes when, huddled together, they were reached by the firemen. There were nine women, Mr. Ross and five of his sons taken out.

DEATH OF EDWIN HOLMES.

Well-Known Newspaper Man and Father of Hebert Holmes, Ex-M. P.

St. Catharines April 30.—The death occurred Saturday of Edwin Holmes, the oldest and probably the best-known printer in Canada. The deceased had a wide and varied experience in the printing business and was with Sir Mackenzie Bowell, one of the pioneers in the art. He was a member of The Globe staff in the time of Geo. Brown, and later went to Kingston, where he spent a number of years, after which he founded The Clinton New Era and remained proprietor and editor of it until he handed over the plant to his son Robert, the former member in the Commons for Huron. From Clinton Mr. Holmes went to Toronto, where for a number of year he was an efficient assistant librarian in the Legislature. It was but a few years ago that he gave up his position and returned to this city, where he has made his home for the past 18 years. He was born in Lincolnshire, England. He was 82 years and 9 months of age and had resided in Canada since he was 10 years old.

CHILDREN, REVOLVER, DEATH.

Three-Year-Old Boy Almost Instantly Killed by Little Brother.

Halifax, April 30.—A fatal shooting accident, in which three children figured, took place at Wellington Barracks Saturday morning.

They were the three young sons of Provost-Sergeant Hunt of the Royal Canadian Regiment. The youngest of the trio, aged 3, was shot in the head and almost instantly killed by a shot from a revolver which, in the absence of their parents from the room, the two elder boys had got possession of. It is not know which of the latter was responsible for the accident, both being terrified at the result, and telling conflicting stories.

The mother left the children to go to a neighbor's for a moment. Almost immediately afterwards she heard the report of the revolver shot and a child's frightened cry of "Mummy!"

Running into the room, the little 3-year-old boy was found lying upon the floor with blood streaming from an ugly wound in the temple, from which he died in 15 minutes.

FALLS 1,600 FEET DOWN MINE.

Chris. Curry of Milton Meets Awful Death at Rossland.

Rossland, B. C., April 30.—Christopher Curry was killed at Centre Star mine at 12.30 p. m. Saturday. The skip became fouled in the headworks with rock, and Curry went in the skipway to take the rock out, lost his balance and fell, striking the railing at collar of the shaft, and bounced into shaft, which inclines at 35 feet into 100, fell 1,600 feet and was almost torn to fragments by projections.

Curry was 25 years old, and a native of Milton, Ont. He is a brother of Samuel Curry, formerly a conductor on the Red Mountain Railway. Deceased had only been working in the Centre Star mine for three weeks.

TROOPSHIP IN COLLISION.

Sinks Chinese Steamer and Thirty Are Drowned.

Singapore, Straits Settlements, April 30.—The British steamer Haversham Grange, having on goard 3,000 Russian troops, bound from Vladivostock for Odessa, arrived here Saturday and reported having been in collision in the Straits of Malacca with the Chinese steamer Bentong. The latter sank, and 30 of the 101 Chinamen on board the vessel were drowned. The Haversham Grange brought the 71 survivors to this port. Her forepeak is full of water.

Government Buys Land.

Moncton, N. B., April 30.—The Intercolonial virtually closed the purchase of a tract of land about one and one quarter miles long, and one-third mile broad, on the border of the city's most populated district, on which will be erected the new I. C. R. shops. The land includes 180 acres, and the price paid was $75 per acre.

Children Poisoned By Candy.

Guelph, April 30.—As a result of eating candy which they purchased in a package from a Hespeler storekeeper, Gladys and Norman Taylor, little daughters of Mr. Edward Taylor, Aberfoyle, are seriously ill. An investigation is likely to take place.

POLICE CHIEF KILLED

Assassinated by Revolutionaries in Daylight.

Bomb Thrown at Another Officer in Russian Poland, Kills a Policeman—Attempt on Life of Col. Min—Another Assassination Saturday—The Victims Had All Been Active During the October Massacres.

Odessa, April 30.—The chief of police who played such a prominent role in the October massacres here, and a policeman were assassinated by revolutionaries here Saturday in broad daylight.

The plot was wide-reaching and contemplated also the assassination of Assistant Chief of Police Poltvtchenko and several other policemen. A young girl named Jerebtsvo threw a bomb at Poltvtchenko on the way to the hospital to visit one of the wounded policemen. Her aim was poor and Poltvtchenko was unhurt. The girl was gravely wounded by Poltvtchenko's orderly.

Bomb Misses Mark.

Warsaw, April 30.—At Czenstochowa, in Russian Poland, Saturday a bomb was thrown at the carriage of the chief of police while he was returning from a funeral. The missle exploded, killing a policeman.

Sentenced For Mutiny.

Keiff, Russia, April 30.—The trial of the regiment of engineers which mutinied last fall has been completed. All of the officers were acquitted, but three non-commissioned officers were sentenced to death, 19 privates were condemned to hard labor and 52 were consigned to a disciplinary battalion.

An Attempt to Assassinate.

St. Petersburg, April 30.—A member of the "fighting organization" yesterday attempted to assassinate Col. Min, commander of the Semenovsky Guards, in revenge for the part taken by his regiment in putting down the Moscow revolt. A uniformed officer, a young man, had called several times at the residence of Col. Min and requested to see him. The manner of the man excited suspicion, and he was arrested yesterday when it was found that he was a disguised revolutionist and was armed with a revolver and a dagger.

Russian Colonel Murdered.

Lublin, Russian Poland, April 30.—Lt.-Col. Pugol, chief of the gendarmerie at Cholm, was murdered Saturday night. The assassin escaped.

TIDE CONTINUES TO RISE.

The Russian Elections Still Running Against Government.

St. Petersburg, April 30.—The elections of Saturday show that the tide against the Government is rising instead of subsiding, for instead of a more conservative element the candidates elected are even more radical in their opinions than those chosen April 2. In many cases the peasants named representatives with views which are even more extensive than those held by the constitutional demands.

The Government has been trying desperately to win the support of the peasants, realizing that without it the Government will be in a hopeless position.

FRESH DISASTER.

Oceans of Mud Submerge Whole Vesuvian Region—King Edward Generous.

Naples, April 30.—Another disaster has occurred in the Vesuvian region. Throughout Friday night torrents of rain fell, accompanied by a heavy gale of wind, causing large avalanches of mud, sand, ashes and cinders to fall over Somma and Santa Annastasia, destroying bridges, blocking the roads, flooding many habitations, interrupting communication by telegraph and carrying away portions of the railway. Troops and military wagons were hurriedly despatched to the assistance of the sufferers.

The inhabitants of the striken places mentioned were awakened by a roaring, rushing sound, which was absolutely new to them and on running out of their houses they found their property threatened by a new horror, the fall of avalanches of sand, ashes, etc. Their terror was extreme. The women and children fled, screaming with fright into the open country as if pursued by a living monster.

The mud, mixed with which were cinders and basaltic stones, invaded all places and killed many animals. At Pacciano, a town of 800 inhabitants, the flood obstructed the doors of houses so that the people were obliged to escape through the windows.

Royalty Disappointed.

King Edward and Queen Alexandra yesterday made vain attempts to reach the observatory and then Ottajano, but finally were obliged to go to Terra Annunziata, from which place they returned here. King Edward was touched by the fresh disaster, and he sent a contribution of $4,000 to the mayor of Naples for the assistance of the sufferers.

Amid all the upheavals Prof. Matucci and Perret remained in the observatory, although Friday night another portion of the roof was torn away, and it seemed as though the observatory would be engulfed.

OGILIVIE KILLS HIMSELF.

Prominent Montrealer Succumbs to Unfortunate Accident.

Montreal, April 30.—W. W. Ogilvie, a prominent young Montrealer, accidentally shot himself while cleaning a revolver at his home yesterday afternoon and died as a result of the wound a few hours later at the Royal Victoria Hospital. Mr. Ogilvie, who was only 30 years of age, was a son of the late W. W. Ogilvie, one of Montreal's merchant princes.

Taschereau Resigns.

Ottawa, April 30.—It was reported last night that the Government has received the formal resignation of Sir Henri Elzear Taschereau as chief justice of Canada. He will be succeeded by Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, the present Minister of Justice.

TRAVELS 55 MILES IN AIR.

Aeronaut Makes Trip From Pittsfield to Woodville, Conn.

Pittsfield, Mass., April 30.—Favored by beautiful weather and a breeze that carried them rapidly in a southeast direction, Count Henri De La Vaulx of Paris, with Capt Homer W. Hedges of New York, president of the Aero Club of America, and Charles Jerome Edwards of New York, made an ascension Saturday in the big balloon Centaur in the presence of 3,000 people.

COUNT HENRI DE LA VAULX IN HIS BALLOON.

The balloon landed safely at Woodville, Conn., at 6.30 Saturday night. It traveled fifty-five miles, and it is understood the men in it hoped to reach New Haven, but this idea was given up as darkness approached.

PARIS UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

Non-Striker Shoots Striker and Seriously Wounded Him.

Paris, April 30.—The city is assuming a distinctly military aspect. Soldiers off duty throng the boulevards and special trains continue to bring in reinforcements. The military Governor of Paris has taken the suggestive action of requisitioning the extensive buildings of the Tivoli Vauxhall for military uses. This building ordinarily is used for meetings of revolutionary parties.

Seven thousand workmen of the municipal gas works yesterday reached the decision not to strike, thus allaying the fears that the city would be without light.

After a meeting of printers yesterday, a disturbance between strikers and non-strikers took place, in the course of which a non-striker shot and seriously wounded a striker in the abdomen and another man lost an eye.

The striking jewelers yesterday created disorders outside the establishments that are continuing to operate by endeavoring to induce the men who remain at work to join the strike.

Minister of the Interior Clemceau is positive that the military and police precautions taken will insure quiet on May 1.

SEVERE STORM IN SCOTIA.

Baptist Church Damaged by Lightning—Other Places Struck.

Yarmouth, N. S., April 30.—A severe lightning and thunderstorm passed over Yarmouth County Saturday evening. The spire of the Baptist Church at Milton was struck and badly shattered.

The storm was quite severe at Tucket. A young man in the telephone office there received a shock, but was not seriously injured. The railway station and other places were struck and the window glass broken.

Yarmouth lighthouse was struck, but the damage was not serious.

A Disastrous Thunderstorm.

Niagara-on-Lake, April 30.—The first thunderstorm of the season passed over this district about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. As a result three barns on the farm of Mrs. Mary Osmond, about four miles west of here on the Lake road, were entirely destroyed by fire together with their contents of grain, hay, implements, etc. Seven head of cattle tied in their stalls were burned to death. The loss will total about $2,000.
